For taxes and assessments; insurance; contributions to civic and educational institutions; for maintenance and repair of historic properties and monuments; for expenses of the Papago Indian Project; for restoration of the Church Insurance Fund; and for other purposes..... 269,821

Total (Church General Funds Spent)..... $ 20,579,822

PART II—EXPENDITURES OTHER THAN FROM CHURCH GENERAL FUNDS 1951

The expenditures budgeted from Church General Funds and paid principally from the tithes are detailed above. The following expenditures were made from further contributions by members of the Church:

For construction and repair of meeting houses and other buildings and for purchases of sites, buildings and furnishings.....	$ 6,502,423
For Stake, Ward and Mission Maintenance purposes (including auxiliaries recreation expenses) .....	4,473,942
For assistance to needy from Ward and Mission Fast Offerings .....	1,447,540
For acquisition of Storehouses and Budget Production Projects (including the operation of these projects) .....	1,307,251
For assistance to Missionaries from contributions received by Wards and Stakes .....	271,108
For operation of the Primary Children's Hospital, of the auxiliary general boards, and of the temples.....	283,056
Total spent from contributions (other than tithes).....	$14,285,320

Also the following expenditures have been made from income of Church Organizations:

Educational Institutions—from tuitions and dormitory and other service income .....	$ 2,520,771
Hospitals—for care of sick in addition to amount paid from tithes and included in Part I.....	21,238
Auxiliaries—from publications, sewing projects, and other business income .....	1,092,135
Temples—from clothing rentals and other receipts.....	142,207
Deseret Industries, Deseret Clothing Factory, and group canning projects—from operating income.....	554,492
Welfare budget production projects—from operating income.....	1,056,700

Total spent from operating income of Church organizations.... $ 5,387,543

GRAND TOTAL—cash expenditures of the Church, from general funds, local contributions and other income, for the year 1951..... $ 40,252,685

PART III—THE CHURCH WELFARE PROGRAM—1951

Cash Expenditures for Welfare—(All Included in Figures Given Above)

Expended from stake and mission fast offerings and welfare contributions for the care of the needy—food, clothing, rents, light, heat, hospitalization, burials, etc.....	$ 2,588,742
Disbursed for the operating cost of Bishops' Storehouses and for the overhead expenses of the General Committee.....	377,296
Disbursed by the Corporations of the President and of the Presiding Bishop for direct assistance to the needy, and contributions to civic and educational institutions .....	589,746
Charity expenditures by Hospitals for the care of the sick.....	21,238
Total Cash Relief Expenditures .....	$ 3,577,022
In addition to the foregoing cash expenditures of Church general funds, Welfare contributions and fast offerings, there were distributed to the needy, welfare commodities to the value of over.....	$ 1,091,000
This makes a grand total distributed under the Welfare Program in 1951 by the various agencies involved, of.....	$ 4,668,022

Welfare Report

The General Church Welfare Committee makes the following further report for the year 1951:

Distribution of Commodities from Bishops' Storehouses

Distribution of commodities amounted to 7- $\frac{3}{4}$  million pounds of food and 420,000 items of household supplies, clothing and other articles. This distribution is 9% lower than during 1950.

Assistance Rendered

There have been from 17,913 to 55,460 persons assisted through the Bishops' Storehouse Program each year since 1938. In 1951 there were 35,128 persons so assisted in the United States and Canada. This is a decrease from 1950 of 4,409 persons.

From 1938 to the end of 1951 more than 3,232 families have been helped to become self-supporting and 20,191 families have been assisted in other ways. During this same period the Deseret Industries has provided continuous work for hundreds of handicapped and aged persons. During the year 1951 they had an average of 321 persons working in their plants, 65% of these were handicapped persons. The Deseret Clothing Factory, another branch of the Welfare Plan, has provided continuous employment for from 30 to 60 individuals, many of whom were widows and elderly persons.

Contributed Work and Construction Projects

During the year, 91,600 man days of work and the use of equipment amounting to approximately 4,000 unit days were donated in the production of the budget, 15,300 man days of work were donated in operation of bishops' storehouses, and 8,200 man days of work were donated in the construction of buildings for the operation of the Welfare Plan. In addition to these, 107 construction and remodeling projects were completed by the brethren, 47 of which were for the benefit of less fortunate members.

Placement and Counseling Service

During 1951, 3,693 persons were given occupational counseling, resulting in the solution of their employment problems, and 5,849 other persons were placed in remunerative employment. Reported unemployment has decreased to one-third the figure of a year ago.

STATISTICAL REPORT—1951

Number of Stakes of Zion, at end of year.....	191
Number of Wards .....	1491
Number of Independent Branches.....	175
Total Wards and Independent Branches, at end of year.....	1666
Number of Missions.....	43
Church Membership:
Stakes .....	933,792
Missions .....	213,365
Total Membership (at end of year).....	1,147,157
Church Growth:
Children blessed in Stakes and Missions.....	39,658
Children baptized in Stakes and Missions.....	23,205
Converts baptized in Stakes and Missions.....	17,175
Social Statistics:
Birth rate per thousand.....	37.81
Marriage rate per thousand.....	9.01
Death rate per thousand.....	5.93
(These data on births, marriages and deaths are computed from stake reports and do not include the missions)
Missionaries:
Number of missionaries in the missions of the Church (including those enroute to or from their fields of labor).....	5,065
Number engaged in missionary work in the stakes.....	5,587
Total missionaries—December 31, 1951.....	10,652
Number of missionaries who received training in the Missionary Home in 1951 .....	1,800

President David O. McKay:

Elder Joseph Anderson just read the statistical and financial data relating to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Elder Harold Bennett will now read the report of the Church Auditing Committee. Brother Harold Bennett:

REPORT OF CHURCH AUDITING COMMITTEE

Elder Harold H. Bennett read the following report:

The following letter was sent to the First Presidency under date of March 31, 1952.

President David O. McKay and

Counselors:

Dear Brethren:

The Church Auditing Committee has reviewed the annual financial report of the Corporation of the President of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints for the year ending December 31, 1951.

The accounting system and records were found to be adequate and meticulously maintained. Disbursement of Church funds is controlled through a comprehensive budget system, which properly safeguards expenditures.

The funds are being carefully conserved, expenditures being less than receipts.

The Church is in strong financial position, and free from debt.

Respectfully submitted,

Orval W. Adams

Albert E. Bowen

George S. Spencer

Harold H. Bennett

Church Auditing Committee

President David O. McKay:

In addition to what has already been given, I may add the following items, submitted by Brother George Jarvis, who is very efficient, with his associates, in taking care of the finances of the Church.

Sixteen million, two-hundred and eighty-seven thousand dollars have been spent for construction of buildings in 1951. This item, of course, has been included in the various headings given already. But this is interesting, and this total—$9,375,000 has come from Church General Funds, and $6,912,000 from local funds.

You will be interested also to know that there are now 392 buildings under construction.

The listening audience will be pleased to be informed that the Tabernacle is crowded to capacity. We have not received word from the other buildings, but I suppose they also are filled.

In the audience, as you have already heard, are mission presidents from Canada, United States, Mexico and Hawaii.

PRESIDENT DAVID O. McKAY

It is truly a joy to meet with you, my brethren and sisters. Another six months have passed since the Church met in general conference. How the time flies! There is an old hymn, now unpublished, which could be sung appropriately:

How swift the months have passed away,
Tis conference again.
And Zion's untold thousands come
To swell the joyful strain.

A seat occupied six months ago is vacant this morning—a voice valiant and vigorous then in defense of the restored gospel is silent today. We miss Dr. Joseph F. Merrill, member of the Council of the Twelve, and make loving reference to his noble character and distinguished service.

And now, my dear fellow workers, it is with mingled feelings of gratitude, satisfaction, and apprehension that I greet members of the Church assembled in this opening session of the 122nd Annual Conference.

GRATITUDE

We are grateful for the blessings of the Lord to his Church in all the world, and for the assurance of his divine guidance and inspiration. With deep gratitude we acknowledge in your presence, his nearness and his goodness; and in that spirit of prayerful appreciation proclaim that our souls respond in harmony with the spirit of a glorious vision given to the Prophet Joseph Smith: "Hear, O ye heavens, and give ear, O earth, and rejoice ye inhabitants thereof, for the Lord is God, and beside him there is no savior.

"Great is his wisdom, marvelous are his ways, and the extent of his doings none can find out.

"His purposes fail not, neither are there any who can stay his hand.

"From eternity to eternity he is the same, and his years never fail." (D. & C. 76:1-4.)

ENCOURAGEMENT JUSTIFIED

It is a source of real encouragement to contemplate the loyalty and energetic efforts of the priesthood of the Church, including of course the General Authorities, stake and ward officers, presidencies of missions, missionaries, officers, and members of branches throughout the world. I believe I can say in truth that the standard of efficiency in missions and in organized stakes has never been so high. A hasty glance at what quorums and auxiliaries have achieved during the past year will confirm this.

FIRST: QUORUMS OF THE PRIESTHOOD

According to reports that have been received, the Melchizedek Priesthood of the Church (and that includes all worthy adult members) is showing an increase in the number who pay a full

Friday, April 4

First Day

tithing, who observe the Sabbath day, who attend sacrament meetings, and who hold regular family prayers.

There has also been an increase in the average attendance at weekly priesthood meetings. In a five-year period (1947-51) the following increase is shown:

	1947	1951
High Priests	46%	48%
Seventies	39%	44%
Elders	18%	20%

In participation in all phases of the Church program, the following marked increase is shown in the same five-year period:

	1947	1951
High Priests	67%	91%
Seventies	54%	89%
Elders	31%	70%

SECOND: RELIEF SOCIETY

A memorandum from Sister Belle S. Spafford, president of the Relief Society, indicates that there has been an increase in membership in that organization of from 126,550 in 1950 to 132,451 in 1951, or an increase of 5,901.

Teachers have made 2,055,803 visits—an increase of 145,141 over last year.

Visits to sick and homebound—193,558, or an increase of 11,200 over last year.

Choruses of the Relief Society Singing Mothers are increasing, thus furnishing the sisters with an opportunity for spiritual expression through choral singing.

THIRD: SUNDAY SCHOOL

The general board of the Deseret Sunday School Union has been emphasizing during the year 1951 the importance of proper spiritual teaching in our Sunday Schools. As a result there has been a notable increase in teacher training classes and enrolled teacher trainees over the previous year.

Reports indicate an increase of 67% in the number of classes held, and an increase of 13% in number of trainees.

Better order and more reverence in opening exercises and in class work has been a most commendable aim.

Enlistment, or Sunday School missionary work, has been stressed. There has been an increase of 12% in the enrolment. The average attendance at Sunday Schools has increased 13%. It is estimated that about one-third of the entire membership of the Church now participate in Sunday School.

FOURTH: Y.M.M.I.A.

In the 183 stakes, 10 missions reporting, including 1,638 wards and branches, the Young Men's Mutual Improvement Association reports a total membership of 104,383, with an average attendance of 53%.

In participation in joint Y.M. and Y.W.M.I.A. stake recreational activities there has been an increase. Departments averaged an increase of 20% to 50%, the greatest increase coming in the M Men-Gleaner and Scout-Beehive Departments.

The general board of Y.M.M.I.A. is endeavoring to have every boy in the ward attend M.I.A. regularly, with a result that the enrolment has grown from 81,253 four years ago to 104,383 this last year.

FIFTH: Y.W.M.I.A.

The Young Women's Mutual Improvement Association had an enrolment in 1951 of 110,095 as compared with 105,309 the previous year.

In December 1949, there was an all-over Church average for the girls 12 to 19 years of age of 48% attendance at sacrament meetings. This is a very commendable feature. Also 61% attended Sunday School, and 59% M.I.A. In December 1951, the average had increased to 53% at sacrament meetings; 63% at Sunday School; and 64% at M.I.A. This substantial increase shows a great spiritual growth, for it means that our girls are attending more Church meetings and hence gaining a greater knowledge of the gospel.

SIXTH: PRIMARY ASSOCIATION

Last year marked the completion of the Primary Children's Hospital, the dedicatory service having been held on March 2 of this year.

A most commendable project for 1951-52 stressed four phases of reverence for boys and girls. I will read those:

1. We will act as we should in our Heavenly Father's house.
2. We will greet our friends quietly.
3. We will not take the name of the Lord in vain.
4. We will respect those chosen by our Heavenly Father to lead us.

Another very commendable feature is the "Kindness to Animals Club" being sponsored by The Children's Friend. I commend that to your attention, especially when we sense the reports that we have had recently regarding some sadist young boys who have been going around with "22's" shooting, just for mere sport, the starving deer.

GENEALOGICAL SOCIETY

In 1951 there were 31,726 persons who undertook research through the books of the library, and approximately 13,000 individuals who used the records in the Archives Department. At the close of 1951 there were sixteen million cards in the Index Bureau files. The records of two hundred thousand separate family units were examined at the Index Bureau.

A total of between twenty-five and thirty million pages of records were placed in the files of the microfilm library during the year 1951, and a total of 2,334,058 lineal feet of film were developed in the laboratory in Salt Lake City during 1951.

These are just a few highlights giving cause for satisfaction. There is a general response, as the figures and reports indicate, on the part of the people of the Church everywhere. The responsibilities they carry, the undertakings that they adopt and employ to raise 50% of the cost of their houses of worship are most remarkable.

I think I will give you an instance. Last February a meeting of all the presidents of the stakes of southern California was held. President Waite and his associates and the committee presented to those brethren a suggested plan whereby the stakes and wards of that region might raise a million dollars to assist in the construction of the Los Angeles Temple. Three weeks later, as the First Presidency sat at the table in their regular daily meeting, they read a telegram that came that morning from President Russon of the Los Angeles Stake, stating, "We have already canvassed the wards in our stake, and they have subscribed 256% of their quota." And while we were reading that, the telephone rang and President Waite of the South Los Angeles Stake at the other end said, "I thought you would like to know that the Los Angeles Stake has gone over the top 256%. We were a week later starting our canvass in the South Los Angeles Stake, so we have reached only 10% of the people, but we have 90% of the quota subscribed from the 10%." Last evening the presidents from those stakes met with the First Presidency and reported $1,666,000.00 subscribed, and more subscriptions coming in.

Now that is indicative of the spirit that animates the members of the Church in their efforts to further the interest of establishing the kingdom of God. Well, we commend you and bless you, and God will bless you.

CAUSES OF APPREHENSION

But now, brethren and sisters, we have cause for apprehension. I refer to the efforts to deprive man of his free agency—to steal from the individual his liberty.

Next to life itself free agency is the greatest gift of God to man.

The two most important documents affecting the destiny of America are the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States. Both these immortal papers relate primarily to the freedom of the individual.

Founded upon that principle of free enterprise fostered by these documents, the United States of America in less than two centuries has achieved a greatness that exceeds that of any other country in the world.

Friday, April 4

First Day

The deep concern of every loyal citizen regarding this threatened loss of our freedom has been well expressed by a Mr. Fred G. Clark, Chairman of the American Economic Foundation, wherein he expresses the fear that the code of the people is replacing the code of God. Here are his own words. I shall tell you when I end the quotation: "The American giant towers over the world in its physical strength, greater than that of all the rest of the nations put together.

"But something is wrong with America.

"At this high moment of history when the task of world leadership has been thrust upon us, we stand confused, reluctant, hesitant, and ineffectual.

"We are no longer certain what we stand for, and this, I believe, is because we have forgotten the circumstances surrounding the birth of our nation. . . .

"For decades it has been popular in America for the cynical intellectuals to sneer and scoff at what we call the traditions of Americanism.

"The instruments of this sabotage were words and thoughts — plausible half-truths, sly appeals to that spark of larceny that lurks in every human heart, subtle suggestions of an atheistic nature, and the careful nurturing of a patronizing attitude toward everything America has held to be fine and sacred.

"The people who planted these words and thoughts may have been either stupid or vicious, fools or foreign agents, smart-alecs, or smart organizers.

"What they were does not now matter: the thing that does matter is to counteract what they have done.

"Everybody in every position of leadership has to get into this act because the damage has affected every phase of our life.

"The places in which this sabotage occurred were the schools, the churches, the communist-dominated labor halls, the lecture platforms, the motion pictures, the stage, the pages of our newspapers and magazines, and the radio. Every means of communication has been utilized against us. . . .

"The man (or nation) who has a plan—a way of life—in which he believes, has mental security.

"To destroy this security, one must destroy that man's faith in his plan.

"Reliance on a code of life which, if held in common with one's fellow men, brings peace of mind, develops the abilities of the group. . . .

"The degree to which the American code of life has been weakened can best be demonstrated by simply calling attention to the degree to which the foundation of that code has been weakened.

"Many people become self-conscious when discussing this foundation: I am not one of those people.

"That foundation (and of this there cannot be the slightest shadow of a doubt) is made up of the Ten Commandments and the Golden Rule.

"Within this moral code, we have a complete way of life.

"Acceptance of these precepts takes care of every phase of human life—spiritual, political, social, and economic. . . .

"America was a nation of people who had faith in their political and economic systems because they had faith in God, and had built those systems around the teachings of God.

"Every collectivist from Karl Marx to Stalin has agreed that faith in God must be destroyed before socialism can take over.

"Therefore, it was obvious that the problem of sabotaging America's faith in America was the problem of transferring the people's faith in God to faith in the State.

"That thing called morality in politics, business, and private contracts, had to be broken down.

"To an increasing extent the people have come to look upon morality as an old-fashioned superstition.

"Religion has for many church members become a safe way of dying rather than a good way of living."

I commend his entire speech, from which I have taken these extracts.

Add to this threatening upset in national standards the increasing tendency to abandon ideals that constitute the foundation of the American home, and you will agree with me that there is cause for apprehension.

Now what shall we do about it? That concerns us.

When Paul was a prisoner in Rome, he sent a letter to Timothy, saying in substance:

"Preach the word; be instant in season, out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort with all longsuffering and doctrine.

"For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears;

"And they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables." (II Timothy 4:2-4.)

It is as important today as when Paul wrote that farewell message to Timothy that officers and teachers in the Church "preach the word; be instant—that is, eager, earnest—in season and out of season."

Today, in the midst of the world's perplexity, there should be no question in the mind of any true Latter-day Saint as to what we shall preach. The answer is as clear as the noonday sun in a cloudless sky.

In the year 1830, there was given to the people of this land and of the world, a divine plan whereby individuals can find security and peace of mind and live in harmonious accord with their fellow beings. In all man's theories and experiments since history began, human intelligence has never devised a system which, when applied to the needs of humanity, can even approach this plan in effectiveness.

In simple words, then, this is the Word which we should preach—the gospel plan of salvation.

FAITH IN GOD

The founders of this great republic had faith in the economic and political welfare of this country because they had faith in God. Today it is not uncommon to note an apologetic attitude on the part of men when they refer to the need of God governing in the affairs of men. Indeed, as has already been said, the success of communism depends largely upon the substitution of the belief in God by belief in the supremacy of the state.

Preach in season and out of season belief in God the Eternal Father, in his Son Jesus Christ, and in the Holy Ghost.

Bear witness that "God and the unseen world," to quote a leading thinker, "are not mere objects of surmise. . . . Religion standing on the known experience of the race makes one bold and glorious affirmation. She asserts that this power that makes for truth, for beauty, and for goodness is not less personal than we. This leap of faith is justified because God cannot be less than the greatest of his works. . . . When, therefore, we call God personal we have interpreted him by the loftiest symbol we have. He may be infinitely more. He cannot be less. When we call God a spirit, we use the clearest lens we have to look at the infinite." (Charles Dinsmore of Yale.)

Second: Latter-day Saints proclaim that fundamental in this gospel plan is the sacredness of the individual, that God's work and glory is "to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man."

Under this concept, it is a great imposition, if indeed not a crime, for any government, any labor union, or any other organization to deny a man the right to speak, to worship, and to work.

Third: Preach that the plan involves the belief that governments were instituted of God for the benefit of man. Man was not born for the benefit of the state. Preach that no government can exist in peace, and I quote from the Doctrine and Covenants, except such laws are framed and held inviolate, as will secure to each individual the "free exercise of conscience, the right and control of property, and the protection of life."

Fourth: Preach the sacredness of family ties—the perpetuation of the family as the cornerstone of society.

Friday, April 4

First Day

Fifth: Proclaim the necessity of honesty and loyalty, doing an honest day's work for an honest day's pay. Preach that honesty in government is essential to the perpetuation and stability of our government as it is necessary to the stability of character in the individual. "We believe in being honest, true, chaste, benevolent, virtuous, and in doing good to all men. . . . If there is anything virtuous, lovely, or of good report, or praiseworthy, we seek after these things."

To summarize: Let us be instant in season, and out of season, declaring that a kind and loving Heavenly Father is as ready and eager today as ever to bless and to guide all his children who will sincerely seek him, and I bear you witness to that truth.

Proclaim that his Beloved Son, the Redeemer and Savior of mankind, stands at the head of his Church that bears his name—that he guides and inspires those who are authorized to represent him here on earth—authorized by the priesthood when heavenly messengers bestowed upon the Prophet Joseph Smith and others associated with him divine authority.

Preach that the responsibility of declaring this plan of life, this way of life, this plan of salvation rests upon the entire membership of the Church, but most particularly upon those who have been ordained to the priesthood and who have been called as leaders and servants of the people.

To them today, as Paul said to Timothy, we give the admonition:

"Preach the word; be instant in season, out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort with all longsuffering and doctrine."

In Zion let God's name be praised
Who has a feast prepared,
The glorious gospel standard raised,
The ancient faith restored.
Swift heralds, the glad news to bear
O'er land and ocean fly;
And to the wondering world disclose
The message from on high.

God give us power to fulfil this destiny of the Church, and to perform our duties, I pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

BISHOP THORPE B. ISAACSON

First Counselor in the Presiding Bishopric

PRESIDENT MCKAY, President Richards, President Clark, my dear brothers and sisters, and friends:

This is always a very difficult assignment for me, one which nearly overwhelms me, and I do feel very weak and very humble today. Personally, I am very grateful for the beautiful prayer that was offered at the beginning of the conference. Prayers always give one needed strength. Yes, "Prayer is the soul's sincere desire, uttered or unexpressed." Surely today, prayer is my soul's sincere desire.

We have all been greatly touched, blessed, and inspired by the words of the President of the Church, President David O. McKay, a prophet of the true and Living God.

The Spirit of the Lord will be at this conference in rich and great abundance if the thousands who assemble here can come with their hearts turned toward our Father in heaven.

Yesterday, in a meeting in the temple of the General Authorities of the Church, there was in evidence a beautiful and great spirit, one that I question whether anyone can absolutely and accurately describe or explain. It was the spirit of peace and love and harmony and unity. Yes, that was the spirit of our Father in heaven.

I know that there is great love and harmony and unity among the brethren of the General Authorities of the Church. No one should ever infer that there is any lack of unity or harmony or love or brotherhood in the Church. I only wish that all of us, one to another, could exhibit the same friendly love and unity that we saw in existence and that we experienced yesterday.

There is no place in the Church for lack of harmony, or lack of unity; there is no room for criticism in the Church. You may not agree with what individuals do or say, and none of us professes to be perfect. We shall be grateful to you if you will come to us and tell us of our shortcomings. But I am sure that you should not criticize those who serve in your bishoprics and stake presidencies, your auxiliaries and your quorum offices. I remember a statement that my little old grandfather once made to me, and I shall always try to remember it, when he said, "It does not take much brains to criticize." I am sure if we shall only stop to think of that, we will be more careful when we exhibit any degree of disunity.

I confess that I have humbly prayed to the Lord to forgive me for my shortcomings and imperfections. I have prayed to him daily to help me when my call should come to stand before you. I prayed, first, because I believe in prayer, and second, because I need the blessings of the Lord as one of the weakest among you.

The beautiful music today has caused us to put ourselves in tune with the spirit of the Lord, that we could come here and be truly strengthened and built up in our faith. Yes, faith in God is a requisite for the salvation of each of us. Oh, Israel, trust thou in the Lord, he is thy help and thy shield! A testimony of Jesus Christ should be the desire of every individual here. It may be necessary for each of us to make a right about change in our own life and turn our energy and our thoughts and our ambitions to our Heavenly Father. It may be necessary for a national crusade so that we can turn back to God, our Father; this may be an immediate essential, because of our apparent drifting, as individuals and as a nation, away from the teachings of our Father in heaven.

The fear of the Lord is the beginning of great wisdom. A good understanding have all they that do keep the commandments of God. Faith in God, our Eternal Father, and in his Son, Jesus Christ, the Redeemer of the world, the Savior of mankind, is essential to every one of us if we are to have happiness and partake of the blessings of the Lord.

It has been an inspiration to me to travel around the Church and throughout the wards and stakes and see these beautiful new meetinghouses being built and to see the enthusiasm and the contribution of the members of the Church. The Lord has truly blessed us.

Sometime ago I was in a ward, and I met the bishopric and their wives. It was not a large ward nor a rich ward. The people were trying to raise their portion to build a meetinghouse. They were having some difficulty. But a member of the bishopric told us that he and his wife decided to kill one of their cows. They did not have many; they were not in the dairy business; but they killed one of their choicest cows and had it slaughtered and the meat cut up. They made that meat into sandwiches and sold those sandwiches at basketball games and other functions to raise money so they could build a meetinghouse where they could assemble and renew their covenants with the Lord and worship God, their Eternal Father, according to the dictates of their own consciences.

I heard a man bear testimony recently of a time when he had been out on strike for two or three months; he was not a rich man; he had a large family; and his savings were nearly all gone. He did not have a job. One Sunday afternoon two of the brethren of his ward came to his house, since they were trying to finish their meetinghouse, and they said to him, "We are here to collect money to help finish our meetinghouse." They did not know his circumstances, and they said, "Your assessment is forty dollars."

He smiled, went in the bedroom, pulled out a drawer, and there was forty dollars, his last forty dollars. He looked at it and wondered if he should go back in and tell the brethren that he would pay half of it now, or if he should go back and beg off and tell them that he would pay part of it later; but then the thought came to him that he and his family had been blessed abundantly, and he took the forty dollars, buckled up his belt, went out into the room smiling, and said to the two brethren, "Here, I am glad to give you my assessment of forty dollars."

Friday, April 4

First Day

They gave him a receipt, not knowing the sacrifice that he had made, and bade him good-bye. Of course, he wondered how he was going to meet his current bills, but he is a man who prays diligently. And, of course, that night, in his family prayer, he asked the Lord to open up the way where material things could come to him, so that he could provide for his family. He testified that the next morning before breakfast a stranger knocked at his door and introduced himself to him. They had never heard of each other nor met before, he said, but this man introduced himself and said, "I have learned that you are a mechanic. Can you operate one of our machines (and named it)?" He said he thought he could. Then the stranger said, "We would like to employ you; we need such a man as you. The job isn't in this community, but we will have our company vans move you to the adjoining community where we need your services. We will furnish you with a modern house."

He was so anxious for that job that he hardly knew how to answer him. But he put him off for a moment and said, "Let me go into the kitchen and ask my wife how she feels." He went in there and told his wife of the visit of this gentleman who, by the way, was not a member of the Church.

He rushed back to the man and said, "Yes, we will consider that position. Would you mind telling us the salary?"

The man said, "No, I hesitated doing that because I wanted to know if you would really like the job."

He said, "Yes, we would like it very much."

And the stranger then told him the salary, it was twice as much, nearly, as he had ever been able to make before in his life.

He accepted the position; they shook hands; and the man said, "We will make that retroactive to the beginning of the year."

Well, some people may call that a coincidence, but not that good brother. That was the blessing of the Lord that came to him because of his faithfulness.

These beautiful new meetinghouses will be a power of strength to the membership of the Church. There are no such things as great sacrifices in this Church. There may be great responsibilities, but with them come great blessings. These meetinghouses will be a great value to you and your children, if you will only go there and partake of the sacrament. Sometimes I wonder if our people really understand and appreciate the value of the sacrament. Some of our wards are satisfied with 20% and 25% attendance at sacrament meeting. With these new, beautiful meetinghouses, we ought not to be satisfied with less than 50% attendance at sacrament meetings.

Oh, parents, if we would only take our children and go to sacrament meeting! If there were nothing else there but the singing of those hymns, and the prayer, and the beautiful administration of the sacrament, we would be abundantly blessed and strengthened, if we would assemble in the house of the Lord on his holy day and partake of the sacrament and renew our covenants with the Lord.

And when we partake of the sacrament, we make three covenants with the Lord: First, we covenant with the Lord that we will take upon us the name of his Son, Jesus Christ. And it means that we will endeavor by our works and our deeds to be in accord with him, whose name we have taken upon us. Second, we make a covenant that we will remember him, Christ, the Savior of the world, who died that we might live; to call to our mind the sacrifice and the suffering, that we remember his body, and that we remember his blood that was shed for us, that we might have eternal life and the remission of our sins. And then we covenant, and we promise that we will keep the commandments of God, our Eternal Father.

Oh, if we could only accept the blessings of the sacrament and partake of it regularly, filling those meetings to overflowing, I believe we would do better. I think we would be more blessed. I think we could overcome our shortcomings more successfully than where we stay away weeks and weeks without the sacrament. Every Latter-day Saint should assemble there on the holy day and take his children there for the sacrament.

Recently I read a statement by the American Legion and its auxiliary, and I thought it was a very worthy aim:

"Finding their way back to Almighty God and his ideals," and an aim to "attend Church, not only today, but every Sabbath day."

"Yes, parents, it would be well if we would not let a Sunday go by unless we assemble in our houses of worship which have been dedicated to the Lord, and there renew our covenants with our Father in heaven."

Oh, we may have to change our attitude a little bit about the Sabbath day, and really keep it holy. We may have to read those beautiful prayers again. If we would only read them and follow the prayer in our sacrament meeting, I am sure we would be glad and grateful that we have been in attendance.

I hope, fathers, that we can be close to our sons, yes, that we can help them increase their faith, that their testimonies may be strong. There are some today who would shake the faith of a boy or girl. There are some who would tend to destroy, perhaps innocently, but there are those who profess to know more than the boy who has faith, and therefore, as fathers and mothers, we should be close to our sons, so that no one will get an opportunity to shock their faith.

A father just handed me a letter that he received from his son and I want to read it to you. He received it just before Christmas.

Thanksgiving is just over, Father, and Christmas will soon be here, and it has turned my thoughts toward you and my home, but the thing that has been most in my mind is the gratitude that flows in my veins for the wonderful family that I have at home, and for the teachings that you have given me. Remember, Father, when you and I worked side by side, and while working, you were constantly giving me advice. I never said very much about the things you told me nor expressed my gratitude which I had for your companionship. I was more or less hoping that you could tell the way I felt by my actions and by my conversation. But I guess, Dad, my actions proved to you just the opposite sometimes. But now, Father, I want you to know that all you have taught me and all that you have done for me have not been taken as just something you owed me. Quite the contrary, Father. I am so happy that you have given me the chance to enjoy the beauties of this world. I am grateful for the testimony that you have given me, and especially I am grateful for being able to come on this mission. This is one of the many things I will never be able to pay you for, Dad. I have never seen such a change come over a person as I saw in you when Mother passed away. But I am sure the change was not in you but in me. I found that you weren't the person I thought you were. You had seemed cross with me, sometimes, and I misunderstood it. I don't see now, how I could ever have thought any different of you, Father. I have a great love and affection for you, not only as my father, but as my companion. I guess I am going to have to get new glasses, Dad; I can't write this letter without my eyes getting full and blurry with tears.

Yes, boys will be grateful for the faith that we help them maintain, for the testimonies that they have. I want to bear you my testimony. I know that God lives. I know that he has heard and answered my prayers. I acknowledge his hand because without his help

Friday, April 4

First Day

I could have done little or nothing. I know that Joseph Smith was a prophet of God. I know that he went into the Sacred Grove, and I know that God and his Son appeared to him, and spoke to him, and I know he received heavenly messengers on many occasions. I know that President David O. McKay is a living prophet of God, a spiritual prophet. I know that these men are prophets, seers, and revelators, and servants of the true and Living God. I know that he inspires them and reveals his messages to them. Sometimes, I will admit, it is hard for us to be as humble as we might. We do have to make an adjustment in our lives, often, so that we can be in tune with our Father in heaven.

May God bless us that we may be grateful for our membership in this Church, that we may have his Spirit always to be with us, I humbly pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

The Brigham Young University Combined Choruses and the congregation arose and joined in singing one verse of the hymn, "For the Strength of the Hills We Bless Thee."

ELDER SPENCER W. KIMBALL

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

I PRAY for the Spirit of the Lord to accompany my remarks. My brothers and sisters, my heart goes out to you who are attempting to live the commandments of the Lord. The "strength of the hills" is with you.

It is a great joy to me, and my heart is overflowing with gratitude, to shake your hands, to look into your smiling faces, and to feel your spirit.

We heard this morning that seventeen thousand newly converted people are today enjoying the blessings of the gospel of Jesus Christ, are pointed in the right direction, and are on their way toward eternal life and exaltation. Ten thousand foreign and stake missionaries have been instrumental in bringing the message to them. These new members are here because these thousands have borne witness and testimony to them.

To all the millions of good, honorable people who live among us, we extend an invitation to investigate the gospel of Jesus Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation and to exaltation. It is the pearl of greatest price. It is the most glorious, the most far-reaching, the most wonderful program in the world. It is not conceived by men, but is conceived by God, our Eternal Father.

Sometime ago a sister said to me, "Why is it, Brother Kimball, that those who do the least in the building of the kingdom seem to prosper most? We drive a Ford; our neighbors drive a Cadillac. We observe the Sabbath and attend our meetings; they play golf, hunt, fish, and play. We abstain from the forbidden while they eat, drink, and are merry and are unrestrained. We pay much as tithing and for other Church donations; they have their entire large income to lavish upon themselves. We are tied home with our large family of small children, often ill; they are totally free for social life—to dine and to dance. We wear cottons and woolens, and I wear a three-season coat, but they wear silks and costly apparel, and she wears a mink coat. Our meagre income is always strained and never seems adequate for necessities, while their wealth seems inexhaustible and wholly adequate for every luxury obtainable. And yet the Lord promises blessings to the faithful! It seems to me that it does not pay to live the gospel—that the proud and the covenant breakers are the ones who prosper."

Then I said to her: "As I remember, Job in his great distress made a statement which parallels yours."

But Job answered [Zophar] and said. . . .

Wherefore do the wicked live, become old, yea, are mighty in power?

Their seed is established in their sight with them, and their offspring before their eyes.

Their houses are safe from fear, neither is the rod of God upon them.

Their bull gendereth, and faileth not; their cow calveth and casteth not her calf.

They send forth their little ones like a flock, and their children dance. . . .

They spend their days in wealth, and in a moment go down to the grave.

Therefore they say unto God, Depart from us; for we desire not the knowledge of thy ways.

What is the Almighty, that we should serve him? and what profit should we have, if we pray unto him? (Job 21:1, 7-11, 13-15.)

And the Prophet Jeremiah asked the same question:

Righteous art thou, O Lord, when I plead with thee: yet let me talk with thee of thy judgments: Wherefore doth the way of the wicked prosper? wherefore are all they happy that deal very treacherously? . . .

How long shall the land mourn, and the herbs of every field wither, for the wickedness of them that dwell therein? (Jeremiah 12:1, 4.)

And again Malachi quotes the Lord as saying:

Your words have been stout against me, saith the Lord. Yet ye say, What have we spoken so much against thee?

Ye have said, It is vain to serve God: and what profit is it that we have kept his ordinance, and that we have walked mournfully before the Lord of hosts?

And now we call the proud happy; yea, they that work wickedness are set up; yea, they that tempt God are even delivered. (Malachi 3:13-15.)

The parable of the wheat and tares is the Lord's answer:

. . . The kingdom of heaven is likened unto a man which sowed good seed in his field:

But while men slept, his enemy came and sowed tares among the wheat, and went his way.

But when the blade was sprung up, and brought forth fruit, then appeared the tares also.

So the servants of the householder came and said unto him, Sir, didst not thou sow good seed in thy field? from whence then hath it tares?

He said unto them, An enemy hath done this. The servants said unto him, Wilt thou then that we go and gather them up?

But he said, Nay; lest while ye gather up the tares, ye root up also the wheat with them.

Let both grow together until the harvest: and in the time of harvest I will say to the reapers, Gather ye together first the tares, and bind them in bundles to burn them: but gather the wheat into my barn. (Matt. 13:24-30.)

And the interpretation of the parable given by the Lord himself makes clear that the books are not balanced daily but at the harvesttime. The time of reckoning is as sure as is the passage of time and the coming of eternity. All who live shall eventually stand before the bar of God to be judged according to their works. The final assignments will constitute rewards and punishments according to deserts. Read Malachi further:

Then they that feared the Lord spake often one to another: and the Lord hearkened, and heard it, and a book of remembrance was written before him for them that feared the Lord, and that thought upon his name.

And they shall be mine, saith the Lord of hosts, in that day when I make up my jewels; and I will spare them, as a man spareth his own son that serveth him.

Then shall ye return, and discern between the righteous and the wicked, between him that serveth God and him that serveth him not. (Mal. 3:16-18.)

For behold, the day cometh, that shall burn as an oven; and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly, shall be stubble: and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch.

But unto you that fear my name shall the Sun of righteousness arise with healing in his wings; . . . (Ibid., 4:1-2.)

The Lord admonishes his servants to remain faithful always and Watch therefore: for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come. . . .

But and if that evil servant shall say in his heart, My Lord delayeth his coming; And shall begin to smite his fellow-

Friday, April 4

First Day

servants, and to eat and drink with the drunken;

The lord of that servant shall come in a day when he looketh not for him, and in an hour that he is not aware of,

And shall cut him asunder, and appoint him his portion with the hypocrites: there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth. (Matt. 24:42, 48-51.)

And the Prophet Zephaniah interprets the way of the Lord:

And it shall come to pass at that time, that I will search Jerusalem with candles [speaking for the Lord], and punish the men that are settled on their lees: that say in their heart, The Lord will not do good, neither will he do evil.

Therefore their goods shall become a booty, and their houses a desolation: they shall also build houses, but not inhabit them; and they shall plant vineyards, but not drink the wine thereof.

The great day of the Lord is near, it is near, and hasteth greatly, even the voice of the day of the Lord: the mighty man shall cry there bitterly.

That day is a day of wrath, a day of trouble and distress, a day of wasteness and desolation, a day of darkness and gloominess, a day of clouds and thick darkness. . . .

And I will bring distress upon men, that they shall walk like blind men, because they have sinned against the Lord: and their blood shall be poured out as dust, and their flesh as the dung.

Neither their silver nor their gold shall be able to deliver them in the day of the Lord's wrath; but the whole land shall be devoured by the fire of his jealousy. (Zeph. 1:12-15, 17-18.)

Then I said to the disconsolate sister, "You have many blessings today. For many rewards you need not wait until the judgment day. You have your family of lovely children. What a rich reward for the so-called sacrifices! The great boon of motherhood is yours. With your limitations, a great peace can fill your soul. These and numerous other blessings which you enjoy cannot be purchased with all your neighbor's wealth."

Then I reminded her of the parable of the net and the fishes:

Again, the kingdom of heaven is like unto a net, that was cast into the sea, and gathered of every kind:

Which, when it was full, they drew to shore, and sat down, and gathered the good into vessels, but cast the bad away.

So shall it be at the end of the world: the angels shall come forth, and sever the wicked from among the just,

And shall cast them into the furnace of fire: there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth. (Matt. 13:47-50.)

No one will escape the reward of his deeds. No one will fail to receive the blessings earned. Again the parable of the sheep and goats gives us assurance that there will be total justice.

When the Son of Man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory:

And before him shall be gathered all nations: and he shall separate them one from another, as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats:

And he shall set the sheep on his right hand, but the goats on the left.

Then shall the King say unto them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world:

Then shall he say also unto them on the left hand, Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels:

And these shall go away into everlasting punishment: but the righteous into life eternal. (Ibid., 25:31-34, 41, 46.)

If we can walk now by faith, if we can believe in the rich promises of God, if we can obey and patiently wait, the Lord will fulfil all his rich promises to us:

. . . Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him. (I Cor. 2:9.)

The blessings following righteousness are enjoyed both in mortality and in eternity. Hear the words of the Savior:

And every one that hath forsaken houses, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands, for my name's sake, shall receive an hundredfold, and shall inherit everlasting life. (Matt. 19:29.)

And ponder upon the great promises made for us even in this life:

Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it.

And I will rebuke the devourer for your sakes, and he shall not destroy the fruits of your ground; neither shall your vine cast her fruit before the time in the field, saith the Lord of hosts.

And all nations shall call you blessed: for ye shall be a delightsome land, saith the Lord of hosts. (Malachi 3:10-12.)

Extravagant rewards are offered. Blessings beyond one's understanding will come. The land will yield bounteously and peace shall abound. The unfaithful, proud, and wealthy can never enjoy the sweet savor of the rewards for fasting and dispensing to the poor:

Then [if you live these commandments] shall thy light break forth as the morning, and thine health shall spring forth speedily: and thy righteousness shall go before thee; the glory of the Lord shall be thy reward.

Then shalt thou call, and the Lord shall answer; thou shalt cry, and he shall say, Here I am. . . .

. . . then shall thy light rise in obscurity, and thy darkness be as the noon day:

And the Lord shall guide thee continually, and satisfy thy soul in drought, and make fat thy bones: and thou shalt be like a watered garden, and like a spring of water, whose waters fail not. (Isaiah 58:8-11.)

What more could one ask? The companionship of the Lord, light and knowledge, health and vigor, constant guidance by the Lord as an eternal never-failing spring. What more could one desire?

Again rich promises:

And [they] shall find wisdom and great treasures of knowledge, even hidden treasures;

And shall run and not be weary, and shall walk and not faint.

And I, the Lord, give unto them a promise, that the destroying angel shall pass by them, as the children of Israel, and not slay them. Amen. (D. & C. 89:19-21.)

Think of it! Knowledge—testimony—spiritual strength—physical vigor and immunity from the destroying angel! Remember also that here comes protection from that more deadly destruction:

And fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul; but rather fear him which is able to destroy both soul and body in hell. (Matt. 10:28.)

But the Lord knows the weakness of men, and he says in the 58th section of the Doctrine and Covenants:

I command and men obey not; I revoke and they receive not the blessing.

Then they say in their hearts: This is not the work of the Lord, for his promises are not fulfilled. But wo unto such, for their reward lurketh beneath, and not from above. (D. & C. 58:32-33.)

The Lord promises again:

If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him. (James 1:5.)

Great shall be their reward and eternal shall be their glory. (D. & C. 76:6.)

But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you. (Matt. 6:33.)

To those who live for tomorrow, the rewards are beyond their conception. And even though some of the blessings are for future enjoyment, is it not far better to enjoy the spiritual luxuries of tomorrow, which is an eternity, rather than to revel in the physical comforts of today?

Peace, joy, satisfaction, happiness, growth, contentment, all come with the righteous living of the commandments of God. The one who delights in all of the worldly luxuries of today, at the expense of spirituality, is living but for the moment. His day is coming. Retribution is sure.

Friday, April 4

The Lord gave us the impressive parable of the prodigal son. This squanderer lived but for today. He spent his life in riotous living. He disregarded the commandments of God. His inheritance was expendable, and he spent it. He was never to enjoy it again as it was irretrievably gone. No quantity of tears or regrets or remorse could bring it back. Even though his father forgave him and dined him and clothed him and kissed him, he could not give back to the profligate son that which had been dissipated. But the other brother who had been faithful, loyal, righteous, constant, retained his inheritance, and the father reassured him: "All that I have is thine."

When one realizes the vastness, the richness, the glory of that "all" which the Lord promises to bestow upon his faithful, it is worth all it costs in patience, faith, sacrifice, sweat and tears. The blessings of eternity contemplated in this "all" bring to men immortality and everlasting life, eternal growth, divine leadership, eternal increase, perfection, and with it all—Godhood.

May God bless us all that we may live his commandments more faithfully, more perfectly day by day, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

We have just listened to Spencer W. Kimball. Brother Thomas E. McKay, Assistant to the Twelve, will now address us. While he is coming we will just say that any important messages or calls that come to us from persons who are supposed to be in attendance will be broadcast over the loud speaker.

ELDER THOMAS E. MCKAY

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles

PRESIDENT MCKAY and Counselors, President Smith, and other General Authorities, and brethren and sisters: Never before in my life have I felt so thankful for the gospel of Jesus Christ, and for the testimony that I have that it is true—a great plan of life and salvation. I have felt very much impressed this morning with all that has been said, especially about the gospel, which is the great plan of life and salvation as revealed to the Prophet Joseph Smith.

I have felt the nearness of our angel mother, especially during the time that President McKay was speaking. Her great faith and courage have had much to do with his being where he is today. When my father was called on a mission in 1881, it was just a few weeks after they had buried my two older sisters. It was a very hard blow for my father, since they were just at the age, eleven and nine, where they could be of much help to my mother; and my father was always very kind and considerate of her. It was difficult for Father to recover from this loss, and then this call came from Box B to go on a mission. It worried him. He could not eat or sleep. He loved my mother with all his heart, of course; and out of consideration for her and her condition, he finally decided that he would ask for a postponement of that mission call. He told Mother of this decision. She appreciated that love and consideration, of course; but she looked at him and said, "David, you go on that mission. You go now. The Lord wants you now, not a year from now, and he will take care of me." My father accepted the call.

Of course, it was a trial for him to leave, as he left on the nineteenth of April in the spring of 1881, and ten days later, on the 29th, my sister Annie was born. That made four of us—my brother, President McKay, seven years old; I was five; my sister Jeanette, three; and that sweet little darling baby, Annie, just born.

I am going to take time to refer to this incident in connection with the wonderful sermon that was delivered by President McKay this morning to illustrate how the great gospel plan operates.

In order to get a little ready cash to send to my father, my mother planned for that next winter. We were greatly blessed with good crops—more than the sheds would hold of the hay—so we stacked the surplus just outside of the stables. Instead of selling that hay, Mother decided to take a few cattle from others to feed, among them a big yoke of oxen, and the owners were to pay monthly. In that way she got the money to send to Father. My mother never did the chores. We hired a man. In fact she was very much frightened of the cattle, especially of these oxen. But she was a little worried. She was getting a good cash payment, and she wanted to see that they were taken care of. I remember one evening after the hired man had gone, she took us boys and slipped out to the barn to that stack of hay. We had a homemade hay puller of maple, and she would pull the hay out of that stack, and David O. would put it in his little arms and carry it into the oxen. He wasn't afraid. I was. I stood right by Mother, and I would pull out a little hay. After making about five or six trips feeding those oxen, he put a little extra in his arms about the sixth trip. He hurried in and then ran out and said, "Come on, Mama, let's run now before they eat that."

Brethren and sisters, it was because of the decision of that angel mother that my father went on that mission, and went on it then, not a year from then, that we are here today. That set the example.

In 1897 the test came again. There were four of us, those four that were the babies in 1881, were then at the university. We had borrowed money, of course, but we had it all planned. David O. and Jeanette had been there two years before, and Father sent us down to get acquainted before they graduated. They were to graduate and teach and help pay the debts, and keep my sister, that missionary baby girl, and myself in school. Just before school closed in June, another letter came from Box B. It was forwarded from Huntsville to Salt Lake City where we were living. The girls had already gone to school that morning. I was writing a composition. The doorbell rang, and David O. answered. The mailman handed him the letter, and as he read, I glanced up and saw that he was quite agitated. I said, "What is the matter? Is somebody sick at home?"

He threw the letter across the table in disgust and said, "Isn't that heck?" He used a stronger word.

He was deeply concerned for several days. The rest of us were a little worried. I know my parents were worried, but they did not interfere; they did not write. But because of that angel mother who told my father to go on that mission, David O. did not turn that call down. God bless the memory of that angel mother.

God bless this gospel plan, that gives us so many opportunities. May we, brethren and sisters, live in accordance with the gospel, the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ, the plan of life and salvation, and from this time on resolve to "Do unto others as you would have others do unto you," I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

You have just listened to Elder Thomas E. McKay, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve.

The Brigham Young University Combined Choruses will now sing, "An Angel From On High," conducted by Crawford Gates.

The closing prayer will be offered by Floyd G. Eyre, formerly president of the Canadian Mission, after which this conference will be adjourned until 2:00 this afternoon.

The proceedings of that session will be broadcast over KSL and by arrangement through KSL over the other stations named at the beginning of this session.

Friday, April 4

First Day

The music for this session, as you know, has been furnished by the Combined Choruses of the Brigham Young University. Frank W. Asper is at the organ, Brothers Norman Gulbrandsen and Crawford Gates conducting.

Singing by the Brigham Young University Combined Choruses, "An Angel From On High."

The closing prayer was offered by Elder Floyed G. Eyre, formerly president of the Canadian Mission.

Conference adjourned until 2:00 p.m.

FIRST DAY

AFTERNOON MEETING

The second session of the conference convened at 2:00 p.m., Friday, April 4, in the great Tabernacle.

President David O. McKay:

This is the second session of the One Hundred and Twenty-Second Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

We are convened in the Tabernacle on Temple Square, Salt Lake City. There are present on the stand this afternoon all the General Authorities, excepting President Stayner Richards in Great Britain, and Elder Thomas E. McKay.

These services and all general sessions of the Conference will be broadcast in the Assembly Hall, and in the Barratt Hall, 60 North Main Street, over a loud-speaking system and by television.

The proceedings of this session will be broadcast over KSL of Salt Lake City and by arrangements through KSL over the stations named in the first session of this Conference, including those of surrounding states.

This session will be televised also over the KSL Television Station, Channel 5.

The singing for this session will be furnished, as this morning, by the Combined Choruses of the Brigham Young University, with Newell Waite and Crawford Gates conducting, and Frank W. Asper at the organ.

We shall begin the services by the Combined Choruses of the Brigham Young University singing, "He Watching Over Israel," conducted by Newell Waite.

The opening prayer will be offered by Elder W. Ernest Young, formerly president of the Argentine Mission.

Selection by the Brigham Young University Combined Choruses, "He, Watching Over Israel, Slumbers Not Nor Sleeps."

The opening prayer was offered by Elder W. Ernest Young, formerly president of the Argentine Mission.

President David O. McKay:

We shall continue by the Combined Choruses singing, "God of Our Fathers," conducted by Elder Newell Waite.

After the singing, Elder Joseph Fielding Smith, president of the Council of the Twelve, will address us.

The Combined Choruses sang "God of Our Fathers."

PRESIDENT JOSEPH FIELDING SMITH

President of the Council of the Twelve

I AM very grateful for the meeting that was held this morning and for the good counsel that was given to the members of the Church. I pray that we will heed it and remember that we are living in a wicked world where men's hearts have turned from truth to untruth, from righteousness to wickedness; when men are unrighteously ambitious, seeking for power; when the liberties of the people are in danger. It behooves us as members of the Church to heed the counsels that are given by those who stand as our leaders under Jesus Christ.

I am grateful for the gospel, for all the privileges which are mine to give service, for the privilege that is mine to honor my Maker and be a true servant to our Master, the Savior and Redeemer of the world.

We are all aware that we are in imminent danger—danger because Satan rages in the hearts of the people. This has all been predicted, and the predictions are coming true. Antichrist is gaining power, and Satan has put into the hearts of the people—the majority of them—greed, and the desire to dominate and take advantage of those who are weak.

Our duty is to keep the commandments of the Lord, to walk uprightly, to defend every principle of truth, to sustain and uphold the Constitution of this great country, to remember the Declaration of Independence, for, as we heard this morning from our President, upon these principles our country was based. They stand at the foundation, the cornerstones of the liberty that our fathers fought for, and which brought to pass according to the word of the Lord, the redemption of this land by the shedding of blood.

There is no other course for us to take but the course of righteousness and truth. An ancient prophet on this continent said, "... the natural man is an enemy to God." (Mosiah 3:19.) The world today has become carnal, as much so now as in the beginning when Adam attempted to teach his children the principles of eternal truth, and Satan came among them and commanded them to believe it not.

And we read, "From that time forth man became carnal, sensual, and devilish." (Moses 5:13.)

Surely we see these indications prevalent in our own land and in foreign lands. Men have become carnal. They have become enemies to God. They are seeking for their own advancement and not for the advancement of the kingdom of God.

Let me call your attention to this fact which you, of course, all know, that we are living in the last days, the days of trouble, days of wickedness, spoken of as days of wickedness several hundred years before the coming of Christ by Nephi, as it is recorded in the twenty-seventh chapter of Second Nephi.

But, behold, in the last days, or in the days of the Gentiles—yea, behold all the nations of the Gentiles and also the Jews, both those who shall come upon this land and those who shall be upon other lands, yea, even upon all the lands of the earth, behold, they will be drunken with iniquity and all manner of abominations.

And when that day shall come they shall be visited of the Lord of Hosts, with thunder and with earthquake, and with a great noise, and with storm, and with tempest, and with the flame of devouring fire. (II Nephi 27:1-2.)

That was said many hundreds of years before the birth of Christ. We are living in the days of the Gentiles when this prediction was to be fulfilled. We see it being fulfilled, and we must remember, my good brethren and sisters, that members of the Church are not members of, and do not belong to the world.

In the wonderful prayer of our Redeemer, as recorded in the seventeenth chapter of John—I can hardly read this chapter without tears coming to my eyes—wherein our Lord, in praying to his Father in the tenderness of all his soul because he knew the hour had come for him to offer himself as a sacrifice, prayed for his disciples. In that prayer he said,

I pray not that thou shouldest take them out of the world, but that thou shouldest keep them from the evil.

They are not of the world, even as I am not of the world.

Sanctify them through thy truth: thy word is truth. (John 17:15-17.)

Friday, April 4

First Day

If we are living the religion which the Lord has revealed and which we have received, we do not belong to the world. We should have no part in all its foolishness. We should not partake of its sins and its errors—errors of philosophy and errors of doctrine, errors in regard to government, or whatever those errors may be—we have no part in it.

The only part we have is the keeping of the commandments of God. That is all, being true to every covenant and every obligation that we have entered into and taken upon ourselves.

Brother Kimball in his remarks this morning spoke of a man who could not quite understand when he paid his tithing and kept the Word of Wisdom, was prayerful, and tried to be obedient to all the commandments the Lord had given him, and yet he had to struggle to make a living; while his neighbor violated the Sabbath day, I suppose he smoked and drank; he had what the world would call a good time, he paid no attention to the teachings of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, and yet he prospered.

You know, we have a great many members of the Church that ponder that over in their hearts and wonder why. Why this man seems to be blessed with all the good things of the earth—incidentally, many of the bad things that he thinks are good—and yet so many members of the Church are struggling, laboring diligently to try to make their way through the world.

The answer is a simple thing. If I sometimes, and once in a while I do, go to a football game or a baseball game or some other place of amusement, invariably I will be surrounded by men and women who are puffing on cigarets or cigars or dirty pipes. It gets very annoying, and I get a little disturbed. I will turn to Sister Smith, and I will say something to her, and she will say, "Well, now, you know what you have taught me. You are in their world. This is their world." And that sort of brings me back to my senses. Yes, we are in their world, but we do not have to be of it.

So, as this is their world we are living in, they prosper, but, my good brethren and sisters, their world is coming to its end. It will not be many years. I can say that. I do not know how many years, but Elijah said when he bestowed his keys: "... by this ye may know that the great and dreadful day of the Lord is near, even at the doors," (D. & C. 110:16) I am sure that over a hundred years later I can say that the end of this world is drawing to its end.

The day will come when we will not have this world. It will be changed. We will get a better world. We will get one that is righteous, because when Christ comes, he will cleanse the earth.

Read what is written in our scriptures. Read what he himself has said. When he comes, he will cleanse this earth from all its wickedness, and, speaking of the Church, he has said that he would send his angels and they would gather out of his kingdom, which is the Church, all things that offend. Then we are going to have a new earth, a new heaven. The earth will be renewed for a thousand years, and there shall be peace, and Christ, whose right it is, shall reign. Afterwards will come the death of the earth, its resurrection, its glorification, as the abode of the righteous or they who belong to the celestial kingdom, and they only shall dwell upon the face of it.

Let us be true and faithful, keep our covenants, be true to every obligation the Lord has given us. I humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER S. DILWORTH YOUNG

Of the First Council of the Seventy

MANY years ago I walked into Richards Ward of this city to hear President Charles W. Penrose deliver an address. I have not the least idea about what he intended to speak, but I saw before us the text upon which he did speak. Someone had placed upon the rostrum for the benefit of those who, I suppose, needed it—the youngsters of Sunday School age—a sign which read, “Order is the First Law of Heaven.”

I suspect that Brother Penrose was impatient for the preliminary exercises to be finished because immediately afterwards he took the floor and spent the whole evening explaining why order is not, but that obedience is, the first law of heaven. I cannot remember what he said. I do remember that this was the first time in my life that I had heard this principle explained thoroughly.

I recognize the fact that this Church is a Church of revealed principle. From the Lord come the revelations which establish the principles. I should like to bear my witness that there must be an interpreter for the Church of those principles.

If we had no revelator to do it for us, each man and each woman would interpret, explain, and take into his own life only that portion of each principle which he would wish for himself, and this people would be disunited and divergent in its views. I do thank my Lord that there sits on this stand a Prophet of the Lord, who, with his Counselors and the Twelve, are empowered to tell us how as a united body we are to explain and entertain the principles.

Now, the matter of having a principle explained is one thing, teaching its application is another thing, but getting obedience to it is a third thing. As I have gone through my life, I confess to you folk that I have never been coerced. The obedience I have chosen to render to the principles has been entirely my own, and completely voluntary. I have always been able to choose whether I would accept the interpretation of the Presidents of the Church or whether I would figure out my own interpretation. I have found that the interpretation of the Church has had safety for me. I have found myself wandering far astray when left to my own devices on things about which the prophet of the Lord has spoken.

I believe that all of the crises through which the Church has passed have been safely weathered by the application of the principle of obedience, voluntarily expressed. Even in the sharp days at Nauvoo when men did not know whither to turn or what to do, President Young did not tell the people they had to leave. If I remember history correctly, he is reported to have said to his people:

“I am going to cross the river and start west with my family and my teams. All those who wish to follow me, do so.”

Well, the majority wished to follow him, and the majority did so. We have never heard what happened to those who did not come, except for a very few about whom the Church was vitally concerned. Those who came, who were obedient, did not live to see it, but their children’s children are the faithful of today. And those who did not come, where are their children, may I ask? one never hears of them.

When the Church moved south at the coming of Johnston’s Army, President Young again said: “I am going south. Those who want to come may come.” Nearly all of them went with him, and at Provo when the crisis was over, he stood up on a wagon tongue and said to the people:

“I am going back to Salt Lake City. Those of you who care to follow may do so.”

I have observed that never do the prophetic leaders tell the people what they must do but rather advise them what it is wise and expedient to do.

More recently, in our day, when the welfare program was announced, and the brethren from this pulpit explained to those assembled how they wanted to work it, from my position among the rank and file I heard a great deal from certain people who wanted to do it differently. They did not want to interpret it the way the brethren wanted to interpret it.

Where are they today? I do not know. They are not in positions of responsibility, certainly. Those who were willing to follow the lead voluntarily, with faith, believing that their leaders spoke with inspiration from Almighty God, are those in whom the responsibility is rested.

Friday, April 4

First Day

So I suppose it must always be. As we come to crisis after crisis, as the events of the world make changes necessary in policy, the leaders will speak, and those who are wise will give unquestioning obedience. I did not say unintelligent obedience. I said unquestioning obedience.

I should like to make an application of what I have been saying today. We have now come to a time, I see by the newspapers, when we are to have announced this evening, a missionary policy.

Now I confess to you people here that I do not know personally much more about that than you do. Suppose that the policy is not in harmony with what you had thought to be the direction in which it ought to go; suppose it to embody detail which I should like to see done some other way. Applying the principle of obedience to myself, I stand here now and say to you here assembled that it is my intention to follow, as nearly as the Lord will give me light, those plans and policies regarding missionary work that are to be announced by my file leaders.

I shall not want to improve on their ideas, but I shall give all my strength, and all my courage, and any talents with which the Lord may have blessed me, to doing what will be announced.

I think that we have come to a time now when we are going to see some changes. Times are ripe for changes. The world is changing. The Prophet Joseph Smith changed the missionary system two or three times in his own life. At one time he told the missionaries to go out two by two. Shortly after he told them they might now go one at a time and alone. Other changes have been made. I am for the changes.

May I close by reading you a verse of scripture which I think applies to me personally. Maybe you can apply it to yourselves. It was said by Samuel on an occasion which I think justified the saying.

... Hath the Lord as great delight in burnt offerings and sacrifices, as in obeying the voice of the Lord? Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice, and to hearken than the fat of rams. (1 Samuel 15:22.)

There I stand. May we all do likewise, I humbly pray, in the name of Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

You all remember Elder George Q. Morris as General Superintendent of the Young Men's Mutual Improvement Association. This is the first opportunity you have had to hear him since his release as president of the Eastern States Mission, and the first time since he was ordained and set apart as an Assistant to the Twelve.

Elder George Q. Morris will now speak to us.

ELDER GEORGE Q. MORRIS

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles

MY DEAR brethren and sisters, I am very thankful for the privilege of being with you here today. I have thrilled with the spirit and instructions of this great conference.

Having now been released from missionary work, as has been explained, I wish to express my gratitude to my Father in heaven and to my brethren for the privilege I have had of laboring in the missionary field. I know of no work that gives greater joy and satisfaction.

The work has been progressing in the Eastern States Mission because of the faithfulness of the missionaries and the Saints who are there; to whom I pay tribute. More branches are being established; chapels are being erected; the Saints are increasing in their faith and in their understanding of the gospel, and in their devotion to it; and they are enjoying the fruits of the gospel—joy and happiness and peace. Their hearts are turned toward us here in this center in the west.

It has been a great privilege to labor with the young men and women who have been sent out as missionaries. It is one of the marvels of this Latter-day work to see them in action. They come quite inexperienced and untrained. They have lived the gospel as children and youths but have been engrossed with school and occupations, and other matters that have filled their lives; then they are suddenly sent into the field to preach the gospel of Jesus Christ to the world.

Many of them do not know just what it is. Many of them cannot quote you a scripture, but their hearts are right. Most of them have looked forward to a mission and are joyous in having come into the missionary field. Being there, they get down on their knees and get into the scriptures, and they become humble and contrite. The Lord takes hold of them, and in a few weeks they are preaching the gospel of Jesus Christ, no other gospel. They are not taught of men. They are not sent out to be taught of men. They are sent out to be taught from on high the revealed word of God, taught through the priesthood of God; and the Lord is close to them; and they grow in power and faith; and the gospel is preached—the gospel that the Lord Jesus Christ preached, that Peter, James, and John preached—the identical principles.

Its power is effective today. Men and women are being changed in their lives. After a short association with these young people, many of them drop habits that are harmful to them. They have found a new spirit, a new type of manhood and womanhood. A new power has come into their lives. They just do not at once realize what it is, but they grow in a knowledge of the truth, and they are converted to the gospel of Jesus Christ. Then they enter into a new life. The Bible is a new book to them. Their homes are new homes to them. Relations with the family are new relations, and the world is a new world.

The power of God unto the salvation of his children is here in the world today; and through the ministrations of these young men of the Church, in their humility and their faith, the heavens are opened; and the power of God is manifest for the healing of the sick as well as for the healing of sick souls and the giving of light to people in darkness.

I rejoice in their labors. The Lord has blessed and prospered them. I have been standing on the sidelines, but I have been made a partaker of their blessings, and I thank the Lord for it.

Now I am called to a new position. You know how humble I feel and how small I feel. We have a wonderful age retirement plan in this Church. I have never believed in arbitrary age retirement. We grow younger in this Church as we work in it, and the age retirement plan goes in reverse. The older we get and the longer we labor in the Church the more there is that we can do. There is no need for any person in this Church to have an empty mind, an empty hand, or an empty heart. God has provided that our lives may be full and rich as long as we live, and as we live the gospel, then our lives become glorious, and we enter into a fulness of life.

I thank the Lord for the gospel of Jesus Christ. With joy and gratitude I go into this new work, and meager as my services and ability may be, they will be given with all my heart. I love this cause. I have admiration and love for my brethren under whom I have been laboring, and with whom I have long been associated, more or less. I have loved them and appreciated them for the examples they have set me, for the teachings they have given me, for the kindness they have manifested towards me.

Friday, April 4

First Day

So, my brethren and sisters, I am happy to find myself in full accord with all that this Church is and all that it does. Its divine leader, Jesus Christ, is my leader and my Lord. Its leaders on this earth are my leaders. The principles of this Church are my principles. The objectives of this Church are my objectives. The welfare of this Church is my welfare.

I give myself to it with all my heart and pray that God may enable me to do some good in the sacred ministry unto which he has called me.

This is the Church of Jesus Christ, the Creator and the Redeemer of the world. The keys of the kingdom of God are here in our presence. These operate and will operate throughout all the world among all mankind, through the Holy Melchizedek Priesthood, which is always present when the Church of Jesus Christ is upon the earth. And when this power is not upon the earth and where this power does not exist among men, the Church of Jesus Christ does not exist.

Thank God for the great revelations—key revelations—that point the way for us and enlighten us and preserve us.

May God help us to be true and faithful, and devote ourselves with all our hearts to this work, I humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER JOHN A. WIDTSOE

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

MY DEAR brethren and sisters: It is good to be here. The ancient words of those who dwelt in the presence of the Savior are our words today.

Six months ago circumstances combined so that I was not here, and I have felt since a sense of loss, loss of the spiritual power, the spiritual support and elevation that come to all Latter-day Saints who attend Church gatherings in the name of the Lord, whether in general or stake or ward capacity.

With you, I have been thrilled to note that the Church of Jesus Christ is not standing still but, guided by heavenly forces, is growing and increasing and becoming mightier in the service of God's children here upon earth. With you, too, I enjoyed the spirit of the sermon of the man who has been called by God to preside over the Church. It is well for me, it is well for you, and it is well for all in the world to listen to the chosen head of the Church as he speaks from time to time. Therein lies the path to safety.

Six months ago I was not here because, with the approval of the First Presidency, I had accepted an invitation from the Canadian government to assist in solving some of their problems relating to the reclamation of the dry lands of the Dominion. Canada is much like the United States, with two seaboards, one on the Atlantic and the other on the Pacific, with ample rainfall, and a dry section between, in the interior, such as we have here. The prairie provinces of Canada offer only scant and difficult living to those who attempt to cultivate them because of the lack of the plentiful rainfall on either coast. So the practice of irrigation has gradually grown in the province of Alberta, where many of our people live. It has been found that the enlivening power of water used in irrigation increases the crops many-fold, and what is better, permits a close settlement, and in time the building of a state. There is water aplenty in the land of our neighbors to the north. Great streams, filled with water to overflowing, usually, roll into the oceans on both sides of the Dominion, and the problem is how to use that water on the dry lands of Alberta, Saskatchewan, and other neighboring provinces, to build the Dominion of Canada, now great, into a greater country.

The commission to which I was appointed was given the responsibility of passing on one of the huge projects proposed by the country, one that will redeem and bring into cultivation nearly half a million acres of land and involve an expenditure running from $100,000,000 to $200,000,000. Sometime it has to be done, for these dry lands when irrigated offer future possibilities of happy homes for thousands of families, not to be overlooked in the process of statesmanship.

It has always been a curious thing to me, curious is not really the right word, when I reflect upon the history of our own people, how we were led by the hand of God, as a people, and were brought over the deserts and over the mountains to be settled in this country. We did not know at that time, and the world did not know, that one-half or more of all the land surface of the earth lies under low rainfall. These vast stretches of land can be reclaimed only by the twin arts of dry farming and irrigation, best of all by irrigation, for dry farming at its very best is only a minor practice to be followed by people who live near the cultivated areas. But our people came here and for the first time in the history of civilization demonstrated that a successful manner of community living might be built with the irrigation ditch. The Lord guiding us took us to a protected home, but not only that, he made us teachers of the world in these twin arts of successful soil conservation. In this state, from which we have spread over the west and are spreading over the world, has come the birth of modern irrigation. Most countries which lie in part under low rainfall have sent agents or representatives here to find out what we did and how we did it, and whether they can do it also. We have a worldwide reputation in reclaiming desert lands by the use of water. Our work has served humanity greatly. We have preached the everlasting truths of the gospel by thousands of missionaries, but we have also preached by our example here, before the great nations of the world, how their resources may be utilized more fully and more completely and how the needs of humanity may be more fully met.

It has never seemed to me a mere chance that the Lord brought us here. There seems to lie in that part of our history a distinct evidence of the divine guidance of this people. It may be of interest to us here today, as many of you know, that not only did we as a people begin to show how a modern, civilized group of people could live under irrigation, but that here, also, beginning in our own Utah State Agricultural College at Logan, experiments and tests were and are made to place this art of irrigation on a scientific, orderly basis. This is not the place to discuss that, perhaps, but we do have the honor of being not only the generators of modern-day irrigation, but also of placing that ancient art on a modern, scientific basis.

Some very remarkable things have been discovered from time to time in this field that are tremendously interesting. Our farmers are gradually learning more and more about these precious truths. The farming people, you know, move slowly. They want to know before they do anything, but little by little that which we have garnered and gained throughout the years will be used.

And so a Latter-day Saint, working as I had to work last fall in behalf of a great agricultural, irrigation project, is stirred in his feelings when he looks back upon what the Lord has asked his people to do—to toil, to struggle, to compel the desert to yield; and also to teach all the world that which the world is hungry to know.

Well, perhaps that is all I should say about my irrigation work and why I was not here in attendance six months ago. But you know there is a great symbolism in irrigation. As a lifelong student of the subject I have always been impressed by the fact that the dry desert soil contains nearly all the elements of fertility. All that it needs is the enlivening power of a stream of water to flow over that soil. Suddenly the land begins to yield, and it becomes powerful. Is it not so in our spiritual lives, I wonder? Men according to our theology are children of God, not created under the old idea, but being literally children of Almighty God, contain all the elements under the law of eternal progression that will lead them into the likeness of their Father in heaven. When this being, this divine being, because in one sense we are all divine, is touched by the power of the Holy Ghost, the Holy Spirit, the power that flows from God, suddenly a man blossoms into a new life, new possibilities arise, new powers develop. As I have lived in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints as a member since my very early boyhood, I have come to understand that perhaps the greatest miracle in the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ is the transformation that comes to a man or a woman who in faith accepts the truth of the gospel, and who then lives it in his or her life. That transformation is marvelous. I have seen it in the mission field, where I first heard the gospel. I have seen it here at home. I see it every day. Every person has a measure of God's Spirit given to him. We are all in God's presence through his Holy Spirit. As new and greater truths come, as the understanding of them develops within us if we accept and live them, we are transformed from ordinary men into new powers and possibilities.

Friday, April 4

First Day

The weavers of the midlands in England, the coal miners of Wales, the fishermen in Norway, the trudging farmers of Denmark, very common, ordinary people, who accept the gospel from the lips of some humble Mormon missionary become so changed by those enlightening truths of the gospel that they are not the same people any longer. They have been fertilized, so to speak, by the Spirit of God that flows from eternal truth, just as in irrigation the barren, dry soil is fertilized by diverting the stream of water from the irrigation ditch onto the thirsty land.

It is a comparison worthy of our thought, because we are the bearers of the irrigation message to all the world.

I remember the man who baptized me into the Church, a very common, ordinary man to begin with, a rope-walker with a jug of beer two or three times a day, a glass of whiskey a little later, and a cud of tobacco mostly all day long, living a useless, purposeless life, except for three meals a day, and the satisfaction of some of the carnal appetites. He heard the gospel and accepted it. It was good. It was something he had been longing for. The man grew in power and stature in the Church. As I recall it, he filled five or six missions and presided over one of the missions of the Church. He was the same man, with the same arms, same feet, same body, same mind, but changed because of the Spirit that comes with the acceptance of eternal truth. Have not we seen this in our own families and friends, in the little towns in which we live? Have not we felt our own strength grow mightier in love for our fellow men, in love for our daily tasks, in love for all the good things of life? If you question yourself or question us here who have the responsibility of conducting this conference, we will all bear witness to it. But remember, when irrigation began in Utah, it was a struggle with the earth. It required toil. The water did not flow down these canyon streams to the farms just by asking it to do so, but men dug and drilled and shoveled and made canals. We have a remarkable illustration of that in one of our enterprises in Utah. It was called the Hurricane enterprise. The story of that has never been told quite fully, but it is stirring and thrilling. And to some degree in every enterprise in the building of this state toil had to be faced and used. And so to get that spiritual stream that I have been talking about, it must be sought for; it must be fought for; it must be labored for. It will come, but we must ask for it and seek it and labor for it. Then comes that great change—an overwhelming change. It changes men to a Godlike phase of life and living.

Well, you know the comparison as well as I do. I must not take any more of your time. It is good to be a Latter-day Saint. It is good to be here. It is good to hear the words of inspiration that come from the mouths and lives of these inspired men. I am glad to feel the responsive spirit from the thousands of people who are here and who listen over the radio.

May we all so live as to have a great measure of the enlivening, spiritual, fertilizing stream that comes from God because of our virtuous lives, our earnest actions in seeking after truth. May we all be blessed according to our needs.

Let us determine to cling to our heritage here in this land where we were led by the guiding power of God, and may the descendants of our pioneer fathers refuse to sell their birthright for gold lest it turn to a "mess of pottage." May we remember our heritage in this Church of land, of water, and of spiritual power, I pray in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

---

The Combined Choruses and the congregation joined in singing the hymn, "The Spirit of God Like A Fire Is Burning." The singing was led by Richard P. Condie, Assistant Conductor of the Tabernacle Choir.

ELDER HENRY D. MOYLE

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

I AM very grateful unto my Heavenly Father for the opportunity which is mine to meet with you, my brethren and sisters, in this great conference and to partake of the Spirit of the Lord that is here with us in such rich abundance.

I feel indebted to the Lord for the health and strength which is mine, and I am certain that he has blessed me with this health and strength in answer not only to my own prayers but also to the prayers of my brethren and sisters in the Church.

I have had a great affection for the leaders of the Church as far back as I can remember. I have always desired of the Lord that he would give me the strength to honor and to sustain those who presided over me in the priesthood with all my heart and soul, and I do that today. I am grateful for the leadership of President David O. McKay, and of President Stephen L. Richards and President J. Reuben Clark, Jr. I know these men receive from our Father in heaven his inspiration and direction in the work which they are called upon to perform for you and for me. I have this great affection and love not alone for the Presidency of the Church but for President Joseph Fielding Smith as President of the Council of the Twelve and all my associates in that Council, and all of the General Authorities. In fact my affection extends to all of my brethren and sisters. No man could have a richer heritage on the face of this earth than to be really worthy to be numbered among the Latter-day Saints.

The statistics that we heard read this morning demonstrate the results of great inspiration and leadership. I say that my affection for my brethren in the Church creates within me a further and similar desire that we might have governmental leaders in our nation and in our state and in our counties and in our cities of the same calibre.

I am always impressed when I read the 134th section of the Doctrine and Covenants:

We believe that governments were instituted of God for the benefit of man; and that he holds men accountable for their acts in relation to them, both in making laws and administering them, for the good and safety of society.

We believe that no government can exist in peace, except such laws are framed

Friday, April 4

First Day

and held inviolate as will secure to each individual the free exercise of conscience, the right and control of property, and the protection of life.

We believe that all governments necessarily require civil officers and magistrates to enforce the laws of the same; and that such as will administer the law in equity and justice should be sought for and upheld by the voice of the people if a republic, or the will of the sovereign. . . .

We do not believe it just to mingle religious influence with civil government, whereby one religious society is fostered and another proscribed in its spiritual privileges, and the individual rights of its members, as citizens, denied. (D. & C. 134:1-3, 9.)

But that does not mean, because we have within our hearts a deep-seated religious conviction, that we are at the same time not qualified to participate in government. Unless we have faith in God and fear him and keep his commandments, we can hardly be worthy to hold high positions in government. The Prophet Joseph has told us in this statement through the inspiration of the Lord that we must have righteous men in order to have righteous government. If we are to be a God-fearing nation and enjoy the blessings of peace, then each one of us who has a faith in God must do our duty, take our part to accomplish our purpose in government. We should become intimately familiar with those who are active politically; we ought to be part and parcel of them. They should not be strangers to us. We should see to it that those men who have true qualities of leadership are placed in positions of trust and responsibility in the government; these fundamental principles of truth apply to every political party alike. There is no hope and can be no hope for our government, or any government, to which this principle does not apply.

I think a good place to start is always at home. Each one of us should resolve that we in and of ourselves will develop qualities of leadership and of honesty and of integrity and of justice and equity. We should be willing to take these principles, these characteristics, the ability which we thus create within ourselves, and give ourselves to the benefit of our city and of our country and of our state and of our nation.

This year there will probably be no more than fifty percent of the qualified voters in this great nation who will exercise their franchise. The officers who may be elected in the great elections to be held this year will be elected by minorities and will not represent the vote or the will of the majority. You know there are two kinds of offenses in the world—offenses of commission and offenses of omission. We sometimes do things that we should not do, and then again, we do not do some things that we should. I hope that Latter-day Saints will not permit themselves, political-wise, to fall into this latter category and be classed among those who give offense because they fail to do that which they should do. I would like to know if a reason exists that would justify a Latter-day Saint in not exercising his franchise for the party and the man of his own choice.

No political party is justified to continue in existence unless it clearly states the principles which it advocates, the platform upon which its candidates stand, and then with integrity, when and if elected, carry out those principles and live up to that platform. Except that be the case, we as Latter-day Saints should not align ourselves to any party, because we do not have the basis upon which we can make an intelligent decision. We must know what they stand for before we can favor them with our vote. I do not ask you, my brethren and sisters, to go to the polls and just vote, important as that is; but that when you vote, you vote intelligently for those principles and those things and those men which will give to you the kind of government you want, the kind of environment that you desire for yourself and for your posterity.

We have received a great deal of light concerning the things of life from our Heavenly Father through the revelations which he has given us. We are told once again in the Doctrine and Covenants in the 101st section:

According to the laws and constitution of the people, which I have suffered to be established, and should be maintained for the rights and protection of all flesh, according to just and holy principles;

That every man may act in doctrine and principle pertaining to futurity, according to the moral agency which I have given unto him, that every man may be accountable for his own sins in the day of judgment.

Therefore, it is not right that any man should be in bondage one to another.

And for this purpose have I established the Constitution of this land, by the hands of wise men whom I raised up unto this very purpose, and redeemed the land by the shedding of blood. (Ibid., 101:77-80.)

Can we accept that as one of the sacred tenets of our faith and be derelict in our duties toward our nation? The answer to me seems to be self-evident. The Apostle Paul of old said,

For if the trumpet give an uncertain sound, who shall prepare himself to the battle? (I Cor. 14:8.)

We must have leadership in this nation whose voice will be clear; whose virtue, clarity, and certainty will give us the assurance that the course the government pursued under their leadership is right. Then we can put our whole heart and soul back of our government and sustain those who preside in government and feel toward them even as we do toward those who have been divinely chosen to guide and direct the affairs of the Church.

I hope and pray, my brethren and sisters, that we will not feel that politics has become so degraded that we are too good to participate. If any of us believe politics to be in that kind of state, we need only to enter into politics, go into it with our honesty and our integrity and our devotion to truth and to righteousness, and the standards will be raised. We cannot expect in this country a better government than the leaders are good, and so if we want a good government we must have good leaders. Let us participate in our mass meetings, in our party organization meetings, in our conventions; then when we go to the polls, we may have somebody worthy of our vote on our tickets.

May the Lord bless us to uphold and sustain the great Constitution of this nation and to maintain ourselves pure and unspotted from the sins of the world in all of our undertakings, and call down the blessings of our Heavenly Father upon us and upon our neighbors.

This should be a challenge to us as members in the Church of Jesus Christ and to all our friends and our neighbors and all people throughout the earth who stand in favor of good government, for righteousness in government; who have and foster the same ideals that are so close to our hearts. I hope and pray that the Lord will thus bless us all that we may fully accomplish the purposes of our creation, and be grateful to him day by day for the blessings he bestows upon us, and this I ask humbly in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER ELDRED G. SMITH

Patriarch to the Church

I PRAY that I shall have your faith and prayers, my brothers and sisters, while I occupy this position, as has been the case with those who have preceded me. And I thank my brethren who have offered prayers at the beginning of these meetings in behalf of all who have to talk to you, that the Spirit of the Lord will be with us.

I truly am very grateful for the blessings of the Lord; the blessings that have come to me personally. I am grateful for the blessings which have come to this people as a group, individually as well as collectively. I am grateful for the privilege of living in this age, which is a choice age—a choice dispensation.

Friday, April 4

First Day

It seems it is an inherent desire for all of the faithful children of God to receive a blessing from him. It has been so since the very beginning. Adam called upon God and received blessings; and then in his turn he called all of his righteous descendants together at Adam-ondi-Ahman and blessed them; and they, in turn, blessed him.

Noah, in his turn, received the blessings of the Lord, and then after the waters of the flood had receded and he came forth from the ark, he blessed his children.

Abraham, in his turn, received blessings from the Lord and blessed others. We today are receiving the benefits of the great blessings which were given to Abraham in fulfilment of the promises given to him.

As Abraham was departing with Lot, the Lord said to him:

And I will bless them that bless thee, and curse him that curseth thee: and in thee shall all families of the earth be blessed. (Gen. 12:3.)

And today we are realizing the fulfilment of that promise, for all the families of the earth are receiving the blessings of the Lord, through Abraham, more than they have ever done before.

Isaac, in his turn, also pronounced the blessings of the Lord upon his descendants. There is the very interesting story of the blessing of Jacob and Esau. When Isaac was old, he felt the need to give his sons blessings. He called Esau, telling him to go out and kill and prepare venison for him. He said "... make me savoury meat, such as I love, and bring it to me, that I may eat; that my soul may bless thee before I die." (Ibid., 27:4.) And Rebekah, mother of Esau and Jacob, heard him and knowing that Jacob was divinely called to receive the birthright blessings, called Jacob and sent him to fetch two kids, saying that she would prepare savory meat for her husband such as he loved, for she knew how to prepare it. And thus Rebekah assisted Jacob to receive the blessings of birthright.

Jacob blessed his twelve sons and gave them each a blessing suited to their individual rewards and pronounced promises that should come to them. Joseph received a special blessing which we are most interested in because we are his descendants, the most part of us, and the blessings of the gospel have come through this line, for Joseph Smith, Senior, was a true descendant, through Ephraim, the younger son of Joseph.

You know the story of how Jacob blessed Ephraim and Manasseh, how he crossed his hands and gave them each a blessing and gave unto them promises. The history of blessings is meager from then until now. In the Book of Mormon we are given the information, definitely, which declares that a descendant of Joseph should be raised up in these the last days. (See II Nephi 3:14-15.) It has been made known that Joseph Smith, Senior, was that descendant, and he received the blessings of Ephraim.

Then in this day and age, and I think if our records were more complete, we would probably find something similar with those of ancient times, the Lord tells us in the Doctrine and Covenants that

It is the duty of the Twelve, in all large branches of the church, to ordain evangelical ministers, as they shall be designated unto them by revelation. (D. & C. 107:39.)

Thus today we have more than one patriarchy; we have one or more in each of the stakes of the Church; and they are represented in the group here on my right. We always have a section here reserved for the stake patriarchs. They are outstanding, faithful members of the Church, who have been given the responsibility of blessing the people in their stakes, blessing those who desire blessings. And just as it was in ancient times—today, too, the Lord's people desire his blessings. And as a Church we have the priesthood and the authority through which these blessings may be given. These blessings given today are more formal than those given in ancient times, that is, judging from the meager records which we have. A patriarchal blessing today, given by an ordained patriarch, should contain a declaration of lineage, that is, the tribe of Israel through which the promises of inheritance shall come, even as assignments of inheritances were given in ancient Israel.

Now we know that some of the inhabitants of the earth are not descendants of Israel. We know that some of the inhabitants of the earth who join the Church are not direct descendants of Israel. It is given to us that the descendants of Shem and Japheth, sons of Noah, if they receive the gospel, are entitled to the priesthood. Only the sons of Cain are not entitled to the priesthood, and you can read why in the Pearl of Great Price. So all the descendants of Shem and Japheth, as they accept of the gospel of Jesus Christ, are entitled to the blessings of Israel, because that was the promise given to Abraham, that through him all the families of the earth should be blessed.

And so, as these patriarchal blessings are given, there is given a declaration of lineage, or an assignment; for a pure Gentile who joins the Church becomes by adoption of the seed of Abraham and of Israel. (Gen. 12:3; Abr. 2:11.)

We have people on the earth who we know are not descendants of Israel, yet in the acceptance of the gospel of Jesus Christ they are entitled to the blessings of Israel, and through the power of inspiration the patriarch will assign them to Israel.

It is required that patriarchal blessings be recorded in the Church records. The body of the blessing usually contains sacred promises for comfort or for counsel or warning, according to certain possibilities of blessings. All is predicated upon obedience to divine laws and faithfulness. The closing of a blessing is the sacred sealing of the Holy Melchizedek Priesthood. The blessing pronounced, with all it contains, should serve as a comfort and guide through life according to faithfulness and is sealed forever upon the conditions of faithfulness to the laws of God, which includes the laws of nature. Patriarchal blessings have been a source of guidance and comfort to tens of thousands of members of the Church. Their faith has been quickened and strengthened through them.

An example of what a patriarchal blessing can do came to me in a story which I have repeated many times, which a woman told me. As a young woman she lived in a small town. When she finished high school, there was no further opportunity to continue her education; there was no further opportunity to get work so that she could be independent; so she came to Salt Lake City where she found herself a job. As time came for registration at the university, she became very anxious to go to school again, and knowing that there was not a possibility, under present conditions, she felt quite disheartened. She went to the patriarch and received her patriarchal blessing, and in the blessing he promised her that she should receive a good education. She was elated, and she went out of the office feeling very happy. Before she had gone half a block, she said, she fell to earth out of her cloud with a realization that going to college cost money, and she did not have any, nor the means to get it. The opportunity and possibility of going to college at present did not seem to be at all possible, which made her very downhearted again. And the thought came to her to go visit her aunt, who was living in Salt Lake City. Without stopping to analyze that impression she turned, and instead of going back to work, she went to visit her aunt and told her aunt of her experience, cried on her shoulder, and her aunt said to her, "I know an elderly woman who lives down the street a few blocks. She has at various times helped young girls get through college in return for the help the girls can give to her. I do not know whether she has help now or not, but," she said, "this woman knows who I am. Go down and see her and tell her I sent you."

She went on the run to this elderly

Friday, April 4

First Day

woman's home, and within two weeks from the time she received her patriarchal blessing, she registered at the University of Utah, signed a promissory note to pay for her education, and eventually paid for it. She said if she had stopped to question the first impression she got to go visit her aunt, she would have said to herself, "Why should I go visit my aunt and tell her my troubles? I came to Salt Lake City to be independent; why not be independent? She cannot help me with my troubles; she has enough of her own. She doesn't have space in her home to let me sleep there, let alone board me, nor help me. Why need I go and bother my aunt?" But she did not stop to analyze that impression; she acted on it. As a result she met the woman who gave her the opportunity of receiving her education.

Similarly, many experiences have come to people in making decisions. I have had many experiences myself of giving patriarchal blessings, and then afterwards the individual would comment to the effect that he had now made up his mind and knew what course to follow. Often I ask whether individuals have any particular problem or worry. Just recently, a young woman said, "Well, Tom is coming home in a few months, and I am going to wait for him, and then we will get married in the temple." She said another young man had been wanting her to marry him, but she said, "That would not be a marriage in the temple; I am going to wait for Tom." Many times these experiences come to patriarchs.

Many men and women have been given courage to carry on, in battle and at home, in positions of responsibility in Church work, and even the will to live in times of sickness through which they have been raised from the grip of death by means of administration through the priesthood. It is the right and privilege of every baptized member of the Church to receive a patriarchal blessing. In the past many received more than one blessing. This practice has been discontinued. After a person has received a patriarchal blessing through an ordained patriarch, in which his lineage is declared, he is in possession of his patriarchal blessing, and to repeat the lineage is superfluous. We are asked, what about additional blessings? These additional blessings need not be given by an ordained patriarch. Through the patriarchal order of the priesthood it is the right and duty of a father to minister unto his own individual family. That is, the father in the home has a perfect right or duty to bless his children. That is, if the father holds the priesthood which authorizes him to do so, he may bless his own children, and also baptize them, and confirm them, with full consent and appointment from the duly authorized officers in charge.

I was at a fast and testimony meeting one day, and the bishop received a baby in his arms, from a woman in the congregation, and as he did so, he looked around the room. Finally he said hesitatingly, "This is the child of Brother and Sister Brown." After pausing a minute he said, "Brother Jones will bless the child." A man who was standing in the group of officiators spoke up and said, "No, Bishop, that is my child, I will bless him." And so the bishop recognized the father. He had been looking around the audience to find the father and not seeing him was under necessity to appoint someone else. But the father spoke up and said, "I will bless the child," and he did. That was correct.

Bishops should not only invite a father to administer to his own family but should also seek permission before substituting for the father. Naturally, if a child is going to a meeting, say for instance, a young man is going to a meeting where he is to be ordained a deacon, and the family knows that he is to be ordained a deacon, the bishop should invite the father, if he is a faithful man, to ordain his son. The bishop is the father of the ward. It is his duty to be the father of those families who do not have fathers in their own homes or where fathers do not exercise their priesthood; and it is the right of the bishop to ordain or to appoint someone to ordain boys in these families. It is a courtesy for the bishop to invite a father to ordain his own son.

An ordained stake patriarch has the privilege, by the same token, of blessing his own family, wherever they are. He is also the father or patriarch for the other families in his stake who do not have a father who is an ordained patriarch. A stake patriarch, then, is a stake officer, and he does not have authority to officiate outside of his stake, only as he may give blessings to his immediate family. Those who need or desire additional blessings may receive a blessing from any elder in the Church but not to be recorded.

I have an example in my mind, and there are many families in the Church that do likewise, where the father blesses the children when they are named; he baptizes them when they are of age; he confirms them and ordains them to the various offices of the priesthood as they grow in position to be so ordained, but always with the consent and approval of the bishop. When children start out to a higher school of learning, when they leave home to go on a mission, when they leave home to go into the service, and at the time of their marriage, a father may bless his children and place the blessings in his family record, rightly, for the benefit of the family, and the family reflects the spirit of those blessings.

Now, may the blessings of the Lord be with all of us and help us to magnify our callings in the priesthood. The Lord has told us in the Doctrine and Covenants, section 84, verse 33,

For whoso is faithful unto the obtaining these two priesthoods of which I have spoken, and the magnifying their calling, are sanctified by the Spirit unto the renewing of their bodies.

And if you will continue reading in section eighty-four, the next few verses, you will get more instructions regarding that priesthood.

Brethren, magnify the callings of your priesthood, and the strength of the Lord will be with us all, which I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

We have just listened to Elder Eldred G. Smith, Patriarch to the Church.

Tonight, in this building, there will be held a meeting at which special instruction will be given regarding new plans for missionary work. Presidencies of missions, the Missionary Committee, General Authorities, stake authorities, ward authorities, are all invited. And undoubtedly there will be room for the public. The sisters are invited as well. I did not imply by that that the sisters are not part of the public, the better part.

For the benefit of those who have been listening in, I should like to say that the members of the congregation here in the Tabernacle, have been looking all day at some very magnificent bouquets of lilies, calla lilies. They stretch from the left of the top pulpit to the right an equal distance, and bouquets of three each are extending from the top pulpit down to the first seat in the audience. Silent messengers of love. These flowers are particularly associated with one of the two greatest events in the history of the world—the resurrection of our Lord.

You will be pleased to know that these lovely flowers have been raised and furnished to us by the High Priests of the Berkeley Stake of California. In your behalf we extend sincere thanks and appreciation for this contribution to our conference.

We are indebted, not for the silent message, but for the inspirational messages that we had from the members of the Combined Choruses of the Brigham Young University. I do not know how you have been impressed today, but just the presence of these young people in such large numbers has been an inspiration to me. I am sure it has to all, and their singing has been truly of the highest quality.

Friday, April 4

First Day

Music, it is said, is the fourth great need of the human soul. You members of this great chorus, have supplied that today. We hope you will feel as proud and thankful of your school that you have represented today so ably, as these men and women whom you have inspired by your singing are of you. And to you directors, we extend thanks and appreciation. We are sure that the members of the faculty who are here, largely in a body, and President Wilkinson, are more than thankful and pleased for the rendition of these excellent singing numbers today. The Lord bless these young people. We are proud of them, and of all whom they represent.

After the singing by the Combined Choruses of "Praise the Lord," arranged and conducted by Brother Crawford Gates, Elder Alma L. Petersen, formerly twice president of the Danish Mission, will offer the benediction, and this Conference will be adjourned until tomorrow morning at ten o'clock.

The Brigham Young University Combined Choruses sang "Praise the Lord," after which the closing prayer was offered by Elder Alma Petersen, formerly president of the Danish Mission.

Conference adjourned until 10:00 a.m., Saturday, April 5.

SECOND DAY

MORNING MEETING

The conference reconvened Saturday morning, April 5, at 10 o'clock a.m., with President David O. McKay presiding and conducting the services.

President David O. McKay:

I will report to you a telephone message, which has just been received, not to cast a damper on our conference proceedings, but by way of a warning to our bishops and presidents of stakes, particularly, providing what is said is fact.

"President Schwendiman of the Wells Stake just called us, reporting that the Belvedere Ward Building is on fire. The chapel is almost completely destroyed, the roof gone, and the west wall has caved in. They may be able to save the recreation hall. We want you to know we are doing everything possible to save part of the building. The firemen are doing a good job. This is one of our nicest chapels, dedicated in 1928. The cause of the fire was probably defective wiring."

Now, we read this announcement as a word of caution to those who are building the nearly 400 chapels now under construction, and as a suggestion that careful inspection be made of our present buildings.

For the information of the radio and television audience, we announce that this is the third session of the one hundred twenty-second annual conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. We are convened in the Tabernacle on Temple Square in Salt Lake City.

These services and all general sessions of the Conference will be broadcast in the Assembly Hall and in Barratt Hall over a loud speaking system and by television.

The proceedings of this session will be broadcast over Station KSL of Salt Lake City, and by arrangement through KSL, over the stations named in the first session of the Conference. This session will be televised also over the KSL television station, channel five.

The singing for this session will be by the congregation, with Elder Richard P. Condie conducting, and Elder Roy M. Darley at the organ. We shall begin these services by the congregation singing, "High On the Mountain Top," conducted by Elder Richard P. Condie.

The congregation will please remain seated during this singing.

The opening prayer will be offered by Elder E. Bentley Mitchell, formerly president of the Tahitian Mission.

The congregation, with Richard P. Condie conducting, sang the hymn "High On the Mountain Top."

Elder E. Bentley Mitchell, former president of the Tahitian Mission offered the invocation.

Singing by the congregation, "Redeemer of Israel."

President David O. McKay:

Our first speaker this morning will be President Stephen L. Richards of the First Presidency of the Church. President Richards will be followed by Elder Delbert Leon Stapley, of the Council of the Twelve.

PRESIDENT STEPHEN L RICHARDS

First Counselor in the First Presidency

I SAT in the Tabernacle a short time ago listening to beautiful music. After the concert was over I was a little embarrassed inwardly to recognize that I had heard but very little of what went forward, for almost at the beginning of the program my thoughts turned to this great building in which we are met today. Somehow or other, its place in our history and its connotations assumed such proportions in my thinking that I decided that it might be worthy of a little of our attention as we ponder the progress and mission of the restored Church of our Lord.

This Tabernacle of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, erected on what we designate as Temple Square in Salt Lake City, Utah, has come to be one of the most interesting and widely known buildings in western America, and perhaps in all America, excluding structures at the national capital and at points of great historic interest in the formation of the republic.

The first work on the Tabernacle was begun in the spring and summer of 1863. The first foundation stone was laid July 26, 1864. The Tabernacle was completed, so far as to be usable, by October 6, 1867, when the first conference was held in the building. The following is a quoted notation in the record:

"The gates to the Temple Block were opened at nine o'clock, and the people flooded in. Long before ten o'clock, the time for the commencement of the conference, the seats in the great Tabernacle were filled, the aisles and doorways were crowded, and many were left outside. The stand was filled with the Church officials and the various choirs who were present to take part in the service."

The conditions here described are not difficult for the present generation to visualize.

The organ was only one-third completed by this time but was used to accompany the singing. Temporary seats were used since the installation of permanent seats was not completed until sometime during the summer of 1868. The gallery was not completed until later, and was first used at the postponed general conference of the Church on May 5, 1870. It is recorded that this additional seating capacity was much appreciated, and that the installation of the gallery improved the acoustics of the building.

The Tabernacle was not dedicated until October of 1875. I shall speak of the dedication later.

Perhaps one of the first significant items about the building is its size. It is 250 feet long by 150 feet wide; 65 feet to the ceiling, 75 feet to the top of the roof, standing upon 44 stone pillars, with 16 doors 10 feet wide, and 4 doors  $4\frac{1}{2}$  feet wide, allowing the exit of 13,000 persons in 5 minutes. Its architect, Henry Grow, claimed that it was the largest hall in the world unsupported by columns. I have made no research to determine for how long a time the architect's statement may have been true.

Saturday, April 5

Second Day

The huge capacity of the building is most tangible evidence of the firm conviction of the builders in the growth and destiny of the cause they upheld. Without its great size it never could have served its mighty purpose. In the early days of our settlement in these valleys of the mountains, communication was very difficult. Even after the coming of the telegraph and the railroads, people had to come and see and hear to get correct impressions and information. Had the building been smaller, countless thousands would have been deprived of opportunities and blessings they have most highly prized. Then, too, it seems to me worthy of note that the building was built just about as large as it could have been built so that an audience within it could be made to hear, long before the day of electrical magnification of sound. The acoustics of the Tabernacle have been the subject of comment by scientific persons and others for many years. I don't know that a full treatise has ever been written, but it would make a deserving and interesting thesis. This great structure, enormous at the time of its building, is the physical embodiment of a mighty concept that the work of God is expansive, all-embracing, with room for all who will come and listen and receive.

The Tabernacle has been a great cultural center. For eighty years it has housed substantially all of the major concerts, symphonies, bands, choirs, and vocal and instrumental artists who have come to this section of the country. It is safe to say that without it the communities in this area would have been deprived of innumerable opportunities to see and hear the outstanding talent of the world. It has been the scene of great pageants that will long live in our memories; and in addition to being the greatest stage for artistic presentations in our community, it has been a place of instruction and rehearsal for thousands upon thousands of children, young people, and adults, developing talent and artistic appreciation wholly beyond our power to measure. Throughout the years the building has generally been contributed to almost every conceivable cultural project which has come our way.

In thus extending the use of the building, the Church has had what I believe to be a unique experience. I don't know that there is a comparable situation in the country. It has always been the effort to maintain standards of conduct in this building and on the grounds roundabout which comport with the beliefs and standards of the Church. Those who come here are asked not to smoke or drink or use profane language, and I think that, with few exceptions, they who are not of our faith, and who do not practise our standards, have been sufficiently respectful of our views to observe the decorum of this building. We appreciate their consideration.

This Tabernacle has been, in some respects, a civic center. It has been a forum for Presidents of the United States, candidates for the Presidency, notables from foreign countries, and lecturers, and for the discussion of some of the most important issues which have ever confronted the nation. It has been used as a gathering hall for great national conventions, and it has played a part in the advancement of important civic causes. It has paid tributes of homage and honor to our national heroes; it has met the demands of emergency; it has been through the years an invaluable asset in our community life.

More important than any of these, however, in the history of this great Tabernacle, is its place and function as a house of worship.

Since singing usually begins our public worship, at this point I would like to speak a little of the choirs of the Tabernacle. Here is and has been for over seventy-five years the home of the Tabernacle Choir. I would not venture to say whether the Tabernacle has made the choir or the choir has made the Tabernacle famous. It is sufficient to know that all through the years we have had a great choir in a great setting. As many as sixty years ago the Tabernacle Choir had a national reputation. Through eisteddfods, its high placement in contest in the World's Fair, and through concerts in big cities, east and west, it early attained renown in musical circles. In recent times, through national and international broadcasts, the Tabernacle Choir and the Spoken Word are household words throughout the land. During its history, both before and after enlarged facilities became available, two aspects of its work have been outstanding and conspicuous: First, the devotion of the members; and next, the excellence of its leadership. I doubt if any comparable volunteer organization of its size and responsibilities can present as fine a record for as long a time. The Church is and has been for these many years proud of this great organization, and I believe we all feel a lasting debt of gratitude to the great conductors, the great organists and technicians, and the great members of this illustrious organization. I attribute their greatness, in large measure, to the deeply religious fervor which has always actuated them. I know that with their artistic temperaments they have loved to sing, but the consistency of their performance has come out of a sense of conscientious duty and opportunity to serve the Lord and advance his kingdom. From that sentiment have come some of the great contributions which the choir has made—contributions which breathe the spirit and essence of the latter-day work, contributions which have inspired the missionary for his work, which have honored and venerated the pioneers who laid the foundations, which have extolled the glory and virtue of Christ our Lord, and his honored prophets, and which have brought comfort and solace to the poor, the discouraged and bereaved. Here is a choir which, through the generations, has seen purpose in its work, which has striven steadfastly to advance a great cause, which has made art serve its Author, the Lord of the universe. God bless our Tabernacle Choir, from the beginning through the generations, as an emissary of art and truth in the earth.

Housed within the building is the great organ. Its impressive façade of colossal pipes and ornamental columns and caps makes it appear as an ornate temple within the auditorium, beautiful and intriguing to behold. The history of its initial construction is itself a glorious record of pioneer achievement. Its melodic voice now heard in nearly all civilized portions of the globe has been a thing alive, proclaiming in sonorous and tender tones the solemn and the sweet message of the Savior's gospel to all who have the heart and the ear to interpret and apply. Just as the choir is integral with the Tabernacle, so is the organ with both.

I stand today in a pulpit sanctified by its history. When I recall the noble servants of our Heavenly Father who have stood here and given inspired counsel to the people, and borne testimony with such power and conviction and spirit as to electrify every soul who heard; when I contemplate the operation of the still, small voice, which has come from simple and lowly words given here, which have touched the hearts and sympathies of the people; when I think of the vast volume of precious truth which has been proclaimed from this stand, I feel very small and weak within it. My only comfort comes from the realization that the noble ones who have graced this pulpit have been called to speak here, as I have been called, and that they were common men, so far as the aristocracy of the world is concerned, drawn from all walks of life, just as my brethren and I are today.

What a difference in the history of the Tabernacle it would have made had the building come to be merely a great preacher's church. We have had in America such preachers and such churches. For periods of time eloquent men have enthralled audiences, achieved wide distinction, and have undoubtedly done much good. In the providence of the Lord, this pulpit has never been any one man's forum. Rather it has been the oracle of a divine dispensation where the cause has overshadowed the man, where humility has higher rating than self-assurance, where worship is measured in deeds rather than protestations.

Saturday, April 5

Second Day

Ponder for a moment, my brethren and sisters, and all who listen, the glorious and vital truths which have been proclaimed in this building—the nature and composition of the Godhead, the organization of the universe, the history and placement of man in the earth, his purpose in living, and the divine destiny set for him, the laws governing his conduct and his eligibility for exaltation in the celestial presence, the true concept of family life in the eternal progression of the race, the truth about liberty and the place of governments in the earth, the correct concept of property, its acquisition and distribution, the sure foundations for peace, brotherhood, and universal justice. All these elemental things, and many others incident thereto, have been the burden of the message of truth which has come from this building through the generations.

These messages have not changed with the passing of time. The Lord revealed these enduring principles. They are part and parcel of eternal truth. Man may, by his faithful research and study, discover more about them, but he will never change them. I would not discourage the inquiring mind in its exploration of the universe and quest for truth. My only caution is to begin with recognition of the divine source of truth and the revealed word of God.

What confidence and assurance it brings to us to know that our men and women of today, surrounded by an environment radically different from that of our forebears who brought this great building into existence, proclaim the same doctrine as did they. How upsetting it would be if we had to choose between the principles and doctrines of their time and ours. We in this Tabernacle hear the same message as did the people in Kirtland and Nauvoo.

It is true that methods and practices change. They have done in the past, and they may be expected to in the future. It is within the province of a receptive priesthood, obedient to the inspiration of our Father, to adopt and adjust methods, looking toward the advancement of his kingdom. It is also within the province of his chosen servants to interpret and apply the law, but they will never change it, for the law of God is eternal.

I wish to say a word about the comfort and solace which have come to our Father's children in this great building. Funeral services have been held here for many noble men and some women. Heavenly music has been rendered, so inspiring and touching that it seemed as if those from the other world could have joined in the singing. Sermons depicting the transition into immortality, and expounding the atonement and redemption wrought by our Savior, have been given with such convincing assurance as to elevate the aggrieved and despondent to the sublimity of resignation, hope, and firm faith. Within these sacred walls have the great of our community found opportunity for the expression of their noblest thoughts and convictions, and from here they have been laid to rest in the closing of their lives. All the life dramas that have here been enacted, all the vital episodes in this historic setting will never be recounted; but they are all known to one who keeps the record, and every resolution, every change of heart, every contrition arising out of the service rendered in this building, will be a fitting tribute to the purposes it has served.

In some respects the Tabernacle may appropriately be designated as the center of our missionary work. More sermons expounding the doctrines of the Church and calling the world to repentance and defining the way to life eternal have been preached from this pulpit than from any other place in the Church. These sermons, testifying to the divine calling of the Prophet Joseph Smith in the restoration of the holy gospel, have been heard not only by the vast congregations who have assembled here, but also they have been printed, translated into various languages, and circulated in many countries throughout the earth. The pronouncements from this very stand have furnished to our armies of missionaries, in large measure, the material for their work among the peoples to whom they are sent. In the earlier days the missionaries were personally called from the stand in this Tabernacle. One can well imagine the thrill and deep impression made by such procedure. Here the courses of life were changed by assignments from the Presiding Brethren. Here the spirit of sacrifice chastened the soul, and men and women were dedicated to the work of God. Here was the true spirit of missionary work—love and sacrifice for fellow man—developed and fostered.

In more recent times the Tabernacle, with its wonderful Sunday morning program, has made an invaluable contribution to our missionary endeavor in bringing to our missionaries a more kindly and considerate reception as they bear the message of the gospel from door to door out in the world. Also in later years, with visitors to Temple Square reaching more than a million a year, this historic structure has achieved a position subordinate to but few places in the country in tourist interest. Thousands there are who come here every year, whose unfavorable preconceptions are altered, and who must go away with unforgettable impressions emanating from the teachings and influences coming from this building and the grounds round about. Surely a large part of Isaiah's prophecy has been realized. The Lord's house has been established in the top of the mountains, and many nations flow unto it. We await the day which will surely come when the remainder of this great prediction shall be fulfilled, when

... many people shall go and say, Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths: for out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem. (Isaiah 2:3.)

Can we doubt, my brethren and sisters, that these things have been wrought by the hand and power of the Lord? In all humility I bear witness that here is the seat of the government of the kingdom of God, here is the place where the authorized servants of our Lord are sustained and confirmed by the voice of the people. Here in this venerated Tabernacle has every President of the Church, save only one, been upheld as prophet, seer, and revelator, and President of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. From here has gone forth the law out of Zion, and the blessings, the love and compassion of the servants of the Lord for his children.

For nearly half a century I have been the beneficiary of the teachings and the influence coming from this historic building. I thank God for it. I do not wish to worship things material, but I bow before the inspired vision and the lofty aspirations which brought this sacred edifice into being. If my regard for it, and my meager recital of the part it has played in the advancement of beauty and righteousness and truth in the earth shall bring any measure of increased deference and respect for the Tabernacle and the holy cause it represents, I shall be profoundly grateful.

I said I would refer again to the dedication of this building. The notation in the record is that the dedicatory prayer of the "New Tabernacle in Salt Lake City was read by Elder John Taylor" on Saturday, October 9, 1875. In my opinion the prayer is a masterpiece in composition, and in its comprehensive recital of the conditions and aspirations of the people at that time. It breathes a spirit of humility, repentance, deep gratitude, and a faith so realistic and compelling as to overcome all obstacles in the achievement of the mighty destiny conceived for

Saturday, April 5

Second Day

God's work in the world. I wish every member of the Church could read it. The Deseret News printed it three-quarters of a century ago. Perhaps they might care to do it again at some convenient time. This remarkable prayer went into great detail. In it were dedicated not only the usual components of a great building, but also "the mortar which binds the foundation stones together," the "nails, bolts, and straps of iron, of copper, and the brass, the zinc, the tin, and the solder wherewith the metal is soldered together," the plaster of the building, even "all the lath and the nails and the sand and the lime," the locks and the hinges on the doors and windows, and the paint and the varnish "and all the ornamentation of this building, both within and without." All these minute things represented work and sacrifice which made them sacred.

Every portion of the building was dedicated that it might fulfil its sacred purpose. Listen to the words regarding this historic rostrum, where my associates of the General Authorities of the Church now sit in your presence: "And we dedicate and consecrate that portion of this house where our president and thy servants now are, to be a holy and sacred place wherein thy servants may stand forth to declare thy words and minister unto thy people in the name of thy Son forever. . . .

"May thy holy angels and ministering spirits be in and round about this habitation, that when thy servants are called upon to stand in these sacred places, to minister unto thy people, the visions of eternity may be open to their view, and they may be filled with the spirit and inspiration of the Holy Ghost and the gift and power of God; and let all thy people who hearken to the words of thy servants drink freely at the fountain of the waters of life, that they may become wise unto salvation, and thereby overcome the world and be prepared for an everlasting inheritance in the celestial kingdom of our God. . . .

"We pray thee to bless the Twelve Apostles; fill them with the spirit of their office and calling, clothe them with the intelligence of heaven, the light of revelation, and the gift and power of God."

Then followed prayers, in the order indicated, for the Patriarch to the Church, for the seventies, the high priests, the high councils, the elders, the Presiding Bishop, the priests, teachers, and deacons. There were prayers for the Jews, for the Lamanites, and for all who desire to do good in this and all other nations. There were prayers also for the cooperative institutions, for those who entered into the United Order "according to thy word," the Relief Societies, the Retrenchment Societies [the Mutuals], the Sunday Schools, and then this mighty appeal: "Let the comforting influence of thy Holy Spirit rest upon the Saints, and the quickening power of the Holy Ghost unite thy people in sympathy, affection, kindness and interest. May thy people, O God, be one—one with Jesus as he is one with the Father . . . one in spirit and feeling and interest; one in temporal and one in spiritual things, a band of brethren; one in rolling forth the kingdom, united together by eternal, indisputable ties; one in gathering thine elect, in building Temples and administering to the living and for the dead; one in building up the Zion of our God; one with all the redeemed and all the angelic hosts, in introducing the principles and laws of life to all of Adam's race and ushering in the millennial reign."

My brethren and sisters, I re-utter that prayer in your presence today. It is the supreme desire and ambition of my life that this glorious destiny for our people and God's work be realized. I testify that Jesus the Christ lives, that he is the Lord of the earth, and the Author of our salvation, that his precious gospel and his Church have been restored and reestablished through his chosen servant, the Prophet Joseph Smith, and that the Holy Priesthood, and the authority to represent the Lord have descended upon our present leader in authentic succession, and that he stands before us today in humility, in heart and mind receptive to the divine Spirit, to lead us in the greatest cause ever committed to men. I give you also my firm conviction that if we will but follow the teachings and the counsels of our President and his associates, all of which are in conformity with the pronouncements and principles given in this sacred Tabernacle for nearly a century of time, there will be fulfilled every prophecy and glorious promise ever made to Zion. God bless us to this end, I humbly pray in the name of Jesus. Amen.

ELDER DELBERT L. STAPLEY

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

I SINCERELY ask for an interest in your faith and prayers, my brothers and sisters, and hope that part of the Tabernacle dedicatory prayer pertaining to the speakers, may also be enjoyed by me.

An important duty of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints is to assist its members to attain the full measure of their possibilities and powers. This would give great strength to the Church and bring joy and happiness to the membership of the Church.

As sons and daughters of God, created in his image and likeness, possessing, however imperfectly, his characteristics and attributes, we should nevertheless be inspired to perfect ourselves and become like him. The duty therefore of each of us is to develop and prepare ourselves to become worthy children of an Eternal Father.

The Church provides every opportunity for us to use our God-given talents, gifts, and powers. However, we must learn obedience to authority and to keep all the commandments of God.

The Prophet Joseph said of the Savior, that he suffered temptations but gave no heed to them. And Paul, writing to the Hebrew saints said that in all points he was tempted as we are, yet without sin. The Savior perfected himself through obedience and by obedience became the author of eternal salvation.

There must be on our part a willingness to accept responsibility in all faithfulness and devotion; it makes possible the attainment of our divine heritage and blessings.

The Lord said to the Prophet Joseph Smith:

... men should be anxiously engaged in a good cause and do many things of their own free will, and bring to pass much righteousness;

For the power is in them, wherein they are agents unto themselves. And inasmuch as men do good they shall in nowise lose their reward. (D. & C. 58:27-28.)

The right of free agency and choice belongs to all of us, but God holds us accountable for our individual acts. The Lord has placed Prophets, Apostles, and teachers in his Church to interpret and point the way for his people and all the world in spiritual and temporal matters. Safety is in following divinely appointed leadership and counsel. The rights and powers of these leaders stem from the Savior himself, and each can trace his priesthood and authority through an unbroken chain to this divine source.

The keys of this power and authority center in the president of the High Priesthood of the Church. It is not given to any other man to so represent God here upon the earth. The Lord expects his people to unite and follow under this leadership and not permit themselves to be tossed about by those who would find fault or would claim revelation and teach contrary to what God has revealed to his chosen prophets.

The Latter-day Saints need to be careful that they do not become per-

Saturday, April 5

Second Day

sueded to false ideas and teachers. There are some among us who seize upon one or more appealing principle, truth, or law, then twist it to their own desire or profit until they become all-consuming obsessions with them. They are not satisfied or content to hold these views to themselves, but with Satan's encouragement, desire to entice others to their way of thinking; they seek followers and persuade not only those who are weak and unfaithful, but also many of the faithful are deceived. Somehow they forget or fail to understand that this Church is not built upon one principle, or one law, or one truth, but the true gospel is built upon many principles, laws and truths, complete acceptance and obedience to which is necessary to give us joy, happiness, satisfaction, and eternal glory.

Many of these people pledge allegiance to the Church, yet they separate themselves from Church meetings and encourage others to do likewise. Those who follow them become children of evil, lose their faith and testimony, and the history of such followers is that if they do not repent, they are excommunicated from the Church.

Satan is employing every method to deceive not only non-members of the Church, but also particularly those who are members. Each of us must be careful that we are not out of harmony, that we enjoy daily the guidance of the Holy Spirit of God in our lives.

The Lord has said,

... the day cometh that they who will not hear the voice of the Lord, neither the voice of his servants, neither give heed to the words of the prophets and apostles, shall be cut off from among the people;

For they have strayed from mine ordinances, and have broken mine everlasting covenant;

They seek not the Lord to establish his righteousness, but every man walketh in his own way, and after the image of his own God, whose image is in the likeness of the world, and whose substance is that of an idol, which waxeth old and shall perish in Babylon, even Babylon the great, which shall fall. (Ibid. 1:14-16.)

Every person who goes contrary to the Church and says that the brethren are fallen or are out of the way or are teaching false doctrines, unless he repents will never in this life or eternity realize the full measure of his possibilities and powers. God will not suffer his Church, established for the last time in this the Dispensation of the Fulness of Times when a restitution of all things is to be accomplished, to be led by a fallen prophet, or by someone whom he does not want.

The Prophet Joseph Smith, in a letter to William W. Phelps, quoted Section eighty-five of the Doctrine and Covenants, and, commenting upon the mission of the one mighty and strong, said:

Now Brother William, if what I have said is true, how careful men ought to be what they do in the last days, lest they are cut short in their expectations and they that think they stand, should fall, because they keep not the Lord's commandments.

In The Deseret News of November 13, 1905, President Joseph F. Smith and his Counselors, commenting on this statement, said:

Perhaps no other passage in the revelations of the Lord in this dispensation has given rise to so much speculation as this one . . . the Church of Christ and of the Saints is completely organized, and that when the man who shall be called upon to divide unto the Saints their inheritances comes, he will be designated by the inspiration of the Lord to the proper authorities of the Church, appointed and sustained according to the order provided for the government of the Church.

So long as that Church remains in the earth—and we have assurance from the Lord that it will remain in the earth forever—the Saints need look for nothing of God's appointing that will be erratic or irregular, or that smacks of starting over afresh, or that would ignore or overthrow the established order of things. The Saints should remember that they are living in the dispensation of the fulness of times when the Church is established in the earth for the last days and for the last time and that God's Church is a Church of order or law, and that there is no place for anarchy in it.

And then in Gospel Doctrine, President Joseph F. Smith says:

If any man in that position [speaking of the one who holds the keys of the high priesthood of the Church] should become unfaithful God would remove him out of his place. I testify in the name of Israel's God that he will not suffer the head of the Church, whom he has chosen to stand at the head, to transgress his laws and apostatize; the moment he should take a course that would in time lead to it, God would take him away. Why? Because to suffer a wicked man to occupy that position would be to allow, as it were, the fountain to be corrupted, which is something he will never permit. (Gospel Doctrine, pp. 44-45.)

The Prophet Joseph Smith made this important statement:

I will give you one of the Keys of the mysteries of the Kingdom. It is an eternal principle, that has existed with God from all eternity: That man who rises up to condemn others, finding fault with the Church, saying that they are out of the way, while he himself is righteous, then know assuredly, that that man is on the high road to apostasy; and if he does not repent, will apostatize, as God lives. (D.H.C. Vol. 3, p. 385.)

In Section 121 of the Doctrine and Covenants, the Lord said to the Prophet, Cursed are all those that shall lift up the heel against mine anointed, saith the Lord, and cry they have sinned when they have not sinned before me, saith the Lord, but have done that which was meet in mine eyes, and which I commanded them.

But those who cry transgression do it because they are the servants of sin, and are the children of disobedience themselves. (D. & C. 121:16-7.)

I testify to you, my brothers and sisters, that your leaders are doing that which is meet in the eyes of God. They may have their faults and their failings, but when it comes to devotion to their high calling in this Church and kingdom, there is no question but what they are doing all within their power to set forward the interests of the Church, and the interests of the people of the Church. And this leadership, my brothers and sisters, must stand firm, and teach all truths, and all principles and all laws that God has revealed. God has not given to man the authority to change eternal truths, principles, or laws. If people are honest, and surely no person can be honest unless he keeps the commandments of God, they will expect their leaders without equivocation to defend and teach the commandments of God as revealed; otherwise they would not accept them as leaders; they would not follow them; they would not respect them, for such vacillating leadership would not be acceptable to the body of the Church.

There are those who might say:

... Eat, drink and be merry; nevertheless, fear God, he will justify in committing a little sin; yea, lie a little, take advantage of one because of his words, dig a pit for thy neighbor; there is no harm in this; and do all these things, for tomorrow we die; and if it so be that we are guilty God will beat us with a few stripes, and at last we shall be saved in the kingdom of God. (II Nephi 28:8.)

Do we, my brothers and sisters, want to belong to that kind of Church or accept those who teach that kind of doctrine? Is there hope, is there satisfaction in following such teachings? Surely God would not rob justice. Those who break his laws must suffer the penalty for broken law. The Lord, we are told, does not look upon sin with the least degree of allowance. If God cannot, can we—and justify ourselves or others for such doings?

The Lord said to the Prophet in Section 132 of the Doctrine and Covenants:

For all who will have a blessing at my hands shall abide the law which was appointed for that blessing, and the conditions thereof, as were instituted from before the foundation of the world. (D. & C. 132:5.)

And those who fail to obey set themselves up for temptation and evil. Again Satan is ever alert to his opportunities to deceive and to lead the people of this Church astray, for he knows the power of this Church, its destiny and purpose in the earth, and he will do all that he can to see that the work does not prosper.

Saturday, April 5

Second Day

Therefore, my brothers and sisters, we need to be faithful, we need to support our leaders. And when we go to our bishops and our stake presidents for counsel, let us accept it, for God will prosper us as we follow the leadership of those appointed to preside over us.

ELDER LEVI EDGAR YOUNG

Of the First Council of the Seventy

IN THE thirteenth chapter of First Nephi, we have the words of the Prophet who writes:

And I looked and beheld a man among the Gentiles, who was separated from the seed of my brethren by the many waters; and I beheld the Spirit of God that it came down and wrought upon the man; and he went forth upon the many waters, even unto the seed of my brethren, who were in the promised land.

And it came to pass that I beheld the Spirit of God, that it wrought upon other Gentiles; and they went forth out of captivity, upon the many waters. . . .

And it came to pass that I, Nephi, beheld that the Gentiles who had gone forth out of captivity did humble themselves before the Lord; and the power of the Lord was with them. (1 Nephi 13:11-12, 16.)

I have always recalled with joy in reading these words that they referred to Christopher Columbus and the Pilgrim fathers. When Columbus stepped upon this western land in 1492, he uttered these words in prayer:

O God, our Father, eternal and omnipotent, creator of heaven and earth and sea, we glorify Thy Holy name, praise Thy majesty, whom we serve in all humility, we give unto Thy Holy protection this new part of the world. (Quoted by Washington Irving in his Life of Columbus)

We are told that Edward Winslow,

If we attain, therefore, the full measure of our possibilities and powers, we must obey and follow leadership and keep all the commandments of God. If we can keep with us the spirit of the gospel, which is light and truth, then it will not be too difficult for us to obey and follow the leadership that God has called and appointed to direct his people.

May our Heavenly Father bless us, give us the strength that we require, keep us true to the faith and faithful in our responsibilities, I humbly pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

the third signer of the Mayflower Compact, recorded the following parting words of Pastor Robinson, as the Pilgrim fathers left the shores of Holland on their long journey into the unknown West. He said:

Brethren, we are now quickly to part from one another, and whether I may ever live to see your face, on earth any more, the God of Heaven only knows; but whether the Lord hath appointed that or not, I charge you before God and His blessed angels that you follow me no farther than you have seen me follow the Lord Jesus Christ. If God reveal anything to you, by any other instrument of his, be as ready to receive it as ever you were to receive truth, by my ministry; for I am fully persuaded, I am very confident, that the Lord has more truth yet to break forth out of his holy word.

Columbus was inspired and led by the power of God to these shores of America, and the Pilgrim fathers and others likewise, for we believe that the time had come for the American Indians to be found, for they are the remnants of Joseph. It is interesting to note that many of the early adherents to the gospel of Jesus Christ, as received in the early part of the nineteenth century, were descendants of the old Puritan stock who came from England. Such men were the Prophet Joseph Smith, Brigham Young, and many others of that early day. And thus began the great work of occupying the whole country of America by different peoples of the world. We have become a rich and powerful nation, potentially the richest and the most powerful upon the earth.

As President Richards spoke about the building of this Tabernacle in which we are worshipping God, I recalled that it is just one hundred years ago that President Brigham Young stood before the two thousand people and more who had assembled for the same reason that you and I have done, to worship God and Jesus Christ our Redeemer. They had a Tabernacle which had just been built of adobes and could seat two thousand people. The seats were mostly of logs, although a few chairs had been made for the brethren who sat in front. People came from all parts of the territory, some by ox team and in wagons drawn by horses. Many of them walked long distances to attend the conference. At the close of the last meeting on Sunday afternoon President Young arose and announced that he had called approximately one hundred of the brethren to go on missions to different parts of the world. The nations mentioned were those of Europe, and China, India, Persia, and Siam in Asia, and then the Islands of the Pacific. One cannot conceive what this meant in those days when the missionaries walked to the Pacific Coast to take a boat to the countries of the Pacific. Then think of the long journey by way of the Atlantic Ocean as they set out for India, Siam, and Persia. The history of these men will be written some day by a master historian, and the world will stand amazed at their courage and faith in God. Many of the journals of those missionaries have been preserved. President Lorenzo Snow was already in Italy, and President John Taylor was president of the French Mission. We have heard during the conference much about the subject of teaching which the missionaries experienced, and in a few words, I should like to add a thought concerning the teaching of the gospel to the people of the world.

It has been said in many different ways that "In our children lies the future of our world." If we believe this, and we do, then the education of our children deserves our foremost careful attention. Every father and mother, every mature person in our land should be profoundly interested in the education of our youth. Our honored President, David O. McKay, has during the last year given to us and our nation more than one great talk on the aims and ideals and the far-reaching importance of education. He has told us that it flourishes on character, and without character it lacks any strength. There must be character and goodness as its chief obligation—goodness is its real power. True affection in those taught and in those who are teachers must never be wanting. In all good teaching there are things that survive, and have survived, strong and unshaken, from the earliest times. The master Teacher who lived two thousand years ago said love is the foundation on which to build all growth, all progress, all faith—love of God, love of neighbor.

Teaching is an art, and an art has to be learned. Our missionaries must be taught better how to teach the gospel. Our seventies at home must be taught how to teach the gospel, remembering always that we can teach only that which we know. We are admonished to seek, to knock, to ask, to search diligently with faith unwavering, and we shall be rewarded. We are told by the Prophet Joseph Smith to "Seek ye out of the best books words of wisdom." (D. & C. 88:118.)

If our schools and colleges teach the things that are really important, the mind is required to do hard work, to attack a difficult problem and think to a correct answer. One of our well-known writers has said,

There are only a very few youthful years in every human life when the mind is fresh and plastic, and the memory able to retain. These years should be used to teach the best and most beautiful things man can know—power over language, a mastery of pure science, exposure to great literature and art, a basic knowledge of history, philosophy, and religion. No matter what a young man or woman does to earn his living, his education will have been worthless unless he has learned to know and to use the first-rate in whatever line he pursues—and also learned to love it.

Saturday, April 5

Second Day

It is in the realm of religion that most of us teach. We want our children to know the gospel, and to live it to the very best of their ability. We want righteousness to be made practical in every phase of life. We hope to direct our youth into a pattern of life that is eternal, founded on a sure and firm belief and faith in the teachings of the Savior, and the prophets of old and of the new and restored gospel. Our aim is to teach our children to carry forward the purposes of God. In doing this we follow the words in Section 4 of the Doctrine and Covenants,

... ye that embark in the service of God, see that ye serve him with all your heart, might, mind, and strength. (D. & C. 4:2.)

We must begin to teach our children while they are very young, for it is written, "The things that thou hast not gathered in thy youth, how shalt thou find them in thy old age?"

And Jethro counseled, "And thou shalt teach them the way wherein they must walk, and the work that they must do. They must be patiently, gradually taught. Being God's people, they must live his laws, they must worship in his ways." (See Ex. 18:20.)

Man needs a long vision in life that he may fulfil a pattern of eternal progression and salvation although the strains and tenseness of daily living favor short sight. Perhaps both are necessary, but the one should not crowd out the other more realistic and basic one. The man who is trying earnestly and with all his strength to catch sight of the vision of a better world, and to incorporate what he can see in the life of himself and his society, helps us to do what we could not do without his help. We can raise ourselves on the shoulders of those who have walked on higher levels. There is a profound wisdom in the saying, "Let us now praise famous men." This is what is meant by the warning of the prophets, "Lift up your hearts." Learn of the greatness and goodness of prophets and leaders in trying to follow their teachings.

Religion holds up to us all the noblest examples of living. Disraeli said, "Nurture your minds with great thoughts: To believe in the heroic makes heroes."

Read the Bible to get not only great truths of living but also great feeling and enlarged vision. Read it to get the depths of life. Make it your companion through life so that you may not live only on the surface, but on permanent effect. Do likewise with the Book of Mormon, the Doctrine and Covenants, and the Pearl of Great Price. Religion is the greatest instrument for raising us to the best of the highest life.

We have had great teachers in our day. I think of one: Dr. Karl G. Maeser, who came to America from Germany as a convert to the Church, and who was for many years a teacher in Brigham Young University in the early days of that institution. It is only recently that Dr. Joel Francis Paschal of Princeton University has written the Life of Justice George Sutherland, who first was elected congressman and then senator from the state of Utah. Dr. Paschal tells about the influence that Dr. Maeser had on the life of Senator Sutherland, and says:

Dr. Maeser's knowledge seemed to reach into every field. Of course there were limits; but they were not revealed to me during my course at the Academy. That he was an accomplished scholar I knew from the first. But the extent of his learning so grew before my vision as time went on that my constant emotion was one of amazement. I think there were days when I would have taken my oath that if the Rosetta Stone had never been found, nevertheless he could have easily revealed the meaning of the Egyptian hieroglyphics. He spoke with a decided accent; but his mastery of the English language, of English literature, and of the English way of thought, was superb.

Maeser's influence was not merely that of an instructor. Says Sutherland,

He was a man of such transparent and natural goodness that his students gained not only knowledge, but character which is better than knowledge.

I like to remind myself of the saying of Emerson,

God offers to every mind its choice between truth and repose: take which you please, you can never have both.

The mothers of Zion begin the teaching of their children when they are in the cradle. They remember always that "Love grants in a moment what toil can hardly achieve in an age."

The very first thing every child should be taught (and as always example, not precept, is the best teacher) is respect for every human being. We should learn to have a great and good opinion of human life, for all are made in the image of God and have a dignity and a destiny. This will lead naturally to the principle of the Golden Rule, "Do unto others what I would that others should do unto me."

It is extraordinary how many kinds of men and women make desirable teachers because the pupils display a variety of human traits and cannot all be moved and reached by the same teaching. Remember, too, that a mastered subject, and a person committed heart and soul to teaching it, with the spirit of God, will be near to the discourse of men and angels.

We need not be graduated of schools and colleges to know these truths of religion and teach them to our children. The Savior has told us that if we ask it shall be given to us; If we knock, it shall be opened unto us, and we need only to pray and work earnestly and with faith to receive the blessings we desire to become teachers of the gospel.

Sir Richard Livingston, an educator and classicist, and president of Corpus Christi College, Oxford, tells us in a lecture at Springfield, Massachusetts, "It is amazing that a person not intellectually bright, perhaps not even educated, is capable of grasping and living by something so advanced as the principles of Christianity."

The earth is the Lord's, and the fulness thereof; the world, and they that dwell therein.

For he hath founded it upon the sea, and established it upon the floods. (Psalm 24.)

May our faith be strengthened and may we have power to teach our children the truth and the beauty of the gospel, I humbly pray in Jesus' name. Amen.

The congregation sang the hymn, "O Say, What Is Truth?"

ELDER BRUCE R. McCONKIE

Of the First Council of the Seventy

WE BELIEVE that God has revealed himself in our day that men again may be able to gain eternal life in his kingdom. The knowledge of God, the knowledge as to the nature and kind of being that he is, is the rock foundation upon which all true religion is based, and without that knowledge and without revelation from him, it is not possible for men to hope for or gain the blessings, honors, and glories of eternity.

The Master gave the key to this principle in his great intercessory prayer when he said,

And this is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent. (John 17:3.)

The Prophet Joseph Smith said,

It is the first principle of the Gospel to know for a certainty the character of God, and to know that we may converse with him as one man converses with another. (Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith, page 345.)

Saturday, April 5

This knowledge of God, always coming by revelation, has been had in every age of the earth's history when the gospel has been here. The prophets have known of him and have borne witness to the people concerning his attributes and his laws. He created Adam "in the image of his own body" (Moses 6:9) and then walked and talked with him, with the very man whom he had created in his own likeness. He sent his Firstborn spirit Son, Jehovah, to commune with Moses "face to face, as a man speaketh unto his friend." (Exodus 33:11.) And then in the Meridian of Time he sent this same Son, among other reasons, to manifest to the world the nature and kind of being that he is, so that men might know him and worship him and keep his commandments and thereby be entitled to come back into his presence again.

Christ said that he was the Son of God. He said that he came forth from the Father, that he came to bear witness of the Father. It is written of him that he is the express image of his Father's person, and this knowledge was had in all ages. And yet when the period of dark apostasy set in, men without revelation, without the Spirit of the Lord, sat down in conventions and conclaves and wrote creeds which attempted to define what kind of being he was. They said that he was in some mystical way three in one, that he filled the immensity of space, that he was everywhere and nowhere in particular present, that he was incomprehensible, unknowable, uncreated, incorporeal, and all the rest. And that is the understanding that prevailed in the world in the spring of 1820 when the Prophet went into that secluded place in a grove of trees to ask the Lord which of all the churches was right and which he should join. The Prophet said,

... I saw a pillar of light exactly over my head, above the brightness of the sun, which descended gradually until it fell upon me.

... When the light rested upon me I saw two personages, whose brightness and glory defy all description, standing above me in the air: One of them spake unto me, calling me by name, and said, pointing to the other.—This is my Beloved Son. Hear Him! (Joseph Smith 2:16-17.)

From that moment the knowledge of God began to roll forth in the world, and we expect to see a day, eventually, when the knowledge of God will cover the earth, as the waters cover the deep, when it will no longer be necessary for any man to say to his neighbor, "Know the Lord," for all shall know him from the greatest to the least.

We have a scripture that says,

The Father has a body of flesh and bones as tangible as man's; the Son also; but the Holy Ghost has not a body of flesh and bones, but is a personage of Spirit. (D. & C. 130:22.)

If we had lived in the beginning, in Adam's day, and had received the knowledge of God as taught by revelation from the mouth of Adam, the presiding high priest in the Church, we would have seen that the very name of the Father, literally interpreted, meant Man of Holiness, for as the scripture says,

... In the language of Adam, Man of Holiness is his name, and the name of his Only Begotten is the Son of Man. (Moses 6:57.)

When Christ repeatedly referred to himself as the Son of Man, he was certifying that Man of Holiness, God the Eternal Father, was his Father, and he had no reference to his mortality, his birth as the son of Mary.

All of us who have received the gospel have power given us to become the sons of God. We can do that by faith. And Paul says those that become, by adoption, sons of God are joint heirs with Jesus Christ, entitled thereby to receive, inherit, and possess, as Christ has inherited before. The Apostle John, beloved disciple of the Lord, wrote these words:

Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God: therefore the world knoweth us not, because it knew him not.

And now note particularly what he says:

... Now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is.

And every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure. (1 John 3:1-3.)

To that same John, who had written these words as moved upon by the Holy Ghost, the Lord said:

He that overcometh shall inherit all things; and I will be his God, and he shall be my son. (Rev. 21:7)

And then again:

To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne. (Ibid., 3:21.)

These New Testament scriptures, and many others that could be cited, teach the doctrine of exaltation, a doctrine of eternal life and eternal lives, a doctrine of joint heirship with Christ the Son. And this knowledge has been given again, with more particulars, by revelation in this day. We are taught that Christ received not of the fulness at the first but went from grace to grace, until he received a fulness, and that he finally received all power both in heaven and on earth. After having this truth recorded in the revelation, the Lord says that he is doing it so we may know what we worship and know how to worship, and that if we keep his commandments, we can go from grace to grace until, one in him as he is in the Father, we may inherit a fulness of all things.

Now the knowledge of God is the beginning of true religion. Without it there cannot be faith in God. The knowledge of God is the end of all true religion. If we have that knowledge and seek, as John says, to purify ourselves as he is pure, we can go on in eternal progression, having reached the blessings of peace and happiness here, and being assured of an eternal reward in the mansions that are prepared, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER EZRA TAFT BENSON

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

MY BELOVED brethren and sisters, in humility I invoke the inspiration of the Lord and seek an interest in your faith and prayers as I stand for a few moments in this pulpit. I should like, if the Lord will bless me, to give vent to some thoughts that have been deeply impressed upon my mind for several weeks now. I hope I shall not be misunderstood. It seems to me that the day in which we live demands a frank and forthright consideration of some of the problems which face us, not only as a Church but also as a great Christian nation.

With you I thrilled at the opening address of our great leader, President McKay. As I have thought of his remarks regarding this land of America, its achievements, and its needs, I have felt that I could characterize best what he said in two words: Spiritual Statesmanship. With you I love this land in which we live. I am proud of our heritage; I am grateful for the American tradition; I am thankful that the Lord has given through his prophets information regarding this great nation.

However, it seems to me that there are certain tendencies, trends, and practices which endanger very greatly our way of life and strike at the very foundation of much that we hold dear as a great Christian nation. Of course, the conditions of the world generally give us cause for concern. We seem to live in a world of conflict, insecurity, uncertainty, and almost bewilderment. We appear to be groping blindly, aimlessly, unable to find the way. Were it not for our faith in the prophecies of God, I fear sometimes we would almost be tempted to give up.

Saturday, April 5

Second Day

We are in the midst of continuing international crises. The outlook for world peace and security is dark indeed. The gravity of the world situation, it appears, is increasing almost daily. The United Nations seems unable to settle the troubles of the world. In truth, we are faced with the hard fact that the United Nations, it seems, has largely failed in its purpose. Yes, the days ahead are sobering and challenging ones. We might well ask, America—what of the future?

I never travel across this great land and note its broad, fruitful farms, its humming factories and gleaming cities but what I am impressed with the marvels of this great nation. Yes, we have made unequaled material progress. We have become the greatest and the richest nation in all the world. This has been done on about 6% of the land area of the world by a relatively small group of people, only 7% of the world's population. Yet it is reported that this small group of people produce today approximately half of the world's total wealth in usable form to satisfy human needs. It is reported that in the year 1950 almost half of the food and fiber of the world was produced here in the United States. Our productivity has increased one-fifth every ten years since 1850. Through the use of machines, much of the drudgery and toil so common in many other nations has disappeared. Our engineers have estimated that the average worker today has the equivalent of 99 mechanical slaves working for him. The Twentieth Century Fund recently predicted that by 1960, 96% of all the energy going into physical work in America would be performed by machines, 1% by horses, and 3% by men. The average American worker has an output per hour six times his output in 1850. Yes, we have made unprecedented achievements in material things.

The prophets of God foreshadowed these achievements when they predicted that this would be a land choice above all other lands and that it would be preserved for a righteous people. Those who were to dwell here, if they served the God of the land, should be free from bondage and captivity. Lehi, who led the second colony which came to this great land, was told that he was leading that colony to a land of promise and that none should come here save those who would come here under the influence of heaven. This land would be consecrated unto those whom the Lord would guide here. It would be a land of liberty. Lehi's son, Jacob, said there should be no kings upon this land, that the God of heaven would be their king, that this land would be fortified against all other nations, and that he who would fight against Zion should perish.

Reference has been made by President Young to the coming of Columbus. The scriptures tell us that the Spirit wrought upon Columbus, and upon those who followed him, and that they came here under the inspiration of heaven. Nephi predicted that when they arrived, they would humble themselves before God, that the power of the Lord would be with them, and that they would prosper. Our history clearly records that the early peoples who did come were humble, God-fearing men and women. Bradford records that their first act upon arriving here upon American soil was to go upon their knees in humble prayer and bless the God of heaven.

The impelling force in their hearts, it seems to me, was a love for basic ideals and principles, which were dearer to them than life itself. Among these were their love of God, faith in his divine purposes, their love of freedom, industry, thrift, decency, and honor. Yes, this nation had its beginning in a high-minded manner. The rules of conduct established by the early colonists and our founding fathers were taken from the scriptures. They were embodied in the Decalogue and in the gospel. The Sabbath was set aside as a sacred day. Profanity and other vices were condemned, and gambling was forbidden. People were encouraged to keep good company and to repeat no grievances. They emphasized the spiritual virtues.

Washington but echoed the general feeling of the early colonists when he acknowledged God's direction and emphasized the importance of spirituality, honor, and moral courage. He said:

No people can be found to acknowledge and adore the Invisible Hand which conducts the affairs of men more than the people of the United States. Every step by which they have advanced to the character of an independent nation seems to have been distinguished by some token of providential agency.

Then as to the place of religion and morality, the Father of our country stated:

Of all the dispositions and habits which lead to political prosperity, religion and morality are indispensable supports. . . . Reason and experience both forbid us to expect that national morality can prevail in exclusion of religious principle.

His successors spoke in similar vein. Lincoln emphasized the same thought when he acknowledged that "God rules this world," and that "It is the duty of nations as well as men to own their dependence upon the overruling power of God, to confess their sins and transgressions in humble sorrow. . . ." and then quoting from the scriptures, "and to recognize the sublime truth that those nations only are blessed whose God is the Lord." Yes, my brethren and sisters, they spoke of self-evident truths—inalienable rights.

When the Prophet Joseph came upon the scene to open a new gospel dispensation, he shed even further light upon the establishment of this great nation and the coming forth of the Constitution, which he stated was a glorious standard, founded in the wisdom of God. Through revelation the Lord said to him, as was quoted by Brother Moyle yesterday,

Therefore, it is not right that any man should be in bondage one to another.

And for this purpose have I established the Constitution of this land, by the hands of wise men whom I raised up unto this very purpose, and redeemed the land by the shedding of blood. (D. & C. 101:79-80.)

We have enjoyed divine favor through much of our history, but what of the future? It seems to me, my brethren and sisters, that the lessons of history, many of them very sobering, ought to be turned to during this hour of our great achievement because I feel in my own heart that during the hour of our success is our greatest danger. I feel firmly that even during the hour of great prosperity, a nation may sow the seeds of its own destruction. This may happen even during a period of great income, relatively full employment, and high business activity. History reveals that rarely is a great civilization conquered from without until it has weakened or destroyed itself within.

I read recently volume three of that monumental work by Will Durant, The Story of Civilization. This volume, entitled Caesar and Christ, covers the rise and fall of the Roman Empire and the coming forth of Christianity. It covers a period of 1125 years, from 800 B.C. to 325 A.D. At the end of this six-hundred-page volume, the author writes an epilogue under the caption "Why Rome Fell." It is generally agreed that not infrequently history repeats itself. The author lists the major causes why this great civilization fell apart. I wonder if there is anything in what he says for us to take note of today. As a read this volume, I was caused to reflect on the similarity of conditions and practices then and now. May I give you briefly his summary:

The first group of causes he termed biological, and no doubt most fundamental. They had to do with the limitation of families, the deferment and avoidance of marriage, the refusal of men and women to shoulder the great responsibilities, God-ordained, of honorable parenthood. He mentioned that sexual excesses were indulged in commonly, both in and outside the marriage covenant. The operation of contraception and abortion was common. This, together with other things, resulted in reduced fertility. Sex ran riot, and moral decay resulted.

Saturday, April 5

Second Day

He mentioned as another cause of Rome's decay, the waste of natural resources in mining, deforestation, erosion; the neglect of irrigation canals, but most important of all, the negligence of harassed and discouraged men, the failure to teach high moral principles so necessary for the building of real character.

Then he lists with great emphasis the rising costs of government because of armies, doles, public works, expanding bureaucracy, a parasitic court, depreciation of currency, absorption of investment capital by confiscatory taxation.

Is there anything suggestive in this summary?

May I give you the following figures on this last grouping particularly, taken from what seem to be reliable sources? According to projected estimates, our federal government will spend during the coming fiscal years, 1952-53, more than the total income of all the people west of the Mississippi River—22 states. The federal payroll in 1952 will top 22 billion—4 billion above last year and 16 times the 1929 total. Nearly one out of every four adult Americans is receiving regularly federal checks. At the present rate, by 1953 the government will be spending approximately 38% of the national income. During only three of the last twenty years has our federal budget been balanced. It requires today approximately 2½ million civilians to staff the federal bureaucracy.

In the matter of the depreciation of the currency, it is reported that the present dollar is worth only 38 cents compared to the 1913 dollar, and that the dollar today will purchase only about half as much as it did in 1935-39.

As to taxation, the federal government took in taxes during all past administrations up to six years ago—156 years—248 billion dollars. In the last six years we have taken in taxes 260 billion, and still we seem not to have enough to pay our current bills. With a debt of over one-quarter of a trillion dollars, the annual interest payment is 6 billion dollars plus, more than all government expenditures in 1933.

Now, my brethren and sisters, this author lists other causes. Political causes, he says, were rooted in one fact, that through centralized control and the increasing despotism of the state, the citizens' civic sense was destroyed and dried up, thus destroying statesmanship at its source. Men felt powerless to express themselves and lost interest in government. Yet, I presume, Rome has had no equal in the art of government. She achieved a democracy of free men and then destroyed it with corruption and violence.

With you, I love this great land in which we live. I pray for the chief executive and his cabinet and the legislative and judicial branches, the officials of our states and our cities. But I wonder sometimes, my brethren and sisters, what our founding fathers, our pioneer fathers, would do and say if they were here today. I'm sure they would give serious reflection to present conditions. I wonder if they would not recognize that our liberties have already been abridged, that there has been too much of a tendency for us to call upon our federal government every time we felt the need for the accomplishment of any particular objective. I wonder if we haven't had a tendency to call for help for those things which our forefathers would have done willingly for themselves. Yes, I presume as a people we are to blame, but I feel that if they were here today, they would apply some very definite tests before any new service or new program were approved. May I just mention three:

First, I think they would ask the question: Can this service, assuming it is needed, be done more efficiently, more effectively by our federal government, or should we do it ourselves on the local level? They believed that government is best which governs least. Government seems to be inherently wasteful and inefficient. Possibly it is because the profit motive and competition—the very life of private enterprise—are largely absent.

Second, How will it affect the morale and the character of the people? This seems to me to be of great importance. They were interested in the building of character. They recognized that character, not wealth or power or position, is of prime consideration.

Third, they would possibly ask: How will it affect our free institutions—the church, the school, the home, and our local form of government?

I believe if they were here, they would look for the answers to the decline of public morals. As they looked searching for the answers, they would probably observe evidence of weak and vacillating leadership in many places, not confined to one group or one party. They would find a tendency for men in high places to place political expediency ahead of principle. They would be concerned with the alarming growth of a something-for-nothing philosophy, a failure of people to stand on their own feet. They would probably find bad examples by unscrupulous politicians and by delinquent parents, and possibly a weakening of religious training, and the substitution therefor of a faith-destroying materialism.

I think, my brethren and sisters, as Latter-day Saints, and as American citizens, we need to rouse ourselves to the problems that confront us as a great Christian nation. We need to recognize that these fundamental, basic principles, moral and spiritual, lay at the very foundation of our achievements in the past. If we are to continue to enjoy our present blessings, we must have a return to these basic and fundamental principles. Economics and morals are both parts of one inseparable body of truth, and they must be in harmony. We need to square our actions and our policies with these eternal principles.

I wonder if we have forgotten the counsel of the prophets, the founding fathers, and our great statesmen. Surely we need a nationwide return to these fundamentals. We need a nationwide repentance to rid this land of corruption. We must return to the fundamental virtues that have made this nation great. There is a force in the universe which no mortal can alter. This nation does have a spiritual foundation. It has been established in keeping with great spiritual and moral principles, but there seems to be a tendency for us to lose our sense of uprightness and to do wilfully those things which we must know to be wrong. This cannot be done with impunity.

God help us to raise our sights beyond the dollar sign, beyond material things. May we have the courage to stand up and be counted, to stand for principle, for those principles and ideals which guided the founding fathers in the establishment of this great land. Thank God for the promises that have been made regarding the future of America. I hope and pray we shall realize the fulfillment of these promises because we merit their fulfillment. I am grateful that the Lord has said through his prophets that this nation unto the righteous shall be blessed forever, and that he will be a light unto them forever that hear his words.

God help us that we may not drift farther from the principles of faith and honor established by those noble founding fathers and the pioneers who settled these valleys. We need this faith, we need a close adherence to these basic principles. It is my conviction, my brethren and sisters, that this nation or no other nation will be saved materially unless in some way it is strengthened, redeemed, and regenerated spiritually. God bless us in that redemption, that we may go forward and live the principles that have been so basic and so fundamental in bringing this great nation to its present standing in the world, I humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

Saturday, April 5

Second Day

President David O. McKay:

The congregation will now sing, "How Firm A Foundation."

The closing prayer will be offered by Elder Melvin A. Weenig, formerly president of the Central Pacific Mission, after which this conference will stand adjourned until 2 o'clock this afternoon.

The singing for this session has been furnished by the congregation, as you know, with Brother Richard P. Condie conducting, and Brother Roy M. Darley at the organ.

We will all join in singing "How Firm A Foundation."

---

The congregation joined in singing the hymn, "How Firm A Foundation."

Elder Melvin A. Weenig, former president of the Central Pacific Mission, offered the closing prayer.

Conference adjourned until 2:00 p.m.

SECOND DAY*AFTERNOON MEETING

Conference reconvened Saturday afternoon, April 5, at 2:00 p.m.

President David O. McKay:

Notwithstanding this is a glorious day, inviting people to stroll in the sunshine, the Tabernacle is crowded to capacity, as we begin this, the fourth session of the 122nd Annual Conference of the Church.

For the information of the radio and television audience, we will say that we are convened in the Tabernacle on Temple Square in Salt Lake City. There are present on the stand this afternoon, all of the General Authorities, excepting President Richards in Great Britain, and I believe that the doctor prohibits Thomas E. McKay from attending any more than one session a day.

These services and all general sessions of the conference will be broadcast in the Assembly Hall and in the Barratt Hall over a loudspeaking system and by television, and the proceedings of this session will be broadcast over Station KSL of Salt Lake City, and by arrangement through KSL, over the stations named at the opening session of the conference, including surrounding states, Colorado, Nevada, Idaho, Arizona, and New Mexico. The session will be televised also over KSL television station, channel five.

The singing for this session will be furnished by members of the Tabernacle Choir, with Elder J. Spencer Cornwall, conducting, and Elder Alexander Schreiner at the organ.

We shall begin the services by members of the Tabernacle Choir singing, "Father, O Hear Me." The opening prayer will be offered by Elder Selvoy J. Boyer, formerly president of the British Mission.

---

Singing by the Tabernacle Choir Chorus, "Father, O Hear Me."

The opening prayer was offered by Elder Selvoy J. Boyer, formerly president of the British Mission.

The Tabernacle Choir chorus then sang "God So Loved the World."

President David O. McKay:

We commend our Choir leader for those most appropriate opening hymns.

Our first speaker this afternoon will be Elder Albert E. Bowen, of the Council of the Twelve, who will be followed by Brother Richard L. Evans.

ELDER ALBERT E. BOWEN

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

FOR ALMOST two days now I have been looking out over the faces of those who have congregated here, noting the evidence of devotion to the purpose which has brought them together. Every aspect of their features has indicated that they have come with solemn intent. Not that there is sadness, there is a joyous sobriety manifest in their countenances.

I note, too, a manifestation of expectancy written all over your faces, and that is very sobering because I realize that you expect something from those who assume this position. The purpose, I have no doubt, is that you might draw some fortification for your faith, and some strengthening help to face the issues of life and wrestle with its problems as they come to you day by day.

We very rarely pick up a magazine now or a newspaper, that does not advise us somewhere along the line that somebody has said that the great need of this world today is increased spirituality. That idea is voiced in varied forms. Sometimes it is expressed as a greater dedication to religion, a more complete incorporation of the principles of religion into our lives, and that is heralded as one of the things that could cure the ills of the world.

But as I listen to further expositions, I find a great deal of vagueness in those expressions. I am not sure that I know just what those who use them mean. I am not sure that I know just what, in their minds, religion signifies.

There are a great many learned disquisitions about what religion is, the features that constitute it, and, what the essential factors in it are.

It is not my purpose here to go into any of those discussions. This is neither the time nor the place for that. But I am going to assume that I can tell you what our religion is, and I intend to say and do say that our religion comprises the teachings and life and actions of Jesus of Nazareth. That constitutes our religion.

It all centers in Jesus the Christ. So far as I know, in all the reading I have been able to do, all the research made, there is no principle of right action, no ethical principle, recognized in the world today that is not comprehended in the teachings of Jesus Christ. I believe that if all the books on ethics were burned today, and we had left the utterances of the Christ and the teachings of the Apostles whom he commissioned to carry his message to the world, we should have a perfect and concrete guide to human conduct.

Our religion comprehends more than just the ethical code. It contains a body of principles, through the observance of which we are promised the great reward of eternal life and salvation in the kingdom of God.

I want to turn here to the words of Peter, as recorded in the Acts,

But Peter, standing up with the eleven, lifted up his voice, and said unto them, Ye men of Judea, and all ye that dwell at Jerusalem, be this known unto you, and hearken to my words:

For these are not drunken, as ye suppose, seeing it is but the third hour of the day.

(He was referring, of course, to the supposition that the Apostles must be drunken because of the manifestations of the Holy Ghost that they were actuated by.)

But this is that which was spoken by the Prophet Joel;

And it shall come to pass in the last days, saith God, I will pour out of my Spirit upon all flesh: and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, and your young men shall see visions, and your old men shall dream dreams: . . .

Ye men of Israel, hear these words; Jesus of Nazareth, a man approved of God among you by miracles and wonders and signs, which God did by him in the midst of you, as ye yourselves also know:

Him, being delivered by the determinate

Saturday, April 5Second Day

counsel and foreknowledge of God, ye have taken and by wicked hands have crucified and slain:

Whom God hath raised up, having loosed the pains of death: because it was not possible that he should be holden of it. . . .

Therefore let all the house of Israel know assuredly, that God hath made that same Jesus, whom ye have crucified, both Lord and Christ. (Acts 2:14-17, 22-24, 36.)

That is the kind of teaching that introduced the gospel of Jesus Christ in the ancient day. There is no equivocation, no temporizing, there is no dodging of the issue. There is the straightforward declaration that this man who had lived among them was recognized of God, that they had taken him in foul hands and had destroyed his life, but that he was raised up and had become and was recognized of God as both Lord and Christ.

That is our religion. That is what we believe. Wipe that out, and we have nothing left upon which to rest our faith. It is basic to every principle that is acknowledged in our teaching or in the teaching of those who, under guidance of the Christ, were his messengers to establish his work.

This is a great teaching Church. Its business is to teach. Men can be persuaded, their lives reformed through persuasion. No man may be coerced, and no belief was ever established by attempted coercion or force. Jesus resorted to the method of persuasion, and our business as his representatives is to persuade people over whom we may have influence to accept the doctrine, and when they have accepted it in their hearts, they are born again. They do not want to resort to the evil practices from which they have been converted. They want to order their lives according to the purity of his teachings.

Foremost among the teachings that Jesus uttered was his recognition of God the Father. To him he prayed. He said that he was come to do the Father's will, not his own. He told his disciples that he had done nothing except what he had seen the Father do, putting himself into humble submission before the omnipotent power of the God of heaven.

As he directed his messengers to go out, he told them that they should carry his message and teach it to all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost, and teaching them to observe all things "whatsoever I have commanded you." That is all that is required of any man.

If we would do all the things whatsoever God commanded, or his Son, Jesus Christ, which is the same thing authoritatively, we would have no troubles in this world. There would be peace and harmony and good will. War would be impossible. All the ugliness of life, everything that destroys beauty and desirability would be cleansed out from the earth. In that instruction is comprehended the whole sweep of the gospel teaching.

He taught that man has a destiny, what that destiny is, and how to achieve it; that it is all dependent upon conformance to the plan given. We have heard something in this conference about a plan. It is a designed plan. It is the only plan that assures salvation to the children of men, the promise is predicated upon the assumption that we obey the teachings of that plan.

All that we know of record about the earth life of the Son of God is contained in the books of the New Testament—the Gospels, the Acts of the Apostles. It has been said that if you blot out the books of the Acts, you would leave a great blank covering a very important period in the life and ministry of Jesus prior to his death and resurrection, as well as occurrences after that period.

We turn to those books as the authoritative source of our information, accepting them as the word of God for the guidance of his children. And that same fidelity of purpose, the same courageous conviction and declaration of it, as was voiced by Peter on that pentecostal day, has rung down through the ages since that time.

Paul was not of those who had lived with the Christ, walked with him. He was rather a persecutor of his saints—by his own account he had viciously persecuted them, but he became a great expounder of the faith. This is how it happened.

Standing in bonds before Agrippa to answer the charges made against him, he said:

At midday, O king, I saw in the way a light from heaven, above the brightness of the sun, shining round about me and them which journeyed with me.

And when we were all fallen to the earth, I heard a voice speaking unto me, and saying in the Hebrew tongue, Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me? it is hard for thee to kick against the pricks.

And I said, Who art thou, Lord? And he said, I am Jesus whom thou persecutest. (Ibid., 26:13-15.)

It is the testimony of those who walked with him during his mortal life. It is the testimony of those who received their testimony and became convinced in their own souls. It was the testimony of Paul. It is the one sure way to live by the teachings which he expounded, and that same authoritative declaration of personal knowledge has come down through all the ages of time and has been repeated in our day, and thus we read that the Prophet Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon, in the temple, declare this:

And while we meditated upon these things, the Lord touched the eyes of our understandings and they were opened, and the glory of the Lord shone round about.

And we beheld the glory of the Son, on the right hand of the Father, and received of his fulness;

And saw the holy angels, and them who are sanctified before his throne, worshiping God, and the Lamb, who worship him forever and ever.

And now, after the many testimonies which have been given of him, this is the testimony, last of all, which we give of him: That he lives!

For we saw him, even on the right hand of God; and we heard the voice bearing record that he is the Only Begotten of the Father—

That by him, and through him, and of him, the worlds are and were created, and the inhabitants thereof are begotten sons and daughters unto God. (D. & C. 76:19-24.)

Here is a sober declaration of men just as those who had been associated with the Christ gave their testimony of what they had seen and heard, and those testimonials may not be idly brushed aside. They are entitled to every credence that is normally accorded to the words of any honest man whose integrity has not been impeached.

That is the foundation of our religion. That is the kind of teaching that won its way until it had established itself as a recognized religion of the great empire of Rome after a period of persecution. That is the only kind of faith that will keep men safe in the course that leads to eternal salvation.

It did happen. It happened by slow degrees. Nobody can tell just when it first began, but these sober declarations began to meet with some doubt, and men began to philosophize about these sober declarations. Gradually questionings began to have their effect by infiltration and dilution, until this profound faith was sadly shaken.

By the third or fourth century it was almost blotted out as a simple declaration of faith through an attempted admixture with Greek and other philosophies. Such is the inevitable consequence when men try to rationalize the word of God, the testimony of his servants, to accommodate it to the teachings of their philosophies, and make it more palatable to their understanding or their likes. From that day to this, the Church has been derelict in its duty to proclaim the undiluted word so that now when men say to us, "We need a revival of religion," a lot of them who use those phrases do not even believe in the existence of God.

They do not believe that Jesus was the Son of God nor that he was resurrected from the dead. They are using idle phrases. If men really believed,

Saturday, April 5

Second Day

they would do something about it, and if that belief were implemented into the lives of men in this world, it would cure the ills under which the world is groaning.

During the war, the editor of a national magazine, the magazine Fortune, to be exact, wrote out a series of questions that he distributed to a large body of the clergy, asking their opinions about certain beliefs. Their answers disappointed him by their wordy circumlocutions and avoidance of positive commitments.

He wrote a most penetrating editorial about it. This, among other things, is what he said:

A Christian leadership has passed from the hands of the church to the hands of the active and practical laity—the statesmen and educators, the columnists and pundits, the scientists and great men of action, and this is only another way of saying that there is no true Christian leadership at all. So far as the record goes, the American people would do as well by their souls to follow the advice of the industrial leaders as to follow the advice of the spiritual leaders. Thus the flock is leading the shepherd.

So long as the Church pretends or assumes to preach absolute values, but actually preaches relative and secondary values, it will merely hasten the process of disintegration. We are asked to turn to the church for enlightenment, but when we do so we find that the voice of the church is not inspired. The voice of the church today, we find, is the echo of our own voices, and the result of his experience is disillusionment.

This is the profound and absolute spiritual disillusionment arising from the fact that when we consult the church we only hear what we ourselves have said. The effect of this experience upon the present generation has been profound. It is the effect of a vicious spiral like the economists talk about that leads into depressions, but in this spiral there is at stake not merely prosperity, but civilization.

There is only one way out of that spiral. The way out is the sound of a voice. Not our voice, but a voice coming from something not ourselves, in the existence of which we cannot disbelieve. It is the earthly task of the pastors to hear this voice, to cause us to hear it, and to tell us what it says. If they cannot hear it, or if they fail to tell us, we as laymen are entirely lost. Without it we are no more capable of saving the world than we were of creating it in the first place.

That is a penetrating analysis of the cause for the ills of the world. To gain favor, to enhance our popularity, to avoid giving offense, we have adopted the theories of men and tried to integrate them with the teachings of the Son of God, and they will not mix. The result is that the church, instead of setting the pattern, marking out the path, has been adopting what has been adopted as practice among the men of business—the laboring men, the laity of the world—and the voice of the laymen, modified and given essence by the things they want to do and like to practise, guided by their selfish interests, has drowned out the voice of the church, and the leaders of the church have lost their powerful, guiding influence. Men refused to heed its words, finding in them only the echo of the words of the laity that are spoken about.

In my view there is only one safety; there is only one cure; and that is to take the pure and unadulterated word of God and set that up as our standard of measurement, and measure every creed and doctrine and dogma by that yardstick. That which will not square with the declarations of Almighty God we can lay aside as unsuited for the need of man, and orient ourselves again in that declaration of Peter, re-echoed by Paul, by all the disciples of the Christ, so long as his teachings remained undefiled and uncorrupted, and set that up as the guide to our course of life.

Then we shall not have these appeals, we shall not need these appeals to men to modify their governments because their governments will be founded in righteousness, and righteousness will prevail.

God grant it may be, I pray in the name of Jesus. Amen.

ELDER RICHARD L. EVANS

Of the First Council of the Seventy

I AM sure that the sense of expectancy, of which Brother Bowen spoke, is indeed overpowering to all of us, and that we are all well aware that of ourselves it will not be satisfied. I pray that it may be satisfied through the direction and blessing of him in whose name we are met here.

There has been running through my mind a sentence spoken by President McKay during the last few days: "Give encouragement to the people." It came before me again as the combined choruses of Brigham Young University so beautifully sang here yesterday, "He watching over Israel, slumbers not, nor sleeps. Shouldst thou walking in grief languish, he will quicken thee."

The adverse and long winter; the uncertainties of the times and seasons, the perplexities and problems of our young people have suggested another long-cherished passage of scripture found in Genesis in a promise to Noah:

While the earth remaineth, seedtime and harvest, and cold and heat, and summer and winter, and day and night shall not cease. (Genesis 8:22.)

I am sure that there are many other things also which shall not cease including truth, association with those we love, the possibilities of progress, and a glorious future to work for and to live for, and I am indeed grateful.

We can find encouragement despite some of the physical facts that we face.

A thoughtful person who lives across the mountains to the east (George W. Olinger) has sent within the last two or three days a statement or two that I should like to read briefly into the record. I wish I knew who wrote them so I could give credit. One sentence carried this thought: We may be faced with a lowered physical standard of living, but we need not be faced with lowered standards of thinking. And there was enclosed this series of simple suggestions:

Learn to like what doesn't cost much.
Learn to like reading, conversation, music.
Learn to like plain food, plain service, plain cooking.

Learn to like fields, trees, brooks, hiking, rowing, climbing hills.

Learn to like people even though some of them may be . . . different from you. . . .

Learn to like to work and enjoy the satisfaction of doing your job as well as it can be done.

Learn to like the songs of the birds, the companionship of dogs.

Learn to like gardening, puttering around the house, and fixing things.

Learn to like the sunrise and sunset, the beating of the rain on the roof and the windows, and the gentle fall of snow on a winter day.

Learn to keep your wants simple, and refuse to be controlled by the likes and dislikes of others.

We are reminded of another beautiful thought accredited to H. G. Wells by a contemporary writer, and which suggests that man should not allow "the watch and the calendar to blind him to the fact that each moment of his life is a miracle and a mystery."

I think we can take encouragement in the many marvelous things there are to enjoy regardless of other physical facts that we may face.

I think we can take encouragement in some other things also. Some of the ponderable problems, the unanswered questions, the seeming injustices and discrepancies and uncertainties, some of which President Smith and Brother Kimball spoke of yesterday, which we often have a difficult time in reconciling, will find answer and solution and satisfaction if we are patient and prayerful and willing to wait. Part of them are the price we pay for our free agency. We pay a great price for free agency in this world, but it is worth the price we pay. One of the cherished sentences I recall from the utterances of the Prophet Joseph Smith is that one which says that "an hour of virtuous liberty on earth is worth a whole eternity of bondage." So long as men have their free agency, there will be temporary injustices and discrepancies and some seemingly inexplicable things, which ultimately in our Father's own time and purpose will be reconciled and made right.

Saturday, April 5

Second Day

There are many other things that give us cause for encouragement—and I shan't take time to name them now—I know that President McKay is under the pressure of time but I shall pass over to one last one quickly: Encouragement to our young people in the uncertainties they face. I should like to say to them before I close that our Father in heaven sent us here not to fail but to succeed, and he has made it possible for us to succeed. He knows us better than we know ourselves, and he knows the circumstances and uncertainties we face. It is his declared purpose to bring to pass our immortality and eternal life, and to give us joy, if we will, and he hasn't presented any impossible set of circumstances or any impossible plan or purpose for us to achieve.

Despite all the uncertainties and difficulties, there is a glorious and worthwhile future for all of these young people of ours, if they will set their sights on some permanent, worth-while goal, look a decade or two ahead, pay the price they have to pay to achieve it, accept the interruptions as they come, and have faith, to work, to prepare, to pray, to keep the commandments of God, to pursue their lives with calm, quiet purpose. If they will do this they will be blessed; they will find great, rich treasures in life, of knowledge, and of other things also; they will surmount all the difficulties and discouragements of the day, and all the interruptions, and all else, if they will continue in faith.

It is, after all, a wonderful world that our Father has given us, in which everything is possible on the basis of repentance and obedience, and on observance of the principles on which the blessings are predicated.

Life passes quickly. I pray that we may all endure to the end, and keep the spirit of encouragement, many more reasons for which we might have mentioned and all of which are contemplated in our Father's plans and purposes for us and are within our reach, according to our obedience and our devotion to the gospel of Jesus Christ, notwithstanding what environment or what companions or what conditions we find ourselves faced with. May God be with us and bless us and give us the courage and the wisdom to endure to the end in faith, I pray in Jesus' name. Amen.

ELDER CLIFFORD E. YOUNG

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles

As I awoke this morning and looked out over this beautiful valley, conscious, as no doubt all of you are, of the hard winter that we have had, I opened the Bible, and read the nineteenth Psalm:

The heavens declare the glory of God; and the firmament sheweth his handywork.

Day unto day uttereth speech, and night unto night sheweth knowledge.

There is no speech nor language, where their voice is not heard.

Their line is gone out through all the earth, and their words to the end of the world. In them hath he set a tabernacle for the sun.

Which is as a bridegroom coming out of his chamber, and rejoiceth as a strong man to run a race.

His going forth is from the end of the heaven, and his circuit unto the ends of it: and there is nothing hid from the heat thereof.

The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul: the testimony of the Lord is sure, making wise the simple.

The statutes of the Lord are right, rejoicing the heart: the commandment of the Lord is pure, enlightening the eyes.

The fear of the Lord is clean, enduring for ever: the judgments of the Lord are true and righteous altogether.

More to be desired are they than gold, yea, than much fine gold: sweeter also than honey and the honeycomb.

Moreover by them is thy servant warned: and in keeping of them there is great reward.

Who can understand his errors? cleanse thou me from secret faults.

Keep back thy servant also from presumptuous sins; let them not have dominion over me: then shall I be upright, and I shall be innocent from the great transgression.

Let the words of my mouth, and the meditation of my heart, be acceptable in thy sight, O Lord, my strength, and my redeemer. (Psalm 19.)

As I contemplated these lines, and thought of the beauty of this day in contrast to our severe winter, I thought how much it is like life. We have difficulties, hardships, struggles. We have the storms and the clouds, and then we have the warmth of the sunshine to gladden our hearts, to give us renewed hope and faith. They are all necessary—these changes. It is all in keeping with the providence of the Lord. He never intended that we should have things easy. He intended that through sacrifice and struggle we should learn these great lessons of life and be able to adjust ourselves to them.

I remember one time listening to Sister Elsie Talmage Brandley relate an incident that happened as she traveled about for the Church. She was a member of the general board of the Mutual Improvement Association, and at one time associate editor of THE IMPROVEMENT ERA. Sister Brandley had a fine mind and a great faith. She told of her experience in Canada, how she and her husband living on a ranch had had sickness come to their home; they were too far away for medical help, and there was no way to summon help. She had related this incident to a friend who was not in sympathy with the tenets of our faith and who had asked Sister Brandley if she ever had any pleasures out of life. She replied, "Yes, I have great pleasures in life." And then she related this incident. She said, "You know in our Church our men have a special blessing known as the Holy Priesthood. By right of that they are able to bless their children, and in the authority of that power, it may be to rebuke disease; and the Lord hears those prayers." And then she went on to tell of this experience on the ranch where one of their little ones had been ill, and how her husband had blessed it by the power that the Lord had given him. She said, "Those are our pleasures; those are our joys."

And so it is, my brethren and sisters, in our lives. Sometimes the shadows overwhelm us, but behind them all comes the sun, with its glory, as we saw today, and it radiates into our souls the reality of God, the consciousness of his great blessings, and the assurance that he is our Father, and that we are his children.

Job the prophet taught this lesson forcibly. Probably no man suffered more than he. All of his friends had deserted him; he had lost his crops; he had lost his flocks and his herds; and even his own children had gone. Then when someone said to him that there was nothing left for him to do but to curse God and die, there came to him a consciousness of the reality of God. And he said,

Oh that my words were now written! oh that they were printed in a book!

That they were graven with an iron pen and lead in the rock for ever!

For I know that my redeemer liveth.

He knew notwithstanding all these things, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth:

And though after my skin [that is, after the way of the flesh; after all of these tribulations] worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God:

Whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold, and not another; though my reins be consumed within me. (Job 19:23-27.)

Seeing beyond the shadows—what a blessed faith it is, my brethren and sisters that we can do that, that we can adjust ourselves to the problems of life as they come. Our people have been very much concerned, especially our agricultural people in these mountain areas, during the last few weeks. Our livestock men fear that they can't get their flocks on the lambing grounds; feed is very short. It is a disturbing time. It is difficult. We have had these difficulties before. Our people have always had them. But in these struggles, in these economic adjustments we have to make from time to time, there come to us greater blessings, just as they come spiritually, and greater powers come to us. The Lord seems to have understood that as he endowed us and placed us here in the earth. And so there is a great ray of hope. The Lord declares his goodness. Everything about us proclaims his blessing, proclaims the reality of him in whose name we are met here.

We heard so much yesterday, so much to inspire us about the growth of this Church, its great power, and how the stakes in California are responding to this great trust incident to the erection of the temple. These things perhaps are regarded by those not of our faith as very material; they think that we judge our works by the material things. That is not true. They are the symbols of a magnificent faith in this great work. I don't know whether you noted it, but for the last three or four conferences, we have been told of the expenditures for the administration of this Church that come from non-tithing funds. I don't know whether you know the significance of that, but I recall as a young man, when this Church was in debt. It had lost much of its property at one time; it had been escheated by the government; and on its restoration to the Church, about 1896 it was, the Church was heavily in debt. And then when President Snow came into the Presidency on the death of President Woodruff, through the inspiration and the revelations that had come to him in the St. George Temple, he promised the people that if they would be true and faithful to their trust, the Church would be relieved of bondage, and that promise was verily fulfilled.

When President Joseph F. Smith became the President of the Church he made certain sound investments for the benefit and blessing of this Church. And I recall that those not of our faith and who had no right to criticize, went up and down this land, in print and otherwise, maligning the Presidency of the Church, accusing the Church of a materialistic attitude, of not being a spiritual organization, of misleading the membership of the Church. That didn't make any difference. The leadership carried on just the same, and we have seen the benefits and blessings of that great leadership, and today we see that leadership, the spirit of it, the inspiration of it manifest.

And when I heard, I think the first time perhaps four conferences ago, when President Clark read the report, was thrilled when I heard him make the statement, "From non-tithes of the Church," are the expense of administration paid. Think of the wisdom, the inspiration of your leadership, the leadership of this Church. And so in these things that are regarded as material, there is a great spiritual power. There is evidence of the inspiration of the Almighty. There is evidence of the Lord directing his work, giving power and strength to the leadership thereof, and that is the way it will always be, because this is God's work, and it will not fail, no matter how the shadows may come, how the difficulties may come, no matter what sacrifices, seeming sacrifices; in the end they are not sacrifices; they are blessings. They are the accumulation of great powers that come to the members of this Church, and they become a sustaining force.

May God help us to appreciate these things and be true to our obligations. The Lord is in the heavens. Everything proclaims his goodness. Everything about us proclaims the divinity of this great work in which you and I are engaged, and the divinity of Jesus Christ, and the prophetic mission of the Prophet Joseph, whose name we praise, he who communed with Jehovah, and talked with God, a reality, the greatest evidence of our day of the divine mission of Jesus Christ. God bless you. Amen.

---

The congregation and members of the Tabernacle Choir joined in singing "Now Let Us Rejoice In the Day of Salvation."

ELDER ANTOINE R. IVINS

Of the First Council of the Seventy

MY BELOVED brethren and sisters, I stand before you with a good deal of timidity and trepidation. Although I have been doing this for a good many years now, I never get quite used to the feeling. I hope that you will help me with your faith and prayers, that there may be in what I say something that may be helpful to some of us, to give us renewed courage and faith. My sole purpose is to be of help.

When Dr. Widsøe was talking the other day of his experiences and how he was called in as an expert on irrigation problems, I got to thinking about the similarity there is between that and life. I once read from a Spanish writer this statement: "There are more uncultivated souls in the world than lands."

Now the purpose of irrigation, of course, is to bring under cultivation lands that otherwise are not so useful and not productive, and the accomplishment of it represents some of the fundamental principles of our lives and our faith.

To begin with, the waters that we bring on to our land, when they are uncontrolled, may be the source of tremendous danger and damage to us. Sister Ivins and I stood on the banks of the river in Elmira, New York, and watched houses go by under the bridge, watched the water come into the city and fill all the basements of the town, and read in the newspaper of people who were drowned in the flood. And why? Because the waters of that river were beyond control.

Now, when we can bring water under control, and through our faith and works bring it onto the arid lands, those lands become productive. But to do so, there must be a fundamental application of the principle of faith. Without it we would never make the effort. Then there must be such structures erected as will keep the water which we bring onto the lands under absolute control; furthermore, to make efficient use of it, it must have direction, wise and adequate direction.

When we can apply all those things to it, we reap a harvest, a rich harvest. But if at any time, during that process, we become lax and lose control, the hope of a season, and sometimes of the future, may vanish in an hour.

That is a good deal like life. The purpose of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints is to redeem and cultivate the souls of the people. The purpose, even, is to build up and strengthen and make better the lives of the people who have come already to recognize the power of God, his restored priesthood in the earth, and become members of the Church, for none of us is perfect.

The development of those souls is the greatest responsibility of life. There is, of course, the time when that control must be exercised by others, just as we exercise control over the life-giving elements we lead on to the soil. Custody of a soul begins when a man is born—a puny, powerless, helpless child. There is, however, implanted in him by God, a power which can develop, and if controlled, would redound to the benefit and blessing of mankind. It is the duty of the parents of that child to see that its early years are properly guided and its activities properly directed, that the selfish, jealous, evil things which carnal man is subject to, may be taught out of the nature of that child, that it may be taught the virtues, the higher virtues of life, so that in its formative period it may be safeguarded from the evils that surround us in such great number.

Saturday, April 5

Second Day

Sometimes, as fathers and mothers, we do not realize that responsibility. We take children more or less as a matter of fact; we do not realize that they are the sons and daughters of God, and that in their care and custody, we are the representatives of God, our Heavenly Father. If we could sense that fully, I am sure that we would be more serious in the care and direction which we give to the life of our children.

Now there comes a time, of course, when the father and the mother may have done all that was within their power, and they send their sons and their daughters out into the world to struggle with its changing conditions. Then these young people have this direction within their own power; they have to direct their course; they have to direct their efforts; Father and Mother are no longer in control.

Now in that process the principal element of success, it seems to me, is faith, for without faith in God we are not likely to seek his aid, and without his aid we would lack inspiration, and without inspiration we may be subject to the baser tendencies of the body.

This writer says, "uncultivated souls"; and the Prophet said, "The spirit and the body is the soul of man." (D. & C. 88:15.) Consequently, if we are going to cultivate the soul well, we must pay attention to the spiritual development, and likewise to the physical development of the body. Without a proper relationship of the two we may not succeed.

Now, faith in God then becomes the fundamental principle of life. The great principle of the gospel is love. But how can you love God without having faith in his power, and his interest in you, and his ultimate direction of the affairs of this world of ours? To love him, you must have faith in him. With that faith there will come a love of God, and an effort to do his will, to keep his commandments, to develop ourselves, that we may be ultimately valiant and useful servants unto God in developing his program in the earth.

Without faith, there can be no love between a man and a wife. Without faith there can be no love between a son and a father. Faith must go in both directions, it seems to me. But if that faith can be developed, we will strive to meet the full requirements of our lives; to develop ourselves to our utmost and ultimate capacity. It requires a struggle, constantly, to drive jealousy out of our hearts; it requires a constant struggle to prevent hatred from coming into our feelings and our attitudes; it requires a constant struggle to develop the higher facilities of the body and the mind, but it must come from faith—faith in God, faith in each other as well. But in the beginning is faith in God, because from that develops love, the fundamental principle of the gospel, and from love develops the fidelity that should exist in all family relationships.

We have been told what a wonderful thing it is that we can enjoy our companions here, with the expectation that if our lives are proper, we will have that association throughout eternity, culminating in the grandest blessing of the gospel of Jesus Christ. But if we do not have the faith that prompts us to love and respect each other, to honor the pledges that we make in marriage, we will fall far short of the realization of that great and wonderful privilege.

I have come to believe, in this great struggle, that the greatest victory a man can make is the victory of self-control. It did Alexander the Great no good to conquer the world and die, a drunken, debauched person, in early manhood. Because he had no self-control, he lost all the advantage that he had gained by his unholy conquests.

So I repeat, it matters not what your conquests are here in other directions, if you fail to gain absolute self-control, you have failed in the greatest victory of life. It is the greatest battle, too, because man, abandoned by the spirit of God, we have been told already, is carnal, and that carnal man is an enemy of God. Without that struggle, without the Spirit of God, we are going to surrender ourselves to our baser and more ignoble tendencies. We must not do it, brothers and sisters. Man or woman, we must have faith in God in order to serve him properly, and make this tremendous struggle that is necessary to overcome these baser faculties.

We must never so mistreat our bodies that we surrender the controls that we have gained over these propensities to the unsettling influences of narcotics or things of that sort. We must live, brothers and sisters, through the faith we develop in God, true to all the commandments that have been given us, and to all of the pledges that we have made.

Now, when we lead the water out over the soil, we may have planted a crop which is the result of months and months of labor, and then, because in an unguarded moment, we relax our control and our watchfulness over it, the whole work may be carried away.

And I have known men, and women, too, who apparently have made this successful struggle until well along in years, and then either feeling secure, or indifferent, I do not know which, they relax these controls; they succumb to temptation; and in an unguarded moment, they destroy their hopes for the future.

I have seen men disorganize marriages that should have carried over into eternity because in an unguarded moment they failed to exercise their faith in God and the controls that come from it.

I believe, brethren and sisters, the greatest need we have today is the development of faith in God, and the controls over ourselves which come from that faith; and if we can do so, our future is secure. If we can do so as individual families, the security of our children should be secure. If we can impress those basic principles upon them so that they will adhere to them for the rest of their lives, the generation that they bring into the world should be secure; the whole future, brothers and sisters, depends upon our faith in God, and the exercise of these controls that come through that faith, and the inspiration of God which we get through it.

Now, may we realize these things, brothers and sisters, and may we live true to them, for the pledges we make in the waters of baptism and in the temples of God are serious. There are wonderful promises held out to us. The breaking of these pledges is a serious thing, and has most, what shall I say, most unwanted results, terrible, destructive results in our lives. Have you ever seen persons who forget these things, lose their standing in their communities, sink to oblivion and die, unmourned? I believe you have. Why? Simply because we allow ourselves to forget God, and in the forgetting of him, we lose faith in him because faith is maintained by the exercise of our faculties in the service of God. And when we stop exercising those faculties, that faith may decrease, and with its decrease, our controls may likewise decrease; we may wake up one sad day to find that the blessings which should have been ours are impossible to us.

God grant that we may understand our relationship to him, that we may learn to love him, and have the faith which will guide us, and help us to direct our efforts to the greatest development of ourselves and those dependent upon us, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER ALMA SONNE

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles

MY BRETHREN and sisters, I come to this responsibility with a prayer in my heart that the good spirit which has been present in this session and in the other sessions may continue with us.

Last night, as I sat in the audience at the missionary meeting, it occurred to me that the Church as a whole, and the members individually, have always been true to their missionary responsibility. It also occurred to me that those who participated in it, faithfully, have been abundantly blessed. God has prospered his work in the earth. And I rejoice with you in its success.

A few years ago I talked to a business executive who has since reached the pinnacle in his business organization. He told me of making an application for work years ago in this organization. After a conversation with one of the officials, he was told that, inasmuch as he did not have a college education, the place was not available to him. But the young man explained that he had been on a mission for the Latter-day Saint Church, and the official turned to him and said, "Well, I regard a mission for the Mormon Church equivalent to a college education." That man has risen to prominence, not only in his business organization, but also in the world. Surely, those who engage in this missionary work receive blessings which qualify them for their daily activities.

Elder Orson F. Whitney, on one occasion, told about his ambition to become an actor. But his poverty stood in the way of its realization. Finally, his mother, sympathetic with his dreams and desire, told him to sell some of her city lots here in Salt Lake City and use the proceeds for his education. But no sale materialized. Then something happened which revolutionized the plan and the entire life of Elder Whitney. He became a missionary. His former dreams vanished. Speaking of that first mission which he fulfilled with such credit, he later wrote:

I know now that I had a testimony, a deep conviction of the truth, but it was latent, undeveloped, like a gold mine in the depths of the earth. Something had to occur to bring it out. That something was my mission. It bored a tunnel, sank a shaft, and brought the precious ore to the surface.

Thousands among our brethren and sisters could give a similar testimony. Orson F. Whitney did not become a professional actor. His love for the footlights disappeared. Upon his return from the missionary field, he became a defender of the faith, an expounder of the scriptures. He became a bishop, an Apostle, a recognized orator and poet, a writer of history, a law-maker, and a mission president. All of his natural endowments came into full play. His field broadened, and his gifts and powers were exercised to build faith in the hearts of his fellow men, and to proclaim the gospel of salvation at home and abroad. Like Abraham of old, Orson F. Whitney was chosen before he was born. You and I are the beneficiaries of his stupendous work, his boundless achievements, and his richly endowed life.

Most of us, I dare say, have read Elder Widtsoe's little book, In The Gospel Net. It is the story of a great conversion, for in it, Brother Widtsoe tells how his mother became a member of the Church. I have often thought of that humble shoemaker whom he describes and who was presenting the gospel to the people who came to his shop; his soul was full of love for his fellow men. And as a result, the entire Church has been blessed. Who will estimate the far-reaching results of his efforts, and who will estimate the extent of the contribution made by Elder John A. Widtsoe, whose books and pamphlets, Church works, and expositions on agriculture, which are numerous and scholarly, have been and are being read extensively, at home and abroad! His powerful messages have broken down many prejudices and opened the door to many investigators. These humble beginnings have a way of growing and expanding into mighty movements and great accomplishments.

I have before me the report rendered to the Church by President Brigham Young after the completion of his first mission over in England in 1840. Said President Young:

We landed in the spring of 1840, as strangers in a strange land, and penniless, but through the mercy of God we have gained many friends, established churches in almost every noted town and city in the kingdom of Great Britain, baptized between seven and eight thousand souls, printed five thousand Books of Mormon, three thousand hymnbooks, twenty-five hundred volumes of the Millennial Star, and six thousand tracts, and emigrated to Zion one thousand souls, established a permanent shipping agency, which will be a great blessing to the Saints and have left sown in the hearts of many thousands the seed of eternal truth, which will bring forth fruit to the honor and glory of God, and yet we have lacked nothing to eat, drink, or wear; in all these things acknowledge the hands of God. (Millennial Star 26:7.)

What I have read covers one year of missionary activity by a handful of missionaries. I marvel at the achievement. I glory in their success. Without God's help they could not have done it.

May I say that the Church, as we have it today, is a product of the missionary system, begun six months after its organization. The Book of Mormon, the Articles of Faith, the revelations to the Prophet and the fundamental, philosophical teachings have survived a century of relentless opposition, criticism, and investigation. No changes, no apologies, no retractions have been necessary. The Church is like a rock in the storm-tossed seas, like a beaten anvil, immovable. Its foundation is firm and deep. It cannot be uprooted. Joseph Smith was a Prophet of God. We are here, you and I, because of his prophetic vision. Some of his contemporaries marked the great west as a land of desolation, forbidding and uninhabitable. Daniel Webster saw only a vast, worthless area, with its savages and wild beasts, deserts of shifting sands, cacti and prairie dogs, and a three-thousand-mile coast line without a harbor in it.

What did Joseph Smith see? He saw homes for a mighty people, the Latter-day Saints, where the Saints of God would make settlements and build cities. The wisdom of God, brethren and sisters, is greater than the wisdom of man.

May we appreciate it, I pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Will the presidencies of the temples please meet in the Salt Lake Temple, fourth floor, tomorrow afternoon at 4:30 o'clock. President Young of the Temple will please see that the west door is open.

The Tabernacle Choir Chorus will now sing, "Abide With Me," conducted by J. Spencer Cornwall.

We wish to commend the congregation today and in previous sessions, for their orderly and reverential attitude during our hours of worship.

The closing prayer will be offered by Elder Francis W. Brown, formerly president of the Central States Mission. After the prayer this conference will stand adjourned until seven o'clock this evening, when, in accordance with the practice of the Church, the general meeting of the Priesthood of the Church will be held. Only those holding the priesthood are invited to be present. Persons not holding the priesthood will kindly refrain from attempting to enter the building. That session will not be broadcast. Overflow meetings, however, will be held in the Assembly Hall and Barratt Hall; at both places, we are informed, there will be television.

The session at ten o'clock Sunday morning will be broadcast over Station KSL, and by arrangement through KSL over the stations named in the first session of the conference. That session will also be televised over KSL television station, channel five.

Saturday, April 5

Second Day

The Church of the Air broadcast, on which Elder Marion G. Romney, of the Council of the Twelve, will be the speaker, will begin at 8:30 in the morning. Those desiring to attend this broadcast must be in their seats not later than 8:20 a.m. The Tabernacle Choir broadcast will be from 9:00 to 9:30 o'clock, tomorrow morning. That, too, may be seen and heard over television, channel five. Those desiring to attend that broadcast must be in their seats by 8:50 a.m., ten minutes to nine. It is requested that the audience, during the broadcast refrain from making any disturbing noise of any kind. The regular session of the conference will begin at 10:00 a.m.

The singing for today has been by members of the Tabernacle Choir, under the direction of Brother J. Spencer Cornwall, with Alexander Schreiner at the organ.

At the conclusion of this meeting, the general sessions of the conference will be adjourned until ten o'clock tomorrow morning.

---

Singing by the Tabernacle Choir chorus, "Abide With Me."

Elder Francis W. Brown, formerly President of the Central States Mission, offered the closing prayer.

GENERAL PRIESTHOOD MEETING

The General Priesthood meeting of the Church convened in the Tabernacle at 7:00 p.m., Saturday, April 6, with President David O. McKay presiding and conducting.

The great Tabernacle was crowded with men holding the priesthood, also the Assembly Hall to the south of the Tabernacle, and Barratt Hall (60 North Main), in which latter places those present listened to the services and witnessed them by means of television. In addition, thousands of men assembled on the Tabernacle grounds and listened to the proceedings by means of amplifiers.

President David O. McKay:

If we had been guided by the assemblies in the Tabernacle, Assembly Hall, Barratt Hall, and the crowd on the grounds, we might have opened this meeting fifteen or twenty minutes ago. Every building is packed to capacity, and brethren who are unable to get into any seat whatever, have taken newspapers and are sitting on the grounds. We believe we will let the loudspeaker go out there so that those who are attempting to attend this meeting may share in the services at least.

What a mighty force! The strength of Zion!

The singing during this session will be furnished by the Tabernacle Choir Men's Chorus, with Elder J. Spencer Cornwall as Director, and Elder Alexander Schreiner at the organ.

When we sing, "I will go Where You Want Me to Go," it is suggested that the congregation sing the first stanza, the Male Chorus will sing the second, and the congregation the third.

We shall open these services by the congregation singing, "Do What Is Right."

Elder Emile C. Dunn, formerly president of the Tongan Mission, will offer the opening prayer.

---

The congregation sang the hymn, "Do What Is Right."

Elder Emile C. Dunn, formerly president of the Tongan Mission, offered the opening prayer.

The Tabernacle Choir Men's Chorus sang "The Palms."

President David O. McKay:

Truly, the song of the righteous is a prayer unto the Lord. That was inspiring.

May we at this time correct, or give information which will be of interest to all listening in, and to others whom you may contact. "President McKay: Regarding the morning's schedule (that is, tomorrow morning), with the two broadcasts coming together, 8:30 to 9:00 and 9:00 to 9:30, there will be no opportunity to open the doors or let anyone in for one hour. So those who desire to attend either broadcast, should be in the building before 8:20. Brother Richard L. Evans."

So will you please take note of that and by so doing avoid disappointment.

Our first speaker tonight will be President Walter Stover (come forward, Brother Stover) formerly president of the East German Mission. We believe President Stover has a message that will be of great interest to all who are privileged to hear him tonight. President Stover.

ELDER WALTER STOVER

Formerly President of the East German Mission

MY BELOVED brethren, I kindly ask for your faith and prayers in my behalf. I assure you that I am frightened. I never have spoken to such a great audience, and I was asked only a little while ago to speak to you.

For the past five years I have presided over the East German Mission. The East German Mission includes that part of Germany which lies behind the "Iron Curtain." Part of that mission is in the British Zone, but nine-tenths of the mission lies behind the "Iron Curtain." We have there more than 8,000 of our faithful members and more than fifty-five branches.

Life behind the "Iron Curtain" is different from what it is here in our goodly land. They do not have private enterprise like we have here. Everything is nationalized. Everything is taken over by the State; barber shops, even doctors, industries and also farms, are taken over by the State and managed by the State. And people work for the State and do not have freedom such as we have here.

I am one of the very few American citizens who have had the privilege of traveling in the Russian Zone. I have been there more than fifteen times, and have visited practically every branch and district of our Church there. I am happy to report that our faithful Saints are privileged to hold their meetings. Of course, they have to have permission from the State each time they hold their meetings, and if they want to have a cottage meeting they have to have permission. No more than four people are privileged to gather together at one time without having permission from the State. But as a whole, we are very grateful that we have our freedom there.

Communism is something different from democracy. Those die-hard communists do not believe in God, they are absolutely atheists. They call us stupid and ignorant. They cannot understand that in this enlightened age there are people in the world who believe in God and in Jesus Christ. Their Savior is Josef Stalin. They look to Moscow for their salvation.

I hesitate to speak as I do, but I suppose you ought to know what is going on behind the "Iron Curtain." People do not have their freedom like we have. They are not privileged to strike, they just have to obey and work. They cannot choose, to any great extent, their employment. They are told where to work, and for what wages to work. Their wages are very small compared with ours, and if they worked all the days of their lives, they could not accumulate anything.

So, my brethren, you see that we live in a very wonderful land, the land of promise. As an immigrant and a convert to this Church, I am grateful, very grateful, that I am privileged to live here in this goodly land, in the valleys of the mountains. How different conditions are over there as compared with what we have here. We have our wonderful homes, we have our wonderful furniture, washing machines, refrigerators, automobiles, good employment. They do not have those things over there. I do not like to speak too severely but I suppose they are slaves. I believe that the Children of Israel who were in bondage in Egypt felt more secure, and happier, than those freedom-loving people who are behind the "Iron Curtain."

Saturday, April 5

Second Day

Germany, especially East Germany, has suffered a lot. Many provinces have been taken away: East Prussia, West Prussia, Pomerania, and other provinces, and millions of people had to flee before the invading armies. These refugees are now in parts of Germany, where they live two or three families in one small apartment. They have to get along with one another, and they, of course, would be very happy if they could come to this goodly land, but they cannot. They have to stay there, and live there, and do what they are told. They are not privileged to speak their minds, my brethren. They are watched. They are not even privileged to speak freely in their own families for fear their children will hear what they say, and school teachers are trained to find out from the children in the school what attitude their family has. And how often a loved one from the family is taken away, and without trial, placed in a concentration camp. Many of them die there, and never return to their loved ones. And very, very often the loved ones are not even notified.

I am so happy that our Church is not persecuted to any great extent. Of course, they do not like any religion, they hate all religions, and "Jehovah's Witnesses" and other religious people are put in jail. A few of our people have been put in jail, but not many.

I want to tell you of one experience a branch president had. I stayed in his home one night. I went there by permission of the Russian Military Government to travel in the Zone, and

I stayed in his home one night. It was still dark when I went away in the early morning; the following day he was arrested for "harboring an American spy."

Now my brethren, this poor man was in jail for over eleven weeks on a phony charge, and I wrote a letter to the authorities and told them that I gladly would come and take his place, to let this good man go. His family had to suffer a great deal during that time, and his wife, who had two little children, went to the authorities, and said, "You have taken my husband, what shall I do? I need milk for the babies." They promptly told her that they would take care of the babies, and raise them, and make good communists of them, and she could work and make a living herself, work for the State, have equal rights with the men. Their equal rights, my brethren, mean that the woman can work just as hard as the man, take her place in the mines, the ore mines and the coal mines. That is the equal right women have.

Oh, how wonderful it feels to be an American citizen, to live here in this goodly land, where we can speak our minds, where we can worship Almighty God according to the dictates of our own conscience. We do not need permission to gather in this great Tabernacle.

The German people are very wonderful people. Out of that nation great men have come: Karl G. Maeser, was a wonderful man. I visited his home town, Meisen, Germany, near the great city of Dresden, and there the Germans honor and revere this great man. Meisen is the city where the famous Meisen porcelain is made and this world-renowned factory has been taken over now by the Russians. This wonderful porcelain is made to send to Russia, and all the factories work for the building up of the great war machine. I am sorry to say, the people do not have so much to eat as they would like to have. They feed them but very little, but from early in the morning until late at night, my brethren, they feed them propaganda. They tell them of the American capitalist and that the only way of life is the true way of communism. And they sugarcoat everything so beautifully that some of them begin to believe, not the older ones, but the younger ones.

When Christmas time comes, they are not allowed to have a Christmas tree or a Christmas program in their schools. They tell them that their Savior is Joseph Stalin, they should look to him for their salvation.

My brethren, the time goes fast. I bear you my testimony that I am so grateful that I am privileged to live here. Many, many years ago two humble missionaries came to the town where I lived, and in very broken language brought to me the Gospel of Jesus Christ. When I accepted it people told me that I was stupid, a religious fanatic. When I came to America, I was even more crazy, they told me. But I want to tell you, good brethren, it feels wonderful to be a Latter-day Saint, it feels wonderful to have a testimony, it feels wonderful to enjoy the spirit of the Lord. And I am so grateful. I know that God lives, that he hears and answers prayers. When our thoughts go heavenward, they are near the throne of God, and we thank him for the blessings which he has bestowed upon us, and we ask him for forgiveness of our failings and shortcomings, and we meditate and converse with him. How beautiful it is, my brethren. We are fed the bread of life and we walk with him and talk with him, and we feel his nearness, something wonderful.

My brethren, the gospel is the gospel of life and of salvation, and if we are true and faithful we will have peace of mind, joy and happiness in our hearts, and we will truly love our neighbor.

I could talk to you at great length about the East German Mission, about the life there, but I have said enough. Be grateful that you live in this goodly land. It is a choice land, choice above all other lands in the world.

I bear you this witness, because I know, and I am very grateful. When I was there and saw the sufferings of the people I said to myself, "whenever you return, you will never complain, not even about the taxes."

My brethren, when you work from early in the morning until late at night for the State, and you are fed propaganda, you can understand how good it feels even to pay the taxes here and be a free man. Of course, I have complained a little since I returned; that is the weakness in me.

May the Lord bless you, good brethren, and may he bless our nation, and those who administer the affairs of our great nation, that we may live according to the plan of our Heavenly Father and keep his commandments, that we may preserve freedom and liberty.

I have been in Washington and Mount Vernon many times, I like to go there and see the house where the father of our great nation, and his wonderful wife Martha lived. I have read of Lincoln, the great man, and I love these great people. They gave to us a wonderful country, and we have the blessings of it. We want to preserve it and live so our Heavenly Father can bless us.

I bear this testimony humbly and in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Brethren, some of our city officials are uneasy about us tonight. They realize how these aisles are filled, and all the steps occupied. The chief of the Fire Department would appreciate it very much, if we will at least make an effort, to conform to the city ordinance. Now, let us do it. If you brethren who are sitting would crowd up a little more, even if you are uncomfortable, and let the brethren who are in the aisles each take one seat along on both sides, I believe we can conform to this request. Thank you.

Our next speaker will be President J. Reuben Clark, Jr., of the First Presidency of the Church.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.Second Counselor in the First Presidency*

MY BRETHREN, this is a humbling experience. I pray the Lord to bless me for the few minutes that I stand before you, that I may be able to say something that will be helpful and encouraging.

Thirty years ago, from this pulpit, in a public meeting, I voiced a warning against what we then knew as Bolshevism and Socialism, and what we now know as Communism. I thought I saw it coming, and it came. No one can listen to what we have heard tonight, without joining in the feeling that President Stover expressed, thank God for this country and for our citizenship. And there is nothing that we should not do to preserve this country, and its liberties, and its free institutions.

Brother Stover is not telling us fairy tales. He knows what happens over there, and he has told it in language that we can all understand. A system destructive of the great principle which lies behind our great plan, that utterly wipes it out and makes it as if it did not exist, the great principle of free agency.

Brethren, I do not suppose that any of you have had communistic leanings. I suppose that all of you love your country, love the Constitution, love the free institutions under which we live, love our freedoms. But if there be any, may I ask you, prayerfully and humbly, think this thing over, because if it comes here it will probably come in its full vigor and there will be a lot of vacant places among those who guide and direct, not only this government, but also this Church of ours.

Brethren, I urge you, think this thing over in the light of the facts. And I know that Brother Stover has not told us tonight, a tithe of what he could tell.

That brings me rather naturally to my favorite theme before you brethren. "If you are not one, you are not mine." Now, that should mean, and must mean, if we are to preserve our freedoms and our liberties, that we shall be one.

Last night I voiced the thought that I feel is sound. I can think of this Church as having three great functions. The first function is to maintain and build up the body of the Church as we exist, those who already belong to it. The second function is to warn the world and to teach the truth to those who wish it. And the third function is to do the work for the dead.

We cannot successfully carry on the latter two without having a strong central Church, and to build a strong central Church requires unity, real unity, not verbal, make-believe unity.

We need unity in administration, from the deacons' quorum, up. We do not want deacons' quorums going off on their own and handling the meetings as they wish; the members going when they wish, and coming when they wish, and talking about what they wish. That is not the way to build a deacons' quorum.

You bishops of the wards, you do not want your auxiliary organizations carrying on, each one by itself, without any regulation or any control. You presidents of stakes do not want your wards carrying on in that way. And I can assure you that the presiding authorities of the Church cannot do their work unless they have unity among the stakes.

Do not, brethren, get the idea in your minds, that you have a very unique situation in your own place. We hear that frequently. But when we analyze it down, we do not find the uniqueness that sometimes you feel you have.

Be a unit. Follow your file leaders. Do what you are asked to do, and do it willingly and do it with a determination to make it a success.

You need this unity, brethren, if we are going to build this Church and if we are going to fulfil the mission which the Lord has given to us.

And you need unity in doctrine. I incorporate by reference these two fine sermons we have heard today, one from Brother Stapley and one from Brother Bowen. I endorse all that each of them said. The principles of this gospel are clear and reasonably few, that we need to act upon. And there is only one man on earth who has the final word as to what is the true doctrine of this Church, and that is President David O. McKay, today. When there comes a time to change the doctrines of the Church, he will let you know.

Read your books. There is a startling parallel between the course that is coming in to us today and the course that was in the early Church, so startling that one becomes fearful. We have these little groups going off on their own, doing their own interpreting of the scriptures, more or less laying down their own principles. They are small now, of no particular consequence, but that is the way it began in the early Christian Church, and these little snowballs grew and grew and grew until they became great.

"Scholasticism" took its root among those early peoples. There were a number of "schoolmen," they were called, who undertook to define the doctrines of the early Church, then developing into the great Catholic Church—Bede, Alcuin, Damiani, Scotus, and others, Thomas Aquinas—they began the development, these individuals, of great heresies that took hold of the imaginations of the people and finally were adopted by the Church.

Now, of course, the Church in those days was not organized as we are. The bishops were independent, one from the other. They had no real, there was no real central control. The pope exercised some, but it was very ineffective and inefficient. Some popes ruled some of these heresies wrong as heresies, then later other popes came along and ruled them as truths. We must be united in doctrine, we must follow the scriptures. Do not try to wander off too much, brethren, I beg of you, into the mysteries. Do not write in to the First Presidency and ask them to solve every mystery that you can think of, either.

Then there must be a unity of faith.

When I say a unity of faith, I am distinguishing between what we ordinarily term as unity of faith, which is a unity of doctrine, and a unity of the exercise of faith. What I mean is illustrated by what happened at Jericho, when they marched around the city and the walls fell. What I am thinking about is a statement in the scriptures, that if you have faith as a grain of mustard seed you can say to yonder mountain, remove ye hence, and it will be removed.

And that great crusade under Peter the Hermit, made up in good part, of the ragtail and bobtail of the whole western Christian Church, who were promised an indulgence if they went on that crusade and the forgiveness of all the sins they had committed in the past, and all that they might commit in the future—I am not talking extravagantly, I am telling you what that indulgence really was—when the crusaders got to Jerusalem the clergy that were with them tried to imitate the great miracle at Jericho and so they marched round Jerusalem, but the walls did not fall. Finally they took the place by storm, and one account says that the narrow streets leading up to the temple mount flowed in the blood of victims up to the horses knees. These crusaders, apparently dedicated to the redemption of the Holy Land from the pagans, took babes and dashed their brains out against the wall, took them by the legs and threw them over the wall, shut them up in houses and went in and slaughtered them, piled up the remnants in great piles.

I assume if he told all he knew, Brother Stover might almost equal that.

Now, brethren, we must have unity in faith. Let us practise the unity, brethren, before it is too late. We well may be the leaven that shall leaven the lump. We well may be the few that will save this country, even as the Lord told Abraham he would save Sodom and Gomorrah if he could find ten righteous persons. I appeal to you, brethren, in all earnestness, in all kindness, that we become united, united in following the directions of those who preside over you in the matter of administration;

Saturday, April 5

Second Day

united in the matter of doctrines, that we do not permit ourselves to be led astray, that we study the scriptures and that we hold fast to the few, simple and elemental principles of the gospel, which are all-sufficient to gain us our salvation.

I urge unity in the matter of faith, let us have faith, let us exercise it, let us fit ourselves that we can exercise it, if, when, and as the time comes.

May the Lord bless all of us, give us his inspiration. I bear my testimony that Jesus was the Christ, that Joseph was a Prophet, that those who have followed him since then, including President McKay, are his prophets. Let us all give them our support, let us give President McKay our support, our loyalty, and our devotion, in order that he may carry forward the great responsibility which rests upon him, and I ask this in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

There is a suggestion that at this moment this tremendous body of priesthood be permitted to hear the mighty voice and testimony of the organ. We will ask Brother Schreiner to favor us with a selection that will answer that request.

---

Organ selection, "O My Father," by Alexander Schreiner.

PRESIDENT STEPHEN L RICHARDS

First Counselor in the First Presidency

I AM sure all were deeply impressed by Brother Stover's report and by President Clark's comment thereon.

If I were not afraid of embarrassing Brother Stover, I would like to tell you something of what he did, this generous-hearted man, over among those poor and discouraged people, to bring them something more of hope for the future. It happened to be there during his administration. I became very much aware of the sinister influences which he has described. I remember riding through Berlin from the Western Zone into the Communistic Eastern Zone, and it was just as if you had passed over into a forbidden territory. The ominous feeling, the depression, the looks on the faces of the people, the ragged and hopeless condition, was a sight most forbidding to behold. Brother Stover stepped into that situation, and out of the generosity of his big heart, he reached in his pocket and helped many a poor person; and in addition thereto, he provided them with facilities through which they were able to gather, to resume their activities in the Church, and he held out to them such a prospect for the future that I am sure many were taken out of despondency and elevated to hope and encouragement. And I take the liberty of paying tribute to him tonight for that which he did for those distressed people.

It would be well if we could all be aroused by circumstances brought to our attention into a state of alertness to the dangers and the situations confronting us. I believe, my brethren, that it is well for every one of us to consider that he has a definite personal responsibility to do his full duty in the Church, in the government to which we belong, in order to forestall some of these calamities that look to be in the offing.

Now I see certain prospects ahead that may not be too fortuitous. I wish I could say a word that would save a man from bankruptcy. Years ago I used to practice law. I have taken men through bankruptcy. I have seen some of the tragedy of it. I have had doctors tell me that men have died for causes no other than financial worries occasioned by reverses; and to a red-blooded man, who has pride in his good name, few things are more disastrous to him than to fall into a condition where he cannot pay his creditors and keep his name good.

We do not know just what the future will hold for us. We learn that there is great income for the people, the largest, I suppose, that it has ever been in history, figured at least in terms of our inflated currency; and we learn that debts have assumed gigantic proportions. I have said in your presence before that there is only one thing that I know of for which this inflated dollar will buy 100% worth of its par value, and that is in paying debts. There is no discount when it comes to paying debts with this inflated dollar, and I am persuaded, my brethren, that all will do well, if any is in a position where his debts may come to embarrass him, to see that they are reduced and liquidated, so that he may be saved the hard circumstances that may come to him when it will be more difficult to pay.

We might have a deflated currency sometime. Well, if we have a deflated currency, and the dollar reverts to 100% purchasing power, you will pay that good solid dollar to discharge debts incurred under inflated dollars, and it may be a hard thing to do. You farmers will realize it may take two bushels of grain, instead of one, to liquidate the obligations. Now, I have never seen a man go broke who was not in debt. Have you? So I think that the caution is to be careful of our indebtedness.

Really, the great portion of our indebtedness that is hazardous to us arises from overextension. Way back in the days of the depression when many banks were closed, I was sent on a financial mission. I visited the banks of southern Utah, most of them, and some of the banks of Idaho and I talked with the cashiers and other operating executives. Some of them were good enough to bring out their portfolios, and in nearly all instances that I was able to observe, I discovered that embarrassment came to men because of overextension of credit. They thought that they could make some more money by incurring more debt, and the bottom fell out before they realized on the good prospects that they thought they had, and many were embarrassed,—hundreds were embarrassed, and some men who had been in good standing before were financially wiped out. And the books of some of these banks today bear record of these old obligations.

I believe we will do well to bear these items in mind, and within our own power do all that we can to get ourselves into as safe a position as it is possible for us to do. I recognize the fact that sometimes it is deemed necessary and desirable to undertake some obligations in order to get a home for our families, perhaps in order to get some kind of a business in which we can work, but there is a difference between getting that which is absolutely necessary for the support of ourselves and our families, and extending and extending trying in an acquisitive spirit to get so much that we hazard our financial security.

The good counsel that has come from the Church all these years is pertinent today, and I believe that those who study the situations most carefully would sanction that kind of counsel. You older men have been through some of the experiences of the past. You know that calamity can come almost overnight. It has done so in the past, and so a measure of preparedness is wise counsel to you.

I trust too that those of you who are perplexed to know what to do will seek good solid counsel. I never feel it embarrassing to ask counsel from men who have had experience and men who are supposed to know. It is far less embarrassing to expose your hazards to them than it is to endure some of the disastrous results which may come to you. It is a good thing to seek counsel. You Bishops, when you are asked for counsel, I think that you may be endowed with the spirit of wisdom, if you live for it, and you can give counsel superior to your own native acumen and wisdom to these people who ask you; and it would be well for our brethren to seek counsel in the control and management of their affairs.

Saturday, April 5

Second Day

In relation to these financial matters I just want to say a further word on tithing. Our brethren who visit the stakes frequently report as to the tithing conditions which they find among the officers of the stake. I think, my brethren of the bishoprics and of the presidencies of stakes, and the high councils, and the presidencies of quorums, that the best way in the world to teach tithing is to practice it. I have said in your presence before that tithing does not mean one-fiftieth, nor one-thirtieth, nor one-twentieth. Tithing means one-tenth. I have sometimes wondered what a part tithing means. I have never seen any definition of it, but I know what a tithing means. So far as I know, there is only one tithing, and that is one-tenth. So I believe that you brethren in authority could bring a lot of happiness to men and women throughout the Church if you yourselves would fully comply with this law that the Lord has given to us.

I lay stress upon not merely the financial aspects of it, although they are essential, but to the growth of spirituality that it brings to the man who conforms to this great law. I believe it is one of the greatest laws that the Lord ever gave to us, because he well knew that something more than lip service was necessary in order to develop a great love and regard for him and his work. He knew that the man who would reach down into his pocket and get that which represented his muscle, his energy, his brain power, that that man, when he gave the proceeds of his work, would give of himself; and he knew that when that man gave of himself to the work that he would engender within himself a love and a sacred regard for God and his mighty cause. I know of no one thing out of which more spiritual growth arises than out of the faithful payment of tithes. So I ask you to consider what you can do for yourself, what you can do for others by complying fully with this sacred law that the Lord has given to us.

I often look back to President Grant who was so generous in his giving. Many of you have heard him tell how he was always pleased to head a subscription list to build a home for a widow, to look out for orphans and for others, and to share that which the Lord brought him with others. I think that he set before us an example that we should never forget, and those who are blessed with great means should be generous with their means.

Right now we are having something of a dearth of missionaries, and we have recently had requests from some of the missions, particularly foreign missions, asking if we could not in some way get a little money to assist in the support of some of their local missionaries. The very mission which Brother Stover represented has just recently sent word that there are a number of young Germans over there who could do some work as local missionaries from the Church if they had a little assistance. I do not know that we should make a public appeal here for funds, but if there are those blessed with means who would like to make some contribution to our great missionary cause, they can do so by arranging with our office so that some means can go to the assistance of some of those who can help in this work. And I am sure that they would be blessed and feel happy within themselves if they were able to undertake some such support for these missionaries.

Now, my brethren, President Clark says it is a subduing and humbling experience to stand in the presence of this magnificent congregation of the priesthood. There is a strength represented here tonight which, if fully employed, would have within itself the power to advance this great cause with which we have the honor to be identified beyond even the finite concept of those who wish it well. If the whole priesthood throughout the Church would live up to the obligations and opportunities coming to them to magnify this glorious calling, we would see advancement that would bring us gratification indeed.

I pray that every man who bears this.

holy priesthood will prize it, and account it as the chief blessing of his life, and use it for the blessing of his family and his fellows. Thank the Lord for this holy power. I know that it is genuine. I know that it is not a mere concoction of men, as Brother Bowen spoke of today. I know that it was divinely given, and I pray to the Lord that I for one may be worthy of this high endowment that the Lord in his mercy has brought to me and to you.

May the Lord's blessings abide with you, I humbly pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

---

The Tabernacle Choir Men's chorus and the congregation sang the hymn, "I'll Go Where You Want Me To Go."

PRESIDENT DAVID O. McKAY

AS NEARLY AS can be estimated or accounted, there are in the Tabernacle tonight 9,486 members of the Priesthood, on the grounds, 3,848, in the Assembly Hall, 2,285, in the Barratt Hall, 1,150, making a total in attendance at this Priesthood Meeting on this April night, of 16,769.

To stand in your midst, to partake of what I feel is the spirit of unity, stirs one's soul with emotion, and 16,769 men have said tonight, "I will go where you want me to go, dear Lord, over mountain or plain or sea. I will say what you want me to say, dear Lord, I will be what you want me to be." Another line, impressibly sung by this Chorus, is this: "There may be somewhere in the paths of sin, some wanderer whom I should seek."

A few years ago there appeared in one of our magazines, the story of a little lad that wandered from his mother's lap in the Badlands of the Dakotas and was lost. As night came on the mother was distracted and the neighbors alarmed. The next morning, on the public square of the town near there, the sheriff met a group of farmers, teachers, office men, citizens of all ranks. He organized them for a systematic search. Before they started out he said, "Little Ronald," (I have forgotten his name, it is years since I have thought of it) "is somewhere out in those Badlands. We must organize and search every bush, every crevasse, every water hole. We must not come back without that little boy. Pray God that we are not yet too late." They started out that Thursday morning, and at about three o'clock in the afternoon a mighty shout went up. They had found the boy.

Brethren, a few years ago you received a letter, you bishops, stating that a committee had been appointed by the Council of the Twelve, to look after some of our girls who had wandered into the "Badlands" of the city. They did not intend to get caught in the meshes of sin, but they had wandered from home, and the protecting influence of home surroundings. You were asked if you would not kindly send the names and the addresses of those girls who came away from your town, to this committee, just so that members of this committee could see that they became associated with some ward, with some young people here of good reputation, and in some cases, in all cases if possible, could find suitable employment.

Later, you were asked from this pulpit if you would not please give closer attention to that phase of salvation of our youth. Only a few, comparatively speaking, have responded to that call. Well, if they were lost, and faced physical death, you would not hesitate, the whole town would not hesitate to go out and rescue the lost girl or the lost boy. I want to tell you, from direct reports from our police officers who co-operate, in several instances some of these fine girls have suffered things worse than death.

Now we ask you tonight, once again, please to send the names of those girls who legitimately, who unknowing what awaits them, some of them, leave their home and come to Salt Lake or Ogden or Provo, or some center, seeking employment, seeking to better themselves. Please cooperate with this committee, or enable this committee to cooperate with you, so that these choice young people may not be ensnared by vicious men who lie in wait, not only to deceive, but to ruin.

Saturday, April 5

Second Day

Now, be careful, if the parents are sending them in, that you do not offend those parents, that is not necessary. This is merely a means of cooperating with parents in helping young people to start out from home to better their conditions. Brother Spencer W. Kimball and Brother Mark E. Petersen constitute that committee, and you may correspond with them at any time.

Now this, of course, should be the last time that we should make an earnest appeal for your cooperation.

There is another matter to which I wish to refer. It is not very savory, but it is a condition that is giving us great concern, and that is the increasing number of divorces among Latter-day Saints, whereas here in the United States it is just a common thing. But brethren, we know what marriage is, what it should be, how sacred the marriage bond is; we know what it means to live a chaste life by men, as well as by women. Chastity is a standard of the Church; and it worries us deeply to see the large accumulation of applications for cancellations of the sealing ordinance. Indeed, they have become so numerous that we have had to appeal for help. As you know, there is but one who can cancel that, and if all his time were taken, that is, if he had to scrutinize every application as it should be, all his time would be taken for that one responsibility.

I wish here to acknowledge in your presence the able assistance of Elder Albert E. Bowen of the Council of the Twelve. He has been called because we believe that every case deserves very careful and prayerful consideration. Brother Bowen is a man, as you know, of clear mind, sound judgment; he is an experienced jurist, he has had years of experience in dealing with cases such as are coming before us, and best of all, he is a true, conscientious servant of the Lord. With his able assistance, careful attention is being given to each case, but he has been shocked, as I have been, with what some of these applications disclose.

I am going to venture to enter into home life. I would rather enter into it as it should be, rather than what it sometimes is. But we find that the following conditions seem to be contributive to the separation of husband and wife, and the breaking up of the home: Unfaithfulness on the part of either or both. (do you know what that means, those of you who have been through the temple?) — drunkenness, physical violence; in some cases imprisonment has brought disgrace to the family; the union of an innocent girl to a reprobate; some cases disclosed sordid, licentious, brutal actions of covetous men. I know you think those are harsh words, but you can read in some of these applications reports of treatment that has wrung women's hearts with anguish.

I know that the woman is to blame in some cases, and particularly young women who married young boys in a hurry when the first World War broke out. — I know that, but we are speaking to men tonight, and let us, as men, take the blame.

May I now, suggest that we unite for just a few minutes as bishops, presidents of stakes, as fathers, and as young men in prospective marriage, to consider some things that will avoid the breaking up of the family, that will avoid this breaking of women's hearts, this turning out of children from what should be loving homes, or throwing them entirely upon the responsibility of mothers. Let us instruct young people who come to us, first, young men throughout the Church, to know that a woman should be queen of her own body. The marriage covenant does not give the man the right to enslave her, or to abuse her, or to use her merely for the gratification of his passion. Your marriage ceremony does not give you that right.

Second, let them remember that gentleness and consideration after the ceremony is just as appropriate and necessary and beautiful as gentleness and consideration before the wedding.

Third, let us realize that manhood is not undermined by the practicing of continence, notwithstanding what some psychiatrists claim. Chastity is the crown of beautiful womanhood, and self-control is the source of true manhood, if you will know it, not indulgence. Sexual indulgence whets the passion, and creates morbid desire.

Let us teach our young men to enter into matrimony with the idea that each will be just as courteous, and considerate of a wife after the ceremony as during courtship.

And we have the ideal in this Church, I hope, today as ever, that a young man keep himself clean and pure during his courtship days, so that he can kneel at the altar and give just the same purity of life to that sweet girl as he exacts from her. I submit to you seventeen thousand men, that that is a glorious ideal. I know the world thinks we can not live it, but you and I know that we can and do so live.

Fourth, minimize the faults, commend virtues. After the first thrill of the honeymoon is worn off, couples begin to see frailties, idiosyncrasies which they had not noticed before. Responsibilities of motherhood come to the woman. Difficulties in paying debts come. And so we become prone to find fault. Let us learn to control ourselves in that respect.

I do not know who wrote this, but it is good advice: "In the first solitary hour after the ceremony, take the bridegroom and demand a solemn vow of him (this is to the girl) and give a vow in return, promise each other sacredly never, not even in jest, to wrangle with each other, never to bandy words, or indulge in the least ill-humor. Never—I say, never! Wrangling in jest, putting on an air of ill-humor, merely to tease, becomes earnest by practice. Mark that! Next, promise each other, sincerely and solemnly, never to keep a secret from each other, under whatever pretext, and whatever excuse it might be. You must continually, and every moment, see clearly into each other's bosom. Even when one of you has committed a fault, wait not an instant, but confess it. And as you keep nothing from each other, so, on the contrary, preserve the privacies of your house, marriage state, and heart, from father, mother, brother, sister, aunt, and from all the world. You two, with God's help, build your own quiet world. Every third or fourth one you draw into it with you will form a party, and stand between you two. That should never be. Promise this to each other. Remember the vow at each temptation. You will find your account in it. Your souls will grow, as it were, to each other, and at last will become as one. Ah, if many a pair had, on their marriage-day, known the secret, how many a marriage were happier than, alas, they are!"

I regard it as an incontrovertible fact that in no marriage circle can true peace, love, purity, chastity, and happiness be found, in which is not present the spirit of Christ, and the daily, hourly striving after loving obedience to his divine commands, and especially, the nightly prayer expressing gratitude for blessings received.

God help us to build homes in which the spirit of heaven on earth may be experienced. You and I know that that is possible, it is not a dream, it is not a theory. We may have that sweet companionship between husband and wife which grows dearer and dearer as the troubles of life come on. We can have homes in which children will never hear father and mother wrangle or quarrel. God help us as men of the Priesthood, to build such homes, and to teach our young men and young women who are anticipating home life, to cherish such an ideal, I humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

President David O. McKay:

The Tabernacle Choir Men's Chorus will now sing, "Thou Art Repose," after which Elder Joel Richards, formerly President of the Northwestern States Mission, will offer the closing prayer.

Saturday, April 5

Second Day

I would like to say that we appreciate the kindness of President A. Ray Olpin of the University of Utah in postponing his great basketball game tonight until after this meeting.

Selection by the Tabernacle Choir men's chorus, "Thou Art Repose."

The closing prayer was offered by Elder Joel Richards, formerly president of the Northwestern States Mission.

THIRD DAY

CHURCH OF THE AIR

The Church of the Air broadcast was presented Sunday morning, April 6, from 8:30 to 9:00 over radio station KSL and the Columbia Broadcasting System, with Elder Marion G. Romney as the speaker. The following is a report of this service:

The Tabernacle Choir, under the leadership of J. Spencer Cornwall, furnished the music. Frank W. Asper was at the organ. Richard L. Evans was the announcer.

(Organ and humming Choir: "Sweet is the Work.")

Announcer: The Church of the Air is presented by the CBS Radio Network so that men of different faiths may speak to a nationwide congregation. Today's program, presented in conjunction with the Annual General Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints comes to you from the Mormon Tabernacle on Temple Square, through the facilities of Station KSL in Salt Lake City. The speaker will be Marion G. Romney of the Council of the Twelve Apostles of the Church. Music is provided by the Tabernacle Choir under the direction of J. Spencer Cornwall. Frank Asper is at the organ.

The Choir opens with the words of Isaac Watts, "O God, our help in ages past, our hope for years to come, our shelter from the stormy blast, and our eternal home."

The Choir sang "O God, Our Help in Ages Past"—Arranged by Mueller.

Announcer: We shall now hear on this Church of the Air service, Marion G. Romney of the Council of the Twelve Apostles of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, frequently referred to as the Mormon Church. Elder Romney was a lawyer by profession before he came to his present Church position. He is also assistant managing director of the Church Welfare Program. He has titled today's talk with a meaningful American motto: "In God We Trust."

ELDER MARION G. ROMNEY

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

I COME to you this morning representing a people for whom the inscription on our national coin, "In God We Trust"—has real significance. For we know that an effective relationship persists between God and this land and its people.

Centuries ago the Lord designated America a goodly land, choice above all others, to be reserved for a righteous people. While it was yet unknown to Eurasians, He decreed that it should be discovered only under His guidance and promised its inhabitants from that time henceforth and forever that they should "... be free from bondage, and from captivity, and from all other nations under heaven," (Ether 2:12) if they would serve him. On the other hand, he warned that if they would not serve him, "they should be brought down into captivity, and also into destruction both temporally and spiritually."

Preceding the advent of Columbus, two mighty peoples dwelling upon this land prospered in obeying God's commands and, rebelling against them, sank into oblivion. Their records are eloquent proof of the certainty in God's warning and promise.

The builders of modern America, though without knowledge of the divine decree, have been aware of God standing within "the shadow keeping watch upon his own."

Columbus, not knowing it had been given, yet witnessed to the truth of the declaration that the discoverers of America should be led by divine inspiration. "God gave me the faith and afterwards the courage so that I was quite willing to undertake the journey," he said to his son, and in his will he wrote:

In the name of the most holy trinity, who inspired me with the idea and afterwards made it perfectly clear to me that I could navigate and go to the Indies from Spain, by traversing the ocean westward.

The early settlers of the Atlantic seaboard testified that they were led and sustained by the power of God. The colonists, rejected the tyranny of King George, appealed "to the Supreme Judge of the world for the rectitude of" their intentions and, "with a firm reliance on the protection of Divine Providence" struck for freedom.

At a critical point Franklin thus addressed the constitutional convention,

We have been assured, sir, in the sacred writings, that "Except the Lord build the house, they labour in vain that build it." I firmly believe this; and I also believe that, without his concurring aid, we shall succeed in this political building no better than the builders of Babel. (Documentary History of the Constitution of the United States, Vol. III, pp. 235-237.)

In his 1789 Thanksgiving Proclamation, Washington made seven separate references to the Almighty, whom he acknowledged as the source of all the nation's blessings, including victory in the Revolution and "opportunity to establish a form of government for" our "safety and happiness."

Perhaps no American, save the prophets only, has put such implicit trust in God as did the Great Emancipator. Out of his personal experiences he testified he was as certain that God acts directly upon human affairs as he was of a fact apparent to the senses, such as that he was in the room where he was then speaking. He said:

I have had so many evidences of his direction, so many instances when I have been controlled by some other power than my own will, that I cannot doubt that this power comes from above. I frequently see my way clear to a decision when I am conscious that I have not sufficient facts upon which to found it. But I cannot recall one instance in which I have followed my own judgment, founded upon such a decision, where the results were unsatisfactory; whereas, in almost every instance where I have yielded to the views of others I have had occasion to regret it. (Abraham Lincoln—Man of God, John Wesley Hill, 124.)

A marked diminution of our trust in God has taken place in America since the days of Lincoln, the effect of which is everywhere apparent. We and our beloved country are today at the crossroads in our efforts to maintain our glorious American heritage of political, temporal, and spiritual freedom, won and bequeathed to us by the fathers who had inscribed in their hearts, as well as on their money, "In God We Trust." In every hamlet of our land arises a plaintive cry for a return to that trust in God by which the fathers built our nation. I believe we are approaching almost an unanimity in our feeling that the great and imperative need of this hour of decision for America is to vitalize our trust in God.

I believe we can do it. I know we can do it if we are but willing to pay the price. Possessing a sure knowledge of the truth of what I say, I point out two prerequisites to the realization of this, our great need: First, we must in hu-

Sunday, April 6

Third Day

military seek the God in whom we trust in earnest prayer; second, we must dedicate ourselves to the keeping of his commandments.

"Seek ye the Lord while he may be found, call ye upon him while he is near," counseled Isaiah. (Isa. 55:6.)

"Evening, and morning, and at noon, will I pray, and cry aloud: and he shall hear my voice," sang the Psalmist. (Psalm 55:17.)

"Watch and pray, that ye enter not into temptation," (Matt. 26:41) taught Jesus. And in his perfect life he set the pattern. He prayed (Luke 3:21) and fasted forty days (Matt. 4:2) at the beginning of his public ministry; he prayed in the wilderness (Luke 5:16); he prayed at the beginning of the day (Mark 1:35); he prayed a whole night preceding his selection of the Twelve Apostles (Luke 6:12); he prayed for strength in Gethsemane; and finally, on the cross in the hour of his death, he prayed. (Ibid., 23:34.)

All men who, "under God," have advanced the cause of righteousness in America have been praying men. Who has not heard Isaac Potts' account of Washington on his knees in the snow in prayer at Valley Forge? Lincoln's sublime trust in God came after he had many times been driven to his knees in prayer. He thus explained to General Sickles the reason for the serenity he experienced while the outcome of the battle of Gettysburg hung in the balance:

In the pinch of your campaign up there, when everybody seemed panic-stricken and nobody could tell what was going to happen, oppressed by the gravity of affairs, I went to my room one day and locked the door and got down on my knees before Almighty God and prayed to him mightily for victory at Gettysburg. I told him that this war was his, and our cause his cause, but we could not stand another Fredericksburg or Chancellorsville. Then and there I made a solemn vow to Almighty God that if he would stand by our boys at Gettysburg, I would stand by him, and he did stand by our boys, and I will stand by him. And after that, I don't know how it was, and I cannot explain it, soon a sweet comfort crept into my soul. The feeling came that God had taken the whole business into his hands, and that things would go right at Gettysburg, and that is why I had no fears about you. (Hill, op. cit., 339-340.)

If we would vitalize our trust in God, we—you and I—must get down on our knees and pray to him as Lincoln prayed, with all the energy of our souls. And we must do so as did the Psalmist, evening, morning, and at noon. We cannot leave it for the other fellow; we must do it ourselves, and we must do it now. If we will begin and close each day by praying unto our Father in heaven in secret, as the Savior admonished, thanking him for our lives, his protection over us and our loved ones, our material comforts, the freedom we enjoy in this glorious land; if we will plead with him to guide us in the paths of righteousness that we may merit a continuation of his mercies; if the head of every household will daily call his family about him and, praying with them and they praying with him, truly worship the Lord, the first long and sure step will be taken toward vitalizing our trust in God.

To take the second step, we must learn that in the relationship between God and ourselves both parties have obligations. We must stand by the Lord, as Lincoln promised to do, for he has promised to give us protection against temporal and spiritual bondage, and against all other nations under heaven, only if we serve him. Praying is one way to serve him, another way is to keep his commandments. There are numerous ways in which we are violating them in America today.

On many points the Lord has given us specific guidance with respect to the conduct of our lives; for example, he has said,

Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain; for the Lord will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain. (Ex. 20:7.)

In harmony with this command

Washington issued the following order in 1776:

The General is sorry to be informed that the foolish and wicked practice of profane cursing and swearing, a vice heretofore little known in an American army, is growing into fashion. He hopes the officers will, by example as well as influence, endeavor to check it, and that both they and the men will reflect that we can have little hope of the blessings of heaven on our arms if we insult it by our impiety and folly. Added to this, it is a vice so mean and low, . . . that every man of sense and character detests and despises it.

What respect is today being paid to this prohibition against profanity? If you hear what I hear, you know we have not placed the Lord in our debt through its observance.

"Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy," (Ex. 20:8) is another familiar command.

That it was revered by the great Lincoln is evidenced by a general order to the army and the navy, signed by him November 15, 1862. From that order I quote:

The President, commander-in-chief of the army and navy, desires and enjoins the orderly observance of the Sabbath by the officers and men in the military and naval service. . . . The discipline and character of the national forces should not suffer, nor the cause they defend be imperiled, by the profanation of the day or name of the Most High. (Abraham Lincoln, The War Years, III, Carl Sandburg, 374.)

How do we, as a nation, stand upon this matter today? Is it not rather noted in the breach than in the observance?

"Thou shalt not commit adultery," (Ex. 20:14) spake the Lord amidst the thundering and lightning of Sinai, against one of the most debasing of sins, a practice which has preceded the disintegration of every fallen civilization. Paul's pronouncement that our bodies are the temples of God, that "If any man defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy," (I Cor. 3:17), is an eternal principle still in force. Much of our sorrow and distress stems from a violation of this divine command.

We might continue with others, "Thou shalt not steal," "Thou shalt not bear false witness," "Thou shalt not covet," (Ex. 20:15-17) but we now have in mind enough to persuade us of many ways in which we may improve, if we really, in truth and without hypocrisy, are committed to keeping the commandments of God.

I plead with you, my friends, for a vitalization of our trust in God through earnest prayer and a careful keeping of the Lord's commands. Every substitute we have tried has left us deeper in the mire. Our integrity, our liberties, our treasures, are slipping like sand through our fingers. Our cynicism and godless learning lead us ever farther from the truth. Why should we not put to test the one untried plan of self-disciplined conformance to the plain and simple commands of the God in whom we profess to trust. Doing this, turning not to the right hand or to the left, we shall become strong and of a good courage. The Lord will be with and prosper us, whithersoever we go. Our trust in him being thus vitalized into an all-powerful present reality, the strongest bulwark in all our defenses, we shall sing with strong conviction,

Our fathers' God to thee,
Author of liberty,
To thee we sing;
Long may our land be bright
With freedom's holy light;
Protect us by thy might,
Great God, our king.

That we may do so, I humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

The Choir sang: "America"—McClellan-Cornwall-Smyth.

Announcer: "God of our Fathers, whose almighty hand leads forth. . . . Thy love divine hath led us in the past, in this free land by thee our lot is cast; be Thou our ruler, guardian, guide and stay, Thy word our law, Thy paths our chosen way."

Selection by the Choir, "God of our Fathers"—Warren.

CHOIR AND ORGAN BROADCAST

The following broadcast, written and announced by Richard L. Evans, and originating with Station KSL, Salt Lake City, was presented from 9:00 to 9:30 a.m., through the courtesy and facilities of the Columbia Broadcasting System's network, throughout the United States. The broadcast was as follows:

(Organ played "As the Dew," and on signal the Choir and Organ broke into the hymn, "Gently Raise the Sacred Strain," singing words to the end of the second line, and humming to the end of verse for announcer's background.)

Announcer: Once more we welcome you within these walls with music and the spoken word from the Crossroads of the West.

The CBS Radio network and its affiliated stations bring you at this hour another presentation from Temple Square in Salt Lake City, with J. Spencer Cornwall conducting the Tabernacle Choir, Frank Asper, Tabernacle Organist, and the spoken word by Richard Evans.

The Choir first turns to Psalm 57, sung in a setting by M. Thomas Cousins: "I will praise Thee, O Lord among the people, I will sing unto Thee among the nations . . . let Thy glory be above all the earth, Glorious everlasting!"

The Choir sang: "Glorious Everlasting"—Cousins.

Announcer: With Frank Asper at the Tabernacle organ on Temple Square today we hear one of the impressive organ offerings of Cesar Franck: "Piece Heroique."

Organ selection: "Piece Heroique"—Franck.

Announcer: The Tabernacle Choir sings now a song by William Billings, written on David's anguished sorrow for his son who was slain: "David's Lamentation." "And the King was much moved, and went up to the chamber over the gate, and wept; and as he went, thus he said, O . . . Absalom, my son, my son . . . would God I had died for thee, O Absalom, my son!"

The Choir sang: "David's Lamentation"—Billings.

Announcer: The Tabernacle Choir continues with the softly echoing anthem by L. Stanley Glarum and with words from the 47th Psalm: "Sing Praises unto our King, for God is King o'er all the earth."

The Choir then sang: "Sing Praises"—Glarum.

THE SPOKEN WORD

"All real joy and power of progress . . . depend on finding something to reverence, and all the baseness and misery of humanity begin in a habit of disdain." These words of John Ruskin suggest some of the results of irreverence and also some of the symptoms. Some irreverence is more a matter of thoughtlessness, as the boisterousness of boys. Some, as Ruskin wrote, partakes of deliberate, cynical disdain. Some shows itself in profane and offensive speech. Some is evident only in attitude. Some is apparent by confusion and disorder in places where there should be quiet and contemplation. True reverence is not strained or stiff or artificial, but a sincere sense in one's soul that some things are sacred—that some things should not be lightly spoken of nor lightly considered. In the presence of great art, great music, great minds there is due respect and deference. Then how much more respect and deference are due the Creator of heaven and earth, in whose image men were made, whose wisdom and works are infinite, to whom we owe all the bounteous blessings of life, the recurring seasons, the springtime, the harvest, the love of family and friends, the reality we have here and the assurance of life hereafter. If we lose the spirit of reverence as to the works and ways of Providence we shall lose much else also—for the kind of corrosion that rusts away reverence also rusts away other finer feelings. Certainly life need not be longfaced. Certainly there are many times and places when high-minded humor and light-hearted talk and heartily informal fellowship are a permissible and important part of life. But there are also sacred places, sacred hours, sacred subjects that should be reverently respected—and he who is insensitive to them is sometimes suspected of lacking some essential training or some essential qualities of character. We commend these words from the seventeenth century: "Let thy speeches be seriously reverent when thou speakest of God or His attributes; for to jest or utter thyself lightly in matters divine is an unhappy impiety, provoking Heaven to justice, and urging all men to suspect thy belief." "Always and in everything let there be reverence."

The Choir sang: "Come, Thou Fount of Every Blessing"—Wyeth-Cornwall.

Organ selection: "Jesus Once of Humble Birth."

Announcer: We have heard the Choir recall a hymn with words by Robert Robinson and music by John Wyeth: "Come, Thou Fount of Every Blessing."

And with Frank Asper at the Organ we have heard a hymn tune that takes its title from the words of Parley P. Pratt: "Jesus Once of Humble Birth."

And now in closing the Choir recalls a moving and majestic chorus from Mendelssohn's "Elijah," with words from I Kings—words that contrast violence and physical force with the calm quiet whisperings of the still small voice: "Behold! God the Lord Passed By!—And a mighty wind rent the mountains—the sea was upheaved, the earth was shaken. . . . But yet the Lord was not in the Tempest, nor in the earthquake . . . nor in the fire. But after the fire there came a still small voice, and in that still small voice, onward came the Lord."—"Behold, God the Lord Passed By."

The Choir sang: "Behold, God the Lord Passed By"—Mendelssohn.

Announcer: Once more we leave you within the shadows of the everlasting hills. May peace be with you, this day—and always.

This concludes the eleven hundred and eighty-first presentation, continuing the 23rd year of this traditional broadcast from the Mormon Tabernacle on Temple Square, brought to you by CBS radio, and originating with Radio Station KSL in Salt Lake City.

J. Spencer Cornwall conducted the Tabernacle Choir with its three hundred seventy-five singing voices. Frank Asper was at the organ. The spoken word by Richard Evans.

In another seven days, at this same hour, music and the spoken word will be heard once more from the Crossroads of the West.

SUNDAY MORNING GENERAL CONFERENCE SESSION

Conference reconvened at 10:00 a.m.

The great Tabernacle was again crowded to capacity, great crowds of people having gathered on the grounds and in the buildings long before time to commence the Church of the Air broadcast at 8:30 a.m. The Assembly Hall and Barratt Hall were also completely filled with people who listened to the services and watched them by means of television. In addition thousands were assembled on the Tabernacle grounds, the weather being delightful, where they listened to the proceedings by amplifying equipment as the services went forward in the Tabernacle.

President McKay, who presided and conducted the services, called the meeting to order promptly at 10:00 o'clock.

Sunday, April 6

Third Day

President David O. McKay:

Last Friday, at the opening session of the General Conference, three names were given of prominent Church workers who had passed away since last October. This morning we have to announce the passing of Bishop David A. Smith, formerly a member of the Presiding Bishopric, and also formerly President of the Canadian Mission.

At a special meeting of the Council of the First Presidency and the Twelve this morning, it was unanimously voted to extend love and sympathy to Sister Smith, the sons and daughters of Bishop Smith, to our fellow worker, Joseph Fielding Smith, brother of Bishop Smith, and to all other members of the family. He was a very earnest and faithful worker in the Missionary Home for many years, and was one of the first to participate in the instruction given to missionaries many years ago. Peace to his memory. May we emulate his good deeds and have comfort in the realization that he has gone to a rich reward and merits the plaudit, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant, enter into the joy of thy Lord."

For the benefit of the listening audience, I may say that the fifth session of this general conference was not broadcast. It was a General Priesthood Meeting held last evening in the Tabernacle, with overflow meetings held in the Assembly Hall and the Barratt Hall, and for your interest as well, we should like to say that as nearly as the ushers could count, (and several think this is an understatement,) there were assembled in the Priesthood Meeting last evening, 16,769 men holding the priesthood. It was a thrill and an inspiration just to be in their midst!

Brother Walter Stover, returned missionary from the East German Mission, who presided over the East German Mission, a majority of the branches of which are behind the "Iron Curtain," was the first speaker, and the other speakers were the First Presidency of the Church.

This is the sixth session, therefore, of the 122nd Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. As heretofore announced, we are convened in the Tabernacle, on Temple Square in Salt Lake City. These services will be broadcast in the Assembly Hall and Barratt Hall over a loud speaking system and by television. The proceedings of this session will also be broadcast over Station KSL, and by arrangement through KSL, over the stations named in the first session of the Conference. We shall not repeat the names, but we wish the stations to accept our appreciation for their co-operation in broadcasting these services.

This session will also be televised over KSL television station, channel five.

The Choir singing for this morning's session of the Conference will be by the Tabernacle Choir, with Elder J. Spencer Cornwall conducting, and with Elder Frank W. Asper at the organ.

We shall begin the services by the congregation and the Choir singing "Come, Come, Ye Saints," conducted by Elder Cornwall.

The opening prayer will be offered by Elder Wallace F. Toronto, formerly president of the Czechoslovakian Mission.

---

The Tabernacle Choir and the congregation joined in singing the hymn, "Come, Come, Ye Saints."

Elder Wallace F. Toronto, formerly president of the Czecho-Slovakian Mission, offered the invocation.

President David O. McKay:

At this point we wish to express appreciation of the excellent service being rendered by our brethren who are acting as ushers, and they suggest that possibly two or three hundred more people may find seats, if you brethren and sisters will just move more closely in towards the center. Try it anyhow. It is surprising how much noise and how little room that moving in makes!

We are informed that there are in attendance this morning, eleven men and women from Denmark, leaders of Danish cooperatives, trade unions, business and social organizations. They are traveling in the United States as guests of the United States Department of Commerce. In your behalf I take pleasure in extending welcome to these, our friends from Denmark.

We welcome also the State, City, and County officials in attendance, and the leaders of the University of Utah, the Agricultural College, Brigham Young University, and other educational institutions.

The Tabernacle Choir will now sing, "Hear My Cry, O God," Brother Cornwall conducting.

The Tabernacle Choir sang an anthem, "Hear My Cry, O God."

President David O. McKay:

President J. Reuben Clark, Jr. of the First Presidency, will be our first speaker. He will be followed by Elder John Longden.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

Second Counselor in the First Presidency

I COME to you in deep humility, sensing, at least in part, my responsibility, and with a prayer in my heart, which I hope will be echoed in yours, that I may be led to say something that will tend to our upbuilding and leading us into that narrow way of life which our Heavenly Father has marked out for those who would come back into his presence. May the Lord be with us during this whole session, and the session that is to follow even as he has been with us to the present time.

As I sat here yesterday, something brought to my mind that I am the oldest member of the General Authorities. This is an honor that has been thrust upon me by time. It is an honor that any of my brethren can reach, if they will live for it. I say this, neither by way of boasting nor for the purpose of inviting sympathy, but I say it that I might make use of what I hope is some experience of value and the result of some reflection.

I have lived long enough and there has, year by year, come more into my consciousness, the knowledge that the principles of the everlasting gospel are beyond my power of rationalizing. Furthermore, I am persuaded that there is none who, unaided by the spirit of the Lord, and there is only one in this Church and in this world, who has the right to rationalize, and that is, at the present time, President David O. McKay, our prophet, seer, and revelator—I have come to feel that there is none who can safely rationalize. And I am persuaded more to that by what happened in the early Christian Church, which, lacking a head that was effective during the early centuries, drifted away because they tried to make God's plan accord with their reason, and with the reason of the pagan philosophies.

I am persuaded we must watch carefully that we do not follow along those paths. Some of the greatest heresies that have crept into the Christian religion came in through a very few men who held no real official position, mostly, but who spent their time and their talents, and they were great, in trying to rationalize the gospel of Jesus Christ. There is some evidence—these were called "schoolmen," and the results of their work "scholasticism,"—and I am persuaded that we have some tendency in that direction as among ourselves, and I hope that the people will not listen to the rationalizing of men who undertake to make God's plan conform to what they think it should be in their weak and ineffective reasonings.

I am grateful to have lived in this day and age when the gospel has been restored. I take it there is no man or woman who sits down calmly to think, in the Church or out of the Church, but more particularly out of the Church, for light has come to us who are in the Church, who does not ask himself or herself, "Where did we come from? Why are we here? Whither do we go?" We Latter-day Saints have been instructed in that, and the instruction has come to us in modern revelation.

Sunday, April 6

Third Day

The book of Abraham, found in the Pearl of Great Price, tells us of the beginning, how the Lord came down among the intelligences, and as a result of his coming down, there was a great council in heaven. The record in Abraham which precedes the account of the council, is devoted to explaining that there are inequalities in God's creation, and inequalities among the intelligences, not all are equal. The Lord said to Abraham, calling attention to this great group of intelligences, that there were among them those who were the great ones, and declared to Abraham that he was one of those who were to be rulers.

I want to read just two or three verses, and I am reading from the third chapter of Abraham:

And there stood one among them [this great group] that was like unto God, and he said unto those who were with him: We will go down, for there is space there, and we will take of these materials, and we will make an earth whereon these may dwell.

I call attention to the two succeeding verses which I shall read, because they are filled with certain great elemental truths. He continues:

And we will prove them herewith [the intelligences], to see if they will do all things whatsoever the Lord their God shall command them."

That was the purpose for creating the earth. We were all there, all participating; we thus knew of the plan from the very beginning.

And they who keep their first estate shall be added upon; and they who keep not their first estate shall not have glory in the same kingdom with those who keep their first estate; and they who keep their second estate [the estate in which we now are] shall have glory added upon their heads for ever and ever." (Abraham 3:24-26.)

Thus we know whither we came, and why we are here, and where, to what place we shall go. The whole plan is summed up in those few words.

Now since we came here to be proved, the Lord did not leave Adam in doubt about what he should do, or how he should do it, for the Lord gave to Adam the gospel, and the gospel which he gave to him included the revelation and the knowledge that there would come a Redeemer. You will recall, you who know the scriptures, the angel of the Lord asked Adam why he offered sacrifice. He said he did not know except that he had been commanded to do so. I think there is a great lesson there. They who rationalize, try to say why we do this, why we do that. Adam set the example. Why did he do it? Because the Lord had commanded it. And then the angel of the Lord explained to him the great atonement that was to come.

Now, that gospel so revealed to Adam has been in the world to a greater or less extent, sometimes less, from that time until now. It taught us what we should do, and what we should not do. We have never, when his Church has been on the earth, the Church of Christ, been in any doubt on these two points.

You will examine the Bible for some detailed statement of the principles of the gospel, up until the time of Moses, with but scant success. But if you will read carefully the book of Moses in the Pearl of Great Price, you can glean, and will glean from there the great principles of this gospel, even as they have been revealed and are taught to us today. When Moses came, we had the Ten Commandments given to us. They are the guiding star for the world civilization today. Blot out the Ten Commandments, and you have the darkness which rests upon Russia and those nations which follow her.

I call attention to the fact that the Ten Commandments, every one of them, have in them a spiritual element. There is nothing in them that, if obeyed, does not build the spirit. From then until now there has been, effective in the world, a part at least of the great gospel. Men have known what they should do, and what they should not do.

Now time will not permit me to develop what we should do. We do as we are commanded, in order that we may meet the design of our Heavenly Father, who said,

For behold, this is my work and my glory—to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man. (Moses 1:39.)

That is the purpose.

Now, I am happy, very happy, that the Lord not only told us what we should do, but has told us what we should not do. He has told us the things that will prevent our gaining this immortality and eternal life. Sad, indeed, would have been our situation, had we been merely told what we might do. But he has not left us in darkness as to what we ought not to do.

And since doing the things we ought not to do forfeits the glory which the Lord has marked out for us, and if you want to know about that read sections 76 and 88 of the Doctrine and Covenants, then we must refrain from doing the things which he has commanded us not to do, refrain from misdoings of various kinds, refrain from sin, and all transgressions. And I thought perhaps it might not be without value if I were to read to you, for you to reflect upon some of the things that we are told we ought not to do, some of the offenses we should not commit under the penalty that if we do commit them we shall not reach the full glory which the Lord has marked out for us.

And I am going to read just a few things from Paul. Paul said:

For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, Without natural affection, trucebreakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good.

Traitors, heady, highminded, lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God;

Having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof: from such turn away. . . .

But evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving, and being deceived. (II Tim. 3:2-5, 13.)

That was to Timothy. Again to Timothy:

O Timothy, keep that which is committed to thy trust, avoiding profane and vain babblings, and oppositions of science falsely so called. (I Tim. 6:20.)

Neither let us commit fornication, as some of them committed, and fell in one day three and twenty thousand. . . .

Wherefore, my dearly beloved, flee from idolatry. (I Cor. 10:8, 14.)

And that was the burden of Paul, "flee from idolatry," and leave the food offered to idols alone. We Latter-day Saints do not worship idols, we do not worship relics, we do not have shrines. I wonder sometimes, however, if there is not something of idolatry among us. I call our idolaters, worshipers of dimes and chasers of nickels.

But I say, that the things which the Gentiles sacrifice, they sacrifice to devils, and not to God: and I would not that ye should have fellowship with devils.

Ye cannot drink the cup of the Lord, and the cup of devils: ye cannot be partakers of the Lord's table, and of the table of devils. (Ibid., 10:20-21.)

Peter said:

But there were false prophets also among the people, even as there shall be false teachers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that bought them, and bring upon themselves swift destruction. (II Peter 2:1.)

These six things doth the Lord hate: yea, seven are an abomination unto him:

A proud look, a lying tongue, and hands that shed innocent blood,

An heart that deviseth wicked imaginations, feet that be swift in running to mischief,

A false witness that speaketh lies, and he that soweth discord among brethren. (Proverbs 6:16-19.)

I read these to show you that the Lord has not left us in doubt nor in darkness as to the things, some of them, that we should not do. We add these to the Ten Commandments.

Now, my brethren and sisters, salvation is ours, if we will but live for it. We shall forfeit it if we do the things which his prophets have declared unto us should not be done. Read, I repeat, sections 76 and 88 and see what the Lord has laid up for us when we live the principles of the gospel.

My brethren and sisters, he who will read needs have no doubt of the great future that lies ahead of us, he will have no doubt of the place to which we go, of the associations which will be his; he will have no doubt but that the eternities that are to come are worth in happiness and joy, all of the giving up of the pleasures, so-called, of this life, from which we are asked to refrain.

I am sure the prize is worth the restraint. And after all, all the things that we are asked to refrain from are things which lower our standards of joy, lower our standards of life, lower our respect for humanity and humanity's respect for us, and leave us debtors to the whole list of Christian virtues.

May the Lord help us to keep his commandments, help us to earn that which he has provided for us.

And I bear my testimony to you at this time that God lives, that he hears and answers prayers, for he has heard and answered mine. I bear you my testimony that Jesus is the Christ, that he is the Son of God, the Redeemer of the World, the First Fruits of the Resurrection, that through his redeeming blood all mankind shall be saved, that is to say, shall be resurrected, and that those who keep the commandments and live the life which he gave and lived will have an eternal glory in the celestial kingdom.

I bear you my witness that Joseph Smith did have a vision, that the Father and Son did visit him, that holy angels came to him; that the priesthood, the Holy Priesthood of God which had been lost to the earth for centuries was restored through him to this earth; that those who have followed him in his high and great calling of President of the Church, the Presiding High Priest of the Church, have the same rights, the same privileges, the same authority which he held, even from Joseph's time down to President McKay, who holds those rights, exercises those functions, possesses all of the spiritual powers of the priesthood which Joseph had; and that this Church will continue to go forward, that those who follow President McKay will enjoy the like privileges, the like authority, and exercise the like functions.

There is no doubt about this, my brothers and sisters, and if we could just take this into our hearts and understand it, make it part of ourselves, not a mere expression, not lip-service but service by act, the power of this people would be unlimited.

God grant that to all of us and to each of us may come this testimony, to the end that we shall continue to spread the gospel in the world, continue to build up our own Church, and for ourselves individually, and as an incident to all that, gain eternal salvation in his celestial kingdom, I humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER JOHN LONGDEN

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles

I REALIZE more than anyone else, excepting my Heavenly Father and his Son Jesus Christ, my utter weakness in and of myself to occupy this position this morning. I am sure with an interest in your faith and prayers ascending to our Heavenly Father that I may be blessed with his Spirit and we may be recipients of his blessings.

I haven't words to express adequately my appreciation and gratitude for the rich blessings which have been mine during the past six months in visiting the stakes and the wards throughout the Church. It has been an inspiration and makes me humble as I endeavor to teach the restored work of God. I would like publicly to mention here this morning that I am grateful for the words of kindness and felicitations that have been extended to me in receiving this call six months ago, by members of the Church and by many who are not members of this Church.

I am sure we have been deeply impressed, I know I have, with the dignity with which these meetings have been presided over and conducted by President McKay and those in authority. I am sure we have felt of their power and strength, as we have listened to the words of salvation. Jesus Christ, as he faced a group of Pharisees on one occasion, questioned them when he said, "What think ye of Christ?" That is a question that might be asked of us today. We can answer it in our own minds. We do not have to answer it orally or in writing. "What think ye of Christ?"

These men, our leaders, have exemplified to me their love of God and their love for their fellow men, their neighbors, and I shall always be appreciative of the rich experience which was mine in having one assignment with Elder Joseph F. Merrill the first week following the last general conference, and partaking of his spirit. I could not help realizing that here was a man scholastically trained, educated in the sciences and in the engineering field, and yet, young people, he was not swerved from the path of truth and righteousness. He was not ashamed to bear witness that Jesus was the Christ and that the Prophet Joseph Smith was and is in very deed a prophet of God. You young people can take heed of this fine example from such noble leaders, as all these men are who are guiding and directing the work of the Church and kingdom here in the earth.

I should like to have you review with me for a moment or two an incident which took place just eight years ago. A young man of this Church who had put on the uniform of his country to defend freedom and liberty and the rights of the individual found himself from his home town in Boise, Idaho, on a beachhead in Normandy, about a month before D Day. As if he had a premonition of what was going to happen, he sat there and wrote a message to a friend of his in Boise. And he said, concluding that letter,

"I should like to give you the formula, or the requisite for peace, if you please. It is nothing new, but I ask you that we rediscover the things which we already have, and that were given to us by the Master some two thousand years ago in a single sentence, when he said. "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment. And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." (Matt. 22:37-39.)

This boy made the supreme sacrifice a few days after writing this letter.

These are truths that we might well reflect upon this morning, my brethren and sisters, as we also review an incident in the New Testament. The Savior had been teaching his doctrine, the saving principles of salvation and exaltation. He was queried by a lawyer who said to him, "What good thing shall I do, that I may have eternal life?"

He was endeavoring no doubt to trap him, because the Master counter-questioned him and said, "What is written in the law? How readest thou?"

The lawyer answered, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind; and thy neighbour as thyself."

And the Savior said, "If you will do these things, thou shalt live."

Then trying to justify himself, the lawyer said, "And who is my neighbour?"

The Master then gave that glorious example of the Good Samaritan, where a certain man going from Jerusalem to Jericho had been set upon by thieves and stripped of his clothing and his material things. (And we, my brethren and sisters, can be stripped of those things which are material. They are insignificant.) And so he was left half-dead in the roadway. A priest came along, and seeing this man, even though he professed Christianity, crossed to the other side, and left him. Then a certain Levite came down the street and likewise saw this man, and he also crossed to the other side. But there was the Samaritan who beheld the condition of the man and administered to him by anointing his wounds with oil, putting him upon his own beast, and taking him to an inn, where he might receive assistance. He left funds that he might be taken care of, and advised the innkeeper that he would be back, and if it took additional funds, he would gladly see that those expenses were defrayed. Then the Master said, "Which now of these three, thinkest thou, was neighbour unto him that fell among the thieves?"

And the answer was, "He that sheweth mercy on him." And there followed the great command of the Savior, which is significant to me, "Go, and do thou likewise." (See Luke 10:25-37.)

Yes, my brethren and sisters, if we truly exemplify this teaching of the Master to love our Heavenly Father sincerely and deeply, then we will love by natural consequence our neighbor. Thus many of the conditions in the world today which are contrary to the gospel of Jesus Christ will be overcome. There would not only be peace in the world, but also we would have peace in our hearts and in our souls. And I humbly pray as I bear witness to you, my brothers and sisters, that this is true, that Jesus Christ gave us this commandment for a purpose. May we have the energy and the desire within our own hearts, and the fortitude within our souls from this moment on to put it into practice more fully in our daily lives, that we may reap the rich blessings which are predicated upon these truths. I bear witness to you that God lives, that Jesus is the Christ, that the Prophet Joseph Smith was a prophet of God, and those who have succeeded him as President of this Church down through the years to our present President David O. McKay have been men divinely inspired and called of our Heavenly Father. May we uphold and sustain them, and the revealed truths of the Lord, which are given to us by them from time to time, that we may be doers of the words, and not only listeners, I humbly pray in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

---

The Choir and congregation sang the hymn, "We Thank Thee, O God For A Prophet."

ELDER OSCAR A. KIRKHAM

Of the First Council of the Seventy

I PRAY that I may enjoy the blessings of our Heavenly Father. I have been deeply impressed, as you no doubt have, with the words we have heard. And I have been deeply impressed by something I have seen this morning. It has impressed me so sincerely that I want to give you the benefit of it. In the crowded condition of this Tabernacle, there came at the beginning of the service a mother with four children. The usher provided a blanket for the children to sit upon, and then the mother took a seat quite a way up the aisle. These children behaved themselves in splendid fashion. I thought how lovely it was for a parent to have such confidence and faith. And then I was thrilled when we all stood to sing "We Thank Thee, O God, for a Prophet" to see these children, as if they stood in the Sunday School or Primary, sing with enthusiasm. So deeply was I impressed, and so near is it to what is now in my heart to say, that I have taken the liberty to bring this illustration here from our very midst: that of a parent who had trained well and then had faith in her children.

O this is the day of our salvation—now, not in some great future time but now. This is the day of our salvation! These things that are all about us, this is our opportunity to live, and to practise the glorious teachings of the gospel.

One or two things have come to me as I see this day of salvation, things that perhaps we might do. May the Lord bless me that I may be understood in their presentation. They are very simple things. The first is to study prayerfully the word of the Lord—study prayerfully. That is the key to it—the word of the Lord.

I went to the North Jordan Stake quarterly conference not long ago. I was a little early. As I drove my car to the parking place, I saw a young man reading. As I looked closely, I saw it was the Book of Mormon that he was reading, and I walked quietly to the car, and the young man said, "Good morning, Brother Kirkham."

And then his father extended his hand toward me, "Well, is this Brother Oscar Kirkham?"

I said, "Yes."

He gave his name and said, "My son has just been reading the Book of Mormon for me. We read together the word of the Lord very often. We greatly enjoy the Book of Mormon." He was a blind man; for eight years he had been blind. And in the conversation that followed he told of the many things that he was grateful to the Lord for, one of which I recall: "I have three sons down at Brigham Young University. They have earned their way. We are a very happy family."

This is the day of our salvation. That brother will meet the tomorrow and enjoy it to the full.

This is the day that we must be mindful of, and devote our best to its many blessings. Let us study prayerfully the words of God. The great Shakespeare, when asked by Bacon, "Where did you get your inspiration for the great plays which you have written?", replied:

"From the Psalms of David." I want to read just a few lines from one of these great psalms, the word of God. These lines have stood the test of time. They are most worthy of our careful reading and meditation. Here are words that have been read by millions and set to some of the finest music in the world. You will recognize them at once but read them again. There are deep and beautiful inspirations in them. Just the first few lines:

The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want.

He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: he leadeth me beside still waters. He restoreth my soul. (Psalm 23:1-3.)

Alma in the Book of Mormon gave these words of counsel to his son Helaman:

... for I do know that whosoever shall put their trust in God shall be supported in their trials, and their troubles, and their afflictions, and shall be lifted up at the last day.

... but behold I say unto you, that by small and simple things are great things brought to pass; and small means in many instances doth confound the wise. (Alma 36:3; 37:6.)

And from a revelation given through the Prophet Joseph Smith on the day when the gospel was opened up in England to Thomas B. Marsh, these lovely words are taken, this glorious admonition:

Be thou humble; and the Lord thy God shall lead thee by the hand, and give thee answer to thy prayers. (D. & C. 112:10.)

God bless us. This one step we can take today, tomorrow, and the next day: Daily, prayerfully, read the word of God. Live and enjoy the gospel of Jesus Christ. Carry the word to a friend somewhere that his life may be blessed. Then peace shall come, and God will love and bless us. Now is the day of our salvation. May the Lord bless us, I humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER MATTHEW COWLEY

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

THE STRENGTH I need on this occasion, my brothers and sisters, must come from your faith and prayers in my behalf. I plead with you not to forsake me. It is very difficult for me to talk to a congregation which is not within the range of my vision, but this morning I would like to be oblivious to your presence here in the Tabernacle, and to speak to those of us who live way out on the periphery of our great Church. I have been impressed with a desire to do this since listening to the remarks of President Stover last night. I would like to talk to you people in Great Britain, in the Scandinavian countries, in Holland, in Germany, Czechoslovakia, France, Switzerland, Austria, Palestine, South Africa, the South American nations, those who dwell within the great Polynesian triangle in the Pacific, and to those fine people, few in number, in the far-off Orient.

I would like to say to you that I know that in your hearts this day there is a longing to be here at the hub of this great Church, a longing which you cannot realize; and in a sense I am pleased that you do not have that desire fulfilled. You are needed where you are. You know, as we know, that this world is in need of a new birth of freedom, and that a new birth of freedom cannot come without a new birth of righteousness; and that you in your far-flung areas, away from this hub of Zion, are the leaven of righteousness. This will be the seed, we pray to God, which will bear fruit and bring back to this depressed and sordid world the freedom for which we all so earnestly pray.

You have been great in your contributions to this nation and to this Church. You will read in the reported sermons delivered from this pulpit that this land is choice above all other lands. It is only choice because from your shores have come your great, your humble, and your God-fearing men and women, and they have brought from your shores the fundamental concepts which made it possible for the birth of the greatest paladium of human liberty that was ever written by the hand of man—the Constitution of the United States. And I want you to know that greater than that has been your contribution to the building up of Zion and her borders.

You in Great Britain have contributed to the leadership of this Church as has no other nation. In the veins of those who have presided over this modern kingdom, your blood courses. In Scandinavia, your contribution has been great and magnificent. You have contributed prophets, seers, and revelators. In Germany you have contributed great educators, great Saints, and to all of you in those faraway areas, I will say, great is our debt to you for that which you have contributed.

We encourage you to stay where you are because you are needed there, where the light is going out, and we say to you: Stay close together; attend your meetings regularly, even though your numbers may be limited by law to four or to two; stay together. Renew your covenants with God by partaking of the sacrament, and I tell you that you cannot have your lights darkened because this work cannot be blacked out by the legislation of man. They may close your chapels; they may deny you the right to assemble in worship; but behind your own doors you have the priesthood of God; and in your homes where the priesthood of God exists, there is Zion. And to you whose lives are committed to righteousness, I say unto you, You are Zion.

To you in South Africa, you who have never had a visit from one of the leaders of this Church, I know that your prayers will one day be answered. To you in South America who are struggling to build yourselves into a mighty people on that great continent, which is precious in the eyes of God, I say, be strong. To you in the isles of the sea,

I say unto you, were it not for you, I would not be standing here this day. To you in New Zealand, and when I speak to you I speak to all those who dwell on those beautiful isles, were it not for you, implanting within my heart as a seventeen-year-old boy your simple faith, your knowledge of God, your demonstration that the veil between God and man can be very, very thin, I wouldn't be standing here today at the hub of Zion, speaking to you way down under, in this capacity. This is not my calling alone, you good Maori people; this is yours.

You in the Hawaiian Islands who have had come to your shores missionaries, one only in his sixteenth year, who later became the leader of this Church, a noble prophet, seer, and revelator: I tell you that on that island of Maui where he and President George Q. Cannon had their great theophanies and experiences, there is a spirit and an atmosphere, which I have felt nowhere else in all the world.

To you in Tahiti, who were the first in the isles of the sea to receive the gospel in this dispensation, my heart goes out. For more than a hundred years you have been listening to this message of regeneration. You have contributed of your tithes and your offerings, your widow's mite, and not one of you has yet come to a temple of God. You are worthy. God will reward you for your faithfulness and devotion. His principles are eternal, and in his kingdom and his presence, that which you have been denied in this life will be added unto you. Great has been your contribution to the building up of this Church.

Australia, the great continent down under, there where our people are scattered over such a vast area, how great has been your contribution! During the war years, when you were without missionaries from Zion, your leadership rose up and magnificently carried on. And there sits among the councils of the Church this day one of those missionaries who went to your shores many years ago and whose testimony was strengthened by you until it became an anchor to his faith. God bless you for this great contribution.

You in faraway Japan were left alone for many years, but there had been implanted in your hearts a testimony of the restored gospel, and when the way was opened up for the missionaries to return to you, they found you, though small in number and in membership, still faithful and devoted and loyal. You at Hiroshima, where was felt the death blow of the first atom bomb, and where soon after you raised the sign which should be an ensign unto the world, not written in your language, but in the language which all nations understand, the English language, "No more Hiroshimas." If all men could write in their hearts the words of that sign which now stands over the place where that atom bomb exploded, peace would return to the earth and dwell regnant in the hearts of all men. You have contributed much to the building up of this kingdom and could you hear my words, I could tell you that there sits before me now one who is at the head of one of our great institutions of learning who spent a number of years among you, who partook of your spirit, who knows you as an industrious people, who knows that in your land, there are no weeds; and I know that much that actuates him in his great purpose in instilling within the hearts and souls of the youngsters of this community, a knowledge of things which are true, he received under your influence.

To you in faraway China I say: Keep the faith, be valiant; you will not be forgotten, and one day the missionaries will return to you. Yours is a light shining in darkness. Keep it burning, and the Father of us all will bless you.

God bless you people out in these areas of the earth. And I testify to you that much strength comes from you to us, and if you remain strong where you are, we will not become weak here at the hub. In your hours of need, we will do our best. We will keep our storehouses bulging with the necessities of life, and when you need them, the freight cars will be loaded, and the ships' bottoms will be filled, and we will send that over to you which you need. And we say to you, and I speak for all, that where there is no power, where there are no facilities, where there is no program to save you materially as well as spiritually, there is no power of God unto salvation. We will not fail you spiritually nor materially.

Sunday, April 6

Third Day

And I leave my witness with you in all of your fair lands, that I know that God loves you. He will attend you and that which you do not hear as we speak in our great conferences in Salt Lake City, you do hear in your humble cottage meetings, wherever they may be, or in your rented halls which may reek with stale tobacco smoke, and which have been cleared of empty flasks and beer bottles the night before. Those same testimonies you bear, and I believe that I can say to you in behalf of most of my brethren that that which we have experienced in life which makes it possible for us to stand here and address you as special witnesses, we received in our associations with you as young missionaries. And again to you in New Zealand I say: Because of you, because of your kindness, your humility, your patience, your great faith, I can stand here and say that I know that God lives, and because of you, I am a special witness of his Son. All power be to you, and God bless you forever, and bless us all, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER MARK E. PETERSEN

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

I AM VERY grateful, my brothers and sisters, for the opportunity of meeting with you in general conference once again. I always receive a great uplift from these conferences. I would like to express appreciation, too, for the blessing that I receive in going to your stakes Sunday after Sunday, meeting you wonderful people who strengthen my faith and my testimony and help me to accomplish the work which is assigned to me.

I am grateful beyond words for this great Church, and for the testimony I have of the divinity of this work. I am grateful for the privilege of doing a little in this Church, so that I may help to work out my salvation and help others to work out theirs.

This morning once again I would like to address the young people of the Church. I love the young people. I am thrilled with their faith and their devotion.

Last June I had the privilege of standing here and talking with the young people who came to the M.I.A. conference. I told them about a little family up in Canada, which had joined the Church, and as a result had suffered great persecution. To bolster their courage, this little family rewrote the words to a hymn they used to sing, and made one of the verses go like this:

Dare to be a Mormon;
Dare to stand alone;
Dare to have a purpose firm;
Dare to make it known!

I invited the young people who were here last June to develop the same kind of courage held by this wonderful Canadian family, and in the face of all forms of opposition to stand firm and true to the faith.

That opposition might come in various forms. It might be persecution, as in the case of that Canadian family. It might be temptations, or it might come in the form of teachings from people who would like to destroy your faith.

When those temptations or those persecutions or those false teachings come, will you have the courage to be real Latter-day Saints, to have a purpose firm, and to stand by it?

A week ago a young man told me about the trial that came to him in school. Some of the teachings he received from an instructor who had no faith appeared to have weakened the faith of this young man.

I am always sorry when I hear about teachers in our public schools who try to destroy the faith of our young people. It always grieves me to hear of instances like this. I know that the great majority of the schoolteachers, themselves, are wonderful people; they are believers in God. Many of them are devoted students of the scriptures. But unfortunately, occasionally, we find a teacher, whether in the field of philosophy or science, who seems to take it upon himself to destroy the faith of our young people.

I appeal to our young folk to realize that true science is not anti-religion, and that there is no unity among the scientists with respect to many things now being taught by some instructors who interpret them to mean that there is no God. Science has never come to a unity of understanding on that point, young people, so do not be disturbed by the godless teachings you may get in the classroom.

I would like you to know that some of the great scientists, many of them, in fact, are devoted believers in God, and some of them have declared that atheism has no place among the true scientists.

I was glad to read not long ago in This Week Magazine, an article by Dr. Arthur H. Compton, a Nobel prize winner, who said this:

Few scientific men today defend the atheistic attitude. Never yet has there been adequate refutation of the argument that design in the universe presumes an intelligence. Evidence points to the existence of a Beginner, a Creator of the universe. A physicist's studies lead him to believe this Creator to be an intelligent Being. The intelligent God has an interest in and relationship to man, and it is reasonable to assume that he would be interested in creating a being intelligent like himself.

I was glad to get a copy of a little pamphlet entitled, "A Scientist Confesses His Faith," written by Dr. Robert A. Millikan. Among other things in that little pamphlet, Dr. Millikan says:

I think you will understand me when I say that I have never known a thinking man who did not believe in God.

In speaking of the controversy between science and religion, Dr. Millikan said something else which I believe, young people, you should remember when some of these faithless, godless teachers who are trying to destroy your religion, talk to you in your classrooms. Said Dr. Millikan:

I am not going to place the whole blame for the existence of this controversy upon misguided leaders of religion. The responsibility is a divided one, for science is just as often misrepresented as is religion by men of little vision, of no appreciation of its limitations, and of imperfect comprehension of the real role which it plays in human life, by men who lose sight of all spiritual values and therefore exert an influence upon youth which is unsettling, irreligious, and essentially immoral. I am ready to admit that it is quite as much because of the existence of scientists of that type as of their counterparts in the field of religion, that the fundamental controversy has flared up today, and it is high time that scientists recognize their share of the responsibility, and take such steps as they can to remove their share of the cause.

And then Dr. Millikan quotes Lord Kelvin as saying:

I believe that the more thoroughly science is studied, the further does it take us away from anything comparable to atheism. If you think strongly enough, you will be forced by science to a belief in God, which is the foundation of all religion.

I was interested to note that Lord Kelvin's biographer said this:

It pained him [that is, Lord Kelvin], to hear crudely atheistic views expressed by young men who never had known the deeper side of existence.

Further to quote Dr. Millikan:

If I am accused of calling merely on the testimony of the past, on the thinking which preceded the advent of this twentieth century in which we live, I can bring the evidence strictly up to date by asking you to name the dozen most outstanding scientists in America today, and then showing you that the great majority of them will bear testimony, not only to the complete lack of antagonism between the fields of science and of religion, but to their own fundamental religious convictions.

Sunday, April 6

Third Day

So young people, when you are faced in your classrooms by faithless men who stand before you and try to destroy your faith, think of what these great scientists have said. Remember that even Dr. Millikan says that you can name the top scientists of the world, and he will show you that most of those men not only believe in God but also bear testimony of it.

I tell you there is nothing outmoded about faith in God, and when you go to school, you do not need to believe everything that is told you by these faithless men, whether in philosophy or science classes. You do not need to accept their evidence alone. And if you are disturbed by their persistence in teaching you these false things, just ask yourself the question: Which is the greater scientist, your instructor or Dr. Robert A. Millikan? Ask yourself, who is the greater scholar, your instructor or Lord Kelvin? Ask yourself, who is the greater authority, your instructor or Dr. Arthur H. Compton, or some of the other scientists who give the lie to the teachings of these men who say there is no God.

I shall never forget when I was in a sociology class I saw the professor, a short, bald-headed, bewhiskered man, stand there in front of our class and actually defy us to believe in God. He defied us to believe in a special creation or that man is a child of God.

I have always understood that it was against the law to discuss religion in the schools. But these men apparently claim academic privilege of some kind, academic freedom, I think they call it, in taking the right to destroy the very faith which the law prohibits us from teaching in the public schools. And when they do it, I think they are in violation of the spirit of the law, just as much as if they were teaching religion. Young people, remember the great men of the world believe in God.

We do not get our faith from science, however, and I hope you will never take the position that we must even seriously regard what science says about religion. Faith comes by revelation. No matter what science might do to promote religious faith, it can never save a man. Salvation comes through revelation and the power of God restored to men in these last days. And that revelation is available. That revelation has come. The power of God and his priesthood are now here among men, and salvation comes through them.

How much do you know about the revelations of God to man? When Brother Kirkham stood here and asked you to study the scripture prayerfully, I was glad for the way he talked. I also appeal to you to make an investigation for yourself about the gospel of Christ. I ask you to be a part of this day of study and research, by making a study and research of your own religion. Do not be ignorant of what your own Church teaches. The glory of God is intelligence; there is no salvation in ignorance.

When you go to school, you study mathematics or chemistry or some foreign language. You do not just take the teacher's word for what is given there. When you study mathematics, you actually work out the equations and know by working them out that they are true. And when you study chemistry, you learn about the truths of that subject by actually performing the experiments that are given to you, and by performing them you discover the truth of the principles you are taught.

But if you went to school all your life and did not study mathematics, you would never know anything about that subject, would you? You might go to school all your life and never learn one thing about chemistry, unless you studied chemistry. And you can be in this Church all your life, and never know what this Church teaches unless you study it.

Will you not take the advice of Brother Kirkham and study your own religion? Open the pages of the Bible; read there of the hand dealings of God to man. Read there of the life of the Savior. Learn of his teachings. He actually was here on the earth, and he taught men the principles about which you have heard today and in the preceding days of this conference.

And read the Book of Mormon. Study its pages. Know what is inside the covers of that great book. And will you study also the revelations that are given in that very small but great book, The Pearl of Great Price? It is almost unknown among many people, and yet it contains some of the greatest revelations of God to man.

And then, young people, will you really make a study of the life of the Prophet Joseph Smith and read the revelations that God gave to him? Discover Joseph Smith. Find out what motivated him. Be thrilled with the rest of us as you read the story of his going into the woods and there kneeling down and asking for light; and in response to that prayer seeing the Father and the Son standing there before him, not in some dream, but in a real experience.

And then read of his visits with the Angel Moroni, a personage who came back from the dead and ministered to Joseph Smith, gave him direction, and helped him in the production of the Book of Mormon. And then read the story of Oliver Cowdery and Joseph Smith who received ministrations from John the Baptist, and the Apostles, Peter, James, and John.

Read the story of these two men as they knelt in the Kirtland Temple in prayer, and there suddenly came before them a glorious vision. In the Kirtland Temple, here in the United States of America, stood the Savior, the Redeemer of the world. They saw him and talked with him. That one experience was worth more than all the philosophies and scientific theories that men have produced in all time. They saw him; they heard his voice; they knew that he lived; and they did not have to take anybody else's ideas nor hypotheses pertaining to it.

After his appearance there came other glorious personages, Elijah, Moses, Elias. Why, this Dispensation of the Fulness of Times is so filled with actual experiences which men have had with God, and with the testimonies of those men, that you do not need to doubt. You may know for yourself as well, because as you study these things, and as you work in the Church, if you will pray, as Brother Kirkham asked of you, then the Lord will bless you with a knowledge of the truth of these things. You will receive a testimony, and you will know for yourself that God does live, that Mormonism is true, that the Savior has a modern ministry, and that we are a part of it.

Dare to be a Mormon,
Dare to stand alone,
Dare to have a purpose firm,
Dare to make it known.

I humbly pray in Jesus' name. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Elder Mark E. Petersen, of the Council of the Twelve, has just spoken to us.

We repeat the welcome extended to our visitors, State officials, and others, as expressed at the opening of this meeting. I am pleased to note in the audience as I have looked over it, the presence of a number of educators, the State Superintendent of Schools, President and Deans from the Brigham Young University, Ricks College, members of the Church Department of Education, including Directors of Institutes and Seminaries. I wish specifically to mention and welcome President Olpin of the University of Utah, Dr. Madsen, President of the Utah State Agricultural College, the President of the Brigham Young University, the President of the

Sunday, April 6

Third Day

Branch Agricultural College, the President of Weber College. We have a feeling of fellowship with these educators.

The closing song by the Tabernacle Choir will be, "The Great Awakening."

The closing prayer will be offered by Elder Charles B. Richmond, formerly president of the Australian Mission.

Following the prayer this conference will be adjourned until two o'clock this afternoon.

The Tabernacle Choir sang "The Great Awakening," after which Elder Charles B. Richmond, formerly president of the Australian Mission, offered the benediction.

Conference adjourned until 2:00 p.m.

THIRD DAY AFTERNOON MEETING

The concluding session of the conference was held at 2:00 p.m., Sunday, April 6.

Again the various buildings were crowded to capacity: The Tabernacle, the Assembly Hall, and Barratt Hall, and again thousands assembled on the Tabernacle grounds to listen to the proceedings of the conference.

President McKay opened the meeting promptly at 2:00 p.m.

President David O. McKay:

Yesterday we received a very sweet and impressive message from a family of Saints in Hong Kong, China. They ordered to be sent to you and the Church this beautiful bouquet of flowers—the hydrangeas that you see here on the railing.

They are from the Ko family and Mrs. Joyce Aher, Chinese members formerly of Hong Kong, China. They sent it to show their love and appreciation for our having sent the missionaries to China. We thank them, and send to them through President Robertson and Sister Robertson, and others, who are laboring for their welfare, our love and blessings.

This is the concluding session of the 122nd Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. We are convened in the Tabernacle on Temple Square.

The services are being broadcast in the Assembly Hall and Barratt Hall, over a loudspeaking system and by television, and as heretofore, all the proceedings have been broadcast over the stations named in the opening session of the Conference.

The music for this session will be rendered by the Tabernacle Choir under the direction of J. Spencer Cornwall, with Alexander Schreiner at the organ. We shall begin this service by the Tabernacle Choir Men's Chorus singing, "Seek Thy God," Brother Cornwall conducting.

The opening prayer will be offered by Elder Thomas W. Richards, formerly president of the East Central States Mission.

The opening musical selection was by the Tabernacle Choir male chorus, "Seek Thy God."

Elder Thomas W. Richards, formerly president of the East Central States Mission, offered the opening prayer.

The ladies chorus of the Tabernacle Choir then sang, "My Heart Ever Faithful."

President J. Reuben Clark, Jr., Second Counselor in the First Presidency presented for the vote of the people the General Authorities, General Officers, and General Auxiliary Officers of the Church, and they were unanimously sustained by those present. The list as presented and sustained is as follows:

GENERAL AUTHORITIES OF THE CHURCH

THE FIRST PRESIDENCY

David O. McKay, Prophet, Seer, and Revelator, and President of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Stephen L. Richards, First Counselor in the First Presidency.

J. Reuben Clark, Jr. Second Counselor in the First Presidency.

PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL OF THE TWELVE APOSTLES

Joseph Fielding Smith

QUORUM OF THE TWELVE APOSTLES

Joseph Fielding Smith

John A. Widtsoe

Albert E. Bowen

Harold B. Lee

Spencer W. Kimball

Ezra Taft Benson

Mark E. Petersen

Matthew Cowley

Henry D. Moyle

Delbert Leon Stapley

Marion G. Romney

LeGrand Richards

PATRIARCH TO THE CHURCH

Eldred G. Smith

The Counselors in The First Presidency, the Twelve Apostles, and the Patriarch to the Church as Prophets, Seers and Revelators.

ASSISTANTS TO THE TWELVE

Thomas E. McKay

Clifford E. Young

Alma Sonne

George Q. Morris

Stayner Richards

ElRay L. Christiansen

John Longden

TRUSTEE-IN-TRUST

David O. McKay

As Trustee-in-Trust for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

THE FIRST COUNCIL OF THE SEVENTY

Levi Edgar Young

Antoine R. Ivins

Richard L. Evans

Oscar A. Kirkham

Seymour Dilworth Young

Milton R. Hunter

Bruce R. McConkie

PRESIDING BISHOPRIC

Joseph L. Wirthlin, Presiding Bishop

Thorpe B. Isaacson, First Counselor

Carl W. Buehner, Second Counselor

CHURCH HISTORIAN AND RECORDER

Joseph Fielding Smith, with A. William Lund as Assistant

GENERAL CONFERENCE

Third Day

CHURCH BOARD OF EDUCATION

David O. McKay
 Stephen L. Richards
 J. Reuben Clark, Jr.
 Joseph Fielding Smith
 John A. Widtsoe
 Albert E. Bowen
 Harold B. Lee
 Spencer W. Kimball

Ezra Taft Benson
 Mark E. Petersen
 Matthew Cowley
 Henry D. Moyle
 Delbert Leon Stapley
 LeGrand Richards
 Adam S. Bennion
 Franklin L. West

COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

Franklin L. West

SEMINARY SUPERVISORS

J. Karl Wood
 Joy F. Dunyon

AUDITING AND FINANCE COMMITTEE

Orval W. Adams
 Albert E. Bowen

George S. Spencer
 Harold H. Bennett

TABERNACLE CHOIR

Lester F. Hewlett, President
 J. Spencer Cornwall, Conductor
 Richard P. Condie, Assitant Conductor

ORGANISTS

Alexander Schreiner Frank W. Asper
 Roy M. Darley, Assistant

CHURCH WELFARE COMMITTEE

ADVISORS

John A. Widtsoe
 Albert E. Bowen
 Harold B. Lee
 Henry D. Moyle
 Matthew Cowley
 Delbert L. Stapley
 Marion G. Romney
 LeGrand Richards
 Thomas E. McKay

Clifford E. Young
 Alma Sonne
 John Longden
 Antoine R. Ivins
 Oscar A. Kirkham
 Joseph L. Wirthlin
 Thorpe B. Isaacson
 Carl W. Buehner

General Presidency of Relief Society

GENERAL COMMITTEE

Henry D. Moyle, Chairman
 Harold B. Lee, Managing Director
 Marion G. Romney, Assistant Managing Director

Paul C. Child
 T. C. Stayner
 Mark B. Garff
 Leonard E. Adams
 J. Leonard Love
 W. T. Lawrence

Lorenzo H. Hatch
 Walter Dansie
 LeRoy A. Wirthlin
 A. Reed Halversen
 Henry C. Jorgensen

GENERAL AUXILIARY OFFICERS OF THE CHURCH

RELIEF SOCIETY

Belle Smith Spafford, President
 Marianne Clark Sharp, First Counselor
 Velma N. Simonsen, Second Counselor
 with all members of the Board as at present constituted

DESERET SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION

George R. Hill, General Superintendent
 A. Hamer Reiser, First Assistant Superintendent
 David Lawrence McKay, Second Assistant Superintendent
 with all members of the Board as at present constituted

YOUNG MEN'S MUTUAL IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION

Elbert R. Curtis, General Superintendent
 A. Walter Stevenson, First Assistant Superintendent
 David S. King, Second Assistant Superintendent
 with all members of the Board as at present constituted

YOUNG WOMEN'S MUTUAL IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION

Bertha S. Reeder, President
 Emily H. Bennett, First Counselor
 LaRue C. Longden, Second Counselor
 with all members of the Board as at present constituted

PRIMARY ASSOCIATION

LaVern W. Parmley, President
 Arta M. Hale, First Counselor
 Florence H. Richards, Second Counselor
 with all members of the Board as at present constituted

President David O. McKay:

Elder Richards, will you take your place here in the Council.

We have just heard President J. Reuben Clark, Jr., of the First Presidency present the General Authorities, General Officers, and General Auxiliary Officers of the Church for the sustaining vote of the General Conference, and he reports all voting in the affirmative.

We shall be pleased now to hear from Elder LeGrand Richards, whom you have just sustained as a member of the Council of the Twelve.

Will Elder Buehner please take his place beside Bishop Wirthlin.

ELDER LeGRAND RICHARDS

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

I SUPPOSE only the men on this stand can know what has gone through my mind and my heart since President McKay called me to his office following the morning meeting.

I first want to tell you that I am proud that Brother Wirthlin has been called as the Presiding Bishop of this Church. He and I have labored side by side for fourteen years, and I doubt if any two men have ever been closer to each other than we have been. He is a noble character, and he is as true and loyal to this Church as any man I have ever met. If we ever questioned the instruction of the brethren, he would say, "Well, you know, if the brethren were to tell us to put the Presiding Bishop's Office up on Ensign Peak, there it would go." That is the kind of faith he has.

Sunday, April 6

Third Day

And I have learned to love Brother Isaacson so much in these few years, five and a half years, that he has served as my counselor, and I am so happy that Brother Wirthlin saw fit to choose him to stand by his side.

And I love Brother Buehner. I have only been out with him once or twice, but I think they have made a wonderful choice.

Now I want to pay a tribute of respect and an expression of deep appreciation to the employees of the Presiding Bishop's office. We have some wonderful help there, and they have been so loyal and willing to do anything we have ever asked them to do. I should like to name them, but the list would be too long. God bless them in their further responsibilities in that office.

I cannot find words to express what is in my heart. I think of what Brother Alonzo Hinckley said when he stood here in a similar position and said, "My soul is subdued." I do not know what it takes to subdue the soul of a man, but for the past two hours, I have been trying to figure out how I could measure up and not disappoint you people, and not disappoint the Lord.

How grateful I feel to the brethren, President McKay and his Counselors, that they have enough confidence in me to nominate me for this position, and that the Quorum of the Twelve, knowing that I should become one of them, sustained them in the nomination.

And I thank you for your sustaining vote here this day, and I pledge you all the strength and ability that the Lord has given me to continue to help build up his kingdom on the earth.

I thank God for the opportunities that I have enjoyed of working among you, and in his Church, the missions that I have been able to fill, and the other sundry odd jobs, because I truly love the work more than anything else in this world, and I know it is true. I could live better without the limbs of my body than I could without the testimony of the Holy Ghost and the Spirit of the Lord.

When I returned from my first mission, I was called to speak in my ward. I told the Saints that the greatest desire I had in my heart was that I might be able so to live now that I was home, that I could enjoy the same spirit I had enjoyed in the mission field. And I added, I hope the Lord will send me on a mission just often enough so I can keep that spirit. Maybe that is the reason I filled four missions. I thought when I got in the bishop's office, I would never get another, but who knows what might happen now?

I have loved my work with the youth of this Church, and with the Aaronic Priesthood, and for a time we had the girls' program. And we have lived to see some real achievement in the work with these boys. When we came into the office fourteen years ago, many a ward was still using the Melchizedek Priesthood in the administration of the sacrament. We tried to get the Standard Quorum Award going. We could hardly get a quorum to get twenty-five percent of the boys to attend sacrament meeting. And now the average for the entire Church is forty-one percent. It is not much to boast about, but it is up a long way to what it was.

And the girls were up to fifty-five percent, so they have to help the boys along a little, or the boys will not be worth their marrying a little later on when they want companions.

The growth of the Church during these fourteen years has been tremendous. I have been privileged to travel around the stakes of Zion, and it seems to me that every conference I attend, they say it is the largest crowd they have ever had. The way the brethren have been dividing the wards and stakes is indicative of the growth of the Church.

In tribute to the faithfulness and the integrity of the Latter-day Saints, I want to give you two or three figures of what has happened since we came into the Presiding Bishop's office.

The membership of the Church in that time has increased 46.1 percent.

The tithes of the Church have in the same length of time increased 653.3 percent.

Forty-six percent increase in membership, 653.3 percent increase in tithing, and then you say the Latter-day Saints do not have faith.

And then you add to that what the brethren have already reported during this conference of the gifts of the Saints that are not counted as tithes, and I say the Saints are wonderful. God bless them everywhere for their faith and for their integrity.

I never come home from a stake conference but what I say to my wife, "You just have to get out in this Church to know the power of the Lord that is in it." How anyone in the world could be familiar with the Church and what it is doing, and the spirit and the power that is in it, and think that it comes from man! He would have to be a very bright man, wouldn't he?

The fast offerings in that time increased 230 percent. There have been 65 new stakes of Zion added; 458 wards, and 73 new independent branches.

I thought these figures might interest you and show that the Saints are coming along pretty well.

Now, brothers and sisters, if there is anything that I am sure of, more than anything else in the world, it is that this work is divine. It is not the work of man. It is the work of God, the Eternal Father, and his power is in it, and I tell you in all sincerity that the Holy Ghost, the Comforter that the Savior promised to send to guide us in all truth and bring things to our remembrance, is just as much a reality to me and just as necessary for our well-being as the sun that shines in the heavens is to the seed that is sown in the ground, and the plants as they germinate and come forth. I know the power of the Holy Ghost is in this Church.

When the Lord sent his servants out in this day, he told them they were not going to be taught of men, but to teach that which he would give unto them by the power of the Holy Ghost. I do not know very much about the philosophies of men, but I know that God created the feelings of the human heart and the human soul, and I know that God has a way of bringing joy and happiness into the souls of men, when they seek after him, and when they enjoy the gift of the Holy Ghost, far beyond anything that men can purchase with their money.

I have been in homes of rich people. I have never seen any tears of joy shed because of anything they could purchase with their money, but I have been in groups of missionaries and groups of Saints, when for hours at a time there was not a dry eye there; just because the spirit of God was there. Like Nephi of old said,

He [the Lord] hath filled me with his love, even unto the consuming of my flesh. (See II Nephi 4:21.)

I feel sorry for Latter-day Saints if they have never felt that power, and that blessing, unto almost the consumption of their flesh.

That is what Paul meant when he said of those who have tasted of the power of the world to come, and then fallen away, it is impossible to renew them again to repentance, which gave me to understand that Paul understood that in this life, men could taste of the powers of the world to come. Surely that was what Paul experienced when he stood before Festus and Agrippa, there in chains as he was, and bore witness of the ministration and the appearance of the Savior to him on the way to Damascus, how he had seen the light, and heard the Voice saying,

... Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me?
... it is hard for thee to kick against the pricks. (Acts 9:4-5.)

And after Festus and Agrippa had listened, Festus said,

Paul, thou art beside thyself; much learning doth make thee mad.

Sunday, April 6

Third Day

But he said, I am not mad, most noble Festus; but speak forth the words of truth and soberness. . . .

Then Agrippa said unto Paul, Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian. (Ibid., 26:24-28.)

And there he was in chains, and his reply was something like this, "I would to God, that not only thou, but all men everywhere were as I am, save these chains that hold me bound." (See Ibid., 26:29.) That is what the spirit of the Lord does.

And you remember when Jesus appeared to the people here in America, following his resurrection, and established his Church and ministered among them, the historian says that the joys that filled their souls no pen could write nor tongue express. And that is the thing the Lord gives to those who serve him, and that is the joy of service there is in this Church.

A few weeks ago I attended a stake conference, and a stake president told me about two visits he had made to an adult member of the Aaronic Priesthood, to try to induce him to quit his tobacco so that he might receive the Melchizedek Priesthood and be prepared to go to the house of the Lord with his family; and he said he had been unsuccessful. So I said to this stake president, "Did it ever occur to you that you might have been getting the cart before the horse, so to speak? If you would go to that man and teach him the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ, and he would become converted, you would not need to ask him to quit his tobacco."

I think of the many, many homes into which I went in the mission field. I have in mind one now. The first night there, because we would not smoke with them, and we could not drink their coffee with them, the man said, "Well, I would never join your Church." Well, we did not discuss the Word of Wisdom any more for a few weeks, until we got him a little farther along. And when we got a little farther along, we did not have to ask him to lay away his coffee; it just disappeared. We did not have to ask him to quit his tobacco; it went out the window the same way.

I remember one man past his eighties, who had been in the government service, walking up and down the streets and lanes in Holland for years and years of his life, and all he had for a companion and friend was his cigars. He chewed them instead of smoking them. And when he heard the gospel and became converted, he laid them away; he used to chew a little licorice root to take the place of the cigars.

I never hear of men like the one the stake president referred to but what I think—if they were only converted to the truth, they would not have to be asked to quit their tobacco. I could not help thinking the other night when we had this demonstration of missionary work, if every member of the Church could see it and hear it, and all the youth of the Church, we would not have so much transgression.

I have another thought before I close. You remember what the Lord said to Peter, he said, . . . Simon, Simon, behold, Satan hath desired to have you, that he may sift you as wheat.

But I have prayed for thee, that thy faith fail not: and when thou art converted, strengthen thy brethren. (Luke 22:31-32.)

I tell you, brothers and sisters, the Latter-day Saints are becoming converted, and they are strengthening their brethren, but there would not be a man or a woman in all Israel who would ever buy a pound of tea or coffee or a cigar or a cigaret or tobacco, in any form, if they were only converted.

You just think of Peter. He said, "Though all the world forsake thee, I will not forsake thee." But the Savior knew that even though he thought he was converted he was not quite converted. And so you remember how the Savior said that ere the cock should crow, he would deny Jesus thrice, and he did. And he was the first one to say, "I go fishing," (see John 21:3) after the Savior was crucified, but when he had remained at Jerusalem according to the Savior's command, until he had been endowed with power from on high, the Holy Ghost, then he went forth fearless as a lion, and when he was commanded that he should no more preach Christ and him crucified in the streets of Jerusalem, he replied: "Whom shall man obey? God or man?" And you will remember that finally he rejected the privilege of being crucified with his head up, because he thought he was not worthy to be crucified as was his Lord.

Brothers and sisters, if we could just get the Holy Ghost, the testimony of the spirit in the hearts of all Latter-day Saints, we would not have any of them saying that we harp too much on the Word of Wisdom. After all, God gave it.

God help us to so live his commandments that we may enjoy his Spirit, that we may ever be found walking in his ways, and keeping his commandments, I humbly pray, in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

You have just listened to Elder LeGrand Richards, whom you have this day sustained as a member of the Council of the Twelve.

We shall now hear Bishop Joseph L. Wirthlin, and he will be followed by Brother Buehner.

This afternoon we interviewed Brother Buehner, and just as he shook hands to leave, with tears in his eyes, he said, "I hope I shall not have to speak this afternoon, shall I?"

I suppose you will, Brother Buehner.

BISHOP JOSEPH L. WIRTHLIN

Presiding Bishop of the Church

MY BELOVED brethren and sisters, I approach this task with mingled feelings this afternoon. The one difference between Bishop Richards' and my situation has been that I was asked to visit President McKay last night at five-thirty. Hence the turmoil in my soul has existed for twenty-four hours, whereas in his case, he has only had two hours of it.

I would like to say that this change has brought about an end of one of the sweetest experiences that I have ever enjoyed. The last fourteen years in association with Bishop Richards has been a great source of inspiration, joy, and happiness for me.

I found him to be a man of great faith. He has an abundance of humility, and in his heart of hearts there is a great love for all people. There has been a beaten trail to his door over the years by those who have been in distress, and they have never left his office empty-handed or without some inspiration and encouragement. And as he leaves us, we shed tears at our parting, but we are only two floors apart.

It was just fourteen years ago this month when the telephone rang in my office, and someone said, "President Grant would like to speak to you."

I answered the phone. The President said, "This is Heber J. Grant. We are reorganizing the Presiding Bishopric today. LeGrand Richards has been asked to accept the position of Presiding Bishop, with Marvin O. Ashton as his first counselor, and we are asking you to take the position of second counselor."

I was shocked, and I suggested to the President I should like to talk to him about the matter.

He then declared, "There are only thirty minutes before the next session of the conference takes up, and I want to have some rest. What do you say?"

I answered "Yes," and I have never regretted having answered yes to that call and all calls that have come to me in this great organization.

I think of Bishop Ashton today. I learned much from him. He had a heart that was full of kindness and love for all mankind. I say, "God bless his memory."

Sunday, April 6

This great honor that has come to me today I accept as a tribute reflecting back to those who made it possible for me to enjoy all the blessings of this great Church.

I think of my Swiss grandfather and grandmother, my English grandfather and grandmother, who paid a dear price from a physical point of view for the acceptance of the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ.

My Swiss grandfather came into the valleys of the mountains in destitute circumstances. He married his Swiss sweetheart and took her to a mansion out on Eighth East and South Temple—a dugout—where they lived for two years. But they were happy in the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ. In a short time my grandfather was called on a mission to Switzerland.

At that time they had three children. He accepted the call without any reservations. They had no resources except the family cow, and that was sold to the end that his traveling expenses might be paid, and my grandmother sewed salt sacks for one dollar a thousand in order to sustain her family and help her husband who was out preaching the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ.

My English grandfather was a man of great faith. As a young man he had the feeling in his heart that the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ must be upon the earth somewhere, and that the Church of Jesus Christ could be found.

So he prayed to the Lord earnestly that he might find the Church and the gospel. Finally one Saturday night before retiring, he knelt down and asked the Lord in faith whether or not the Church was upon the earth, and if it was, could he find it.

During that night he had a dream, and in the dream he saw a street in the city where he lived, and in that street there was a hall, and in that hall two men were preaching the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ.

When he awoke the next morning, he was so impressed by the dream that he got up, dressed, and went to the street, found the hall, and there found two servants of God preaching the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ. He came to this country amidst hardships. Because of the faith of these forefathers of mine, I am here, living in peaceful valleys, in the shadows of great mountains, and, above all, within hearing of the voice of the latter-day prophets.

Third Day

So I owe to them a debt—a debt of gratitude, and a debt that can best be paid in service to this great cause. I was blessed with wonderful parents, a father who taught me the importance of integrity and virtue, and a mother of great faith—a mother who taught me the lessons of the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ at her knee. She taught me the story of the visitation of the Father and the Son, and I accepted that story without any reservations.

She taught me with reference to Jesus Christ and his divine mission. She taught me to honor the men who stand at the head of this Church as prophets, seers, and revelators. And as I have lived and grown older in life, I have found that her teachings were right, that they are true, and because of her I owe to this great organization a service which I pray the Lord will give me the strength to render in such a way that those who have asked me to accept this position will be satisfied, that I will please the Lord, and please you, my brethren and sisters.

I have been blessed with a fine companion, my dear wife. I remember the time in the early years of our married life when it was a struggle, and I labored in the bishopric of my ward; she gave me encouragement. Many times I have come home from work late. My clothes were spread out, my meal was prepared. I ate it quickly, changed clothes, and visited in the ward until late at night, arose early the next morning before my children were awake, and went to work.

For days at a time I did not see my children when they were awake. So this companion of mine has the credit of rearing our family, and since I have been in the Presiding Bishopric, being away for weeks at a time, she has taken over, and has done a great service as far as my family is concerned, and I say, "God bless her."

In connection with this work I realize that I am following a great leader. I know of no man who has had at heart the welfare of the youth of this Church more than Bishop LeGrand Richards. As a bishopric, we have counseled long and often together in the endeavor to find means and ways whereby greater service might be rendered to the Aaronic Priesthood of the Church.

Bishop Richards has received the inspiration of the Lord's holy spirit, and rightly, too, for he has lived a life that qualifies him for the association of the Spirit, and out of it plans have been provided whereby both the young men and young women of the Church have been stimulated to draw nigh unto the Lord.

I have three sons. I love them with all my heart, and I have the same love for the young men over whom we now have the responsibility and privilege of presiding.

Brethren and sisters, I recognize that the Presiding Bishopric has a great responsibility in the matter of seeing that home teaching is carried on in the Church. This great priesthood assignment from the Lord makes it clear to us that it is the teacher's duty to watch over the Church always, to be with them and strengthen them, to see that there is no iniquity in the Church, backbiting, or evil speaking, to see that they attend to their meetings, and that all of them do perform their duties.

The word all has impressed upon me the fact that under no consideration are we as the teachers of the Church, as the servants of God, to teach the several and see that they do their duty, but to see that all of them do their duty.

So, with this great assignment resting upon the shoulders of the Presiding Bishopric, with the help and support of the Melchizedek and Aaronic priesthoods, we should be able to provide the teaching of the gospel in every home, to watch over every home, to be with the families of the Church, strengthening them in their faith, testimony, loyalty, and devotion to the Church.

The greatest authorities on the science of teaching indicate the best teaching is done where the listeners have an opportunity to participate in the discussion.

As of February of this year, a plan has been worked out where the ward teachers leave in each home a small slip on which is printed the topic or doctrine to be discussed during the coming month, and therewith are several scriptural references. This is an invitation to the families of this Church to prepare for the visit of the ward teachers, to know something about the subject to discuss and enter into the discussion freely. We have the hope that the teachers of the Church will be fully prepared, and as they enter each home, the family will know of the preparation made because of the intelligent discussion that will follow under the direction of the Lord's holy spirit.

I am convinced that there are many young people in this Church who have questions in their minds relative to the gospel of the Lord Jesus.

Only the other day a sixteen-year-old boy asked his father, "What is the Holy Ghost? What form is it in? What are its functions? Do the General Authorities of the Church receive revelations through the Holy Ghost?" These are all intelligent questions, and they are pertinent. They indicate that this sixteen-year-old boy was thinking.

In any Church family where the gospel principles and doctrines are studied, the questions of the youth can be answered fully and particularly in the presence of the ward teachers, the servants of God.

"The glory of God is intelligence." (D. & C. 93:36.) If we are going to have a house of God in our homes, it must be a house where we study the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ, and as we gain knowledge in our homes, knowledge of the gospel, then the glory of God will be in that home. His Spirit will be there in rich abundance. There will be the spirit of love and peace and good will. And finally when we have finished our course here in life, we have been promised a mansion on the other side, for the Christ said,

Sunday, April 6

Third Day

In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you.

. . . that where I am, ye may be also. (John 14:2-3.)

Brethren and sisters, the heavenly mansion of which the Savior speaks will depend entirely upon how much intelligence we gain in this life, and how much of it we apply in our lives from day to day. We are all candidates for the celestial kingdom, and if we gain that knowledge and apply it in our lives, there is no question but what we will inherit the celestial kingdom.

I sincerely trust that we may have an interest in your faith and prayers. For these two grand men who will stand at my side, I have deep respect and love. Bishop Isaacson has proved his worth, and when I discussed with him the matter of remaining with me as one of my counselors, he said, "I don't want you to feel that you have to take me. If there is someone else you would rather have, feel free in selecting him." Brethren and sisters, knowing him as I do, knowing his faith, knowing of the great work that he has done with the adult members of the Aaronic Priesthood, knowing something of his fine judgment, I just felt that I could not give him up.

In Brother Buehner, I recognized a great youth leader, a man who accomplished a great work as stake president, a man who has splendid judgment, a man of humility. So I feel that with these two men by my side, with an interest in your faith and prayers, and with the help of our brethren, the First Presidency, the Council of the Twelve, and the Council of the Seventy, and with the help of the Lord, we can fill the assignments that have been given to us. I couldn't help feeling the other morning, after President McKay had finished that great address, to say in my heart,

"Prophet of God, thank you for that revelation." I had that same thought in my mind last night when the three members of the Presidency stood up and counseled the great multitude of the priesthood: "Prophets of God, I thank you for your counsel. I thank you for your blessings."

Brethren and sisters, these men stand in relationship to the Church as did Peter, James, and John. They are the servants of God. The light of inspiration and revelation rests upon them mightily. That is my testimony. And what I say about them is equally true of these twelve witnesses to the world, the Twelve Apostles. Every one of these men represents the Church as Christ would have it represented. They have my love, and they have my respect, and they have my support. The same is equally true of the brethren, the Assistants to the Twelve, and members of the First Council of the Seventy, and the Patriarch to the Church. And I would have you know that we of the Presiding Bishopric are your servants. If there is anything we can do to help stake presidents and bishops with their problems, we invite them to come and counsel with us.

I pray that the Lord will bless us that we will be united in all of our endeavors, for I know that this is the Church of the Christ. I am just as sure of that as I live. The visitation of the Father and the Son to Joseph Smith is a reality to me, not a dream. And the visitation of John the Baptist, and Peter, James, and John, and all of the heavenly beings who visited the Prophet, giving him the keys wherein the gospel was restored in its simplicity and its fulness, and finally the establishment of the Church as it existed in the days of the Christ, are all realities to me. There is no question about it.

And I pray that the Lord will bless me that I shall be built up in my faith. That he will forgive me of my weaknesses, that I shall have his spirit with me always, I humbly ask in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

He to whom you have just listened is Bishop Joseph L. Wirthlin whom the General Conference has this day sustained as the Presiding Bishop of the Church.

We shall now hear a few words from Elder Carl W. Buehner, whom we introduce to you now as the Second Counselor in the Presiding Bishopric of the Church.

BISHOP CARL W. BUEHNERSecond Counselor in the Presiding Bishopric*

MY DEAR brethren and sisters, I didn't know a healthy man's legs could wobble so much in such a short distance. I am humble as I have never been humble before. I love this great Church, and I love these great men that preside over it—these men we know as the General Authorities of the Church.

I have had a great experience, and I thank them for it, in working in the organizations of the Church. I have had the privilege of being a bishop, of being a stake president, of being the chairman of a region in this great welfare program of ours, and until a few minutes ago I was a member of the general welfare committee of the Church.

I can promise this to Bishop Wirthlin and to Bishop Isaacson, that I will do everything that they ask me to do as long as I have strength to do it. I would drop in my tracks working for this great Church. I know of nothing that I love more; I know of no work that I would rather do than serve in this Church. After all, I am only a humble elder in the Church; my father and mother were converted by two Mormon elders in the old country, and when they came to this country in 1900, they brought with them two little children, and I was one of those children. Elder Thomas E. McKay, brother of our great President, said that he held me in his arms in the old country, and that my father and mother were the first ones to give him dinner when he came to that section of the country as a missionary about 1898. And if there is one thing that I will always remember about my good parents, it is that they remembered all their lives why they came to Salt Lake City. They were faithful members of this great Church. We were taught as youngsters how we should live, and if we haven't followed in their footsteps and if we haven't amounted to anything as sons and daughters of those fine parents, it is certainly not their fault.

We didn't have to be asked to go to Church; we always went with them. I remember that as a little boy it was my responsibility every Saturday to shine the shoes of my father and all my brothers—and I had a lot of brothers. We didn't do that on Sunday morning; it was all done on Saturday; and Sunday morning the shined shoes were all put on, and we all went to Church.

I'll appreciate always that I learned to work. I was the eldest of the family, and as our family grew, my parents had quite a struggle in their early days in making a livelihood. As we became old enough, we had to learn how to do something ourselves. As I grew old enough to go to high school, I loved athletics as much as I did anything else, and I finally had the privilege of playing football and basketball and baseball and other things, but I think as a freshman at high school I was the first man who left the football practice field and hurriedly took a shower and ran to my home so that I could be working in our back yard when my father came home from work. It was only a few years after, that my father accompanied me to many games and watched some of my younger brothers.

Well, it has been a great experience. I love these men, and I will do all I can in my humble and weak way to assist them in every way I can. If I have any disappointment, I think it would be in Brother Romney, that he let me leave the welfare committee just at the time when I thought I could help him a little. They trained me for a little over a year and had just given me a new position wherein I thought I might be helpful, and here today that work has been terminated, and I have a new position in the Church.

Sunday, April 6

Third Day

I love the youth of the Church, and I love you folk. I hope and pray that together we will move as a mighty army, and that this great Church will grow and prosper. My testimony is this, that as we work in this Church, so will our testimony increase, and so will the Lord love us and his blessings be with us. May it be so, I pray humbly in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

---

The Tabernacle Choir and the congregation joined in singing the hymn, "Praise To The Man Who Communed With Jehovah."

ELDER ELRAY L. CHRISTIANSEN

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles

WITH YOU, my brothers and sisters, I take great joy in sustaining, in a real sense, these valiant servants of the Lord who have proven themselves so well in the past. I sustain them in their new positions with all my heart.

After three days and two evenings of hearing the inspiring remarks of the brethren who have addressed us, I can assure you that the only comfort one gets at this stage is the comfort that comes from knowing that that which he thought to say has been more adequately expressed than he could have given it. That is my situation.

I think we have had a most wonderful conference in that there have been sobriety, seriousness of purpose, earnestness of feeling, and it seems to me, a desire on the part of everyone to accept that which has been given us. The words that were given to one of the characters by William Shakespeare seem to express my feeling:

O God, who lends me life, lend me a soul replete with thankfulness.

I hope, my brothers and sisters, that we can go from here, each of us, with "a soul replete with thankfulness" for the abundance of blessings which are ours; for the truth which we have; for the authority to act in the name of the Lord and to officiate in his name, and thereby bring salvation not alone to ourselves but to our loved ones and to all those who will heed the call.

We should be thankful, as I am sure we all are, for these inspired men who lead and direct us in such a splendid way.

If I could condense into a few words the general theme of this conference, it would be something like this: Forsake the vain practices of the world and serve the God of the land, who is Jesus Christ.

Now, if we can go from here heeding that general thought, this conference will have produced much. I have often wondered why Latter-day Saints should need to be constantly admonished when we can declare in testimony and in truth that God lives and that Jesus is the Christ, that Joseph Smith was an instrument in his hands in restoring the gospel. I have very often thought that that should be sufficient for any of us, and like Adam, as President Clark mentioned this morning, to know what our Father desires should be sufficient.

And as with Adam, so with Abraham—no matter how great the sacrifice, he did not equivocate. He did not hesitate. He did not ask questions. I hope, my brothers and sisters, that we can approach this in our faith and our determination to serve the Lord.

We are, however, exposed to the philosophies and the practices of the world, and sometimes become intrigued with certain innovations which many people would have us think are the things to do. Therefore, we need to be reminded from time to time of the things which really count, to put first things first, to love the Lord with all our hearts and with all our might and with all our strength.

We Latter-day Saints need not subscribe to those practices which are around us, of which we have been warned in this conference. We need not minimize the religious standards and ideals which have been set up for us to heed and to follow. We need not be "lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God," as Paul has said that many in the world would be in these last days. (II Tim. 3:4.) We need not and should not be "high-minded" nor self-sufficient, but as true Latter-day Saints we should walk humbly before the Lord and remember that he is our God.

If we can be humble and submissive, gentle and easily entreated, we will grow in strength and in stature and be able to meet the vicissitudes of life, and to withstand the "... evils and designs which do and will exist in the hearts of conspiring men in the last days" (D. & C. 89:4), as we have been urged to do.

There is an old Spanish proverb which says,

He that loseth wealth, loseth much. He that loseth friends, loseth more. But he that loseth spirituality, loseth all.

It seems to me that there is a depression on spiritual things. We are in a worldwide "spiritual depression." As I go about and observe the conduct of many men and women, this seems all the more convincing. And we are told ... the whole world lieth in sin, and groaneth under darkness and under the bondage of sin.

And by this you may know they are under the bondage of sin, because they come not unto me.

For whoso cometh not unto me is under the bondage of sin.

And whoso receiveth not my voice is not acquainted with my voice, and is not of me. (D. & C. 84:49-52.)

That was given to the Church in 1832. I doubt that the world has improved much since then. Maybe we have learned a lot more devilment in the intervening time. I am not sure, but it would appear that way.

Now, my brothers and sisters, through these days of confusion and of doubt, where can we find security? On what foundation can we safely build?

Speaking of the conditions that would exist in these days, a revelation through the Prophet Joseph Smith gave us this assurance:

For they that are wise and have received the truth, and have taken the Holy Spirit for their guide, and have not been deceived—verily I say unto you, they shall not be hewn down and cast into the fire, but shall abide the day.

And the earth shall be given unto them for an inheritance; and they shall multiply and wax strong, and their children shall grow up without sin unto salvation.

For the Lord shall be in their midst, and his glory shall be upon them, and he will be their king and their lawgiver. (Ibid., 45:57-59.)

How marvelous it is, my brothers and sisters, to contemplate such a blessing. It is ours if we will just heed the requirements for it. I very often turn to the scriptures when I speak to these young people, or did do in the temple, in an effort to get them to hold to the course which is good for them, giving them this admonition in the words of Helaman:

And now, my sons, remember, remember that it is upon the rock of our Redeemer, who is Christ, the Son of God, that ye must build your foundation; that when the devil shall send forth his mighty winds, yea, his shafts in the whirlwind, yea, when all his hail and his mighty storm shall beat upon you, it shall have no power over you to drag you down to the gulf of misery and endless wo, because of the rock upon which ye are built, which is a sure foundation, a foundation whereon if men build they cannot fall. (Helaman 5:12.)

I commend that to the Latter-day Saints, and to the young people particularly, who are making a struggle to establish themselves in their homes and in their lives as husbands and wives and fathers and mothers, to build upon that sure foundation, for if they do, they cannot fall, and they will not be deceived by the practices of the world.

Sunday, April 6

Third Day

I sustain the brethren with all my heart. I know that this is the work of the Lord. This is not just another Church. This is the Church of Jesus Christ, and he heads it and directs it through these instruments, these holy men in his hands.

I testify to this, and pledge my allegiance to it in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER MILTON R. HUNTER

Of the First Council of the Seventy

MY BRETHREN and sisters, I humbly ask an interest in your faith and prayers, and the Spirit of God, to direct the few things that I may say this afternoon.

I have a strong desire and feeling in my heart in this closing session of the conference to encourage the Latter-day Saints to keep God's commandments. I know that there is nothing in this world that is as important to members of the Church as to keep all the commandments. In fact, the very purpose, the reason for our existence here in mortality, is to prove us, to see if we will "... live by every word that proceedeth forth from the mouth of God." (D. & C. 84:44; 98:11.)

As President Clark pointed out in his masterful discourse this morning, Jesus Christ, at the grand council in heaven, declared that the sons and daughters of God would be placed upon this earth to "... prove them herewith, to see if they will do all things whatsoever the Lord their God shall command them." And the Master gave the promise to them that those who were successful in doing so, would "... have glory added upon their heads for ever and ever." (Abraham 3:25-26.)

In due course of time, Father Adam and Mother Eve were placed in the Garden of Eden. They partook of the forbidden fruit. The Fall came about; thus they became mortal beings. A veil was drawn over their minds, and they forgot their pre-mortal existence and the gospel by which they had previously lived in the spirit world. It was necessary, therefore, for Jehovah, even Jesus Christ, to reveal to them the gospel plan.

As time passed, time and time again, little by little, line upon line, precept upon precept, doctrine upon doctrine, the gospel was revealed by the Savior to Father Adam and Mother Eve. They rejoiced in all the revelations that they received; and faithfully they rendered obedience to the commandments of God. We read in the Pearl of Great Price:

And he [meaning the Lord] gave unto them commandments, that they should worship the Lord their God, and should offer the firstlings of their flocks, for an offering unto the Lord. And Adam was obedient unto the commandments of the Lord.

And after many days an angel of the Lord appeared unto Adam, saying: Why dost thou offer sacrifices unto the Lord? And Adam said unto him: I know not, save the Lord commanded me. (Moses 5:5-6.)

Now, some people may regard Adam's answer as one of blind obedience. I think his answer is one of the most sublime illustrations in the scripture of faithful obedience. Although he did not know the full answer why, yet he knew that God would not tell him to do anything which would be harmful for him. He was convinced that all that God commanded him to do was for his own good; therefore, he obeyed, and later on he received light.

It would be a wonderful thing if all the members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints would follow Adam's example. When the holy prophets—the First Presidency of the Church, the Twelve Apostles, God's anointed prophets, seers, and revelators upon this earth—give instructions to the Church members, if we would all render obedience to their instructions, having a firm conviction in our hearts that they speak the word of God; although we do not have the answer yet, knowing in due time we should receive light as did Father Adam.

It is my testimony that such would be the case. I am not only willing to follow the counsel of the brethren but also glad to obey God's commandments as given by his prophets.

We are told that there are two masters in this world. The one Master is Jesus Christ; the other master is Satan. The Savior himself taught:

No man can serve two masters: for either he will hate the one, and love the other; or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon. (Matt. 6:24.)

Alma, one of the great Book of Mormon prophets, taught: "For every man receiveth wages of him whom he listeth to obey." (Alma 3:27.) If we list to obey Jesus Christ, as our Master, we walk in the light: we receive peace, happiness, prosperity, and the other good blessings of this life, and in the world to come, eternal life in our Father's kingdom. If we choose to follow Lucifer as our master, we shall receive the wages which are his to bestow upon us. On certain occasions those who obey Satan receive as their wages misery, unhappiness, sorrow, and disappointment in this life; and, one might say, on all occasions, they experience the loss of their eternal rewards in the world to come.

One of the most apt illustrations of one who chose to follow Lucifer, that comes to my mind at this time, was Cain. We read in the Pearl of Great Price:

And Cain loved Satan more than God. And Satan commanded him, saying: Make an offering unto the Lord. (Moses 5:18.)

Cain was obedient to Satan's commandment. Of course, God rejected that offering, and Cain became very angry. And then the Lord appeared unto Cain, and said:

... Why art thou wroth? Why is thy countenance fallen?

If thou doest well, thou shalt be accepted. And if thou doest not well, sin lieth at the door, and Satan desireth to have thee; and except thou shalt hearken unto my commandments, I will deliver thee up, and it shall be unto thee according to his desire. (Ibid., 5:22-23.)

Yet Cain continued to love Satan more than God. He entered into a secret covenant with Satan to murder his brother Abel for gain. "And he gloried, [so the scripture says], in his wickedness." (Ibid., 5:31.) And after this terrible crime had been committed, Cain received his "wages from him whom he listeth to obey." He was cursed by the Lord with a dark skin. He lost the Holy Priesthood. He lost his eternal soul, becoming a son of perdition. Thus, he was turned over to Satan—his master.

God, our Eternal Father, is very much concerned about you and me and every one of his children here upon this earth regarding their keeping his commandments. When we keep his commandments, it gives him joy; his heart is caused to rejoice. When we disobey his commandments, his heart is caused to sorrow.

Enoch had the privilege of looking down through the stream of time in a vision. He and God were observing human history in that vision. When the scene came to the period of the time of Noah and they were observing what was taking place during that period, "God wept." (See Ibid., 7:28.) Enoch was very much surprised to see that God would weep, and asked: "Why is it that God weeps? Everything is happy in heaven, everything is peaceful there, everybody worships you." In fact, Enoch could see no reason why God should weep; but God said:

... Behold these thy brethren; they are the workmanship of mine own hands, and I gave unto them their knowledge, in the day I created them; and in the Garden of Eden, gave I unto man his agency.

Sunday, April 6

Third Day

And unto thy brethren have I said, and also given commandment, that they should love one another and that they should choose me, their Father; but behold, they are without affection, and they hate their own blood.

... among all the workmanship of mine hands there has not been so great wickedness as among thy brethren. (Ibid., 7:32-33, 36.)

Because God knew the calamity that should come to those people, he wept and declared that the heavens also wept over them.

In his conference talk, President S. Dilworth Young gave a wonderful illustration on God's concern over our obedience which I would like to repeat today.

King Saul had recently come to the throne when an invading Bedouin tribe from the Arabian desert came into the land of Canaan and molested the Israelites. The voice of the Lord came to Samuel, the prophet, commanding him to command King Saul to take his armies and go in pursuit of those invaders, the Amalekites, and destroy or kill every man, woman, and child, both male and female, and all the animals, as well as to destroy utterly all of the properties. Saul received this commandment, went in pursuit of the Amalekites but did not fully keep the commandment. He brought back the fattest and best of the sheep and cattle, as spoils of war.

God was very displeased with Saul's disobedience; and the voice of the Lord spoke to Samuel again, telling him that Saul had ... turned back from following me, and hath not performed my commandments. (1 Samuel 15:11.)

And then the Lord explained to Samuel what Saul had done. Thereupon Samuel went out to meet King Saul as he was coming home from the war. Saul heard that Samuel was coming, so probably he hid the cattle and sheep behind a hill. When those two men met, Saul greeted Samuel as the chosen prophet of God, and said: "Blessed be thou of the Lord: I have performed the commandment of the Lord" (Ibid., 15:13); stating that he had obeyed God's command in detail, having completely destroyed the Amalekites.

And Samuel said, What meaneth then this bleating of sheep in mine ears, and the lowing of oxen which I hear?

And Saul said, They have brought ... a few of the fattest and best of the cattle and sheep for the purpose of offering sacrifice unto the Lord thy God; and the rest we have utterly destroyed. (Ibid., 15:14-15.)

And then Samuel made this memorable statement:

Hath the Lord as great delight in burnt offerings and sacrifices, as in obeying the voice of the Lord? Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice, and to hearken than the fat of rams. (Ibid., 15:22.)

I would that every Latter-day Saint would place deeply that statement in his heart and keep it there forever. Furthermore, I would that every Church member from this time forward would repeat every few days: "Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice, and to hearken than the fat of rams"; and obedience is even better than the wealth of this world or than any position or honor that mortal man can bestow upon us. Best of all our attainments, therefore, is to obey the voice of God in all things and at all times.

We have been told by the holy prophets throughout the entire course of history that we will receive our blessings from the hand of God according to the obedience that we render to his holy laws. Therefore, the rewards and punishments are, one might say, based upon a scientific formula. The Lord revealed to the Prophet Joseph Smith:

There is a law, irrevocably decreed in heaven before the foundations of this world, upon which all blessings are predicated—

And when we obtain any blessing from God, it is by obedience to that law upon which it is predicated. (D. & C. 130:20-21.)

God, our Eternal Father, is not as greatly concerned over which race of people we belong to nor over the color of our skins as he is over our righteousness. He is not concerned with how wealthy we are—whether we drive a Cadillac or walk; nor does he care to which family we belong; but he is deeply concerned over what kind of hearts we have. In other words, it makes a vital difference to him whether we render obedience to his commandments or not.

The question oftentimes comes to the minds of thinking people, especially young people: "What rewards come as a result of obedience to God's commandments?" Even from the very beginning, and in every gospel dispensation, the followers of Jesus Christ have been told by the holy prophets that those who render obedience to God's commandments eventually will find rest in the presence of the Lord. There they will receive a blessed immortality. In fact, in the very beginning when Adam and his posterity began to populate the earth, the scriptures report:

And the Lord God called upon men by the Holy Ghost everywhere and commanded them that they should repent;

And as many as believed in the Son, and repented of their sins, should be saved; and as many as believed not and repented not, should be damned; and the words went forth out of the mouth of God in a firm decree; wherefore they must be fulfilled. (Moses 5:14-15.)

When you and I became members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and were baptized, we entered into a covenant to keep God's commandments—all of his commandments. We did not covenant to obey just the gospel laws that meet our convenience, the ones that we like to keep, but all of God's commandments.

When we received the Holy Melchizedek Priesthood, we received it with an oath and a covenant; and the oath and covenant is that we will live "...

by every word that proceedeth forth out of the mouth of God." (D. & C. 98:11.) Jesus Christ has promised that if we do so all that the Father has will be given unto us. (Ibid., 84:38.)

Now, what does the Father have? The greatest blessing that he has to give to his faithful children, according to his own declaration, is eternal life. (Ibid., 14:7.) Also, he has called this gift exaltation in the presence of God. Godhood is another way to describe that same gift. (Ibid., 132:19-20.) Therefore, all those who love God and keep his commandments will receive eternal life, godhood, or exaltation, which means that they will rise in the resurrection and enter into celestial glory to be made joint heirs with Jesus Christ and receive all that the Father has.

I am as thoroughly convinced as I am that I am standing here speaking to you people, in fact, I know that if you and I will keep God's commandments day by day, walking humbly with our God, with "a broken heart and a contrite spirit," as the Lord has commanded us to do (Micah 6:8; III Nephi 9:20), eventually we will hear the voice of God invite us into his presence; and, as the scriptures state, we shall "... pass by the angels, and the gods, which are set there, to ... [our] exaltation and glory in all things, ..." (D. & C. 132:19.)

If we prove faithful in keeping all of God's commandments, we shall receive a glorious celestialization, a comparable degree of happiness, joy, peace, and power with that which God, the Eternal Father, and the Only Begotten Son have attained. In other words, all that the Father has will be given unto us. This is what is in store for the faithful Saints, for those who love God and keep his commandments.

I humbly ask our Father in heaven to bless every Latter-day Saint in the world; that all of us will vow to keep God's commandments and that we will walk by every word that proceedeth forth from his mouth from this time forward. I do so, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

We have just heard Elder Milton R. Hunter, of the First Council of Seventy. We shall now be favored with remarks from Elder Harold B. Lee.

I cannot explain my stumbling over that middle initial, except it be through mental weariness, that sounds better than advancing age. Certainly, I am sure that it was not because of the lack of nearness to Brother Lee. No man is nearer to us in the commencement of the Welfare, even before Brother Lee was called to the Council of the Twelve, than Harold B. Lee, who will now speak to us.

ELDER HAROLD B. LEEOf the Council of the Twelve Apostles*

I WANT President McKay to know that it does not make any difference to me whether he remembers my name or my middle initial; all I want him to know is that I want to be counted as one who loves the Lord, and who loves our President, as our prophet, seer, and revelator.

I am sure that because of the lateness of the hour, and the desire of all of us that we have a closing word from President McKay and his blessing before this conference closes, you will indulge me the discretion of not presuming to discourse on what I may have prepared to say at this conference. Therefore, I shall close my remarks by only bearing my testimony.

With all my heart I welcome four great, noble souls to new positions among the General Authorities of this Church: LeGrand Richards, Joseph L. Wirthlin, Thorpe B. Isaacson, and Carl W. Buehner. I think there is no man or no person in this Church happier than I at the changes which have come to give these men their present positions.

I am thinking back, to that brief moment up in Idaho, when Brother LeGrand Richards lay at death's door. The doctors had thought that Brother Richards might not be with us long, because of a serious heart attack. The late Bishop Marvin O. Ashton and I drove up one Sunday afternoon to Grace, Idaho, to visit him. In a brief moment, when my hands were on the head of Brother Richards, I knew that the Lord loved him and that he was going to live. The certainty of that was as sure to me then as it is today that he was spared for a great and glorious mission.

The Prophet Moroni enjoined his people to seek for the great gift of faith in words that, as nearly as I can recall, were something like this:

... Faith is things which are hoped for and not seen; wherefore, dispute not because ye see not, for ye receive no witness until after the trial of your faith. (Ether 12:6.)

Eleven years ago this morning, I climbed the steps and took my place on the stand where Brother Richards is today. In eleven years, to the day, I have moved from the arm rest to my left, to the arm rest to my right. That call was an overpowering experience, as only these, my brethren, know, but the greatest experience was not eleven years ago today, but eleven years ago the week following today.

It was on the day or so following conference that President Stephen L. Richards, who was then chairman of the Church radio and publicity committee, approached me and said, "Brother Lee, next Sunday is Easter, and we have decided to ask you to give the Sunday night radio talk, the Easter talk, on the resurrection of the Lord." And then he added, "You understand now, of course, that as a member of the Council of the Twelve, you are to be one of the special witness of the life and mission of the Savior and of that great event." The most overwhelming of all the things that have happened to me was to begin to realize what a call into the Council of the Twelve meant.

During the days which followed, I locked myself in one of the rooms over in the Church Office building, and there I read the story of the life of the Savior. As I read the events of his life, and particularly the events leading up to and of the crucifixion, and then of the resurrection, I discovered that something was happening to me. I was not just reading a story; it seemed actually as though I was living the events; and I was reading them with a reality the like of which I had never before experienced. And when, on the Sunday night following, after I had delivered my brief talk and then declared, simply, "As one of the humblest among you, I, too, know that these things are true, that Jesus died and was resurrected for the sins of the world," I was speaking from a full heart, because I had come to know that week, with a certainty which I never before had known.

I do not know whether that experience was the realization of the workings of the gift of the more sure word of prophecy, but this much I came to know: neither the Prophet Joseph Smith, nor any who have followed since, have ever received a personal visitation from the Master, nor have they ever received a special witness of his life and mission, except they have had a supreme faith. Until that faith had been tried and tested, only then did they receive the witness.

This much more I know, and bear humble witness, that only shall I receive a greater witness than I today have, that he is, when my faith through trial shall have become the more perfect.

I know with all my soul today, God being my witness, that the Savior died, was resurrected, and lives today, so close to us in the councils of the priesthood, so near to those whom he has chosen as his mouthpieces, that if they will but open their hearts and minds, they may know with a surety that they have done his will and that he has spoken.

I am thinking today of the quoted testimony of a great defender of the faith recorded in Brother Barker's splendid priesthood lessons which we are now studying in the priesthood quorums, when he told how his testimony came. This is what that faithful Cyprian said: "Into my heart, purified of its sins, there entered a light which came from on high, and then, immediately, in a marvelous manner, I saw certainty succeed doubt."

God help us, as the sons and daughters of our Heavenly Father, that we, having the right to the witness of the Holy Ghost, shall by faith so purify our hearts that the light from on high may enter into them, that in a marvelous way we, too, may see all doubt flee in the face of absolute certainty. God help us to this end, and keep us in the faith, worthy of the testimonies of the reality of the mysteries of heaven and godliness, I humbly pray, in the name of the Lord, Jesus Christ. Amen.

PRESIDENT DAVID O. McKAY

ELDER Harold B. Lee of the Council of the Twelve has just spoken to us. His address marks the last of a series of addresses given during this conference by the General Authorities of the Church, all of whom you have heard, excepting Elder Stayner Richards, who is presiding over the British Mission. Elder Romney, as you know, gave the Church of the Air address this morning.

Thus comes to a close a great conference, another glorious opportunity that the Church has had of meeting together, making new resolutions, receiving timely instructions, and sustaining the Authorities of the Church. The weather has been most propitious. The attitude of the individuals who have assembled in the various gatherings, including the Primary conference, has been hopeful, promising, eager; that of the congregations, most responsive.

Sunday, April 6

Third Day

The messages of the General Authorities have all been timely and inspirational; the cooperation of the city officials, ready and efficient. The assistance rendered by the various radio stations, here in our own city, in Idaho, Colorado, Oregon, Nevada, Arizona, and Mexico, has been the means of permitting tens of thousands of people to hear the proceedings of this the 122nd Annual General Conference of the Church. To all we extend words of appreciation, heartfelt expressions of gratitude, for all combined to make this a most memorable occasion.

To our singers, the Brigham Young University chorus of young people, to our own Tabernacle Choir, we again express our thanks.

What a glorious opportunity we have had in listening to these two great organizations. To our choir, I believe I will express not only your gratitude but also that of the entire city and of the state, for the Salt Lake Tabernacle Choir is now an institution, not just an organization, appreciated by every member of the Church, and I think by every fair-minded citizen of our glorious state. God bless them, and those young people who came up from the Brigham Young University to sing at the opening sessions of conference.

I have much in my heart to say to you, but I will conclude by calling your attention to the words of a very practical servant of the Lord who was blessed to labor in the companionship and shadow of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. Indeed, I think he is his own brother. James said:

"What doth it profit, my brethren, though a man say he hath faith, and have not works? can faith save him?"

"If a brother or sister be naked, and destitute of daily food, And one of you say unto them, Depart in peace, be ye warmed and filled; notwithstanding ye give them not those things which are needful to the body; what doth it profit?"

"Even so faith, if it hath not works, is dead, being alone."

"Yea, a man may say, Thou hast faith, and I have works: shew me thy faith without thy works, and I will shew thee my faith by my works." (James 2:14-18.)

As we depart now to go to our various homes, let us make real the good feelings that have been aroused in our souls. Let us not permit to evaporate from our minds and feelings the good resolutions we have formed. First, let us resolve that from now on we are going to be men of higher and more sterling character, more conscious of our own weaknesses, more kind and charitable towards others' failings.

Let us resolve that we shall practise more self-control in our homes, control our tempers and our tongues, and control our feelings, that they may not wander beyond the bounds of right and purity, more seeking the presence of God, realizing how dependent we are upon him for success in this life, and particularly for success in the positions we hold in the Church.

As we leave this conference, let us not only resolve to be more loyal to our quorums but more devoted to the duties assigned us, one of which is attendance at our quorum meetings, in order to strengthen that group and increase the power of fellowship and brotherhood, more loyal to our country. This is an election year. Upon you devolves the responsibility of choosing our servants in government, for whoever is elected to preside over this country as President, as senators, members of the House of Representatives, are your servants, not your rulers. And do not be slothful on the day of election, but come out and exercise your right and privilege as a citizen of this great republic. What doth it profit though a man say he hath faith not works? Here we should prove ourselves loyal citizens.

As we depart, let us be more determined to make beautiful homes, to be kinder husbands, more thoughtful wives, more exemplary to our children, determined that in our homes we are going to have just a little taste of heaven here on this earth.

With these resolves in mind, with all my heart I say, fellow workers, God bless you. Cherish in your hearts the testimony of truth, make it as solid and as firm and unwavering as the fixed stars in the heavens. May there come into everyone's heart and in all our homes the true spirit of Christ our Redeemer, whose reality, whose inspiring guidance I know to be real.

God bless you, keep you, and magnify you in the eyes of your associates! May he make more powerful than ever before in the history of this Church the influence of this divine organization, that its potency may be felt throughout the world, and men's hearts turned to serve him as they have never before been influenced, that we may avert the terrible threatening war, and peace be established among the nations of the world, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

The Tabernacle Choir will now favor us with the Hallelujah Chorus from the "Mount of Olives."

The Closing prayer will be offered by Elder Golden H. Hale, formerly President of the Samoan Mission, after which this Conference will adjourn sine die.

The Deseret Sunday School Union Conference will convene in this building at 7 o'clock tonight. All Sunday School workers should be in attendance.

The Choir music for today's sessions, as you know, has been furnished by the Tabernacle Choir, with Elder J. Spencer Cornwall conducting, and Elder Alexander Schreiner at the organ.

The Temple Presidencies will please keep in mind our meeting following the close of this session.

The Tabernacle Choir sang The Hallelujah Chorus from "The Mount of Olives," after which the closing prayer was offered by Elder Golden H. Hale, formerly president of the Samoan Mission.

Conference adjourned sine die.

The congregational singing of the Conference was directed by J. Spencer Cornwall, Conductor, and Richard P. Condie, Assistant Conductor, of the Tabernacle Choir.

The Salt Lake Tabernacle Choir was in attendance at the Sunday Sessions, a chorus from the Tabernacle Choir was present at the Saturday afternoon meeting, and furnished musical numbers at those meetings.

The Tabernacle Choir male chorus provided the choral music for the General Priesthood meeting Saturday evening.

The Brigham Young University Combined Choruses, under the direction of Norman Gulbrandsen, Crawford Gates, and Newel Weight, furnished musical numbers at the Friday morning and afternoon meetings.

Saturday morning the singing was entirely by the congregation, Richard P. Condie conducting.

The music of the Church of the Air broadcast and also the Tabernacle Choir and Organ broadcast, Sunday morning was directed by J. Spencer Cornwall, Frank W. Asper was at the organ, and the spoken word was by Richard L. Evans.

Accompaniments and interludes on the great organ were played by Alexander W. Schreiner, Frank W. Asper, and Roy A. Darley.

Stenographic notes of the conference were taken by Frank W. Otterstrom and Joseph Anderson.

Joseph Anderson
Clerk of the Conference.

Index

	Page
Anderson, Elder Joseph .....	4
Authorities and Officers Present .....	1
Authorities and Officers Sustained .....	109
Benson, Elder Ezra Taft .....	57
Bowen, Elder Albert E. ....	63
Buehner, Bishop Carl W. ....	119
Changes in Church Officers, and Stake, Ward and Branch Organizations .....	4
Choir and Organ Broadcast .....	92
Christiansen, Elder ElRay L. ....	120
Church Auditing Committee Report .....	10
Church of the Air .....	88
Clark, President J. Reuben, Jr. ....	80
(General Priesthood Meeting)
Clark, President J. Reuben, Jr. ....	95
Clark, President J. Reuben, Jr. ....	108
(Presentation of General Authorities and Officers)
Cowley, Elder Matthew .....	102
Evans, Elder Richard L. ....	67
Evans, Elder Richard L. ....	88, 92
First Day—Afternoon Meeting .....	26
First Day—Morning Meeting .....	3
Financial Report .....	7
General Authorities and Officers Present .....	1
General Authorities, Officers and Auxiliary Officers Sustained .....	109
General Priesthood Meeting .....	76
Hunter, Elder Milton R. ....	122
Isaacson, Bishop Thorpe B. ....	16
Ivins, Elder Antoine R. ....	71
Kimball, Elder Spencer W. ....	20
Kirkham, Elder Oscar A. ....	100
Lee, Elder Harold B. ....	126
Longden, Elder John .....	98
Morris, Elder George Q. ....	30
Moyle, Elder Henry D. ....	35
McConkie, Elder Bruce R. ....	55
McKay, President David O. ....	11
Gratitude 11, Encouragement Justified 11, First: Quorums of Priesthood
11, Second: Relief Society 12, Third: Sunday School 12, Fourth, Y.M.M.I.A.
12, Fifth: Y.W.M.I.A. 12, Sixth: Primary Association 12, Genealogical Society 13, Causes of Apprehension 13, Faith in God 15.
McKay, President David O. ....	85
(General Priesthood Meeting)

McKay, President David O. ....	127
(Closing Address)
McKay, President David O. ....	3, 4, 10, 11, 24, 25, 26, 30, 41, 42, 62, 75, 76, 79, 82, 87, 94, 95, 107, 108, 111, 115, 119, 126, 129
McKay, Elder Thomas E. ....	24
Obituaries .....	6
Petersen, Elder Mark E. ....	104
Presentation of General Authorities and Officers .....	109
Priesthood Meeting, General .....	76
Richards, President Stephen L. ....	43
Richards, President Stephen L. ....	82
(General Priesthood Meeting)
Richards, Elder LeGrand .....	111
Romney, Elder Marion G. ....	88
Second Day—Afternoon Meeting .....	62
Second Day—Morning Meeting .....	42
Smith, Elder Eldred G. ....	37
Smith, President Joseph Fielding .....	26
Sonne, Elder Alma .....	74
Stapley, Elder Delbert L. ....	49
Statistical Report .....	10
Stover, Elder Walter .....	77
Sunday Morning General Conference Session .....	93
Sustaining of General Authorities, Officers and Auxiliary Officers .....	109
Tabernacle Choir and Organ Broadcast .....	92
Third Day—Afternoon Meeting .....	108
Third Day—Church of the Air .....	88
Widtsoe, Elder John A. ....	32
Wirthlin, Bishop Joseph L. ....	115
Young, Elder Clifford E. ....	68
Young, Elder Levi Edgar .....	52
Young, Elder S. Dilworth .....	28

Education Lives As Long As You Read

GOOD BOOKS

The Gospel and Man's Relationship to Deity....$1.50

B. H. Roberts

New Witness for Christ in America

Francis W. Kirkham

Volume I .....$2.75

Evidence of Divine Power in the "Coming Forth" of the Book of Mormon

Volume II .....$2.75

Attempts to prove the "Book of Mormon" man-made

Witnesses of the Book of Mormon .....$2.25

Preston Nibley

Doctrine and Covenants Commentary.....$5.00

Joseph Fielding Smith

Autobiography of Parley P. Pratt .....$3.00

Key to Theology .....$1.50

Parley P. Pratt

J. Golden Kimball .....$3.50

Claude Richards

New Witness for God—Vol. I .....$2.25

B. H. Roberts

Treasures to Share .....$2.00

Melvin Westenskow

---

ALL PRICES ARE SUBJECT TO CHANGE WITHOUT NOTICE

---

DESERET BOOK COMPANY

"THE BOOK CENTER OF THE INTERMOUNTAIN WEST"

44 East South Temple Street, Salt Lake City 10, Utah

Some Suggestions for Your Church Library

Books of lasting inspiration by our Church leaders

On the Way to Immortality and Eternal Life.....	$3.50
J. Reuben Clark
Priesthood and Church Government .....	$2.50
John A. Widtsoe
Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith .....	$3.50
Joseph Fielding Smith
Essentials in Church History .....	$4.00
Joseph Fielding Smith
Jesus the Christ—Cloth Edition .....	$3.00
James E. Talmage
Articles of Faith—Missionary Edition.....	$1.50
James E. Talmage
Gospel Standards .....	$2.25
Heber J. Grant
Sharing the Gospel With Others .....	$2.50
George Albert Smith
Word of Wisdom .....	$2.75
John A. Widtsoe
Discourses of Brigham Young .....	$3.00
Compiled by John A. Widtsoe
The Spoken Word .....	$2.00
Richard L. Evans
Unto the Hills .....	$2.00
Richard L. Evans
This Day and Always .....	$2.00
Richard L. Evans
At This Same Hour .....	$2.00
Richard L. Evans
Life of Joseph F. Smith .....	$3.00
Joseph Fielding Smith

---

ALL PRICES ARE SUBJECT TO CHANGE WITHOUT NOTICE

---

DESERET BOOK COMPANY

"THE BOOK CENTER OF THE INTERMOUNTAIN WEST"

44 East South Temple Street, Salt Lake City 10, Utah

One Hundred Twenty-third

SEMI-ANNUAL

CONFERENCE

OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST
OF LATTER-DAY SAINTS

Held in the Tabernacle
Salt Lake City, Utah

October 3, 4 and 5,
1952

With Report of Discourses

Published by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints
Salt Lake City, Utah

Printed in the United States of America

Education Lives As Long As You Read GOOD BOOKS

Life of a Great Leader .....	$2.50
Biography of President Heber J. Grant Bryant S. Hinckley
Presidents of the Church .....	$4.00
Preston Nibley New revised edition including biographical sketch of President David O. McKay
Brigham Young, the Man and His Work.....	$3.00
Preston Nibley
James H. Moyle .....	$3.50
Gordon B. Hinckley
A Marvelous Work and a Wonder .....	$1.75
LeGrand Richards
Sermons and Missionary Services of Melvin J. Ballard .....	$2.75
Bryant S. Hinckley
Prophecy and Modern Times .....	$1.75
W. Cleon Skousen
Ancient America and The Book of Mormon.....	$4.00
Milton R. Hunter and Thomas Stewart Ferguson
Outlines of Ecclesiastical History .....	$2.25
B. H. Roberts

---

ALL PRICES ARE SUBJECT TO CHANGE WITHOUT NOTICE

---

DESERET BOOK COMPANY

"THE BOOK CENTER OF THE INTERMOUNTAIN WEST"

44 East South Temple Street, Salt Lake City 10, Utah

The One Hundred Twenty-third Semi Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints

The One Hundred Twenty-third Semi Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints convened in the Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, Utah, Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, October 3, 4, 5, 1952.

The general sessions of the Conference were held at 10:00 a.m. and 2:00 p.m., Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, and the General Priesthood meeting was held in the Tabernacle Saturday evening, October 4, at 7:00.

The proceedings of the general sessions were broadcast over Station KSL, and by arrangement through KSL over the following stations:

In Utah: KSUB at Cedar City, KSVC at Richfield, KJAM at Vernal, and KVNU at Logan.

In Idaho: KGEM at Boise, KID at Idaho Falls, KJRL at Pocatello, KBIO at Burley, KEEP at Twin Falls, and KRXX at Rexburg.

In Colorado: KEXO at Grand Junction.

In Arizona: KTYL at Mesa and KVNC at Winslow (by transcription).

The proceedings of the general sessions were also televised over KSL television station, channel 5.

All general sessions of the Conference and the General Priesthood meeting were broadcast in the Assembly Hall, (Temple Square), and in Barratt Hall (60 North Main Street) over a loud-speaking system and by television. In addition, thousands who assembled on the Tabernacle grounds, listened by means of amplifying equipment. A direct wire having been provided for the purpose, between 800 and 1000 brethren holding the Priesthood assembled in the Joseph Smith Memorial Building auditorium on the Brigham Young University campus (Provo, Utah) and listened to the General Priesthood service.

President David O. McKay presided and conducted the services at each of the sessions of the Conference, including the General Priesthood meeting.

Columbia Broadcasting Company's Church of the Air service, Sunday morning, October 5 from 8:30 to 9:00, and the Tabernacle Choir and Organ broadcast from 9:00 to 9:30 are also included in this report of the Conference.

GENERAL AUTHORITIES OF THE CHURCH PRESENT

The First Presidency: David O. McKay, Stephen L. Richards, and J. Reuben Clark, Jr.

Of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles: Joseph Fielding Smith, *, **, Harold B. Lee, Spencer W. Kimball, Ezra Taft Benson, Mark E. Petersen, Matthew Cowley, Henry D. Moyle, Delbert L. Stapley, Marion G. Romney, and LeGrand Richards.

Patriarch to the Church: Eldred G. Smith.

Assistants to the Twelve Apostles: Thomas E. McKay, Clifford E. Young, Alma Sonne, George Q. Morris, Stayner Richards, ElRay L. Christiansen, and John Longden.

The First Council of the Seventy: Levi Edgar Young, Antoine R. Ivins, Richard L. Evans, Oscar A. Kirkham, Seymour Dilworth Young, Milton R. Hunter, and Bruce R. McConkie.

Presiding Bishopric: Joseph L. Wirthlin, Thorpe B. Isaacson, and Carl W. Buehner.

*John A. Widtsoe absent because of illness.

**Albert E. Bowen absent because of illness.

GENERAL CONFERENCE

GENERAL OFFICERS AND OTHER
AUTHORITIES PRESENT

Church Historian and Recorder:
Joseph Fielding Smith, and A. William Lund, Assistant.

Members of General Welfare Committee, Church Welfare Program.

Members of General Board of Education, Commissioner of Education,

Seminary Supervisors, Directors and Associate Directors of Institutes.

*Presidents of Stakes and their Counselors, Bishops of Wards and their Counselors, Presidents of Temples, Patriarchs,
High Priests, Seventies, Elders; General
Stake and Ward officers of Auxiliary Associations, etc., from all parts of the Church.*

FIRST DAY

MORNING MEETING

The Conference commenced Friday morning, October 3, at 10 o'clock, with President David O. McKay presiding and conducting the services.

The Tabernacle was crowded to capacity some time in advance of the hour for commencing the first session. In addition, the Assembly Hall just south of the Tabernacle, and Barratt Hall (60 North Main) were filled with people. Many others assembled on the Tabernacle grounds.

President David O. McKay:

Before we go on the air, we should like to say a word to you in the way of soliciting your cooperation in a very important matter.

This is a sacred edifice, made so by dedication, by the devotion and lives of the Pioneers—leaders who have gone before us. We meet here to worship the Lord. One way to express our appreciation of his presence is to appear before him in cleanliness and neatness and show that we have anticipated by our preparation meeting him in this great building.

This morning there is not a scrap of paper, not a banana peeling, not a thing that would be displeasing to the most fastidious. We should like to keep this house in that order. If any of you happen to see one sitting close to you, throw a piece of paper or litter in any way, will you kindly pick it up for him or her, because he or she is neglectful of the obligation resting upon him or her to keep this house clean and presentable to the Lord. Will you do that, each of you? You of course will not do it yourself but please see that if anybody is so forgetful as to leave on the seat or on the floor any kind of litter you pick it up. This same suggestion applies to the grounds, especially during Sunday when people feel it necessary to bring their lunch. We ask you to refrain from leaving newspapers, any kind of fruit, or any litter either in the tabernacle or on the grounds. Thank you!

This is the opening session of the One Hundred Twenty-third Semi-Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. We are convened in the Tabernacle on Temple Square in Salt Lake City, Utah.

All the General Authorities of the Church are in attendance excepting Elder A. E. Bowen of the Council of the Twelve who is recuperating from a recent serious illness, and Elder John A. Widtsoe who is indisposed this morning.

Elder Joseph Anderson is Clerk of the Conference.

These services, and all general sessions of the Conference, will be broadcast in the Assembly Hall and in Barratt Hall, 60 North Main Street, over a loud-speaking system and by television.

This service (and all other general sessions of the Conference) will be broadcast over KSL, Salt Lake City, and by arrangement through KSL, over the following stations:

In Utah:

KSUB, at Cedar City,
KSVU, at Richfield,
KJAM, at Vernal,
KVNU, at Logan.

In Idaho:

KGEM, at Boise,
KID, at Idaho Falls,
KJRL, at Pocatello, KBIO, at Burley,
KEEP, at Twin Falls,
KRXX, at Rexburg.

In Colorado:

KEXO, at Grand Junction.

In Arizona:

KTYL, at Mesa, Arizona,
KVNC, at Winslow.

We express appreciation to the stations named for their cooperation in broadcasting the proceedings of this Conference. We thank them for their service, which will continue throughout

Friday, October 3

First Day

the Conference. In the interest of time we shall not repeat this announcement at every session.

All general sessions will also be televised over KSL Television Station, Channel 5.

The singing for this morning's session will be furnished by The Relief Society Singing Mothers from the Salt Lake and Ogden areas, and from the three Sevier stakes, with Sister Florence J. Madsen conducting, and Brother Frank W. Asper at the organ.

We shall begin this session by the Relief Society Singing Mothers singing: "Seek Ye The Lord."

The opening prayer will be offered by Elder David E. Layton, Patriarch to the North Davis Stake.

The Relief Society Singing Mothers sang "Seek Ye The Lord."

Elder David E. Layton offered the opening prayer.

President David O. McKay:

The Relief Society Singing Mothers will now favor us with "These Are They Which Come Out of Great Tribulation," conducted by Sister Florence J. Madsen.

After the singing, Elder Joseph Anderson, Clerk of the Conference, will read the vital statistical data, the changes in Ward and Stake organizations, and the obituaries of the Church.

The Relief Society Singing Mothers sang "These Are They Which Come Out of Great Tribulation."

President David O. McKay:

We are pleased to inform you that the red Antherium flowers that are here in the tabernacle have been furnished by the Oahu Stake and the Oahu Stake Relief Society. These flowers were sent from Hawaii by airmail by the good people of the Oahu Stake. We thank them for their thoughtfulness and their generosity.

May I take this opportunity of expressing appreciation of the presence of prominent State officials, prominent educators and others. We bid you welcome. We note in the audience the Honorable J. Bracken Lee, Governor of the State, and his charming wife, Mrs. Lee; the Honorable Earl J. Glade, Mayor of the City, and his loyal and faithful companion; Dr. A. Ray Olpin, President of the University of Utah, and Sister Olpin; Dr. Ernest L. Wilkinson, President of the Brigham Young University, (I am not sure whether Sister Wilkinson is present); Dr. E. Allen Bateman, Superintendent of Public Instruction; Dr. M. Lynn Bennion, Superintendent of City Schools. I think I see also the President of Weber College, Dr. Dixon, and others. We bid you welcome to our service this morning.

Elder Joseph Anderson, Clerk of the Conference read the following report:

CHANGES IN CHURCH OFFICERS STAKE, WARD AND BRANCH ORGANIZATIONS SINCE APRIL CONFERENCE 1952

MISSION CHANGES AND NEW PRESIDENTS APPOINTED

A. Hamer Reiser appointed president of British Mission to succeed Stayner Richards.

Gordon M. Romney appointed president of Central American Mission.

Junius M. Sorensen appointed president of Danish Mission to succeed Edward H. Sorensen.

Badwagan Piranian released as president of Near East Mission.

Axel J. Andresen appointed president of Norwegian Mission to succeed A. Sherman Gowans.

George Stewart appointed president of the branch in Teheran, Iran, to succeed Franklin S. Harris.

Francis A. Child appointed president of Missionary Home to succeed Don B. Colton, deceased.

NEW MISSIONS ORGANIZED

Central American Mission to include Central American countries and adjacent territory as may be hereafter determined upon after visit of General Authorities.

Stake Regional Missions organized in Salt Lake County and Weber County to work among minority language groups.

NEW STAKES ORGANIZED

El Paso Stake organized September 21, 1952, from Mt. Graham Stake, Spanish American and Western States Mission.

Tacoma Stake organized September 28, 1952, from Seattle Stake and Northwestern States Mission.

STAKE PRESIDENTS CHOSEN

Leonard E. Graham, president of East Rigby Stake to succeed James E. Ririe.

Edward Vernon Turley, Sr., president of El Paso Stake.

Raymond P. Larsen, president of Morgan Stake to succeed Clarence D. Rich, deceased.

W. Loyal Hall, president of Mount Logan Stake to succeed A. George Raymond.

Vernon LeRoy Holman, president of Panguitch Stake to succeed A. Leland Elmer.

W. Fred Haynie, president of San Luis Stake to succeed John Howard Shawcroft.

Samuel Ross Fox, Sr., president of South Salt Lake Stake to succeed Axel J. Andresen.

Elvin Etherage Evans, president of Tacoma Stake.

Lyman Schenk, president of Twin Falls Stake to succeed Claude Brown, deceased.

NEW WARDS ORGANIZED

Pleasant Hills Ward, Berkeley Stake, formed by division of Walnut Creek Ward.

Boise Seventh and Eighth Wards, Boise Stake, formed by division of Boise Fifth & Third Wards.

Yale Second Ward, Bonneville Stake, formed by division of Yale Ward.

Burley Sixth Ward, Burley Stake, formed by division of Burley Third Ward.

El Paso Third Ward, El Paso Stake, formerly a branch in the Spanish American Mission.

Las Cruces Ward, El Paso Stake, formerly a branch in the Mt. Graham Stake.

Silver City Ward, El Paso Stake, formerly a branch in the Western States Mission.

Liberty Park and North Eighth Wards, Liberty Stake, formed by division of Liberty, Eighth and Ninth Wards.

Green River Second Ward, Lyman Stake, formed by division of Green River Ward.

Mesa Twelfth Ward, Maricopa Stake, formerly Superstition Mountain Branch.

Mesa Fourteenth Ward, Maricopa Stake, formed by division of Mesa Fourth Ward.

Las Vegas Fourth and Fifth Wards, Moapa Stake, formed by division of Las Vegas Third and Charleston Wards.

Beacon Second and Indian Hills Wards, Monument Park Stake, formed by division of Beacon and Hillside Wards.

Murray Eighth Ward, Murray Stake, formed by division of Murray Third Ward.

Idaho Falls Thirteenth Ward, North Idaho Falls Stake, formed by division of Idaho Falls Seventh Ward.

Wahiawa Ward, Oahu Stake, formerly Wahiawa Branch.

Ogden Thirty-Fifth and Thirty-Sixth Wards, Ogden Stake, formed by division of Ogden Thirtieth and Twentieth Wards.

Spanish Fork Seventh Ward, Palmyra Stake, formed by division of Spanish Fork Fourth Ward.

Phoenix Eighth and Ninth Wards, Phoenix Stake, formed by division of Phoenix Third and Second Wards and Sunnyslope Branch.

Rexburg Fifth and Sixth Wards, Rexburg Stake, formed by division of Rexburg Second and Fourth Wards.

Rose Park Third Ward, Riverside

Friday, October 3

First Day

Stake, formed by division of Rose Park Ward.

Del Paso Ward, Sacramento Stake, formed by division of Arcade Ward.

San Bernardino Third Ward, San Bernardino Stake, formed by division of San Bernardino First, Second and Colton Wards.

North Hollywood Second Ward, San Fernando Stake, formed by division of North Hollywood and San Fernando Wards.

Chula Vista Ward, San Diego Stake, formerly Chula Vista Branch.

El Cajon Ward, San Diego Stake, formed by division of La Mesa Ward.

Edgemont Second, Grand View Second and Oak Hills Second Wards, Sharon Stake, formed by division of Edgemont, Grand View and Oak Hills Wards.

Snowflake Second Ward, Snowflake Stake, formed by division of Snowflake Ward.

Kirkland Ward, Seattle Stake, formerly Kirkland Branch.

Puyallup Ward, Tacoma Stake, formerly Puyallup Branch.

Sunset Second Ward, West Utah Stake, formed by division of Sunset Ward.

Valley View Second Ward, Wilford Stake, formed by division of Valley View Ward.

WARDS AND BRANCHES TRANSFERRED

El Paso First, Second and Las Cruces Wards, El Paso Stake, formerly of Mt. Graham Stake.

Glenns Ferry Ward, Gooding Stake, formerly of Boise Stake.

Kirkland Ward, Monroe, Sedro-Woolley, and Oak Harbor Branches, Seattle Stake, formerly of Northwestern States Mission.

Puyallup Ward, Auburn and Buckley Branches, Tacoma Stake, formerly of Northwestern States Mission.

Tacoma First, Tacoma Second, Tacoma Third, Olympia, and Bremerton Wards; Shelton, Port Orchard, and Chehalis Branches, formerly of Seattle Stake.

WARD NAME CHANGED

LaCanada Ward, Glendale Stake, formerly LaCrescenta Ward.

Second Ward, Liberty Stake, formerly North Second Ward.

Westwood Ward, Los Angeles Stake, formerly Beverly Hills Ward.

Las Vegas Sixth Ward, Moapa Stake, formerly Charleston Ward.

Auwaiolimu Ward, Oahu Stake, formerly Papakolea Ward.

Rose Park First Ward, Riverside Stake, formerly Rose Park Ward.

Rose Park Second Ward, Riverside Stake, formerly Rosedale Ward.

Edgemont First Ward, Sharon Stake, formerly Edgemont Ward.

Grand View First Ward, Sharon Stake, formerly Grand View Ward.

Oak Hills First Ward, Sharon Stake, formerly Oak Hills Ward.

INDEPENDENT BRANCHES ORGANIZED

Grand View Branch, Boise Stake, formed by division of Mountain Home Branch.

Park Forest Branch, Chicago Stake, formed by division of University and Logan Square Wards.

Alamogordo, Carlsbad and Deming Branches, El Paso Stake, formerly of Western States Mission.

Farson Branch, Lyman Stake, formerly dependent branch on Rock Springs Second Ward.

Black Canyon Branch, Nampa Stake, formerly dependent branch on Caldwell Ward.

Avondale Branch, Phoenix Stake, formed by division of Capitol Ward.

Spring Coulee Branch, Taylor Stake.

WARDS AND INDEPENDENT BRANCHES DISCONTINUED

Kelly-Toponce and Hatch Wards, Idaho Stake, membership transferred to Chesterfield Ward.

Littlefield Ward, Moapa Stake, membership transferred to Mesquite Ward.

Clear Creek and Scofield Branches, North Carbon Stake, made dependent branches on Castle Gate Ward.

Standardville Branch, North Carbon Stake, membership transferred to Storrs Ward.

Kakaako Ward, Oahu Stake, membership transferred to Papakolea Ward.

Hercules Ward, Oquirrh Stake, made dependent branch on Spencer Ward.

Sunnyslope Branch, Phoenix Stake, membership transferred to Phoenix Eighth Ward.

Mammoth Branch, Santaquin-Tintic Stake, membership transferred to Eureka Ward.

THOSE WHO HAVE PASSED AWAY

Bishop David A. Smith, former member of the Presiding Bishopric.

Don B. Colton, president of Missionary Home.

Mark Austin, one of the first members of the General Church Welfare Committee.

Clarence D. Rich, president of Morag Stake.

Claude Brown, president of Twin Falls Stake.

PRESIDENT DAVID O. McKAY

EARLY in June, while sitting with his Brethren of the Council of the Twelve in the regular weekly meeting, Elder A. E. Bowen was suddenly stricken. For several weeks he and his loved ones and his Brethren thought that he was very close to the brink. He has sufficiently recovered to be able to move about in his room, but as previously announced, he is unable to be present with us this morning.

He is a great soul, a stalwart leader, a man who possesses a brilliant mind and true nobility of soul. We extend to Brother Bowen this morning the love and confidence of the Church. If he is listening in, we wish him to know that we love him, admire him; he has our united faith and prayers for a complete recovery. We need him.

We are sorry that Elder John A. Widtsoe is unable to be with us this morning. We hope that the Lord will bless him sufficiently to join us later in the sessions of this conference.

We noted in the prayer offered an appeal for the love of mankind, that we might love one another, and through that love contribute to the establishment of peace. That was the great message heralded by the heavenly hosts at the birth of the Savior, when they declared, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men." (Luke 2:14.)

To proclaim that message to an indifferent world is the divine responsibility of the Church. What greater message could there be? What more commendable effort to supply the greatest need could be put forth?

Somewhere I have read that in one of the important institutions of medicine and healing in this country, there hangs this significant sign: "Never say a discouraging word while in this sanitarium."

If encouragement is good for the sick and ailing, it is also helpful to those who are normally healthy. As encouragement affects individuals, so it is helpful to organizations, and this morning as I stand before you I have nothing but a wish, a prayer, that we might say something encouraging to the members of the Church of Jesus Christ.

I am grateful this morning, as I bid you welcome to this, the one hundred and twenty-third semi-annual conference, that I can give you an encouraging report of conditions in the Church as a whole, and that it is to the best of its ability and resources trying to discharge its obligations in preaching the Restored Gospel.

You will be pleased to hear a few items, even though I must mention them but briefly, which justify my saying that the Church is moving steadily forward on its destined course.

There are now 195 organized stakes in the Church, an increase of over one hundred percent in the last twenty-five years. There are forty-three missions in the Church, including the new Central American Mission. Since we last met in general conference, there have been approximately thirty-eight new wards and seventeen new branches organized, making a total number of wards and independent branches of 1736.

Friday, October 3

During 1952, up to September 30, there were eighty-four new chapels dedicated. Before the end of the year there will be fifty-three more ready for dedication, making a total of 137 chapels dedicated or ready for dedication. Besides this, there are 389 chapels in process of construction, fifty of which are in missions.

At present, you will be pleased to know that there are, in European missions, Church-owned chapels as follows: British, thirty-nine (you former missionaries to Britain will be pleased to know that); Danish, five; East German, six; Finland, ten (after only five years of organization); French, three; Netherlands, eight; Norwegian, three; Swedish, fourteen; Swiss-Austrian, three; West German, eight; making a total of ninety-nine places owned by the Church in the European missions.

The Liahona College in Tonga is now completed. The Church sent most of the materials for its erection. Local people did much of the work and did not charge a shilling for their labor. The Church sent a supervisor, a plumbing supervisor, and an electrician.

The Pesega School in Samoa is nearing completion. The Mesepa School on the island of Tutuila in Samoa will soon be under construction. The money for it is already appropriated. We contemplate building fifteen chapels in American and British Samoa in the near future.

Plans are now being drawn for the New Zealand College of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, which will replace the Maori College, which was destroyed by an earthquake in 1932.

Money has been appropriated for construction of five chapels in New Zealand. One is now being completed in Auckland, one in Glenn Huon, Tasmania, where the members are cutting their own timber and doing a good deal of the work themselves.

The Church owns two acres in Rarotonga, and money is already appropriated for a new chapel on those islands. It was only recently that the mission was opened in Rarotonga, under New Zealand, however.

A building is also under construction at Ipswich, Australia.

All these buildings, with the Los Angeles Temple now under construction, the Relief Society building, announced yesterday, mission expenses, ward and stake expenses, require the expenditure of vast sums of money furnished by the tithes of the Church.

To your credit and blessing, be it said that the tithes of the people this year are 21.7 percent higher than last year, and last year exceeded the year before.

Fast offerings also show an even greater percent of increase.

Missionaries—September 30, 1952, there were in the foreign missionary fields, 3854 missionaries.

There were 5525 in the stakes of Zion, making a total of 9379 missionaries.

That number speaks volumes in praise of the young men and young women, and particularly of the fathers and mothers, in their interest in the great mission of the Church to proclaim the message of peace and good will to all peoples of the world.

In addition to this, there were in the state of Utah, September 25, 1952, with a Church population of 488,863—9379 Latter-day Saint boys in the military service, or 1.9 percent of the total Church population of the state, as compared with 1.3 percent of the total non-member population of the state, or .6 of 1 percent more Latter-day Saint boys, as based upon our total population, than for non-members. These figures should assuage the rabidness of some prejudiced agitators who have falsely accused our young men of not discharging their share of the responsibilities of the military activity of our government.

In one agricultural town I know, with a population of fewer than 700, ten young men are in the mission field, and forty-five in the Armed Forces of our country.

To you loyal members whose unselfish labors have contributed to this favorable progress of the Church, we can say, as in Hebrews, that God will not "... forget your work and labour of love, which ye have shewed toward his name, in that ye have ministered to the saints, and do minister." (Hebrews 6:10.)

In keeping with this theme of encouragement, brief reference to some incidents connected with our recent tour of the European missions may not be amiss.

On May 29, 1952, accompanied by Sister McKay, our son David L. as secretary, and Mildred, his wife, I left for an important mission to Europe. The details of that special mission, pertaining to temples, I shall probably have to postpone until the general annual conference in April. Further than what has already been announced, I think we cannot further comment this morning.

It is marvelous how much closer in time modern transportation has brought the nations of the earth; for example, Sunday, June 1, at 6:30 in the evening, we left New York. Owing to unfavorable weather conditions the plane landed at Sydney, Newfoundland, instead of at Gander, and did not leave for Glasgow until Monday, 1:30 a.m. After fifteen hours of actual flying time we were at Prestwich Airport, in Ayrshire, Scotland, and later that same evening, Monday, we participated in the dedication of the first chapel owned by the Church in Scotland.

Wednesday, the evening following, we dedicated another in Edinburgh, and there is a suitable place in Aberdeen now ready for dedication. For these and other chapels in Great Britain, much credit is due to Elder Stayner Richards, who, with his associates, has manifested wisdom and economy.

If I followed my inclinations, I would pause here long enough to tell you of my feelings upon returning to Scotland after twenty-nine years, my latest visit, and after fifty-four years since I labored there as a young, unmarried missionary. What a flood of memories filled my soul as a Mrs. O'Hara, living in the apartment, graciously showed Sister McKay, two elders, and me the old 52 Holmhead St., headquarters of the Scottish Conference fifty-four years ago!

I should also like to tell you how humbly grateful, and with what a mel-low heart later I stood with Ray by my side in the little bedroom in Wales, in which Jeannette Evans, my sainted mother, was born over a hundred years ago! But these are personal experiences, of little or no interest to you members.

Beginning at the meetings in Scotland, we carried your love and greetings to the approximately 40,000 members of the Church in the ten missions in the nine European countries. June 2 to July 4, they met us in Europe to receive your greetings. July 26; you met us here to receive their thanks. And, now, this morning, I express again to you in Zion the loving greetings of the Saints in Europe.

One impression I received right at first, and it became more and more pronounced as we came in contact with people in all walks of life, was a more tolerant attitude than I experienced a half century ago. It was a joy to mingle with intelligent people radiating a spirit of good will.

One beneficial result of the tour was a keener realization on the part of members of the Church that they are not detached entities but are in reality part of the Church as a whole. Nearness in time contributed to this feeling; but more especially their meeting one of the Sunday School general superintendency and a member of the general board of the Primary, hearing incidents, items of instructions that happened or were given, as it were, but a week before, awakened a sense of belonging that was satisfying and encouraging.

It was truly a joy and inspiration to see the loyalty, feel the responsiveness of members of the Church in every mission. There was no exception. To greet those eagerly expectant, graciously warm-hearted people gave a joy almost inexpressible. We sensed to a small degree, at least, the truth of the saying: "To love and to be loved is the greatest happiness of existence." This was especially true so far as our love for those faithful people is concerned.

At the opening of my remarks I said that at the Savior's birth, there were heralded the fundamental virtues that constitute the world's greatest need: first, believing in and glorifying our Father in heaven; and second, peace, good will, instead of contention and strife.

Here let me emphasize that good will includes benevolence, a virtue that may be experienced by persons in all stations of life. It is "confined to no rank, no degree of education or power; the poor may be benevolent as well as the rich; the unlearned as well as the learned; the weak as well as the strong." Every-one may not be beneficent, but all may be benevolent. Good will includes kindness, a virtue everyone can show, and one which everyone is pleased to receive.

"So many gods, so many creeds,
So many paths that wind and wind,
While just the art of being kind,
Is all the sad world needs."

(Ella Wheeler Wilcox.)

I should be remiss, indeed downright unappreciative, if I did not take this occasion to refer appreciatively to the instances of good will manifested on this recent presidential tour of the European missions.

Our Church knows full well what it means to be misjudged, scoffed at, and persecuted. It can appreciate, too, in full value, tolerance, a sense of justice and fair play.

The mission presidencies, missionaries, members of the Church and their friends were most gracious in their greetings and manifestations of deference to the office of President. Everywhere their welcome was most generous. To all these we shall ever be grateful for the distances they traveled, for the sacrifices they made, their whole-hearted, radiant gladness—all of which contributed so much to the success of a very important mission.

I wish to refer especially to the good will shown by prominent businessmen, representatives of the press, hotel managers, government officials, and others whose interest and courtesy were shown without reserve.

It is unwise to attempt to mention a few because of possibly showing partiality, and failing to mention deserving persons, but I will name the Honorable Charles U. Bay, American Ambassador to Norway, who not only by proffered words, "If there is anything I can do for you, please let me know," but by direct action with the assistance of his undersecretary, Leon Cowles, rendered invaluable service in securing rightful privileges for our missionaries in Norway. He said that was his first official act as ambassador. Other ambassadors and ministers, including Hon. John M. Cabot to Finland and Hon. James C. Dunn to Paris, were equally considerate in proffering help and co-operation. Their courtesy was unbounded.

Others who did not hesitate to inconvenience themselves to render favors were Colonel Tooler and General Wood of the American Army, through whose graciousness, at the intercession of presidents Stayner Richards and A. Hamer Reiser, special favors were granted to us visitors in attendance at the Queen's Garden Festival at Buckingham Palace.

I express appreciatively, also, the service rendered by the Consul General J. D. van Karnebeek, here in the United States, whom we happened to meet before we left, who arranged for a most cordial visit to Her Majesty, Juliana, Queen of the Netherlands.

I wish to mention President Juho K. Paasikivi of Finland, a dignified, princely gentleman, conference with whom, accompanied by President Henry A. Matis, I shall remember with satisfaction and pleasure. For exceptional courtesies shown by Mr. Sholz, the manager of the Palace Hotel near The Hague, Holland; to passport officials at Berlin, who, finding us without visas, gave special consideration and, out of courtesy, obtained the necessary papers without delay, we mention with appreciation.

We are mindful also of the outstanding consideration shown by eleven policemen who were at the Mercedes Palast, at North Berlin, where an audience of 2600 persons crowded to overcapacity that large theater. How their favorable attitude stood out in contrast with the action of police when some members of the Twelve and others who sit here in this audience this morning were hunted and arrested a half century ago!

I wish to name appreciatively, also, Elder William Zimmer, and two real estate men, Mr. Hans Jordi and Mr. Hermann Schulters, who assisted President Samuel E. Bringham in choosing prospective temple sites in Switzerland.

For his having built suitable houses in Berlin, I wish to commend President Walter Stover, whose devotion to the German Saints, whose generosity and wisdom will ever be cherished by the thousands whom he blessed. Included in this expression of appreciation are officials who aided President James L. Barker and President Golden L. Woolf in their securing official recognition of the Church in France.

An outstanding feature of our visit in Germany was the attendance of American servicemen. In the West German Mission they gathered as groups that compared favorably with our groups of missionaries. And how proud we were of these choice young men and women, a credit to their parents, to the Church, and to our nation! Whether they participated in concerts or attended to the details of conference, greeted strangers, or looked after the welfare of Saints and investigators, their ability was manifest, their dignity commendable, their sincerity in their work most outstanding.

Well, fellow workers, all these and a hundred other instances that I might name are evidences of friendship and good will that will contribute to the peaceful relationships that should exist between this country and the free countries of Europe.

I am sorry that I must now sound a note of discouragement, for I cannot refrain from referring to the attitude of selfishness, distrust, and hatred manifest by the leaders of communism. How they hate America, and everything American!

They are not only anti-American—they are anti-Christian! By every means possible—newspapers, billboards, documents, radio—they try to inculcate hatred in the hearts of the youth.

By the Iron Curtain they scheme to keep Western influence out of Russia and prevent Russians from becoming acquainted with the West. A distinguished sociologist once wrote, note: "Give us the young, and we will create a new mind and a new earth in a single generation." That is one aim and purpose of the Russian dictators.

Largely because of their nefarious schemes and false ideologies, civilization is facing a crisis. We are in a period of uncertainty, of international tension. Not infrequently we see manifest among people a feeling of impending crisis in which is fear that the atom bomb might bring to a tragic end present-day civilization. Articles in the daily press and in magazines give unmistakable evidence of this condition. You can pick up any magazine or any daily paper and read such headings as: "Our Democracy in Danger." "Communism—a New Kind of Threat." "Foundations of our Republic Threatened." "The World Cannot Exist Half Slave and Half Free."

These are some I have taken at random.

"Look at the map of the world," says one. "The Iron Curtain of Soviet communist control has descended over vast areas and over hundreds of millions of people in Eastern Europe and in Asia, since the close of World War II. It is unspeakably tragic that this should be the case, when it need not have been." Another: "We Face a Spiritual War." Then, last: "Red China's War Against God."

Well, brethren and sisters, let us not despair. A man's comfort in time of ease and peace, as well as in time of stress and danger, will be found in the depths of the sincerity of his belief in an Eternal Being, his faith in the gospel of Jesus Christ. Commenting upon the need of sincerity, of faith, one writer once asked this vital question, and I give it to you:

"Is Jesus to you only a legendary figure in history; a saint to be painted in the stained glass of church windows; a sort of sacred fairy not to be approached and hardly to be mentioned by name, or is he still what he was when he was in the flesh—a reality, a man of like passions with ourselves, an elder brother, a guide, a counselor, a comforter, a great voice calling to us out of the past to live nobly, to die bravely, and keep up our courage to the last?"

Notwithstanding the threatening conditions that exist in the world today, members of the Church of Jesus Christ need not fear nor be perturbed, if they will but anchor their souls in unchanging truths revealed by our Father in heaven.

If communists attempt to poison the minds of youth, as they are doing, against God the Father and his Beloved Son, if they pervert the principles of the gospel of peace and good will, if they continue to sow the seeds of mistrust and hatred, we must more guardedly protect our youth, more militantly instruct them in the principles of the Restored Gospel, implant in their hearts the truth that "... there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved." (Acts 4:12.) Let them realize that without Christ the world is lost.

James L. Gordon is right when he declares: "A cathedral without windows, a face without eyes, a field without flowers, an alphabet without vowels, a continent without rivers, a night without stars, and a sky without a sun—these would not be so sad as a world without a Bible or a soul without Christ."

He is the Son of "God in the Highest" as proclaimed by the heavenly hosts, the Prince of Peace, our Elder Brother, our Redeemer, our Savior.

"His purposes fail not, neither are there any who can stay his hand.

"From eternity to eternity he is the same, and his years never fail.

"For thus saith the Lord—I, the Lord, am merciful and gracious unto those who fear me, and delight to honor those who serve me in righteousness and truth unto the end.

"Great shall be their reward and eternal shall be their glory." (D. & C. 76:3-6.)

God bless the Church. It is worldwide. Its influence should be felt by all nations. May his spirit influence men everywhere and incline their hearts toward good will and peace. May divine guidance be given the priesthood, who hold the responsibility of declaring to an indifferent world the restoration of the gospel of Jesus Christ, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Elder Stayner Richards will now address us.

ELDER STAYNER RICHARDS

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles

MY DEAR brethren and sisters, it is a very great privilege and pleasure to be back home again, to be with loved ones and friends and to partake of such a wonderful influence as we have at this conference today.

I have not made an accurate count, but from appearances the number present here today is a little larger than we have in our district conferences in the mission field, but the spirit is just the same.

A year ago I had the opportunity of reporting missionary labors of Sister Richards and myself in the British Mission. Consequently I will not duplicate this morning but only mention a few subsequent happenings. Since that time King George VI has passed on; his charming and lovely daughter Elizabeth, designated "the Second," now reigns over that wonderful country and in that great empire. She is greatly loved by all the people because of her Christian virtues and her charming way. The Socialist Party was defeated at the polls, and the Conservative Party under the leadership of that great statesman Winston Churchill was elected into office.

The affairs of the British Mission are going forward in a fine way under the very able direction of President and Sister A. Hamer Reiser. Our missionary experiences there constituted one of the richest times in the lives of Sister Richards and myself. We did so appreciate the association of the fine missionaries, and we rejoice in the great development that came to them. We shall ever be grateful to them for their support, their cooperation, and their hard labors, and we rejoice in the way the Lord blessed them.

We were thrilled, also, my brethren and sisters, in witnessing what the gospel of Jesus Christ does to those people who accept it, how it changes their lives from confusion, uncertainty into lives of knowledge of our Father in heaven, his purposes for his children here upon the earth, and especially for the feeling of security that it gives them and the hope of salvation and eternal life.

Oh, it was wonderful to see how happy it made these converts that accepted the truth, and in their homes the conditions changed, there was more love between husband and wife and between parents and children.

Of course, the crowning event in our missionary labors was the visit of President David O. McKay and his lovely wife, his son Lawrence and his wife, Mildred. I trust that President McKay will let me fill in just a few items in connection with that trip pertaining primarily to himself, as he would be too modest to mention them himself, and I shall mention them not just as a matter of interest, but in order that we might all be benefited by the virtues, the exemplary life of this man, our leader.

Between the time of the two dedications in Scotland that he has mentioned, the President with the members of his party and about twenty-six missionaries, took a bus tour up through the highlands of Scotland, around the Cossacks, around Loch Lomond, Ben Lomond, the Brig o' the Kirk, and those places made famous by the immortal words of Sir Walter Scott and other great poets. During that tour the President delighted all of us by reciting from memory stanza after stanza from The Lady of the Lake and other great poems. He made us all feel that as visitors in foreign lands, we should study the history of those countries; we should learn of their poets and their artists and secure all of the cultural value that we could from such visits.

But there was something else, that may not be new to you who know President McKay well, but I observed that throughout that tour, as we got on and off the bus, as we walked to one place of interest and back to the bus, there was in President McKay the perfect gentleman; always as he approached a lady he removed his hat, not to show that beautiful stand of white hair that he has, but through the natural tendency on his part always to be courteous.

And then I observed how kind and considerate he was of his lovely companion, how he was always there to assist her on the bus, to help her off the bus, to make sure that she had a proper vantage place in looking over the different sights, and then I observed that he always seemed happiest and most contented when he was sitting next to her.

Friday, October 3

First Day

They have been married for over a half a century, but time and the passing of years has not dimmed that great love that he has for his wife, not only love, but the tendency also to show every consideration and every attention, as he did during his courting years.

Oh, my brethren, what a lesson there is for us, and may I say just a word to you here, (I hope the wives will not listen,) I want to ask of you, how long since you told your wife you loved her? How long since you brought a few flowers home to her, and her alone? How long since you brought some candy? How long since, after a fine meal, you have told her what a fine meal that was, and after the meal, and you were going out, have you stated, "I am going out blockteaching, but when I get back, I want to take you down to the corner for an ice cream soda?"

Oh, these are just little things, but how they would add to the joy and the happiness around home. I remember hearing of one of our brethren, when his neighbor spoke to him after the wife had served them a fine meal and said, "My, you have a fine wife." He said, "Yes, I almost told her so, once, and I think before I die, I will tell her."

Now, brethren, in this connection, may I say if you are going to reform along this line, make it gradual. Anything else might be a shock and might be misunderstood by the womenfolk.

I cannot refrain from telling about another party that called on his neighbor and friend, who happened to be the judge in the town, and said, "Judge, Liz and I are going to break up; I have come to see you about a divorce." He said, "Jim, I wonder if you have always been kind to your wife?" And then he gave him certain instructions, and he said, "Now, you come back tomorrow and tell me how you get along." Jim returned the next day, and the judge said, "Well, how did you do?" "Terrible," he said; "I did just as you told me. I took a fine box of candy, a lovely bunch of flowers home to my wife, and just as soon as I presented them, I gave her a big kiss, and she broke out crying, and she said, 'This has been a terrible day. This morning the cat got run over; at noon the grocer failed to send the groceries; and now here, tonight, you come home dead drunk.'"

I would like to mention another observation that was certainly pleasing to me, as I am sure it was to the other members that witnessed it. At the close of the dedicatory services in Glasgow and Edinburgh, the President took time to greet all of those people. There were three hundred in one place and two hundred in another. As they came up to him, especially the little children, extended presents to him, one of them giving a present of an automobile robe with the McKay colors on it, and others gave flowers to the ladies. The President's extending appreciation and blessing those little tots was beautiful.

And then, as some of the older ones who knew him fifty-four years ago when he was on his first mission came up and took his hand and placed their heads on his breast and sobbed with joy, you could see and feel the fulness and devotion of his friendship and his love for those people. Oh, indeed, he was a great friend to them.

I am wondering if all of us who have friends would not like to take a lesson from that and manifest a deeper degree of friendship, let their joys be our joys, and let their sorrows be our sorrows.

We left Edinburgh 10:20 at night to take the sleeper train for London. As we left that station, there were those faithful Saints, headed by one of the missionaries with such a fine voice, who sang in Scotch, rendering songs of farewell to the party. When we went into our compartment, there were boxes of delicious lunch, the finest that could be prepared, which were extended by the Relief Society sisters of that Edinburgh Branch.

On arriving at London, early in the morning, we were met by the missionaries and a number of the Saints of the London District. Flowers were showered upon the womenfolk; greetings were extended in the most cordial way to the President. The next few days, of course, were very busy days for him in London.

On Sunday, it happened to be the London district conference, and though we pleaded with the President to spend the forenoon in visiting some of the great churches, such as St. Paul, Westminster, and so forth, in order to spare him from speaking so many times, he chose to attend the priesthood meeting, the afternoon and the evening meetings. There were approximately eleven hundred people present at the meetings.

Wonderful sermons were given by him, and after those meetings, he consented to shake hands with all of those people. Have you ever tried greeting individually so many people? When you realize also that the shake of President McKay's hand is not just a limpid affair, but it is a firm grasp with a greeting from that big heart, you can realize the fatiguing, and the exhausting effect of that ordeal.

May I make another observation? President McKay enjoys that Christian virtue that was taught so many times by the Master himself, of losing one's self for others, in forgetting self and thinking of others, that he gave no thought to what that exhausting experience was doing to him. He only realized that it was giving joy and happiness to these people, many of whom had come into the Church because this Church has apostles and prophets. And now they were to greet the prophet of the Lord, the President of the Church. You can imagine the thrill that came to them as they did so.

And as the little children came, the little tots, they received an equal greeting. Like the Master of old, who said, "Suffer little children, to come unto me: for of such is the kingdom of heaven," (Matt. 19:14) so this great man gave these little kiddies a handshake and a blessing, and they went on their way.

President McKay performed this act in the nine other European missions.

He will never know the amount of good that came to these people and the thrill that they received. They will tell it to their children, and their children's children.

In one place it was reported that the people were shaking hands with the other Saints with the left hands, and when they asked why, they said, "Why, this hand shook hands with a prophet of the Lord, and we are holding that hand closed." One good sister, who was sick and could not be there, sent her two little daughters and said, "You go shake hands with the President, then come back and shake hands with me, and then I will be all right again."

I know, brothers and sisters, that you agree with me, that this was the greatest event that ever happened to the European missions.

And speaking of the President, I think, myself, that his going from here across the ocean to those countries, constituted also a visit of one of the greatest Americans. President McKay went over there with a message of peace, based on righteousness, and according to the principles of the gospel, thereby, creating the only peace that would be lasting.

And now, what about those that accompanied him? Sister McKay and the others were urged to speak at practically all of the meetings, and she spoke in such a lovely way, such a motherly and tender way, especially to the sisters, to the Relief Society workers. The son, Lawrence, who is one of the general superintendency of the Deseret Sunday School Union of the Church, spoke especially to the children, giving them a message from the Sunday School, and then his lovely wife, Mildred, a member of the general board of the Primary, gave her message to the Primary workers and the Primary children. Therefore, the causes of these three organizations were greatly enhanced.

Another thing should be noted. President McKay and his party traveled as a unit and for those people to see a Mormon family journeying together, manifesting such love, and consideration for each other, exemplifying such a perfect family life, did much to create better homes and better family lives through all those countries.

Friday, October 3

First Day

So I want to pay my humble tribute to President McKay, and to tell you, as I know that you realize, that he exemplifies the Christian principles as taught by the Master, the virtues that he taught his disciples in a finer way and more completely than any man that I know of. And as he loved all the people, all the people loved him.

He is such a kind man. May I mention just one more personal thing? Just before he departed at 11:40 at night from Prestwich to come home, imagine his being so kind as to call up Sister Richards and myself, just common people, down in London, over the long distance telephone, and realizing that we were to sail the next day, to wish us bon voyage. We will never forget that kindly act on his part.

And now, in closing, my brethren and sisters, if we love this man, I think there is only one way to show it, and that is for us to take a lesson from his example and live the gospel of Jesus Christ in every detail, day by day, and that will please him more than anything we can do.

God bless you all, I pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER HAROLD B. LEE

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

DURING the few moments that I occupy this position, I seek humbly for an interest in your faith and in your prayers.

I should like to take, if I may, a text from an inspired prayer that I heard President McKay offer several months ago in a sacred place, the burden of which was a plea for increased faith in God, which would act as an effective weapon against the great anti-Christ, to which he has made reference this morning, communism and dictatorship in nations, and sin and wickedness in men.

In this expression, President McKay is in full harmony with that which has been taught by all the prophets from the beginning. The Prophet Ether, 2400 years before Christ, gave expression to that same thought, when he said:

Wherefore, whoso believeth in God might with surety hope for a better world, yea, even a place at the right hand of God, which hope cometh of faith, maketh an anchor to the souls of men, which would make them sure and steadfast, always abounding in good works. (Ether 12:4.)

The Apostle Paul impressed that same great truth in a negative way, when he said,

If in this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men most miserable. (I Cor. 15:19.)

Some while ago, I chanced to be visiting on the campus of Stanford University, and there on the walls of the memorial chapel, I saw written by some unnamed writer, what might be considered as a translation of that great truth into a formula of action, as a guide through life. This is what was written there:

An eternal existence in prospect converts the whole of your present state into a mere vestibule of the grand court of life, an introduction, a beginning of what is to follow, an entrance into that interminable extent of being which is the true life of man. The best thoughts, affections, and aspirations of a truly great soul are fixed upon the infinitude of immortality. Destined, as such a great soul is, for immortality, finds all that is not eternal, too short, and all that is not infinite, too small.

As I pondered the meaning of those words and the prayer of President McKay and the expressions of the prophets regarding the need for faith, faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, I remembered what the Lord said in the earliest commandment which was given to parents,

And again, inasmuch as parents have children in Zion, or in any of her stakes which are organized, that teach them not to understand the doctrine of repentance, faith in Christ the Son of the living God, . . . the sin be upon the heads of the parents. (D. & C. 68:25.)

And in that same inspired declaration by revelation, the Lord gave us what we might style as a five-point program by which parents could teach faith. First, he said, their children were to be baptized when they had reached the age of accountability at eight years; second, they were to be taught to pray; third, they were to be taught to walk uprightly before the Lord; fourth, they were to be taught to keep the Sabbath day holy; and fifth, they were to be schooled not to be idle, either in the Church, or in their private lives.

All parents who have followed that formula and have so taught their children have reaped the reward of an increased faith in their family, which has stood and will yet stand the test of the difficulties into which their children would yet go.

I read not long ago, an expression from a young man in military service, in which the young man gave expression to a faith in which undoubtedly he had been schooled by his parents who had followed that instruction of the Master to parents to which I have already made reference. This was the boyish way our boy in the military service declared his faith:

We thank God that we have discovered that he will always help us to give our very best, and that we must take more and more from him in order that we will not let him down. We have learned that he will not fail us and that we must not fail him. Thank God for God.

Someone has aptly said, "You do not need to train a boy to be vicious, just let him go without training and he will be vicious of his own accord." In that regard, I remember what Thomas Carlyle wrote:

A man without a purpose in life is as a ship without a rudder, a waif, a nothing, a nobody. Have a purpose in life, and having it, throw such strength of muscle and brain into your work as God has given you.

The youth who has been trained in a Latter-day Saint home has been schooled in what that purpose of life should be, "to gain immortality" and "to gain eternal life." Having such a purpose, our boys in military service, anchored by an abiding faith in the omnipotent power of the Almighty, might have written as a fitting epitaph to them as was written upon the tombs of early American heroes,

So nigh is grandeur to the dust,
So near is God to man,
When duty whispers Lo, thou must,
The youth replies I can.

It is fruitless for us to try to enjoin youth to be chaste by merely doing as the military have sought to teach, merely because of a fear of a loathsome disease if he is unchaste, or as some of our schools would teach, merely because of the harm that would thus come to society as a result of his unchastity.

Paul, the Apostle, taught that we must be girded with a girdle of truth. What truth shall we be girded with? Our loins must be girded with the truth that every handsome young man and every beautiful young girl is winged for a heavenly flight.

How can we enjoin an alcoholic against his debauchery except we lift the shades of a darkened soul and let him glimpse himself as a son of God, as a child of God. The program of the Alcoholics Anonymous starts with two basic pillars: first, that the individual has a desire to quit the use of alcohol, and second, he must have faith in a Supreme Being. Any program upon any other basis intended to reclaim those in the vices of that vicious habit is doomed to failure.

In short, we might well say, echoing that which was written on the Stanford Memorial Chapel walls, we must teach all such, and our youth, that "all that is not eternal is too short, and all that is not infinite is too small."

Friday, October 3

First Day

Patriotism and loyalty in defense of the Constitution of the United States is constantly enjoined upon us. President McKay again this morning has made reference to the cause of liberty in his remarks. To be effective in such teaching, we must begin by inspiring in each heart the faith that the Constitution of the United States was written by inspired men whom God raised up for that very purpose.

It was Joseph Smith who has been quoted as having said that the time would come when the Constitution would hang as by a thread, and at that time when it was thus in jeopardy, the elders of this Church would step forth and save it from destruction.

Why the elders of this Church? Would it be sacrilegious to paraphrase the words of the Apostle Peter, and say that the Constitution of the United States could be saved by the elders of this Church because this Church and this Church alone has the words of eternal life? We alone know by revelation as to how the Constitution came into being, and we, alone, know by revelation the destiny of this nation. The preservation of "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness" can be guaranteed upon no other basis than upon a sincere faith and testimony of the divinity of these teachings.

We have been given a serious responsibility in preaching the gospel of Jesus Christ to the world. We have been told in meetings even preceding this conference session that we must reach out to the minorities. Our beloved Brother Kimball has urged others and has devoted his energies for the past few years to an energetic, proselyting urge among the Lamanites and those minority groups. But again, how can these backward children of our Heavenly Father be brought out of darkness and uplifted?

A lifelong missionary, in commenting about his work among the Indians out in the west Shoshone reservation in Nevada, in reporting on various uplift activities to reclaim the Indians, made this very significant statement:

All their zealous and patient efforts to help the Indian's plight tend to become another crutch that the Indian depends upon. Those Indians who have become progressively independent apparently have become so because of personal and religious factors wholly unrelated to the government program.

What he is saying, in effect, is that the building of faith and testimony in these people is fundamental and essential to this redemption.

It was that same thing the Master said about the reclaiming of the Jews, when he declared that the fulness of my gospel shall be preached unto them;

And they shall believe in me, that I am Jesus Christ, the Son of God, and shall praise the Father in my name.

Then will the fathers gather them together again and give unto them Jerusalem for the land of their inheritance. (See III Nephi 20:30-31.)

It has been a great source of satisfaction to me to know that those who are now planning for a standard missionary program to be given out to the stakes and to the missions of the Church, have laid as the foundation for the introduction of the gospel to those who are our friends and investigators, a testimony of the divinity of the Godhead of this world, and a belief in the mission of Jesus Christ, as the Son of the Living God.

To me the reclaiming of the souls of men must be begun by building faith, just as the parents in this dispensation were taught must be so in their own families. In the early rise of his Church, the Lord said,

Wherefore, I the Lord, knowing the calamity which should come upon the inhabitants of the earth, called upon my servant Joseph Smith, Jun., and spake unto him from heaven, and gave him commandments;

And also gave commandments to others, that they should proclaim these things unto the world. . . .

That faith also might increase in the earth. (D. & C. 1:17-18, 21.)

God grant that the gospel of Jesus Christ might be so effectively taught in all the world that the prayer of our President might be fully realized, that it might be an effective weapon against communism and dictatorship in nations, and sin and wickedness in men, I humbly pray, in the name of the Lord, Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER ANTOINE R. IVINS

Of the First Council of the Seventy

MY BELOVED brethren and sisters: I suppose I shall never approach this task without a keen sense of dependence upon your faith and prayers in my behalf, that perchance what I shall say may be helpful to some of us.

I feel to bear my testimony to you today that I know that we are engaged in the work of God, that Jesus Christ is the Son of God, and that this work was established by him.

When he was talking to his disciples, he said to Peter, "... upon this rock I will build my church," (Matt. 16:18) and as I read that scripture, I believe that rock refers to a revealed testimony that Jesus Christ is the Son of God. I fancy that if I should ask you who are before me today who can bear testimony to that fact through the Spirit of God to stand upon your feet, you would all arise. That testimony, brethren and sisters, is what should impel us to service in the Church in the interest of our fellows. A true testimony that we are engaged in the work of God should bring us to love our fellows, for love has been given by Christ as the great and underlying principle of the gospel—that we should love God and love our fellows as we love ourselves. The Savior said, "If ye love me, ye will keep my commandments," (see John 14:15) and I gather from that, that loyalty to this testimony which we profess must impel us to the service which indicates our love for our fellows.

I told you before of the statement which I once read which says there are

President David O. McKay:

Our concluding speaker at this session, will be Elder Antoine R. Ivins, of the First Council of Seventy. The speaker to whom you have just listened, is Elder Harold B. Lee, of the Council of the Twelve. Following Elder Ivins' address, the Relief Society Singing Mothers will favor us with, "In His Steps I Will Ever Follow."

more uncultivated souls in the world than lands. Our purpose is to cultivate our souls and the souls of other people. Work in behalf of others implies sacrifice, and sacrifice brings forth the blessings of heaven. That service is manifest in many ways. I have in mind the early missionary work of the Church, in which men, President Young, for instance, undertook a mission while on a sickbed. I have in mind the service of men who had come by very tedious and difficult toil to these valleys, and who turned around and returned to the east, pushing a handcart from here all the way to the Mississippi River. I have in mind the service of my grandfather who began in his seventeenth year, I believe it was, as a missionary for the Church, and died without ever relinquishing that service. In it all I can see a certain element of sacrifice in the interest of others. We look upon it as sacrifice. In its ultimate result, it proves to be not a sacrifice but a blessing. But we are in the habit of looking at those things as sacrifice, and when we serve in that spirit, and that spirit only, there is a development and a growth and an enlargement of the soul of man that come no other way.

Now as members of the Church, we testify that God lives and that Christ is his Son, also that the priesthood has been restored, that through that priesthood the Church has been reorganized in this modern day, and that certain of us hold that priesthood—the priesthood, which they have to translate, according to Brother Clissold, into Japanese, as the power of God. We hold it, and we give that testimony to the world without embarrassment but deliberately. Now if we have that testimony, and if we are loyal to that testimony, it implies that we should serve the Church. There are many ways of doing this—some in the missionary service, some in local presidencies, some as ward teachers, and many other ways. But today I have in mind another type of service. It is a service which impels one to reach down into his pocket, to take therefrom the funds that he might use for his pleasure and satisfaction and bestow them upon the Church for its benevolent purposes. Regardless of the wonderful progress that has been made in the payment of tithes and offerings as indicated today, and in appreciation of the tremendous contributions that have made possible the building program of the Church, my mind goes back to a time when the Church had no funds. My wife's grandfather told me of an occasion when he and a brother companion had the privilege of contributing nine hundred dollars to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints to pay the interest on its obligations, which the tithes of the Church up to that time had not equalled. Now we have made tremendous progress, but we are still far from the goal that is set in that respect. In the twenty-one years that I have ministered with you and unto you as a member of the First Council of the Seventy, I have never yet visited a stake where every officer of the stake and the wards claimed to pay what we used to call a full tithing, which we now call a tithing. We have a distance to travel yet if we would meet that goal.

Friday, October 3

First Day

Now the scripture says, "Try me and see if I won't open the windows of heaven and pour out a blessing upon you which you can scarcely contain." (See Mal. 3:10.) What type of blessing is it you look forward to when you pay your tithes and offerings? Is it a temporal blessing, an increase in your flocks and herds that you have in mind?

And if you do, I suggest that perhaps it is a selfish motive, and self-interest never develops and enlarges the soul of man. I have seen men who were so selfish that they couldn't see their own interest and welfare. Now if we are going to test our Father in heaven, what are we going to expect when we make our tithes and offerings? I suggest that the blessings that are to come to us from that service should be expected to be spiritual blessings, the enlargement of the soul, the increase of our love toward God and our fellow men, an increased determination to serve and the peace and the happiness that come into the heart of man upon the realization that he has done his bit to help the Church in its work of redemption, for that is our great purpose. There could be no greater blessing, it seems to me, come into your hearts than peace and tranquility, devotion to the work of God, and love for your fellow men. I myself believe that that is the type of blessing that comes not only from the payment of tithes and offerings, but also from service in all the other branches of the Church.

May God give us a determination to serve him, with that single purpose, the purpose of blessing others, let happen to us what may come as a result of that service. God bless you. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

President Antoine R. Ivins of the First Council of the Seventy has just spoken.

This notice we will read for the benefit of the brethren who will speak this afternoon, and at future sessions:

"The effect of the great messages of the brethren over the TV sets throughout the great audience would be greatly enhanced by an occasional direct look into the TV camera, thus bringing a personal touch and contact between viewer and speaker. I have been viewing the morning session in the Assembly Hall."

It is signed by the Bishop of the LaCienega Ward, Santa Monica Stake. He has come a long way and should be sitting down here in front. Evidently the seats weren't reserved for them, as we promised.

The Relief Society Singing Mothers will now favor us with "In His Steps I'll Ever Follow," conducted by Sister Florence J. Madsen. The closing prayer will be offered by Elder W. Creed Haymond, formerly president of the Northern States Mission, after which this Conference will stand adjourned until 2 o'clock this afternoon. The proceedings of that session will be broadcast over KSL of Salt Lake City and by arrangement through KSL over the stations named at the beginning of the session. The Conference will also be broadcast over television station channel five.

Any important messages or calls that have come to us for persons supposed to be in attendance at the Conference will be announced at the dismissal of the meeting over the loud speaking system on the grounds. Similar messages coming in will likewise be broadcast at the close of each general session without further notice. Please listen carefully to these announcements.

The music of this session has been furnished by the Relief Society Singing Mothers from the Salt Lake and Ogden areas and from the three Sevier Stakes. Notice the wide area from which these sisters come.

With appreciation and admiration in our hearts, we commend Sister Madsen and the Singing Mothers for the inspirational music rendered in this service. It is a wonderful achievement to assemble these groups and have them sing so harmoniously and inspiringly. God bless our Singing Mothers.

---

Singing by the Relief Society Singing Mothers, "In His Steps I Will Ever Follow."

Elder W. Creed Haymond offered the closing prayer.

Conference adjourned until 2:00 p.m.

FIRST DAY AFTERNOON MEETING

Conference reconvened at 2:00 p.m., Friday, October 3.

President David O. McKay:

This is the second session of the 123rd Semi-Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. We are convened in the Tabernacle on Temple Square, Salt Lake City, Utah. There are present on the stand this afternoon all the General Authorities, except Elders Albert E. Bowen and John A. Widtsoe, and Thomas E. McKay, who is excused this afternoon.

These services and all general sessions of the Conference will be broadcast in the Assembly Hall and in Barratt Hall over a loud-speaking system and by television.

The proceedings of this session will be broadcast over Station KSL, and by arrangement through KSL, over the stations named in the first session of this Conference. The session will be televised over KSL Television Station, Channel 5.

The Singing for this afternoon will be furnished by the Relief Society Singing Mothers from the Salt Lake and Ogden areas, and from the three Sevier stakes, with Florence J. Madsen conducting, and Frank W. Asper at the organ.

We shall begin this service by the Relief Society Singing Mothers singing, "O Lord, Most Holy," conducted by Sister Madsen. The opening prayer will be offered by Elder Jesse L. Mortensen, patriarch to the South Los Angeles Stake.

---

The Relief Society Singing Mothers sang "O Lord, Most Holy."

Elder F. Eugene Flake offered the opening prayer.

Singing, by the Relief Society Singing Mothers, "In Heavenly Love Abiding."

Friday, October 3

First Day

President David O. McKay:

Bishop Carl W. Buehner of the Presiding Bishopric will be our first speaker.

He will be followed by Elder John Longden, Assistant to the Quorum of the Twelve.

BISHOP CARL W. BUEHNER

Second Counselor in the Presiding Bishopric

MY DEAR brethren and sisters, this is a great moment in my life, and I pray that the Lord will make me equal to it. During the past two or three weeks, I have preached at least fifteen wonderful sermons during the middle of the night, but I have forgotten them by morning, so I guess those sermons are lost forever.

It has been a marvelous experience to be associated with these brethren of the General Authorities of the Church. I wish you could all have some of that marvelous association. I love these brethren. I certainly wish to let them know again today that I will do all I can to sustain them, work for them, and to make their burden as light as possible. Last April when Bishop Richards was honored in becoming a member of the Quorum of the Twelve, I am sure that we all had the feeling that one of the great Presiding Bishops of the Church had received a very worthy honor, and maybe there was some concern as to what might happen with the new Presiding Bishopric. I have known Bishop Richards for many years. He is a great and a powerful man and initiated many wonderful things for the youth of the Church, but I would like to tell you brethren and sisters today that as Bishop Richards moved into the Quorum of the Twelve, another great man was sustained as Presiding Bishop of the Church. Bishop Joseph L. Wirthlin, too, is a very strong and vigorous man, a very spiritual man. He insists that everyone in this Church gets treated equally well. I admire him, I love him, and with Bishop Isaacson, it is an honor to be associated with him in the Presiding Bishopric of this great Church.

Recently, as I attended a quarterly conference, a new member of the Church stood up and bearing his testimony said, "You know, I was seventy-five percent converted to this Church before anyone said one word to me about the gospel." That interested me very much, and after the meeting, I said, "Just what did you mean by that statement?" He said, "You know, we lived in a community where there were a number of Mormon families. My wife and I and our children began to notice these particular families, our children associated with the children of these families, and as they became acquainted with these children, and as we observed the lives of these members of the Church, my wife and I said frequently, 'We would like to live our lives like these people.'" I began to think of the great power of example that we have. If we just remember, brethren and sisters, who we are, we can be great teachers of our religion by living our lives in conformity to these great teachings. It has already been said in this conference that we are known the world over. The eyes of the world are upon us, and wherever we go, whatever we do, how we treat our fellow men and how we live our lives, we are watched and observed by someone.

A year or two ago, my wife and I and another couple were on a little trip. Just what a glass of milk will do! We had breakfast in Boulder, Nevada, one morning. We had been served our breakfast and were eating it when the waitress came and asked, "What will you have to drink?" We each ordered a glass of milk, and she said, "I'll bet you belong to the same Church I do." I said, "What Church do you belong to?" She said, "You know what Church I belong to," and I did, too. I knew which Church she belonged to. You have heard of our being identified all over the world because we have a glass of milk when we are supposed to have a glass of milk. It's quite a wonderful thing. I could relate many examples that have come to my attention where the power of example has been a marvelous teacher to the people of the world.

I would like to say a word in behalf of our young people, too. The young people of the Church in many respects are setting a marvelous example to us older ones. In some of our activities, the children are a little better than the fathers and mothers. When Bishop Richards was the Presiding Bishop of the Church, he said that we should at least have a twenty-five percent attendance at sacrament meeting, and through the effort of the young people, we have about achieved that. You know, when Bishop Wirthlin became the Presiding Bishop, he said twenty-five percent is not enough; we must raise this to fifty percent. Well, now we have the youngsters on the way, brethren and sisters, we have got to bring you along to keep up with your youngsters or we are never going to get that fifty percent. Then, I guess one day there will be another Presiding Bishop, and he will get us up to seventy-five percent. They are going to get us perfect one of these days, if we will just listen and follow in the footsteps of these great leaders of ours.

Well, it isn't so long ago that I was a boy—fifty years ago, a little more or less, and I don't think the youngsters today are much different from the way I was. I enjoyed my youth. I enjoyed the activities I had in the Church, and I have often wondered what might have happened to me had I not been in a community and in a home where they were interested in my welfare religiously as well as just from a standpoint of general education. I will never forget as long as I live Bishop Elias S. Woodruff coming into our priests' quorum, about fifty or sixty of us in a room at the back of the chapel, and taking off his coat, hanging it on the back of the chair, and then going after us, counseling and teaching. It was a wonderful experience. I remember some of my Primary teachers. I remember some of the teachers I had in my Aaronic Priesthood quorums and all through my early school life. I am thankful to the Lord now that these people were interested in my welfare. I went ward teaching with a man for six or seven years. We went to the same district every year. As I have become older, I have learned to love the people more that we used to visit each month, also the fine high priest who was my senior companion. I was a member of the Aaronic Priesthood. I am very grateful for these things.

I hope, brethren and sisters, that we will have a desire to set an example for our boys and our girls that they, too, will become strong in the faith. I can't help feeling that unless our youngsters are taught the right way of life, they are not going to be strong fathers and mothers in the years to come. They need our help, and I hope they will have it.

I heard this little experience told in another stake here just recently of a man who is now a member of a stake presidency. He said, "When I was a boy, my father severely reprimanded me one time for something that I didn't think I had coming. I talked with my father, and we argued back and forth. Finally, I said to my father, 'I don't think I have been treated fairly—I am going to run away.'"

Well, the mother heard part of this through the door in the house, but he said, "I finally went in the house, and said to Mother, 'Mother, Father has been after me pretty severely today for something that I didn't deserve, and I have decided to run away.' Do you know what Mother said? She said, 'Son, I will help you pack.'" He said, "She went into the bedroom, got two large suitcases, opened them up, and for the next hour or two, she went through the dresser, the clothes closet, and every place there was anything that belonged to me, carefully folded it all up, and very neatly laid it in the suitcases. It took a long time to do it. As she would get the different articles, she would explain when and how I would be able to use each particular article." He said, "You know, as I have thought about it

Friday, October 3

First Day

years later, no missionary was ever better packed to leave than I was when my mother got through packing those suitcases. Then she said, 'Now, son, I wish you could come in the living room a minute.' He said, 'We went into the living room, and she said, 'I would like to kneel down and pray with you.' We knelt down in the middle of the living room, and my mother offered a prayer the like of which I have never heard before or since. She prayed for me, saying, 'My boy is going to leave us, and I want you to watch over him and protect him from harm and evil. Keep him away from men who might tempt him. Bless him that he will have food and a place to stay at night and when he is through that he will come back safely,' and many other wonderful things. Mother offered a wonderful prayer, and when she got through, she said, 'Now, my boy, you are going to go away, and I do not know how long you will be away. I wish you would offer a word of prayer.' He said, 'Mother, I do not need to pray. She said, 'That is right. You do not have to pray, but I wish you would pray for your father's and mother's welfare while you are away.' He said, 'Mother, I am not going.' Then he said, 'Mother picked up the two suitcases, and we went back into the bedroom, and in the next two hours she carefully put everything back again where she found it in the first place.'

I related this experience up in Portland two weeks ago, and at the close of the meeting, a little fellow, about ten or eleven years old, came up to me and said, 'Bishop Buehner, I had a little trouble in my home. I ran away. I was only gone two hours, but when I got back, my mother just beat the socks off me.' I said, 'What did you do about it?' He said, 'Well, I never ran away any more.' I said, 'Then there is more than one way to handle that situation, isn't there?' Then, finally this young fellow said, 'You know, I love my father, and I love my mother.' I thought, what finer compliment can any father or any mother hear from their children than to have them say, 'I love my dad, and I love my mother.' I think it is wonderful!

Well, we have a great job to do, you and I. If we can guide the course of these youngsters in the paths they should go, I am sure they will become the strong men and women of the Church.

I would like to close by reading these few lines entitled "That Boy."

He wants to be like his dad! you men,
Did you ever think, as you pause,
That the boy who watches your every move
Is building a set of laws?
He's molding a life you're the model for,
And whether it's good or bad
Depends upon the kind of example set
To the boy who'd be like his dad.

Would you have him go everywhere you go?
Have him do just the things you do?
And see everything that your eyes behold,
And woo all the gods you woo?
When you see the worship that shines in the eyes

Of your lovable little lad,
Could you rest content if he gets his wish
And grows to be like his dad?

It's a job that none but yourself can fill;
It's a charge you must answer for;
It's a duty to show him the road to tread
Ere he reaches his manhood's door.
It's a debt you owe for the greatest joy
On this earth to be had:
The pleasure of having a boy to raise
Who wants to be like his dad!

(Author unknown)

May the Lord help us raise our boys and our girls. Our girls are not so different from our boys, either, are they? I am sure it is a marvelous experience to be a girl as well as it is to be a boy, to be an honor and a credit to the Church. I hope that we will devote our time and our interest in the organizations who have these young people in their charge, to build faith and testimony in their lives, that they, too, will be happy and stalwart as they grow older and assume the responsibilities in the work of the Church.

May the Lord bless us each and every one in the responsibilities that are ours, I pray humbly in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER JOHN LONGDEN

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles

Though he were a Son, yet learned he obedience by the things which he suffered; And being made perfect, he became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him. (Hebrews 5:8-9.)

I AM grateful this afternoon for faith and testimony in this truth of the gospel of Jesus Christ, for I know and testify to you that the Savior is our Redeemer, and that if we will obey his truths, we will be blessed abundantly, because all blessings which we receive are predicated upon obedience to the principles of the gospel of Jesus Christ.

The Savior was the great example in this truth. When he applied for baptism at the hands of John, he was told by John, "I have need to be baptized of thee, and comest thou to me?" And the Savior said, "Suffer it to be so now: for thus it becometh us to fulfil all righteousness." (See Matthew 3:14-15.) If it was necessary for Jesus, the Savior of the world, so to submit himself, in humility, to the will of the Father, that he might be able to fulfil all righteousness, then how much does it devolve upon us to do these things, and to live in obedience to the truths of the gospel of Jesus Christ.

I am grateful as I visit with the leaders of wards and stakes throughout this Church, to see their faith, their devotion, to see their obedience to the principles of the gospel. Just a few months ago it was my privilege to be on the campus of one of the leading universities in the Middle West. I saw there inscriptions on one of the science buildings. Under each quotation was the name of the author, yet there was one on which the author's name was missing. This was the inscription "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." (John 8:32.) If we are to be obedient to the truths of the gospel, we must have a deep, abiding testimony and love of truth.

Just about one hundred and fifteen years ago, there were seven missionaries who left this great land of America to take up the call of missionary service to Great Britain. Among those seven missionaries were Heber C. Kimball, Orson Hyde, and Willard Richards. They arrived at Liverpool on the 20th of July 1837. They were inspired to move on farther, so they went to the city of Preston. When they arrived in that city, there was a big celebration in progress. On one of the banners they read: "Truth will prevail." And they uttered in unison, "Amen, thanks be to God, for truth will prevail."

Yes, my brothers and sisters, we do not deal in half-truths. We deal in the whole truth of the gospel of Jesus Christ. That only comes to the leadership of this Church because of believing in the divine principle of revelation and being obedient to that principle and teaching. Oh, I realize that we have discouragements. That is only human. They will come just as long as we live in the mortal flesh, because one of the tools of the adversary is to discourage and to give half-truths, and not sustain the full truth.

I was interested some time ago to read an incident which happened in the life of the French actress, Sarah Bernhardt. She had toured the United States on many occasions, and this particular time, returning to her native France, she slipped on board ship, injuring her leg. She would not allow the ship's doctor to give her any attention; she desired to wait until she arrived in her native city of Paris where she would have her own physician take care of her, but it was too late. It was necessary that her leg be amputated. As they were wheeling her into the operating room, the attendants, the doctor, and the nurses were trying to cheer her up, but she gave them this simple bit of philosophy which I pass on to you today: "It isn't so much what happens to you in this life, it's how you take it that counts." She proved that she could take discouragement. She did not let the fact that she had only one leg deter her from following her beloved profession for many years after that.

Friday, October 3

First Day

The message of our Savior to us as he came into this mortal existence and labored here, knowing that we would have discouragements, that we would need clothing to cover this physical body of ours, knowing that we would need food to sustain physical life, was: "But seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you." (Matt. 6:33.) The obedient are promised in Matthew, twenty-fifth chapter, that when he comes in his glory, he will divide the children of men, and those who have been righteous will be on the right side, and those unrighteous on his left side, and he will say: "For I was an hungred, and ye gave me meat: I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink: I was a stranger, and ye took me in: Naked, and ye clothed me: I was sick, and ye visited me: I was in prison, and ye came unto me." And they were somewhat surprised, and said, "Lord, when did we do these things unto thee"; and his significant reply, was: "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me," (see Matt. 25:35-40) thus showing that those who were righteous could not have been so classified unless they had had a deep, abiding faith in the truth of the gospel and were obedient to those truths. I humbly pray, my brothers and sisters, that we will take heed of this scripture.

As Jesus Christ was with his disciples on the Mount of Olives, he said unto them, "Fear not, little flock, for it is my will that I should give unto you the kingdom." (See Luke 12:32.) As we live in obedience to these truths, we can enjoy the blessings of the kingdom, and live for the day when we will be reunited with our Heavenly Father and his Son, Jesus Christ, who is the Author of our salvation.

In closing, I am reminded how Samuel taught Saul the lesson of obedience: "... Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice, ..." We remember the story there that Saul had taken out the best of the flocks and kept them as burnt offering and sacrifice, which was his own idea and not in obedience to the command given him. Let us then live in obedience to the counsel which comes to us from these great leaders of our Church, the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Let us follow the teachings of Paul as he gave them to us, "Furthermore we have had fathers of our flesh which corrected us, and we gave them reverence: shall we not much rather be in subjection unto the Father of spirits, and live?" (Hebrews 12:9.)

O my brethren, may we catch the importance of being obedient and train our children likewise, that they may follow our worthy example, for I bear witness to you that these are true. I am grateful for my testimony, for my membership in the Church of Jesus Christ, and pray our Heavenly Father to bless us that we may have a deep, abiding faith in this restored gospel and strengthen our testimonies by living in obedience to the truths thereof. This I humbly pray in the name of the Lord, Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Elder John Longden, Assistant to the Twelve has just addressed us. Elder Matthew Cowley, a member of the Council of the Twelve Apostles will be our next speaker.

ELDER MATTHEW COWLEY

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

I HAVE been coming to these conferences as a member of the Council of the Twelve for seven years now, except when I have been absent in the islands of the sea. I enjoy immensely these meetings, but this is always a frightening experience for me. I ask for your faith and prayers while I occupy your time here.

I listened to the sermon which Brother Stayner Richards addressed to me this morning, and I want him to know that it cost me ten dollars during the noon hour when I went to buy my wife some flowers. I was a bit surprised when I went into the florist shop, and the lady said, "You know Brother Stayner Richards is the best friend we have here." I do want to thank him for not suggesting mink coats. I want to say in all seriousness that the woman God gave to me is worth a mink coat, worth more than anything Brother Richards could ever suggest, and I thought when President McKay said that the experience he had as he stood at the side of his wife in the room where his sainted mother was born was a personal experience and was not of general importance to us, how wrong he was! That is an important experience for all of us, my brothers and sisters. What a beautiful sermon, his standing at the side of his wife, where he has stood for lo these many years, and in the presence of his mother, who also stood at the side of her companion for many years! There flashed in my mind when he briefly related that experience the symbol which is over the long narrow window on the east and west end of that great temple, the symbol of the clasped hands. How important that symbol is in the lives of all of us! We men of the priesthood who have knelt at the sacred altar and on that altar clasped the hand of a sainted companion and have entered an eternal triangle, not a companionship of two, but of three—the husband, the wife, and God—the most sacred triangle man and woman can become a part of. But my heart sinks in despair when I witness so many who have and are withdrawing that hand from one another. They don't do that until they first divorce God from that triangle, and after divorcing God, it is practically impossible for them to stay together side by side. We pledge eternal fidelity to one another as we kneel at the sacred altar, and the words we hear are not "until death do you part," nor "for as long as you both shall live," but "for time and for all eternity."

There came into my office within the past week a sister who said she had divorced her husband, married in this Holy House; the handclasp had been severed. I said, "What are the grounds?" She said, "Drunkenness. I have been living with a drunken swine." I said, maybe without thinking, "Sister, don't you know that only God and women can make men of swine, can make men of beasts?" I said, "Now, your companion is no longer your husband in the eyes of the law, but now he is your brother, and there is no law under heaven which can destroy that relationship. Now, work with him as your brother, and I have suggestions which may help you."

I expect her to come back. I still know that the influence of that woman will lead her husband into sobriety, and under the goodness and mercy of God there will return the clasp of the hand.

Brother Lee referred this morning to the Alcoholics Anonymous. That is my organization, brothers and sisters. Only recently, as I attended one of their meetings, I heard a man stand up and bear his testimony. Members of all religious denominations were there, but these men and women are all of one mind, and that's to stay aboard the raft of sobriety by helping one another. And I heard this man say, "Five years ago I was a drunken sot. I was in the gutter, and then I met some of you men. I haven't had a drink now for five years. My wife had divorced me. She had the custody of the children. The court awarded her everything I had, which wasn't much, but she was entitled to it. Now," he said, "I have my wife back. I have my children back. I have converted my wife to the Church. Last week I was ordained an elder, and the bishop said, 'Bill, one year from now you can take your wife and those children to the temple of God and be sealed for all eternity.'"

I anticipate in supreme joy the experience they are going to have, kneeling together, with their hands clasped, and

Friday, October 3

First Day

the hands of their children upon their hands, those children being brought within that sacred triangle, the man, the woman, and God.

Yes, sisters, you can make men of us beasts. And, brethren, do not withdraw your hand in the greatest hour of need of your companion. Sisters generally do not withdraw that hand. I thank God that when my hand maybe has tended to slip away, that the grip of my companion has been as strong as bands of steel, and I have been brought back.

I was in a home recently in one of our stakes where a man was lying upon his bed. The only part of his body that he could move were his eyes and his tongue. He could speak and he could see, but that was all; no life in his arms; no life in his legs. The home was immaculate; his bed linen was immaculate; he was immaculate. Maybe there was no life in his hands, but his companion held that hand in a grasp as strong as life itself. The clasp of the hand, brothers and sisters—it has meaning! And when you are away from one another, if you don't feel a spiritual clasp stronger than the physical clasp, rush back to one another as quickly as you can. You know true love is not looking at each other in one of these old-fashioned loveseats—looking into each other's eyes. That isn't true love. True love is that love which comes into your heart and motivates your life when you arise from the altar and both of you look in the same direction, down through eternity. That is true love, where both are looking in the same direction.

The Maori in referring to his wife says: "Taku hoa wahine."

That means, "My companion wife." The wife, in speaking of her companion, says: "Toku hoa tane." "My companion husband." I like that a little better than just saying "My wife," or "My husband." "My companion wife," "My companion husband!" Companionship implies a oneness of direction, right down through eternity.

I see in this congregation men who are here, maybe not many of you, but I know some of you, and you are here today because sometime in the past when your hand was slipping away, and a little finger maybe was being loosened from the clasp, there came a grip from your companion wife which held you firm. Eternal fidelity, brothers and sisters, I thank God for it. I thank God for a hand which will always reach out and grasp mine.

I go about the Church, and I hear my name read out as one of the Authorities of this Church, and hands are raised to sustain me, but I say within myself, "My companion wife is being sustained, and that's the reason I am being sustained."

Thank you, President McKay, for that beautiful picture of you and your wife, side by side, touching each other's hands in the room where your sainted mother was born.

When I went to New Zealand as mission president, I went around among the people. Those natives have great memories. They would quote from the sermons of mission presidents, but there had been one president out there whom they did not quote, but he preached to those people the most beautiful sermon they had ever witnessed. Wherever I would go and we would refer to that grand man, the natives would say, "He was always holding hands with his wife." When they would sit down together at the table, their hands would just naturally go toward each other, and they would hold hands—the greatest sermon that was ever delivered in the history of the New Zealand Mission, the sacred clasp of the hands of man and woman.

I thank God for your devotion, for your loyalty, brothers and sisters, to one another. I thank God for the youth about whom Bishop Buehner has spoken. I have seen them come into the temple, a young man and a young woman, to be sealed and to clasp their hands with a pledge of eternal fidelity, and their own fathers and mothers couldn't come inside the little gate on Main Street. Yes, brothers and sisters, in many cases the youth are our examples. The youth are building up the power of the kingdom, and that type of youth will never be satisfied until they can come to that temple gate and walk through, holding the hands of their mothers and their fathers.

I thank God for the clasp of the hand. I thank God for the symbol of the handclasp, with all of its eternal significance. God grant that I may always have the strength to clasp the hand of my companion wife and that she will always have the strength to hold my hand as if it were in a vise. God bless her with that strength, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER MARK E. PETERSEN

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

ONCE again I am grateful, my brothers and sisters, for the opportunity of attending a general conference. These meetings are indeed stimulating, and they are very faith-promoting. I am always built up a great deal by my attendance here, and I am sure that you are, likewise.

I have been deeply touched today by the remarks that have been made by the various speakers. I would like to join with some of them in making an appeal on behalf of the young people of the Church that the parents do all they can to build faith in the hearts of their children. I am sure that all of us, as parents, love our children. I am sure that we desire that they may have the best in life. But I also know that many parents by their daily lives, by their daily habits actually undermine the faith of their own children and take from them the incentive to live the gospel of Christ.

One time, when the Savior was in mortality and the throngs brought their little children to him seeking a blessing, and the disciples attempted to protect the Savior and prevent the children from coming, he said,

Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not: for of such is the kingdom of God. (Mark 10:14.)

President David O. McKay:

Elder Matthew Cowley of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles has just spoken to us.

The Relief Society Singing Mothers and congregation will now sing: "How Firm A Foundation," conducted by J. Spencer Cornwall.

After the singing Elder Mark E. Petersen of the Quorum of the Twelve will speak to us.

---

Singing by the Relief Society Singing Mothers and the congregation, "How Firm A Foundation."

As I see some parents living so carelessly and setting examples of disobedience to their own children, actually destroying their children's faith by their own irreligion, I can almost hear the Savior speaking to those parents, saying,

Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not: for of such is the kingdom of God.

I remember so well a good sister coming to my office one day. She sat at my desk in tears and kept saying over and over to herself, "Why should this happen to me? Why should this happen to me?" When she was able to compose herself, she told me about her boy who was in jail, having committed a serious crime. And she said again, "Why should this ever happen to me?" The boy had committed his crime under the influence of alcohol.

When I found out more about this family, I learned that this was the case: The father and mother used to argue a good deal over the breakfast table. The mother loved her cup of coffee. She simply had to have her cup of coffee. The father always talked with mother about it, asked her to live the Word of Wisdom, asked her to drink something else for breakfast, and always mother would say, "You can't tell me that a cup of coffee will ever keep me out of heaven. You can't tell me that the Lord is going to be so narrow-minded that he will keep me out of heaven when I go to Church regularly, just because I drink a cup of coffee." Always she justified herself in breaking that part of the Word of Wisdom.

Friday, October 3

First Day

There was sitting at that breakfast table, a little boy. That little boy listened to the conversation between father and mother, and as the mother defended her infraction of the Word of Wisdom, as the mother said that the cup of coffee would not matter and the Word of Wisdom really did not matter, either, that little boy believed his mother.

When he got a little older, he still believed his mother. When he started going with boys who smoked, he began to smoke. His mother had taught him that the Word of Wisdom really did not matter. "If it did not matter to Mother, if it would not stand in the way of her salvation, why should it matter to me? How can it keep me out of heaven, if it does not keep Mother out of heaven?" he would say to himself as he also justified his actions.

And so as the mother taught him to break the Word of Wisdom, he took up the habit of smoking. When he went to college and joined a certain fraternity where drinking was the custom, he began to drink. One night under the influence of liquor he committed a serious crime and went to jail. And now the mother sat at my desk, weeping and saying: "Why should this ever happen to me?"

There is another couple. They also talk over the breakfast table, and over the dinner table, and by their conversation they also teach their children certain things. Mother and father see eye to eye in this family. They agree perfectly, and they talk over the things on which they agree as they sit there at dinner or breakfast. And do you know what the principal topic of conversation is? The bishop. How they despise the bishop! How they could tear him limb from limb! Everything the bishop does is wrong. Why, nothing in the world that bishop does could possibly be right. That father and mother sit there picking at the bishop and pulling him apart, and depreciating him, and doing all they can to make each other feel that the bishop is a most unworthy representative of the Church.

Did it hurt the bishop? The bishop went right on doing a fine job in the ward. But somebody was hurt. There was a little boy in that family, also. Whom did he believe? He believed Father and Mother. He had no reason to disbelieve them. They were his ideals. They were the law in that family. And when they, who laid down the law, constantly taught that boy by their own conversation to have no regard for the bishop, no regard for anything that the bishop did, they taught the boy to disregard everything for which a bishop stands.

That boy is now a grown young man. He does nothing in the Church. He has no respect for the Church, no respect for his bishop, nor for the men who installed the bishop.

Who is responsible?

Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not: for of such is the kingdom of God.

I have a friend who has a son, and every Sunday this friend goes out fishing or hunting. He is a member of the Church. He thinks he is a pretty good member of the Church, except that he does not observe the Sabbath. He does not pay his tithing. He does not observe the Word of Wisdom. But if you ask him, he is a good member of the Church.

He always used to send his little boy to Sunday School and to priesthood meeting. But when the little boy got old enough to realize what the father was doing and to realize what a strong interest there is out there on the stream with a rod in your hand, he wanted to go with his dad. The dad at first protested, not so much because he did not want the boy to stay away from Church, but because he thought the boy would be pretty much in the way. Nevertheless, the boy continued to ask to go with the dad, and finally he did. Then, every Sunday that father gave that son firsthand lessons in how to violate the Sabbath day, firsthand lessons in how to stay away from meeting, how to choose fishing on Sunday instead of going to Church.

What chance did the boy have of becoming converted to the gospel when the father was teaching the son how to break the law of God?

"Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not" by continuing in any bad habits that you have, "forbid them not" by teaching them violation of the commandments, "forbid them not" by setting the wrong kind of example, "for of such is the kingdom of God."

The Savior said something else:

Whosoever therefore shall break one of these least commandments, and shall teach men so, he shall be called the least in the kingdom of heaven: but whosoever shall do and teach them, the same shall be called great in the kingdom of heaven. (Matt. 5:19.)

The Lord also said at another time:

Woe unto the world because of offences! for it must needs be that offences come; but woe to that man by whom the offence cometh! (Matt. 18:7.)

I believe that one of our great Americans is J. Edgar Hoover, the head of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. At one time, Mr. Hoover talked about the juvenile delinquency problem, and, among other things, he said this: "Our youthful delinquency is a problem which strikes upon practically every home in America. It is something to which every parent should give the deepest consideration, because the responsibility for youthful law infraction today lies more on the doorstep of the adult than it does on that of the youth. It exists largely because of a lack of discipline. It is due to a tendency to evade responsibility that parents in many instances have allowed their children to stray without proper guidance, and in straying, commit thousands of crimes which send so many of our boys and girls yearly into prison."

Last Saturday there was an editorial in the "Church Section" of The Deseret News which had to do with the example of parents to children in regard to the drinking habit. This editorial indicated that the great majority of drinking parents have drinking children, and the great majority of non-drinking parents have non-drinking children. It was based upon a study made by one of the large colleges in the eastern part of the United States. The editorial goes on:

The example of parents and its effect upon children is not at all limited to the use of liquor. It enters every other phase of the child's life.

Have you seen many children who were converted to prayer, for instance, who had parents who never prayed? . . .

Have you seen many children who are regular Church attenders whose parents never come? There are some, it is true, and they are to be commended most highly for it. But such are in the minority.

And when you find parents who criticize the practices and officers of the Church, do you find a tendency in the children to do likewise?

When parents openly express disapproval of the law of tithing in the home, are the children apt to pay tithing?

When father and mother go fishing and hunting or on outings to the canyon on the Sabbath, do the children prefer to remain at home alone and go to Church?

Although parents do not realize it, every act of their lives has its effect upon their children. It is true that many children love higher principles than do their parents, and hold to those principles regardless of what their parents do. Such children are grieved at the weaknesses of their own parents, and wish it were otherwise. Children of that type are made of sterling qualities, and should receive the encouragement of every person in the Church.

And then it concludes,

When the wise man of old said, "Train up a child in the way he should go," he certainly had in mind the power of example on the part of the parents.

Parents, you can encourage or discourage your child's faith and religious

Friday, October 3

First Day

activity. By your own acts, you can either promote faith or you can destroy faith. Which will it be? "Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not; for of such is the kingdom of God."

May we follow that instruction, is my humble prayer, in Jesus' name. Amen.

ELDER MARION G. ROMNEY

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

MY BELOVED brethren and sisters, I ask for an interest in your faith and prayers, and I extend this invitation to the people who are watching over television and who are listening in on the radio.

I, too, would like to consider youth for a few moments, but I shall direct my remarks directly to them.

With the help of the Holy Spirit, for which I earnestly pray, I desire to encourage you young folk to put your trust in the Lord, and by keeping his commandments, live for his promised blessings. This I do because I know that no other course can qualify you to meet successfully the issues of life which lie ahead.

It is better to trust in the Lord than to put confidence in man.

It is better to trust in the Lord than to put confidence in princes. (Ps. 118:8-9.)

In these lines the psalmist has voiced an eternal truth which every soul will recognize and acknowledge sooner or later.

Some people, like Cardinal Wolsey, to their sorrow, learn it later. You will recall that he gave a long life in the service of three English sovereigns and enjoyed, while he did it, great wealth and power. Finally, however, he was shorn of all his greatness by an impatient king. It was only then, as he stood disillusioned among the ruins of his life, that he said (so Shakespeare puts it),

Had I but served my God with half the zeal

President David O. McKay:

We shall now hear from Elder Marion G. Romney of the Quorum of the Twelve. Elder Romney will be followed by Elder Milton R. Hunter of the First Council of the Seventy.

I served my king, he would not in mine age
Have left me naked to mine enemies.
(Henry VIII, Act III, Sc. 2.)

Now, my beloved young brothers and sisters, in the words of Alma I testify to you that I do know, as I know that I live, that whosoever shall put their trust in God shall be supported in their trials, and their troubles, and their afflictions, and shall be lifted up at the last day. (Alma 36:3.)

And I plead with you to determine now, in your youth, to trust in the Lord and live for his promises. For there are promised blessings which follow, as the night the day, obedience to each of the Lord's commands.

Take for example, the promises given in the Word of Wisdom. Says the Lord,

... all Saints who remember to keep and do these sayings, walking in obedience to the commandments, shall receive health in their navel and marrow to their bones;

And shall find wisdom and great treasures of knowledge, even hidden treasures; And shall run and not be weary, and shall walk and not faint.

And I the Lord, give unto them a promise, that the destroying angel shall pass by them, as the children of Israel and not slay them. (D. & C. 89:18-21.)

This reference to the destroying angel passing by the children of Israel brings to mind that to persuade the Egyptians to let Israel go,

... the Lord smote all the firstborn in the land of Egypt, from the firstborn of

Pharaoh that sat on his throne unto the firstborn of the captive that was in the dungeon; and all the firstborn of cattle. . . . and there was a great cry in Egypt; for there was not a house where there was not one dead. (Ex. 12:29-30.)

But in his death-dealing mission the "destroyer" was to pass by, and did pass by, without slaying the firstborn therein, the homes of those Israelites who had marked their door lintels and side posts with the blood of a lamb, as directed by the Lord.

From this promise in the Word of Wisdom and other scriptures, it appears that there are destroying angels who have a work to do among the peoples of the earth in this last dispensation. The Lord told the Prophet Joseph Smith that because all flesh was corrupted before him, and the powers of darkness prevailed upon the earth, these angels were waiting the great command to reap down the earth, to gather the tares that they may be burned. (D. & C. 38:11-12.)

That was in 1831. In 1894, President Woodruff said:

God has held the angels of destruction for many years lest they should reap down the wheat with the tares. But I want to tell you now, those angels have left the portals of heaven, and they stand over this people and this nation now, and are hovering over the earth waiting to pour out the judgments. And from this very day they shall be poured out. Calamities and troubles are increasing in the earth, and there is a meaning to these things. (THE IMPROVEMENT ERA, 17:1165.)

Now, my beloved young brothers and sisters, in view of this revealed knowledge and understanding which the Lord has given concerning what is transpiring about us, is it not a glorious thing to have the assurance that if we will clothe ourselves with bodies purified through observance of the Word of Wisdom, these destroying angels will pass us by, as they did the children of Israel, and not slay us? Well, this is one of the blessings to follow observance of the Word of Wisdom.

The promised blessings for obedience to the law of tithing are many. One of them has to do with the productivity of the soil. I remember being impressed with this thought twenty-three years ago this conference as I listened to the remarks of Elder James E. Talmage. Said he,

Do you know that the soil can be sanctified by the tithing of its products? The land can be sanctified. There is a relationship between the elements and forces of nature and the actions of men. (Conference Report, October 1929, page 68.)

This statement is in harmony with the sentiments of President Brigham Young. Said he,

Talk about these rich valleys, why there is not another people on earth that could have come here and lived. We prayed over the land, and dedicated it and the water, air and everything pertaining to them unto the Lord, and the smiles of heaven rested on the land and it became productive. (Discourses of Brigham Young, p. 483.)

A companion reward for paying tithing sounds almost like crop insurance. Listen:

Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in my house; and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing that there shall not be room enough to receive it.

And I will rebuke the devourer for your sakes, and he shall not destroy the fruits of your ground; neither shall your vine cast her fruits before the time in the fields, saith the Lord of hosts. (III Nephi 24:10-11.)

President Grant's boundless faith that the Lord would prosper those who were liberal with their means in building his kingdom has had a distinct effect upon my life. Many of you will recall his account of attending a Thursday morning fast meeting at which his bishop made an appeal for donations. President Grant, though a very young man, had $50.00 in his pocket which he intended to deposit in the bank. But he was so impressed by his bishop's appeal that he tendered the whole $50.00. The bishop took $5.00 and handed him back $45.00, stating that $5.00 was his full share. President Grant replied, "Bishop Woolley, by what right do you rob me of putting the Lord in my debt? Didn't you preach here today that the Lord rewards fourfold? My mother is a widow, and she needs two hundred dollars."

Friday, October 3

First Day

"My boy," queried the bishop, "do you believe that if I take this other forty-five dollars you will get your two hundred dollars quicker?"

"Certainly," replied President Grant.

Here was an expression of faith which the bishop could not withstand. He took the remaining $45.00.

President Grant testified that on his way from that fast meeting back to work, "an idea popped" into his head, acting upon which he made $218.50. Speaking on this incident years later, he said, "Someone will say that it would have happened anyway. I do not think it would have happened. I do not think I would have got the idea. . . . I am a firm believer that the Lord opens up the window of heaven when we do our duty financially and pours out upon us blessings of a spiritual nature, which are of far greater value than temporal things. But I believe he also gives us blessings of a temporal nature." (THE IMPROVEMENT ERA, 42:457.)

Another reward for paying tithing is a guarantee against being consumed in the burning to accompany the advent of the Savior. In the eighty-fifth section of the Doctrine and Covenants, the Lord explains that his purpose in tithing his people is "to prepare them against the day of vengeance and burning," (v. 3) and in the sixty-fourth section he says,

Behold, now it is called today until the coming of the Son of Man, and verily it is a day of sacrifice, and a day for the tithing of my people; for he that is tithed shall not be burned at his coming. (Ibid., 64:23.)

Personally I have always considered tithing to be the law of inheritance in the land of Zion, for the Lord said when he gave the law that all those who gathered to Zion should observe it or they should not be worthy to abide among the inhabitants of that land. (Ibid., 119:5.)

And now, the last specific commandment to which I direct your attention is, "Thou shalt not commit adultery." (Ex. 20:14.)

You will recall, of course, Alma's teaching his son Corianton that unchastity is the most serious offense there is in the sight of God, save murder only. You will remember, too, these words from Paul's first epistle to the Corinthians:

Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you?

If any man defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy. (1 Cor. 3:16-17.)

Ten years ago the First Presidency said to the youth of the Church, "Better dead clean, than alive unclean."

I remember how my father impressed the seriousness of unchastity upon my mind. He and I were standing in the railroad station at Rexburg, Idaho, in the early morning of November 12, 1920. We heard the train whistle. In three minutes I would be on my way to Australia to fill a mission. In that short interval my father said to me, among other things, "My son, you are going a long way from home. But your mother and I, your brother and sisters will be with you constantly in our thoughts and prayers; we shall rejoice with you in your successes; and we shall sorrow with you in your disappointments. When you are released and return, we shall be glad to greet you and welcome you back into the family circle. But remember this, my son, we would rather come to this station and take your body off the train in a casket than to have you come home unclean, having lost your virtue."

I pondered that statement at the time. I did not then have the full understanding of it that my father had, but I remembered it every time I approached temptation. I understand it better now, and I feel the same way about my boys as he felt about me.

I can think of no blessings to be more fervently desired than those promised to the pure and virtuous. Jesus spoke of specific rewards for different virtues but reserved the greatest, so it seems to me, for the pure in heart, "for they," said he, "shall see God." (Matt. 5:8.) And not only shall they see the Lord, but they shall feel at home in his presence. Here is his promise:

... let virtue garnish thy thoughts unceasingly; then shall thy confidence wax strong in the presence of God. (D. & C. 121:45.)

The rewards for virtue and the consequence of unchastity are dramatically portrayed in the lives of Joseph and David.

Joseph, though a slave in Egypt, stood true under pressure of the greatest temptation. As a reward he received the choicest blessings of all the sons of Jacob. He became the progenitor of the two favored tribes of Israel. Most of us take pride in being numbered among his posterity.

David, on the other hand, though highly favored of the Lord—indeed, he was referred to as a man after God's own heart—yielded. His unchastity led to murder. The consequences—like Lucifer he fell; he lost his families and his exaltation. (Ibid., 132:39.)

And now, my young brothers and sisters and friends, I shall not say more except to renew my plea that you believe in and live for the promises of the Lord. Don't be as the people were in the days of Malachi. They argued that it was unprofitable and vain to serve God because, as they saw it, the proud were made happy, the wicked set up, and they that tempted God were delivered. Have the good sense to realize and remember that today, as well as in the days of Malachi, a book of remembrance is written before the Lord for those that fear him and think upon his name,

And they shall be mine, saith the Lord of hosts, in that day when I make up my jewels; and I will spare them, as a man spareth his own son that serveth him.

Then shall ye return, and discern between the righteous and the wicked, between him that serveth God and him that serveth him not.

For, behold, the day cometh that shall burn as an oven; and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly, shall be stubble: and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch.

Says the Lord in a glorious promise to the righteous,

But unto you that fear my name shall the Sun of righteousness arise with healing in his wings; and ye shall go forth, and grow up as calves of the stall. (Mal. 3:17-18; 4:1-2.)

Oh, my beloved young folk, believe in and live for the promises of the Lord by keeping his commandments. If you will do this, even though you do not now have full confidence in those promises, I assure you that that confidence will come.

... never be weary of good works, but ... be meek and lowly in heart; for such shall find rest to their souls.

O, remember, ... and learn wisdom in thy youth; yea, learn in thy youth to keep the commandments of God.

Yea, and cry unto God for all thy support; yea, let all thy doings be unto the Lord, and whithersoever thou goest let it be in the Lord; yea, let thy thoughts be directed unto the Lord; yea, let the affections of thy heart be placed upon the Lord forever.

Counsel with the Lord in all thy doings, and he will direct thee for good; yea, when thou liest down at night lie down unto the Lord, that he may watch over you in your sleep; and when thou risest in the morning let thy heart be full of thanks unto God; and if ye do these things, ye shall be lifted up at the last day. (Alma 37:34-37.)

God grant that it may be so, I humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ, our Redeemer. Amen.

ELDER MILTON R. HUNTER

Of the First Council of the Seventy

MY DEAR brethren and sisters, I do humbly trust and pray that the Spirit of God will direct me in the few remarks I make this afternoon and in bearing my testimony.

There has been a growing tendency during the past few years for ministers of various Christian religions, writers, and numerous others to deny the divinity of Jesus Christ. They put forth the claim that he was a great teacher and class him among the prophets, but they deny that he was literally the Son of the true and Living God.

We, the members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, revolt against such teachings, because we know different. We accept Jesus Christ as our Lord, as our God, as our king, as our Savior and Redeemer, as the Only Begotten Son of God here in the flesh, and as the embodiment of all that is good. In fact, in his pre-mortal life, even before this world was created, he enjoyed the status of godhood. Acting in that capacity, along with the Eternal Father, he helped to create this world, as well as many other worlds.

Before human beings were placed upon this earth, the gospel, the plan of salvation, was named after him, namely, the gospel of Jesus Christ; and he became known as the Author of the plan of salvation. Also, the priesthood was given to him, and named after him, being called the Holy Priesthood after the Order of the Son of God.

After mortal beings were placed upon this earth, and throughout various gospel dispensations, he served as the Mediator between the heavens and the earth. Acting in that capacity, he revealed the gospel truths, the will of the Father, through the holy prophets to the human family from age to age as the needs required.

He came to earth in the Meridian of Time, being born of a mortal woman, a virgin, and being the Only Begotten

Son of God in the flesh. Thereby he was endowed with a superior amount of godliness. He lived a perfect life while in mortality and through example taught us how to live. He closed his mortal probation by enduring that great suffering which was necessary for him to go through in order for him to take upon himself the sins of the world. So intense was his pain that it caused him to sweat blood from every pore of his body; and this he did that we might not suffer if we will keep his commandments. In modern revelation he declared:

For behold, I, God, have suffered these things for all, that they might not suffer if they would repent;

But if they would not repent they must suffer even as I;

Which suffering caused myself, even God, the greatest of all, to tremble because of pain, and to bleed at every pore, and to suffer both body and spirit. (D. & C. 19:16-18.)

Finally, after being crucified, on the third day he rose from the grave, broke the bands of death, and brought about universal resurrection. Therefore, every man, woman, and child that has ever lived, or ever shall live upon this earth, regardless of how righteous or how wicked he or she may have been, will rise from the grave and receive immortality through the grace of Jesus Christ. But to those who take upon themselves his name and faithfully keep his commandments, he has promised a blessed eternal life.

After Adam and Eve had been cast out of the Garden of Eden, having passed through the Fall, having had a veil drawn over their minds so that they had forgotten their pre-mortal existence and the gospel plan of salvation, Jesus began his work as the Savior here upon this earth by revealing to them the gospel. Line upon line and precept upon precept were revealed until they had received the same gospel plan in its fulness as we have it today.

Part of that gospel plan was that Adam and his posterity should offer sacrifices. One day Adam was offering a sacrifice unto the Lord, and an angel appeared unto him and said:

... Why dost thou offer sacrifices unto the Lord? And Adam said unto him: I know not, save the Lord commanded me.

And then the angel spake, saying: This thing is a similitude of the sacrifice of the Only Begotten of the Father, which is full of grace and truth.

Wherefore, thou shalt do all that thou doest in the name of the Son, and thou shalt repent and call upon God in the name of the Son forevermore. (Moses 5:6-8.)

On another occasion Adam and his posterity were also given the commandment to repent of all their sins and be baptized in the name of the Only Begotten Son. Even in that early age, Father Adam was told that the name of the Only Begotten was Jesus Christ, and that that name was "... the only name which shall be given under heaven, whereby salvation shall come unto the children of men." (Ibid., 6:52.)

Enoch, Noah, and the other great prophets of antiquity received revelations similar to the ones that Adam had received; and they preached unto the people, saying unto them: "... repent of your sins and be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ, ... even as our fathers. ... " (Ibid., 8:16, 19-20, 24.)

The Book of Mormon was originally written and brought forth in the latter day primarily for the purpose of testifying to the divine calling of the Only Begotten. It serves as a new witness that Jesus is the Christ, the Savior of the world, the Only Begotten of the Father, and the only name which shall be given under heaven whereby salvation shall come unto the children of men.

In his old age, King Benjamin, one of the great kings and prophets in the Book of Mormon days, called his people together for the purpose of turning the kingship over to his son, Mosiah. As part of the ceremony, he delivered to the people one of the greatest sermons that we find recorded in the holy scriptures. His instructions had such an overwhelming and powerful effect upon the members of his kingdom that they all fell upon the ground in humility and cried unto God to purify their hearts and forgive them of their sins through the atoning blood of Jesus Christ. (Mosiah 4:1-2.) They covenanted with the Lord to keep all of his commandments from that day forward. And then King Benjamin told those people that one of the principal purposes for calling them together was to give unto them a new name. He stated that the name that he gave them that day was the name of Christ. He said unto them:

... therefore, I would that ye should take upon you the name of Christ, all you that have entered into the covenant with God that ye should be obedient unto the end of your lives. (Ibid., 5:8.)

King Benjamin's people took upon themselves the name of Christ and entered into a covenant to keep all of his commandments.

And it came to pass that there was not one soul except it were little children, but who had entered into the covenant and had taken upon them the name of Christ. (Ibid., 6:2.)

Benjamin also instructed:

And now, because of the covenant which ye have made ye shall be called the children of Christ, his sons and his daughters; for behold, this day he hath spiritually begotten you; ...

And under this head ye are made free, and there is no other head whereby ye can be made free. There is no other name given whereby salvation cometh; ... (Ibid., 5:7-8.)

Following the Savior's resurrection, he appeared to the people here in ancient America and taught them the same gospel plan of salvation that he had taught to the Jews while in mortality. After he had ascended into heaven, the people were discussing what they should name the church that he had established, and so the twelve disciples united in mighty prayer and fasting. As a result of their faith, prayer, and fasting, Jesus stood in their midst and asked what it was that he should do for them. They replied that there had arisen disputations among the people regarding what they should call the church, requesting:

Friday, October 3

First Day

We will that thou wouldst tell us the name whereby we should call this church.

And the Lord said unto them: . . .

Have they not read the scriptures, which say ye must take upon you the name of Christ, which is my name? For by this name shall ye be called at the last day; . . .

Therefore, whatsoever ye shall do, ye shall do it in my name; therefore ye shall call the church in my name; and ye shall call upon the Father in my name that he will bless the church for my sake.

And how be it my church save it be called in my name? For if a church be called in Moses' name then it be Moses' church; or if it be called in the name of a man then it be the church of a man; but if it be called in my name then it is my church, if it so be that they are built upon my gospel. (3 Nephi 27:4-5, 7-8.)

The early Christians in the Mediterranean world took upon themselves the name of Christ. As you all recall, they were known generally as Christians. But as their numbers began to spread and become rather numerous in the Mediterranean world, and as the seeds of apostasy began to grow, about 185 A.D. the leaders decided to change the name to Catholic, meaning universal. Thus by choosing to call themselves "Universal" they lost the name, or set aside the name, that God had decreed would be the only name given under heaven whereby mankind may be saved. This loss of the name of Christ went hand in hand with the loss of the priesthood and of the true ordinances and doctrines of the Master by the Catholic Church, thereby constituting the Great Apostasy.

The early Christian reformers broke away from the Catholic Church because of the numerous man-made, false doctrines, teachings, and practices that had corrupted the entire organization during the period of the Great Apostasy. One after another of these Christian reformers organized churches of their own. None of them, however, claimed divine revelation or restoration nor direct commission from Jesus Christ; but in a natural way their churches came into being, and they named them after men or after movements; for example, such churches as the Lutheran, Baptists, Methodists, Presbyterian, and numerous others, all man-made, and lacking divine authorization, came into existence as a result of the Protestant Reformation.

It should be kept in mind that not one of these early Christian reformers definitely took upon himself the name of Christ by calling his church in Christ's name. The Eternal Father was reserving that name for his Church, the Church which the holy prophets had predicted would be restored in the latter days. Therefore, on April 6, 1830, the Prophet Joseph Smith and five companions in Fayette, New York, acting in line with divine revelation from heaven, organized the Church of Jesus Christ. They took upon themselves the name of Christ; and they built that Church upon his gospel, as the Lord had pointed out that such should be a requisite for his Church. In his preface to the Doctrine and Covenants, the Lord Jesus Christ declared that he had given the Prophet Joseph Smith and his associates

. . . power to lay the foundation of this church, and to bring it forth out of darkness, the only true and living church upon the face of the whole earth, with which I, the Lord am well pleased, . . . (D. & C. 1:30.)

You and I, as Latter-day Saints and members of Christ's kingdom, are humbly and prayerfully looking forward to the great day when the Son of Man shall come to earth in his glory to reign one thousand years as the Lord of lords, and King of kings. We long for that priceless day when all people throughout the entire earth shall turn unto him and accept Jesus as their Christ their Savior, their Lord, their God, and their King. At that day they shall take upon themselves his name and keep his commandments. Peace and righteousness will prevail universally.

At the end of that one thousand years' period of time, this earth, which has been living under a celestial law, will die. Like the human family, it will be resurrected. At the time of that resurrection, it will be quickened by a celestial power and raised a celestial orb, being the celestial degree of glory for all the people throughout the various gospel dispensations who have taken upon themselves the name of Christ and have kept his commandments sufficiently well to come back into his presence to dwell. (Ibid., 88:17-19, 25-26.) This earth will be crowned with the glory of the Father, and it shall be given to the Son. It will then be Christ's world, his kingdom, for he has atoned it through the work that he did and the blood that he spilled. (Ibid., 88:9; 101:65; 130:7, 9.)

Thus, after this earth is celestialized, the Only Begotten of the Father will reign here as the Lord and God of this earth. Those righteous Saints who have kept the commandments while living in mortality will, in accordance with their merits, enter into Christ's kingdom, even the celestial realms. They have become Christ's children, having been given to him by the Father. Thus, they "... have become his sons and his daughters, ... and shall be called by the name of Christ." (Mosiah 5:7, 8.)

Now, my brothers and sisters, I would like to bear my testimony. I know as I know that I live, as I know that I am standing here, that Jesus is the Christ, the Savior of the world, the Only Begotten of the Father, and that his name is the only name which shall be given under heaven whereby we can be saved. I know that by his sufferings at Gethsemane and Golgotha, sweating blood from every pore of his body, and by his atoning sacrifice, he took upon himself our sins and our sufferings if we will repent and keep all of his commandments. You and I who belong to the true Church of Jesus Christ should remember at all times that we have entered into a solemn and sacred covenant to render obedience to all of God's commandments. If we will prove faithful in doing so, I am as sure as I am sure that I am here today that we will rise with the just and, after standing before the judgment seat, be brought into the celestial world to be crowned with glory and exaltation. We shall be found "at the right hand of God," being heirs to Christ's kingdom; and we will be permitted to live eternally with our Savior upon this earth as celestial beings. At that day we will be counted his, even sons and daughters of Jesus Christ, and shall be known by his name, as a result of having taken upon ourselves the name of Christ and having proved faithful in all things.

May God bless you and me, even every member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, that we will keep all of the Lord's commandments and thereby live worthy of these great blessings and eventually receive the reward that comes to the faithful. May we some day come back into the presence of the Father and the Son, and be known by Christ's name eternally, the only name given under heaven whereby man may be saved, I humbly pray, through the holy name of the Only Begotten Son. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

We have just heard from Elder Milton R. Hunter, of the First Council of Seventy.

The Relief Society Singing Mothers will now sing, "I Will Exalt Thee, O, Lord," under the direction of Sister Florence J. Madsen.

The closing prayer will be offered by Elder F. Eugene Flake, formerly president of the Southwest Indian Mission, after which this conference will stand adjourned until ten o'clock tomorrow morning.

Tonight, at 7 o'clock, here in the Tabernacle, under the direction of the

Friday, October 3

First Day

Presiding Bishopric, there will be held a meeting of the Bishoprics of the Church, Presidents of Branches, Independent and Dependent, and all others as listed in the public announcement, including the Presidencies of Stakes and High Councilmen, all of whom are invited.

Before the Singing Mothers render this, their last anthem in this Conference, I wish in your behalf to express, sincerely, appreciation of their spiritual service this day. Let me repeat again that title, "Singing Mothers." Motherhood in service of mankind is next to Godhood. They are co-partners with the Creator, our mothers. It is no wonder, then, that a man inspired as we have heard today from Brother Cowley, said,

"The noblest thoughts my soul can claim,
The holiest words my tongue can name,
Unworthy are to praise the name
More precious than all other.
An infant, when her love first came
A man, I find it just the same;
Reverently I breathe her name,
The blessed name of Mother."

God bless you mothers, and thank you for your services.

The Relief Society Singing Mothers sang "I Will Exalt Thee, O Lord."

Elder F. Eugene Flake offered the closing prayer.

Conference adjourned until 10:00 a.m. Saturday, Oct. 4.

SECOND DAY

MORNING MEETING

The third session of the Conference commenced at 10 o'clock a.m., Saturday, October 4, with President David O. McKay presiding and conducting.

President David O. McKay:

We are pleased to announce that this third session of the 123rd Semi-annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, is convened in the Salt Lake Tabernacle on Temple Square. The services and all general sessions of the Conference, will be broadcast in the Assembly Hall and in Barratt Hall over a loud-speaking system and by television as heretofore announced. Those who are standing in the doorways and others out on the grounds may find seats, we hope, either in the Assembly Hall or in Barratt Hall.

We have a cablegram this morning from President Samuel E. Bringham stating that the members of the Church in Vienna send their greetings to the Saints assembled in Conference. We appreciate this greeting.

The singing for this session will be by the German-speaking members of the German Choir, with Heinz Rimmasch conducting, and Alexander Schreiner at the organ.

We shall begin these services by the Choir singing, "God Is My Song," conducted by Elder Heinz Rimmasch. The opening prayer will be offered by Elder Charles W. Payne, Patriarch to the Los Angeles Stake.

The Choir will now sing, "God Is My Song."

The German-Speaking L.D.S. Choir sang "God Is My Song."

Elder Charles W. Payne, Patriarch to the Los Angeles Stake, offered the opening prayer.

President David O. McKay:

We are pleased to note the attendance this morning of prominent State officials, leaders in educational circles, also our Representatives in the Senate, Senator Watkins and Senator Bennett, and if there are others we wish to extend a hearty welcome to them.

You will be pleased also to know that the general sessions today will be broadcast to the students of the Brigham Young University, at the Joseph Smith Auditorium.

The Choir will now sing, "Come Thou Hope and Send Thy Peace." The solo will be rendered by Alfred Schmidt.

The Choir sang, "Come Thou Hope and Send Thy Peace," Alfred Schmidt, soloist.

President David O. McKay:

Our first speaker this morning will be President J. Reuben Clark, Jr., of the First Presidency of the Church. President Clark will be followed by Elder Thomas E. McKay.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

Second Counselor in the First Presidency

MY BROTHERS AND SISTERS, I should like to say just a word in appreciation of this magnificent music that we have heard, yesterday the Singing Mothers, today the singing German Saints, and tomorrow we shall have the great Tabernacle Choir. We are a singing people, and I am sure that the Lord loves a singing people. God bless our singers, sweeten their voices even more sweet than they are now, that they may sing his praises.

My brothers and sisters, I stand before you asking in humility and in sincerity an interest in your faith and prayers, that what I may say may be helpful to all of us. You know, we ask these blessings in stern reality, not as a matter of form, but in a reality that we have that without the help of our Heavenly Father, we are not able in and of ourselves to do much.

Not only are we a singing people, but we are also a praying people, and our prayers go to our Heavenly Father knowing that he can hear, does hear, and will, in his wisdom, answer, perhaps not always in the way we think they should be answered, because our prayers should always be that they be answered in accordance with his mind and his will, and the answers so come to us. When we pray, we should, of course, express our desires as to the things we wish, but we should always pray with an open mind, asking the Lord to bestow the blessings upon us in his wisdom. We should not pray and ask the Lord to give us what we, ourselves, want, and importune him to that effect, except all subject to his will.

This question of prayer, and the answer of prayer, is basic with us. Behind it lies the full doctrine of continuous revelation, because we pray that God will give us his revelation and his inspiration. Over the years, I know that every person in this great Tabernacle has seen manifestations of the power of the Lord in answer to prayer.

The record indicates that when the Savior, himself, approached great crises in his career on earth, he always went to his Father in prayer and asked for help and for guidance, and the Father never failed.

You remember the first great prayer that opened this dispensation. It was uttered in response to those statements of James:

"If any of you [not just particular ones, but if any of you] lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him.

"But let him ask in faith, nothing wavering. For he that wavereth is like a wave of the sea driven with the wind and tossed.

"For let not that man think that he shall receive any thing of the Lord,"—unless he so prays. (James 1:5-7.)

From this prayer thus motivated, came one of the greatest visions in recorded history, the visit of the Father and the

Saturday, October 4

Second Day

Son to the young boy praying in the woods, the Prophet Joseph Smith.

I say once more, this is the motif of this whole modern dispensation. Pray, pray always, has been the counsel of our leaders, of our prophets, and of our Heavenly Father.

During those great discourses which the Savior preached the night before the crucifixion, he continually recurred to this thought:

"... whatsoever ye shall ask the Father in my name, he will give it you." (John 16:23.)

But we should have in mind, in connection with that, the words of the Prophet Aaron on this continent, when he said we must ask in faith, with a repentant soul. That is the only basis of prayer that will bring us the things which we seek.

If you would know what prayer and faith combined can do, read the account of the brother of Jared, when he went before the Lord and requested that the Lord provide light for the vessels that were to carry them over the sea.

You remember that the brother of Jared prayed so mightily that he saw the finger of the Lord touch the stones that would give them light, and the account says that his faith was so great that he could not be kept outside the veil; he went beyond the veil that beclouds our eyes and saw the finger of the Lord. The Lord asked, what else did you see, and he said, nothing but the finger, and told of his humility and of his anxieties. Then the Lord showed himself to him as he was to appear on earth.

You remember that well-known incident of Elijah and the priests of Baal, how Elijah, in faith and in prayer, thwarted the designs of the priests of Baal, vanquished them and brought down from heaven the fire which consumed not only the bullock that was offered for sacrifice, but also the wood on which it was laid, the stones on which that was laid, and then licked up the water that had been poured over it all and had collected in the trench.

"Prayer is the soul's sincere desire."

Pray, my brothers and sisters. Pray for inspiration. Pray for wisdom. And if you would know for what you might pray, read the words of Amulek when he told you you might pray for your crops and your herds, that you might pray that you would not be overcome by your enemies, and for all the rest of the things that you need in your daily lives. But remember the teaching of Aaron: Prayer must have as a foundation, repentance of sin and faith.

I refer again to the words of the Savior on that last night. You would do well to read those last chapters of John. Ponder them. They contain so much that is of value to us.

Recall the miracle at the Gate Beautiful performed by Peter, when he said to the beggar who was carried there each morning, lame from his mother's womb: "Look on us." And the beggar looked, expecting alms, and Peter said, "Silver and gold have I none; but such as I have give I thee: In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk." And the man rose up and walked and leaped and went with them into the temple, and then the leaders in Israel had Peter arrested, and he and John were tried, and sentence passed. (Acts 3:1 ff.)

But the thing I want to refer to is what Peter said (as has already been quoted here a number of times) to the Sanhedrin, when asked by what name he did this:

"... by the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth... for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved." (Ibid., 4:10, 12.)

I want to add my testimony to those that have already been borne, to the Messiahship of Jesus, the Christ.

I have a spiritual knowledge that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God. That he lived, moved, preached, acted, performed his miracles, was crucified, laid in the tomb, and on the morning of the third day he rose from the tomb. That he was seen thereafter, first, apparently, by Mary Magdalene, out of whom he had cast seven devils. It was remarkable that a woman of that kind should have had the faith to be the first to view the Savior after his resurrection: That he then appeared to the women of Galilee and then to the two on the way to Emmaus, and sometime during the day to Peter. Then to the ten assembled in the chamber at night, and a week later to the eleven. Then to the multitudes on the Sea of Galilee, and then to James, and then to Peter, James, and John, Nathanael and Thomas called Didymus, and two others on the Sea of Galilee, then to the eleven prior to his ascension. That then he appeared on this continent to the Nephites. And finally to Joseph in the woods, introduced by the Father, himself, in person; later to Joseph and Sidney in the temple.

To all of these things I bear witness that the Spirit has borne its witness to me.

Brethren and sisters, pray, pray in humility, pray always, pray in your families, pray in secret; live, keeping the commandments of the Lord, so that your prayers may ascend to our Heavenly Father. So live that when occasion comes, you may go to our Heavenly Father and in faith seek his aid in behalf of your loved ones who are sick. I testify to you that the Lord can hear the prayers of his Saints, when they seek him, in humility, in behalf of their sick. I know it.

May the Lord add to the testimony of each of us, build us up and strengthen us, may he give us the spirit of prayer, that we may at all times be able to go to him, and that he at all times will feel able to come to us, in answer to our prayers, I humbly pray, in the name of Jesus. Amen.

ELDER THOMAS E. McKAY

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles

PRESIDENT McKay and Counselors, President Smith, other General Authorities of the Church, and brethren and sisters: It is a great pleasure and privilege for me to be with you this morning, to partake of this fine spirit and to see so many of my brethren and sisters that I have visited in the stakes.

I am especially happy to be here this morning to hear our German choir, and last Saturday night in Huntsville I had the privilege of hearing our Swiss members give a wonderful concert. I am especially interested in these people, as you know, because I have spent considerable time among them—nine birthdays, to be exact, and three missions.

I enjoyed the opening prayer this morning, and I have especially enjoyed President Clark's talk on prayer. I love that theme, and the thought comes to me now of this statement: "Families that pray together, stay together."

I was especially interested also in the wonderful sermon delivered by President McKay in the opening session and in his remarks about his tour in Europe. Most of those countries I have visited.

I was very pleased to hear the greetings from President Bringham in Vienna. If I had time, if I were out in a stake where I was my own boss, I would tell you of the first baptism in Vienna. I had a wonderful experience there.

I love to hear the sermons of these brethren, especially of the First Presidency, and Brother Bowen. I wish he were here. We will miss him, especially will his wonderful sermon be missed in the printed proceedings of the conference.

Of course, I enjoy listening to all the brethren, but I enjoy listening to some more than others. That sounds a little like President J. Golden Kimball. I should not say this, but when these things come into my mind, I generally let them out.

He said, "You know, Brother Thomas, I love all the brethren, but I love some of them a dang sight more than others." Well, I do love to hear all my brethren, and I have especially enjoyed these sermons. I have thought quite often, while President McKay and his charming wife and Lawrence and his fine wife were visiting over in Europe, that I was not afraid of them discovering something that I had done that I should not have done, and that is largely due to the influence of my mother.

Saturday, October 4

Second Day

When I was called on my first mission, just after the return of President McKay from his first mission, forty-two years ago, I was called also to the British Mission; my brother and my father had been there and they had given me names and addresses of people whom I probably would meet, and when I left, they knew I felt very weak, and I was. I was always a home boy, had never been away from home, never been out of the state of Utah—and when I arrived at the station, my parents were there, of course, and my brothers and sisters and a group of young people, and I did not want to break down before those young people. My mother knew that, so she did not say much to me, but she kissed me good-bye, and she said, "My son, come home clean." Her lips quivered, and mine did, as I said, "Mother, I'll come home clean."

That was all we could say without breaking down, but I have never forgotten that promise. It has been a great help to me throughout my life. When I arrived in Liverpool—I had been seasick all the way—I remember dressing and coming out just a few hours before the boat arrived, and passengers looked around at me. I was dressed in a light suit, and was very slender, and I could hear them whisper, "Where did he come from?"

Brother James McMurrin of the European presidency met our boat; and as I shook hands with him, and gave him my name, he asked if I were a brother of David O. McKay. I said I was, and he replied, "if you make half as good a missionary as your brother, we will be satisfied. I think I'll take you to Scotland with me tomorrow night. We are holding conference in Glasgow."

Well, I expected to go there. I had a little black book full of addresses, and I thought that would be all right, only it frightened me to think of conference. But after the meeting the next day, where we each had an opportunity to bear our testimonies, Brother McMurrin came to me again. He put his hand on my shoulder and said:

"Brother McKay, what would you think, and what would your parents think if we sent you to Germany instead of Scotland?"

I dropped my head. I did not know for a minute what to say, and then I remembered what my father told me when he bade me good-bye. I am sure he was inspired. He said, "It does not matter so much where you work, as how you work. You go where the Lord wants you to go."

I repeated that to Brother McMurrin, and he put his arm around me and said, "That is wonderful." He said, "President Schulthies is in Berlin, presiding over the German Mission, and he has written asking for some missionaries who would probably make conference presidents later, and we haven't a missionary in this large group assigned to Germany. I think we will send you there."

Well, I took it with my chin up until I got to my room in the hotel, then my chin went down, and I tell you I had a good cry. But it was the best thing that ever happened to me, brothers and sisters. I should have been welcomed in Glasgow because of my brother and my father before me. It was up to me and the Lord now. I could not speak a word of German. I spent two or three days in London and then went to the World's Fair in Paris, where I visited until I received my appointment from President Schulthies.

I was assigned to Stuttgart, Germany, and by the way, I met Bishop Buehner there. He could understand my language, and I could understand him. He was two years old. I congratulate him on his appointment to the Presiding Bishopric, and I know his parents are proud, also, of his success here, and the success of his five brothers. They had a wonderful father and mother.

I spent a little over three years on this mission—three months in Stuttgart, three months in Munich, and then President Hugh J. Cannon was appointed to succeed President Schulthies, and he called me to preside over the Frankfurt Conference, "Frankfurt on the Main," one of the most beautiful cities at that time in the world. How I love that city!

Brother Edwin Q. Cannon is presiding there now, and, by the way, he was one of my missionaries.

I was released and came home after a little over three years, and oh, the thrill, brothers and sisters, and you young people who are listening in especially, when I met my mother, took her in my arms, and said, "Mother, I have come home clean."

After six years, I was called to preside over the Swiss-German Mission, which included at that time all of Germany, Switzerland, France, Vienna, Austria, Hungary, and part of Rumania. I was still single, which is unusual—for a single man to preside.

I came home after a little over three years. My mother was not there in body, but she was in spirit, and I could say again, and I did, "Mother, I have come home clean."

Twenty-five years later, Sister McKay and I, and our two daughters, (our son was already there) were called to preside over the Swiss-Austrian Mission. Several months before we came home, Brother Rees, who was president of the East German Mission, was released on account of sickness. I received a cablegram from President Heber J. Grant appointing me to preside over the East-German Mission and to continue as president of the Swiss-Austrian Mission until my successor was appointed. They said, "Brother Joseph Fielding Smith will set you apart." He was there visiting the European Mission.

Before he got out of the mission and before he got a chance to set me apart, war was declared, and Brother Smith hurried up to Copenhagen to assist in getting our missionaries home. We sent all our missionaries from the East-German Mission to Copenhagen.

I went back to Basel, Switzerland, my headquarters, where we remained. I was in Berlin, however, when war was declared.

We remained in Switzerland until March, or just before the first of April 1940, when we returned home.

Again I could tell my mother, and I can still tell her, and I hope the Lord will help me so that when I am released from this earthly mission, I can still meet her, which I will, brothers and sisters. I know as sure as I am standing here that she will be there waiting, and as I say, I hope and pray that the Lord will continue to bless me, so that I can say, "Mother, I have come home clean."

That promise to her has always been a help to me, and it is a good thing to have some standard to guide you. I was very happy when Superintendent Curtis of the Y.M.M.I.A. of the Church informed me that the Boy Scouts had a special project this year of getting everybody out to vote. I took occasion to ask a few questions, and, among other things, about that Boy Scout promise, or oath, as it is sometimes called.

It is a wonderful thing for these Boy Scouts to have made that promise: "On my honor I will do my best to do my duty to my God and my country, and to obey the Scout law; to help other people at all times; to keep myself physically strong, mentally awake, and morally clean." I like to use that word, "clean." That is a great promise, and I am sure that that promise as given to my mother has helped me, and that those boys have received strength from that Boy Scout pledge. I am sure there would not be so much crime and corruption if there were closer adherence to the Scout law.

I am reminded of a story that might help. It came from a young boy in prison in the penitentiary. They had held a meeting there. One of our ward choirs had furnished the music. They had had a good speaker, I think it was Dr. Bennion, and after dismissal the inmates were reluctant to leave. There was a fine spirit there, and they remained seated, and quiet.

Saturday, October 4

Second Day

Dr. Bennion leaned over and informally spoke to them, and among other things he said, "I wonder if any of you boys," (and there were quite a number of just boys there) "would like to send a message to your comrades outside."

One young fellow arose and raising his right hand to get permission, said, "Dr. Bennion, I would like to send my pals a message: 'Don't kid yourselves that nobody hain't never going to find out.'"

It is not very elegant language, but I tell you it means a lot—"Don't kid yourself that nobody hain't never going to find out."

It is too bad that some of these men, some of whom are now in jail, and others who are still being investigated had not received that admonition and followed it.

In closing, may I urge, as the Boy Scouts are doing, all of you, to register and vote. I think I spoke upon this subject once before from this pulpit, but it is very dear to me—my right, my privilege to vote.

We have four more days for registering, brothers and sisters. The 7th, the 14th, the 28th, and the 29th of this month. Now, everyone of you, register or else you can't vote.

Sister McKay and I were in Ogden on the invitation of our Ogden Stake high priests' quorum. I was invited to make a few remarks, and I recalled that while I presided over that stake so many years, that quorum had, as a project, getting every member on the tithing roll—and they succeeded.

Then they undertook to make every member a non-user of tobacco. I called attention to that, and then suggested the project at this time, to get all the members and their wives, and the widows, to register, so that we could announce it as an example for all other quorums to follow.

As soon as I sat down, the president arose and said, "President McKay, we accept the challenge; we now invite the presidents of the other 194 quorums, as well as the presidents of seventies and elders and especially all senior members of the Aaronic Priesthood to unite with the Boy Scouts of America in their effort to get all to register and vote.

May I express my appreciation and heartfelt thanks for the gospel. It is the great plan of life and salvation and brings joy and happiness to all who live it.

I bear you my testimony to the divinity of the gospel as revealed to the Prophet Joseph Smith and handed down through the other presidents, including the present leader of the Church, President David O. McKay. I bear you this testimony in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER SPENCER W. KIMBALL

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

I AM DEEPLY CONSCIOUS of the fact mentioned by Brother Thomas E. McKay that not only Brother McKay but most of you would rather hear some speakers than others, and it makes me very apprehensive indeed. I appreciated greatly his testimony. It is good to have Brother McKay with us again.

I appreciated very much the remarks upon prayer by President Clark who has preceded us, and recently it came to my attention that some statistics covering the last eight years were very encouraging, showing that there was a considerable increase in family prayer among the high priests, a greater increase in the seventies, and almost a hundred percent increase in the percentage of elders in this Church who are now having their family prayers, as compared to eight years ago.

I pay tribute to you, my brothers and sisters. I express to you my affection for all the time you devote, the effort you expend, the consecrated energy you give to the Church. It is a disappointment sometimes, however, to find some who are not willing to trust the Lord—to trust in his promise when he says, "Prove me and see." I often wonder why men cannot trust their Lord. He has promised his children every blessing contingent upon their faithfulness, but fickle man places his trust in "the arm of flesh" and sets about to make his own way unaided by him who could do so much.

The Lord has promised:

... prove me ... if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it. (Mal. 3:10.)

The Prophet Moroni stopped abruptly in his abridging to offer his own inspired comments concerning the matter of faith:

I would show the world that faith is things which are hoped for and not seen; wherefore, dispute not because ye see not, for ye receive no witness until after the trial of your faith. (Ether 12:6.)

Father Adam understood this basic principle.

... an angel of the Lord appeared unto Adam, saying: Why dost thou offer sacrifices unto the Lord? And Adam said unto him: I know not, save the Lord commanded me. (Moses 5:6.)

He showed his unwavering faith—his almost unbelievable faith—and since the witness and the miracle follow rather than precede the faith, the angel now sought to enlighten him:

And then the angel spake, saying: This thing is a similitude of the sacrifice of the Only Begotten of the Father. (Idem 5:7.)

In faith we plant the seed, and soon we see the miracle of the blossoming. Men have often misunderstood and have reversed the process. They would have the harvest before the planting, the reward before the service, the miracle before the faith. Even the most demanding labor unions would hardly ask the wages before the labor. But many of us would have the vigor without the observance of the health laws, prosperity through the opened windows of heaven without the payment of our tithes. We would have the close communion with our Father without fasting and praying; we would have rain in due season and peace in the land without observing the Sabbath and keeping the other commandments of the Lord. We would pluck the rose before planting the roots; we would harvest the grain before its planting and cultivating.

If we could only realize as Moroni writes:

For if there be no faith among the children of men, God can do no miracle among them. ...

And neither at any time hath any wrought miracles until after their faith; wherefore they first believed in the Son of God. (Ether 12:12, 18.)

The Master said:

But, behold, faith cometh not by signs, but signs follow those that believe. (D. & C. 63:9.)

And these signs shall follow them that believe. (Mark 16:17.)

To the scribes and Pharisees who demanded signs without the preliminary faith and works the Lord said:

... An evil and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign. (Matt. 12:39.)

The Lord made it clear that faith was not developed by miracles. John said:

But though he had done so many miracles before them, yet they believed not on him. (John 12:37.)

In our own modern times we have eloquent evidence of this. Sidney Rigdon did not retain his membership in the kingdom even though he had, with Joseph Smith, witnessed marvelous signs. Had he not participated in the Great Vision and had he not been the recipient of many revelations? And in spite of all these manifestations from our Heavenly Father, he did not remain in the kingdom.

Saturday, October 4

Second Day

Oliver Cowdery saw many signs. He handled the sacred plates; was visited by Moroni, the ancient; saw John the Baptist; received the Higher Priesthood from Peter, James, and John; and was the recipient of many great miracles, and yet they could not hold him to the faith.

Amassed evidence in signs and works and miracles failed to touch the stony hearts of the Savior's Galilean cities:

Then began he to upbraid the cities wherein most of his mighty works were done, because they repented not:

Woe unto thee, Chorazin! woe unto thee, Bethsaida!

. . . And thou, Capernaum, which art exalted unto heaven, shall be brought down to hell: for if the mighty works which have been done in thee, had been done in Sodom, it would have remained until this day. (Matt. 11:20, 21, 23.)

Paul speaking to the Hebrews said:

By faith Noah, being warned of God of things not seen as yet, moved with fear, prepared an ark to the saving of his house. (Heb. 11:7.)

As yet there was no evidence of rain and flood. His people mocked and called him a fool. His preaching fell on deaf ears. His warnings were considered irrational. There was no precedent; never had it been known that a deluge could cover the earth. How foolish to build an ark on dry ground with the sun shining and life moving forward as usual! But time ran out. The ark was finished. The floods came. The disobedient and rebellious were drowned. The miracle of the ark followed the faith manifested in its building.

Paul said again:

Through faith also Sara herself received strength to conceive seed, and was delivered of a child when she was past age, because she judged him faithful who had promised.

Therefore sprang there even of one, and him as good as dead, so many as the stars of the sky in multitude, and as the sand which is by the sea shore innumerable. (Idem 11-12.)

So absurd it was to be told that children could be born of centenarians that even Sarah doubted at first. But the faith of a noble pair prevailed, and the miracle son was born to father multitudes of nations.

Exceeding faith was shown by Abraham when the superhuman test was applied to him. His young "child of promise," destined to be the father of empires, must now be offered upon the sacrificial altar. It was God's command, but it seemed so contradictory! How could his son, Isaac, be the father of an uncountable posterity if in his youth his mortal life was to be terminated? Why should he, Abraham, be called upon to do this revolting deed? It was irreconcilable, impossible! And yet he believed God. His undaunted faith carried him with breaking heart toward the land of Moriah with this young son who little suspected the agonies through which his father must have been passing. Saddled asses took the party and supplies. The father and the son carrying the fire and the wood mounted to the place of sacrifice.

"Behold the fire and the wood," said Isaac, "but where is the lamb for a burnt offering." (Gen. 22:7.) What a heavy heart and sad voice it must have been which replied: "My son, God will provide himself a lamb for a burnt offering." (Idem 8.)

The place was reached, the altar built, the fire kindled, and the lad now surely knowing, but trusting and believing, was upon the altar. The father's raised hand was stopped in mid-air by a commanding voice:

. . . Lay not thine hand upon the lad, . . . now I know that thou fearest God, seeing that thou hast not withheld thy son, thine only son from me. (Idem 12.)

And as the near perfect prophet found the ram in the thicket and offered it upon the altar, he heard the voice of God again speaking:

And in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed; because thou hast obeyed my voice. (Idem 18.)

This great and noble Abraham:

Who against hope believed in hope, that he might become the father of many nations. . . .

And being not weak in faith, he considered not his own body now dead, when he was about an hundred years old, neither yet the deadness of Sarah's womb:

He staggered not at the promise of God through unbelief; but was strong in faith, giving glory to God;

And being fully persuaded that, what he had promised, he was able also to perform. (Rom. 4:18-21.)

Father Abraham and Mother Sarah knew—knew the promise would be fulfilled. How—they did not know and did not demand to know. Isaac positively would live to be the father of a numerous posterity. They knew he would, even though he might need to die. They knew he could still be raised from the dead to fulfil the promise, and faith here preceded the miracle.

Paul again said to the Hebrews:

By faith they [the children of Israel] passed through the Red Sea as by dry land. (Heb. 11:29.)

The Israelites knew, as did Pharaoh and his hosts that . . . They are entangled in the land, the wilderness hath shut them in. (Ex. 14:3.)

And as Pharaoh's trained army approached with all the horses and chariots of Egypt, the escaping multitudes knew full well that they were hemmed in by the marshes, the deserts, and the sea. There was no earthly chance for them to escape the wrath of their pursuers. And in their terror they indicted Moses:

. . . Because there were no graves in Egypt, hast thou taken us away to die in the wilderness?

. . . It had been better for us to serve the Egyptians than that we should die in the wilderness. (Idem 11-12.)

No hope on earth for their liberation! What could save them now? The gloating armed forces of Egypt knew that Israel was trapped. Israel knew it only too well. But Moses, their inspired leader with a supreme faith, knew that God would not have called them on this exodus only to have them destroyed. He knew God would provide the escape. He may not at this moment have known just how, but he trusted.

Moses commanded his people:

. . . Fear ye not, stand still, and see the salvation of the Lord, which he will shew to you to day: for the Egyptians whom ye have seen to day, ye shall see them again no more for ever.

The Lord shall fight for you. (Idem 13-14.)

The mighty warriors pressed on. Hope must have long since died in the breasts of the timid Israelitish souls who knew not faith. Deserts and wilderness and the sea—the uncrossable seal! No boats, no rafts, nor time to construct them! Hopelessness, fear, despair must have gripped their hearts, and then the miracle came. It was born of the faith of their indomitable leader. A cloud hid them from the view of their enemies. A strong east wind blew all the night; the waters were parted; the bed of the sea was dry; and Israel crossed to another world and saw the returning sea envelop and destroy their pursuers. Israel was safe. Faith had been rewarded, and Moses was vindicated. The impossible had happened. An almost superhuman faith had given birth to an unaccountable and mysterious miracle that was to be the theme of the sermons and warnings of Israel and their prophets for centuries.

Israel was later ready to cross into the Promised Land, the productivity and beauty of which could probably be seen from the higher hills. But how to get there? There were no bridges nor ferries across the flooding Jordan. Too deep for crossing in ordinary times, it was now at the time of harvest impossible to ford. A great prophet, Joshua, received the mind of the Lord and commanded, and another miracle was born of faith.

Saturday, October 4

Second Day

... and as the feet of the priests that bare the ark were dipped in the brim of the water. . . .

... the waters which came down from above stood and rose up upon an heap . . . and those that came down failed, and were cut off: . . .

... and all the Israelites passed over on dry ground, until all the people were passed clean over Jordan. (See Josh. 3:15-17.)

And when

... the soles of the priests' feet were lifted up unto the dry land, that the waters of Jordan returned unto their place, and flowed over all his banks, as they did before. (Ibid., 4:18.)

The elements find control through faith. The wind, the clouds, the heavens obey the voice of faith. It was by and through the faith of Elijah that the drouth, which devastated Israel, prolonged for three interminable years, was finally terminated when repentance had come to Israel.

... Ahab did more to provoke the Lord God of Israel to anger than all the kings of Israel that were before him. (I Kings 16:33.)

And Elijah the prophet declared:

... there shall not be dew nor rain these years, but according to my word. (Ibid., 17:1.)

The brooks dried up; rivers ceased to run; forage was scarce; famine was upon the land; and a king and his people were begging for relief—a people who had lost themselves in the worship of Baal. At Mount Carmel came the contest of power, which was mentioned here by President Clark, when a spectacular incident occurred. At Elijah's command fire came down from heaven and ignited the sacrifice and shocked the Baal worshipers once more into repentant submission.

Miracle followed faith again, and though the heavens were still clear and there was no indication of rain on the parched land, the prophet warned King Ahab:

... Prepare thy chariot, and get thee down, that the rain stop thee not. (Ibid., 18:44.)

With his face between his knees, as he sat on Carmel, Elijah sent his servant seven times to look toward the sea. Six times there were cloudless skies and calm sea, but on the seventh he reported: "Behold, there ariseth a little cloud out of the sea, like a man's hand." (Idem.)

Soon the heavens were black with clouds, and the wind was carrying them to Palestine, and "There was a great rain" and a dry, parched land was drenched in moisture, and the miracle of faith had again made good the promises of the Lord.

It was by the supreme faith of the three Hebrews that they were delivered from the fiery furnace of their king, Nebuchadnezzar. And the king asked:

... Did not we cast three men bound into the midst of the fire? They answered and said unto the king: True, O king.

He answered and said, Lo, I see four men loose, walking in the midst of the fire, and they have no hurt; and the form of the fourth is like the Son of God.

... these men upon whose bodies the fire had no power, nor was an hair of their head singed, neither were their coats changed, nor the smell of fire passed on them. (Dan. 3:24-26, 27.)

Now, if you would discount these miracles of the Old Testament, how can you accept the New Testament? You would also have difficulty in accepting Paul and his associate Apostles, and the Lord Jesus Christ, for they have verified and documented those miraculous events.

Now, brothers and sisters, how can these stories of faith be brought into our own lives? Faith is needed here as much as ever before. Little can we see. We know not what the morrow will bring. Accidents, sickness, even death seem to hover over us continually. Little do we know when they might strike.

It takes faith—unseeing faith—for young people to proceed immediately with their family responsibilities in the face of financial uncertainties. It takes faith for the young woman to bear her family instead of accepting employment, especially when schooling for the young husband is to be finished. It takes faith to observe the Sabbath when "time and a half" can be had working, when sales can be made, when merchandise can be sold. It takes a great faith to pay tithes when funds are scarce and demands are great. It takes faith to fast and have family prayers and to observe the Word of Wisdom. It takes faith to do ward teaching, stake missionary work, and other service, when sacrifice is required. It takes faith to fill foreign missions. But know this—that all these are of the planting, while faithful devout families, spiritual security, peace, and eternal life are the harvests.

Remember that Abraham, Moses, Elijah, and others could not see clearly the end from the beginning. They also walked by faith and without sight. Remember again that no gates were open; Laban was not drunk; and no earthly hope was justified at the moment Nephi exercised his faith and set out finally to get the plates. No asbestos clothes or other ordinary protective devices were in the fiery furnace to protect the three Hebrews from death; there were no leather nor metal muzzles for the mouths of the lions when Daniel was locked in the den.

Remember that there were no clouds in the sky nor any hydrometer in his hand when Elijah promised an immediate break in the long extended drouth; though Joshua may have witnessed the miracle of the Red Sea, yet how could he by mortal means perceive that the flooding Jordan would back up for the exact time needed for the crossing, and then flow on its way to the Dead Sea.

ELDER S. DILWORTH YOUNG

Of the First Council of the Seventy

I REALIZE, my brothers and sisters, that conferences have to run somewhere nearly on time, and in the interest of time, therefore, I shall not Remember that there were no clouds in the sky, no evidence of rain, and no precedent for the deluge when Noah builded the ark according to commandment. There was no ram in the thicket when Isaac and his father left for Moriah for the sacrifice. Remember there were no towns and cities, no farms and gardens, no homes and storehouses, no blossoming desert in Utah when the persecuted pioneers crossed the plains. And remember that there were no heavenly beings in Palmyra, on the Susquehanna or on Cumorah when the soul-hungry Joseph slipped quietly into the Grove, knelt in prayer on the river bank, and climbed the slopes of the sacred hill.

But know this: that undaunted faith can stop the mouths of lions, make ineffective the fiery flames, make dry corridors through beds of rivers and seas. Unwavering faith can protect against deluge, terminate drouths, heal the sick, and bring heavenly manifestations. Indomitable faith can help us live the commandments and thereby bring blessings unnumbered with peace, perfection, and exaltation in the kingdom of God. May this be our desire to develop this kind of faith and may we finally attain the blessings which such perfect faith can bring, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

---

The congregation and the German-Speaking L.D.S. Choir joined in singing the hymn, "Praise To The Man."

President David O. McKay:

Elder S. Dilworth Young of the First Council of the Seventy will now speak to us, and he will be followed by Elder EIRay L. Christiansen.

talk to you about the thing which I had hoped to discuss, but I shall be happy to bear my testimony.

Before I do so, however, I should like

Saturday, October 4

Second Day

just to say that while you are quite an awe-inspiring group from here, broken down into your component parts I realize that you are, like me, just ordinary folk, wanting to serve the Lord, desiring to do what is right and to follow the precepts of those who lead you.

I recognized your humanity yesterday when, while Brother Cowley was reminding us all of our duty to our wives, one couple came within the range of my vision. They sat happily together, but when Brother Cowley mentioned hand-holding, the man suddenly became alive and reached over and took his wife's hand. I could not tell whether it was repentance or whether it was a normal process, but as I looked at her, I am sure it was normal. She did not have that startled look, but basked in what to her was an ordinary procedure. And I am sure, as they listened, Brother Cowley said for him in poetical language, what he should have liked to say to his wife, had he been given the words. And I think she recognized it, too. I glowed along with them and wished that I might be close to mine so that I could do the same thing.

I am a member of the Church. I have been all my life. I accept its teachings. I am convinced in my own soul that I am a child of our Father in heaven, and that the Lord Jesus Christ is the author of my salvation, and that he lives.

I accept without reservation, President McKay as the President of this Church, and therefore, as my President. I recognize him to be a man, and I know, too, as well as I know anything, that one cannot separate a man from his office. I used to think that one could, but one cannot. I am sure that I would love President McKay anyhow. I have had enough dealings with his family to be certain of that. It is a real pleasure to like the man, and then to like him, too, because he is the President of the Church.

I sustain him as a prophet. I do not believe that everything that he says is prophetic, but I earnestly pray always that I may have the gift of discernment, so that when he does speak prophetically I shall be able to recognize it and follow the instruction given.

I recognize him to be a seer. I believe that as the needs of this Church arise, he will be given sight, not only prophecy, but also sight into how things should happen and how things should be done, and having seen, he can interpret to me and to you the things which the Lord tells him to interpret.

I bear witness that he is a revelator, and he will reveal as the Lord gives him revelation all of the things of the kingdom which should come forth during his administration as the President of this Church.

What I say for him, I say for his counselors. I have the deepest and most profound respect and a sort of worshipful love for each of the brethren who assist him. I should like to emulate them. And I do, with all my heart, uphold and sustain them, even as they uphold and sustain him.

Now, I know that there are others who have this prophetic gift given to them, the Twelve and the Patriarch, besides the Presidency. I recognize, too, that it is not their lot to stand here as Presidents of the Church at this moment and tell you what to do, as would the President of the Church, and yet they are prophets, and seers, and revelators. On the occasions on which they preside in meetings, they are given the gift of prophecy, too. Them also, I uphold and sustain with all my heart, as I do my brethren, the Assistants, the Seventy, and the Bishopric.

But I go farther than that, I uphold and sustain with all my heart, too, my stake president. His right it is to receive inspiration from the Lord about how the Ogden Stake ought to operate; I am a member of that stake. I uphold and sustain, also, as having the gift of inspiration for his people, the bishop of my ward. When he comes to my house to ask me to do something or to put me in the way of my duty, I should not be a true member of the Church did I not heed his counsel. If I have any advice to give to you this morning, it is that I believe that obedience starts with the bishopric; that is, the Church member should be obedient to his bishopric, then to his stake presidency, then to the General Authorities. As you learn, bit by bit, to be obedient in the little things, so when the large and great things are propounded to you, you will neither falter by the wayside nor fall.

ELDER ELRAY L. CHRISTIANSEN

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles

MY BROTHERS AND SISTERS. During the year that I have now served as a high priest assigned to assist the Quorum of the Twelve, I have increased my admiration for all of you people who are serving the Lord; for those who are willing to lay their own affairs aside to work on welfare projects; willing to travel for miles and miles, time after time, to attend their meetings, willing to give of their substance, their all, if necessary, for the work of the Lord, without equivocation. I have increased my admiration for these, for you, for all who have thus testified before the Lord that they love him—receiving from the Lord; giving to the Lord. That is as it should be.

How well trained, how well prepared, and how well tested, how useful they will be to him, when he comes again to reign upon the earth! They, I should think, who have proved themselves thus, would be among those whom he shall call forth to administer the affairs of his kingdom under his personal direction.

It is evident that the families of those who are thus engaged in Church work are among the happiest families in the world, because those who thus serve the Lord are recipients of that great blessing, peace of mind, which I think is one of the priceless blessings of life.

But whenever I think of these groups and individuals who thus serve the Lord,

I am thankful and deeply grateful for my testimony. I do not know why I should have been blessed in this day to come forth at a time when the gospel is on the earth and the prophets are on the earth, but that they are, I have no doubt. And my thanksgiving goes to my Father in heaven, for the privilege of standing here now and bearing you my testimony, which I could not do without the gift of the Lord, and I do it in the name of Christ. Amen.

I wonder about those who, with us, have membership in this great Church and yet are satisfied merely to have their names upon the records; who do not feel impelled to give of their substance and of their time and talents, but who are willing to let suffice the fact that they are members of the Church.

Usually, they are born of goodly parents. They are willing to give passive acknowledgment of the truth of the gospel and of the reality of the Church of Jesus Christ. They, sometimes, give contributions but desire to be left alone, requesting that the ward teachers and Relief Society block teachers pass them by, feeling that the teachers can do them no good. How I wish we could do more for these members!

They point with justifiable pride to the devotion to and sacrifices for the Church made by their ancestors, and it is well that they should. My brothers and sisters, we should all be proud of our progenitors. Some of us forget, however, that as someone rightly said, no matter how tall your grandfather was, you have to do your own growing. So it is in this great Church—we all must realize that salvation is an individual matter; that none of us can be taken into the celestial kingdom on the backs of others. We must earn our own position, both here and hereafter. It is not merely an acknowledgment that God lives and that this is the Church of Jesus Christ that will save us, but the application of that knowledge in good works.

Saturday, October 4

Second Day

Jesus once declared,

Not every one that sayeth unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven. (Matt. 7:21.)

And Jacob, speaking to the people in his day, some five hundred years before Christ, spoke of this same thing. He used stronger terms than I would care to use, if I were not quoting him.

But wo unto him that has the law given, yea, that has all the commandments of God, like unto us, and that transgresseth them, and that wasteth the days of his probation, for awful is his state!

O that cunning plan of the evil one! O the vainness, and the frailties, and the foolishness of men! When they are learned they think they are wise, and they hearken not unto the counsel of God, for they set it aside, supposing they know of themselves, wherefore, their wisdom is foolishness and it profiteth them not. And they shall perish.

But to be learned is good if they hearken unto the counsels of God. (II Nephi 9:27-29.)

And so, my brothers and sisters, our knowledge must be translated into service; into good works.

Last spring, I attended the quarterly conference in one of the stakes in southern Idaho. Among the missionaries who reported was Sister Santana, a young woman of Mexican nationality. She had come to that stake to report her mission to those who had sent her. One of the families there had provided the funds for her mission, and it was reported that this Mexican girl had been instrumental in bringing into the Church more than fifty people during her time in the mission field. Among other things, she said through an interpreter; "My testimony is the brightest gem in my possession. It is of more worth to me than is my life. I hope to bear it in good deeds." And she added, to those who had helped her, "Muchas gracias." It touched our hearts to see her with this priceless combination of treasures, a testimony, and a desire to bear it in good deeds.

Any individual who has a testimony that is borne in clean living and in good works can expect to feel in that testimony a tremendous motivating power. It will help to direct him in his life, to guide him, to prompt him, to warn him. It becomes a formidable weapon against evil itself.

Some have asked, "How may one receive a living, impelling, life-directing testimony, such as you speak of? How is such knowledge obtained?" The question was answered by Jesus, when he said:

... My doctrine is not mine, but his that sent me.

If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself. (John 7:16-17.)

So any individual who will qualify himself by doing the will of God, may find this same assurance, and there is no other way that I know anything about.

The source of this knowledge was also explained by the Lord when in speaking to his disciples he asked this question:

... But whom say ye that I am?

And Simon Peter answered and said, Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God.

And Jesus answered and said unto him, Blessed art thou, Simon Barjona: for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven. (Matt. 16:15-17.)

Now, Latter-day Saints accept these teachings, and multitudes testify, from their own experience, that they are true. Testimonies borne by individuals in conformity to the laws of the Lord, and through engaging in good works, are sure to induce happiness and bring contentment and peace to such individuals and to their families. Such testimonies may well lead one to exaltation in the kingdom of God.

On the other hand, those who may say, "Oh, I believe these principles all right, but I am not living as I should," or "I am too busy to accept an assignment in the ward or the stake or the quorum," or "I feel that when I have worked all week at my job, I should have the Sabbath day off, to seek pleasure and relaxation and to do what ever I would like to do." They have a testimony, it seems to me, that is barren and fruitless. To that individual, and perhaps to his family, it will cause them that to lose many of the sweet things of life such as we have heard related here this morning. Indeed such a philosophy may become the means of preventing the realization of the great eternal blessings which the Lord God would have them enjoy!

Again, those of us who bear testimony should live in harmony with our beliefs, declared in the Article of Faith, "We believe in being honest, true, chaste, benevolent, virtuous, and in doing good to all men," and we should reflect these attributes in our daily lives.

Not long ago I was told of a man in one of the professions, who bore his testimony in good deeds, and in "doing good to all men," at least all men who came to him. In spite of the pressure from the group to increase the fees that were being paid by their patients—in spite of recommendations to "make them pay, and to get all you can while you can," this fine man continued to pursue the practice he had followed in charging reasonable rates for his services and avoiding what he thought to be exorbitant and excessive charges.

Now, it seems to me, he is bearing his testimony in good deeds, as Sister Santana wished to do. He has peace of mind. He has his self-respect. He has the respect of his friends, his clients, and incidentally, he has almost more business than he can take care of.

A true measure of one's devotion to a principle is measured not by what he professes, but by what he manifests—day by day.

Twenty-five hundred years ago, a great philosopher, Confucius, put it this way: "Those who know the truth are not equal to those who love it, and those who love it are not equal to those who live it."

Well,

What doth it profit, my brethren, although man say he hath faith, and have not works? can faith save him? . . .

Yea, a man may say, Thou hast faith, and I have works: shew me thy faith without thy works, and I will shew thee my faith by my works.

Thou believest that there is one God; thou doest well: the devils also believe, and tremble.

But wilt thou know, O vain man, that faith without works is dead? (James 2:14, 18-20.)

Throughout the Church, thousands and thousands are testifying by their upright lives that God lives, that they are affiliated with the true Church of Jesus Christ upon the earth and by their untiring service and their desire to keep the commandments of God, leaders and members alike, as Abraham did, testify by their willingness to perform any and all duties that may be required of them of the Lord.

Like Sister Santana, they bear their testimonies in good deeds. They are, "... doers of the Word, and not hearers, only."

May each of us feel some responsibility in reaching out to those other wonderful people, well-born, well-qualified, and capable, and try to help them to translate their dormant testimonies into works and service of which the Lord approves. This I pray, and bear my testimony to the truth of this work, and I do it in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

You have just heard Elder ElRay L. Christiansen, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve.

Our concluding speaker this morning will be Elder Oscar W. McConkie, recently president of the California Mission.

ELDER OSCAR W. McCONKIE

Formerly President of the California Mission

I AM grateful to the First Presidency of the Church for the opportunity they gave me of going to the California Mission. I am grateful to the Council of the Twelve who sustained them in that choice. I am grateful to the people of that great mission, for the sustaining force they gave me while I was there.

I am grateful for the wife that God gave me, who sustained me in all of the work that I was assigned to do, and who did with humility and to my satisfaction at least, the work assigned to her.

I am grateful to all of the parents who loaned to the Lord the fine men and women, some of them boys and girls, who came to labor with me. I am grateful for the faith and the devotion which they gave to the work. I thank my God that he felt me worthy of undertaking that responsibility.

I am grateful to the Brethren that they left us there for four and a half years, and I would have been glad to remain there as long as I lived upon the earth. I am grateful to the Lord that he gave me a good parentage in this Church, that my father accepted the Gospel in this valley, that he remained here, that peace and righteousness settled down upon him and his wife, and that I was privileged to be born under the covenant in the Church of Christ.

I am grateful to God, and I give him all the credit, for the great growth that took place in the California Mission while I was there. I am grateful that the numbers in the mission increased about two and a half times, and that there were far more baptisms per missionary than had ever been known in the mission before.

I am grateful for the sustaining power that rested down upon all those worthy men and women in the mission who gave their energies to the Lord. I thank God for my testimony that he lives, and I am happy today as I stand before you that I have held myself in readiness all the days of my life to fulfill to my best ability whatever requirement has been made of me, and whenever I have had the mental ability to get the inferences that the Brethren sought to give me, I have accepted them, and if I have failed in grasping any intimation from the Brethren it has been because in my ignorance I did not comprehend that which was desired. I trust and pray that if there be such cases, that God will forgive my ignorance, which, I think, is my greatest sin.

My Brethren, I have faith in this work. The energies of my life have been devoted unto it. There has never been anything that has been equal to it so far as I am concerned.

I have a testimony of this work. I love these Brethren who are called to preside. I sustain every one of them. If God should place into my hands a hammer and a chisel, I would not seek to carve anything else out of any of them. I sustain them as they are. I account them called of the living God to preside over this people, and I deem them worthy to do it, and I accept them, and follow their leadership to the very letter when I comprehend it.

I am thankful for the Gospel plan, all of it. I am thankful for the missionary work. I am thankful for the Priesthood activity of the Church. I want to increase my faith in God. From the time I was a little boy, I have prayed with earnest devotion that I might have faith in God, and I remember one time, after I was a man, I had a serious problem before me—it was in the California Mission—and on my bended knees I prayed to God for strength, for wisdom, for understanding sufficient to enable me to accomplish my work, and I shall never forget how it was brought home to me that humility and righteousness are necessary in this work.

As I arose from my knees, the voice of the Spirit spoke to my spirit, for I had asked God to give me faith like unto Enoch and Elijah, because I felt that I must have that kind of faith to accomplish the purpose I was required to seek to accomplish. And the voice of the Spirit said to me: "Enoch and Elijah obtained their faith through righteousness."

Ah! there is a challenge to every man in this Church to have faith through righteousness. There is no other means of obtaining it, and we may pray until our voices fade away, but if we do not have righteousness in our daily lives, we will never have enough faith to win salvation.

If I were going to make an exposition upon faith, which I cannot do now, I would give you the outline of faith that was developed in the School of the Prophets, which is the finest exposition upon faith that I know about.

I would first define for you what faith is, and then I would make a requirement, in so far as requirements are made, that you shall know the attributes of God, that he is a personal being, that he is a God of love, that he is all powerful, and how can a man have faith enough to have salvation if he does not believe that God is all-powerful, or that he knows all things?

There is a feeling growing up in the Church amongst some that God's wisdom is limited. Well, if his wisdom is limited, then the particular problem that bothers one is perhaps one of the things that God does not know about. A man cannot have faith enough to be saved unless he comprehends the attributes of God, and then, knowing all these things, he cannot have faith sufficient for salvation, unless he has the certain conviction in his own heart that his own life is in harmony with the divine will. When he reaches that state, where he is able to comprehend that the things he does from day to day are in harmony with the will of God, then he can go forth like the prophets of old, and nothing that the Lord wants done will be impossible to him, according to his assignment in the Church.

I have a testimony that Jesus Christ lives. I never expect to know that any better than I know it now. I have a testimony that Joseph Smith was and is a prophet of the mighty God. I know that God the Father and Jesus Christ, the Son, appeared unto him, and that Heavenly messengers continued to visit him in the restoration of all of the keys and all of the powers and all of the authorities of the plan of salvation, and I know, and I reverence him with all my heart, that the present president of the Church is called of God as actually as was Joseph Smith, and that these men who are associated with him are called of God, even as the Prophets of old, and that the Lord speaks through them.

I know and have a testimony that the Book of Mormon is true, and that if you will read it and comprehend it, you will grow closer to the Lord than in the reading and comprehending of any other book, and I have a testimony that if I, myself, have salvation, I will have to be faithful in obedience to the commandments of the Gospel, and I will have to endure unto the end.

May God grant that we may be able to do that, that we may not shirk, that we may not fear, but that we may be strong in our faith, and determined in our work, to accomplish the purposes of the Lord. In the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

The speaker to whom we have just listened is Elder Oscar W. McConkie, formerly president of the California Mission, at present president of one of our leading high priests quorums in the Church.

The singing for this session has been furnished by the German-speaking Choir, with Brother Heinz Rimmasch conducting and Brother Alexander Schreiner at the organ. We appreciate the exceptional service rendered by these our brethren and sisters who speak the

Saturday, October 4

Second Day

German language. I have two brothers and two sons who could thank you in German; all I can say is "dankeschön."

They will be with us again this afternoon.

The Choir will now sing "Hallelujah," soloist, Della Niederhauser.

The closing prayer will be offered by Elder John P. Lillywhite, formerly president of the Netherlands Mission, after which this Conference will be adjourned until 2:00 o'clock this afternoon.

Singing by the Choir, "Hallelujah," Della Niederhauser, soloist.

The closing prayer was offered by Elder John P. Lillywhite.

Conference adjourned until 2:00 p.m.

SECOND DAY

AFTERNOON MEETING

Saturday Afternoon, October 4, 2:00.

The fourth session of the Conference commenced promptly at 2:00 o'clock, with President McKay presiding and conducting.

The German Speaking Choir, Heinz Rimmasch, conductor, furnished the choral music for this session.

President David O. McKay:

To the radio audience listening in we are pleased to announce that the Tabernacle is crowded as usual at this the fourth session of the 123rd Semi-Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. To those who are unable to gain admittance or get seats in the Tabernacle, we announce that overflow meetings are held in the Assembly Hall and in the Barratt Hall, where a loud-speaking system and television are operating. The proceedings are also broadcast over KSL of Salt Lake City, and by arrangement through KSL over the stations named at the first session of the Conference, including surrounding states. This session will be televised also over KSL Television Station, Channel 5.

The singing for this afternoon's service will be by the German-speaking Choir, with Elder Heinz Rimmasch conducting, and Alexander Schreiner at the organ. We shall begin the services by the Choir's singing, "Let the Mountains Shout for Joy."

The opening prayer will be offered by Elder J. Robert Price, recently President of the Central Atlantic States Mission.

The Choir sang the hymn, "Let the Mountains Shout for Joy."

Elder J. Robert Price, formerly president of the Central Atlantic States Mission, offered the opening prayer.

The Choir then sang: "Praise Ye The Lord, The Almighty."

President David O. McKay:

Our first speaker this afternoon will be Elder Joseph Fielding Smith, President of the Council of the Twelve. He will be followed by Eldred G. Smith, Patriarch to the Church.

PRESIDENT JOSEPH FIELDING SMITH

President of the Council of the Twelve

I SHALL take for my text a few verses from the forty-sixth section of the Doctrine and Covenants:

"But ye are commanded in all things to ask of God, who giveth liberally; and that which the Spirit testifies unto you even so I would that ye should do in all holiness of heart, walking uprightly before me, considering the end of your salvation, doing all things with prayer and thanksgiving, that ye may not be seduced by evil spirits, or doctrines of devils, or the commandments of men; for some are of men, and others of devils.

"Wherefore, beware lest ye are deceived; and that ye may not be deceived seek ye earnestly the best gifts, always remembering for what they are given." (D. & C. 46:7-8.)

President Clark said we are a singing people, but I am inclined to think, while that is true, we are not a studious people, that as members of the Church we have not taken advantage of our opportunities to learn, to make ourselves acquainted with the plan of salvation, the commandments of the Lord pertaining to our exaltation. We have not considered the Book of Mormon and the Doctrine and Covenants and the Pearl of Great Price as thoroughly as we should have done, and that is also true of the Bible.

The Lord in his mercy and kindness sent angels from his presence to reveal the gospel and to make known the record of the ancient inhabitants of this continent, the Jaredites and the Nephites and Lamanites. Likewise by the inspiration and guidance of his Spirit, he revealed to the Prophet Joseph Smith many of the precious things that were taken out of the writings of the prophets, and we have them restored again. But are we reading them? Are we making ourselves acquainted with these commandments, these precious truths which have been made known for our salvation? Have we ever stopped to think of the great advantage that we have over the rest of the Christian world in this fact, that they maintain that the Bible contains the full word of God, that revelation from him ceased nearly two thousand years ago? Men are left now to depend upon that written word. But the Lord has revealed to us the history of these other ancient peoples. He has given unto us the commandments and the revelations that were given to them, and so earnestly did he feel the responsibility of giving to us this additional information that he sent an angel from his presence to reveal it.

Are we, who profess to believe in the mission of the Prophet Joseph Smith, to testify that angels came to him, and through them that the gospel was restored, the priesthood again revealed and given to men? Do we feel that we are under any responsibilities to search these scriptures and make ourselves familiar with them? I wonder. It is my understanding, I hope I am wrong, that a great multitude of members of this Church have never read the Book of Mormon, are not acquainted with the Doctrine and Covenants, who have not taken the time to consider the commandments that have been revealed for our eternal good, and that to our detriment.

Now we know that there are many spirits abroad in the land, and as the Lord says, some of their doctrines are doctrines of devils; some are the commandments of men. Are we prepared by our knowledge and understanding to segregate these doctrines which are of men and which are of devils, from the truth? Are we living near enough unto the Lord to have that spirit of discernment, that we are entitled, as we would be through our humility and faith, to know the truth that would make us free?

In an earlier revelation, the Lord said: "And whoso having faith you shall confirm in my church, by the laying on of the hands, and I will bestow the gift of the Holy Ghost upon them." (Ibid., 33:15.) We have the right to the guidance of the Holy Ghost, but we can't have that guidance if we wilfully refuse to consider the revelations that have been given to help us to understand and to guide us in the light and truth of the everlasting gospel. We can't hope to have that guidance when we refuse to consider these great revelations which mean so much to us both temporally and spiritually. Now if we find ourselves in this condition of unbelief or unwillingness to seek for the light and the knowledge which the Lord has placed within our reach, then we are liable or in danger of being deceived by evil spirits, the doctrines of devils, and the teachings of men. And when these false influences are presented before us, we will not have the distinguishing understanding by which we can segregate them and know that they are not of the Lord. And so we may become prey unto the ungodly, to the vicious, to the cunning, to the craftiness of men.

Saturday, October 4

Second Day

We all have a right to know the truth. It is a requirement the Lord makes of every member of the Church that he know for himself and have a testimony of the truth in his own heart and not be under the necessity of depending upon anyone else to know that Jesus Christ is the Son of God or that Joseph Smith is a prophet of God. If there is any person in the sound of my voice, a member of this Church, who does not know in his heart that the Father and the Son appeared to Joseph Smith, revealed themselves, and made known again the true doctrine concerning God, then that person has not lived up to his or her requirements, the commandments the Lord has placed upon us, for we should know that fact. We should know that John the Baptist came and restored the Aaronic Priesthood. We ought not to have to depend upon any other source, only the light of truth which is planted in our hearts by the Holy Spirit through our faithfulness. We should know that Peter, James, and John came and restored the Melchizedek Priesthood with all its powers, so that the gospel again could be preached, the knowledge of God declared, and righteousness again be found in the earth, for the salvation of all those who would repent of their sins and turn unto God.

I have in my pocket here an invitation sent to me personally; it may be many of you have received one that was sent to you personally, inviting me to attend one of the churches to make myself familiar with the doctrines. Now the man who sent this had a perfect right to send it. He has a right to send this to you and to give you that invitation, but do you have faith enough, knowledge enough of the gospel of Jesus Christ that you would not be deceived if you should accept the invitation, and go and listen to the doctrines of the church to which this man belongs? Do you know the truth?

I have a testimony, definitely, positively, that our Father in heaven restored the gospel of Jesus Christ, that Joseph Smith told the truth. I know that the Father and the Son appeared to him, just as well as I know I am here. I know that Jesus Christ is the Son of God, the Redeemer of the world, the Savior of men who will repent and receive his gospel. Are we all prepared so that we will not be subject to the cunning craftiness of men, to the false doctrines that are in the world, the teachings that are contrary to the plan of eternal salvation? If we are not, then we need to repent.

I am going to read to you a statement that I made sometime ago which I think is true, and which is a guide to me and I hope may be to you.

So far as the philosophy and wisdom of the world are concerned, they mean nothing unless they conform to the revealed word of God. Any doctrine, whether it comes in the name of religion, science, philosophy, or whatever it may be, if it is in conflict with the revealed word of the Lord, will fail. It may appear plausible. It may be put before you in language that appeals and which you may not be able to answer. It may appear to be established by evidence that you cannot controvert, but all you need to do is to abide your time. Time will level all things. You will find that every doctrine, every principle, no matter how universally believed, if it is not in accord with the divine word of the Lord to his servants, will perish. Nor is it necessary for us to try to stretch the word of the Lord in a vain attempt to make it conform to these theories and teachings. The word of the Lord shall not pass away unfulfilled, but these false doctrines and theories will all fail. Truth, and only truth, will remain when all else has perished. The Lord has said, "And truth is knowledge of things as they are, and as they were, and as they are to come." (Ibid., 93:24.)

The Lord bless you, I pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER ELDRED G. SMITH

Patriarch to the Church

BROTHERS AND SISTERS, I sense very keenly the responsibility in standing here before you, and needless to say, I seek your faith and prayers in my behalf.

It is truly a responsibility and an honor to stand before you, and one cannot help, in standing here, but be conscious of the developments of this age and the many blessings that are ours. Truly this is a choice time, a choice generation in which to live. We have many blessings, beyond our ability to count them.

We have our troubles and difficulties, yet there is none of us who would care to exchange our opportunities in this generation for those of another. There are opportunities, for example, in education, beyond anything we have ever had in the history of the earth. We have educational buildings, school buildings, university buildings, much better equipped than they have ever been before. We have instructors better prepared, with a greater knowledge and a better method in teaching, than we have ever had before. We have books which contain knowledge which has never been given to man before. We have greater opportunities to go to school, to get knowledge and education. There are more scholarships offered. The opportunities for the masses to receive a higher education are increasing. A larger percentage of people are receiving a higher education all the time.

God has poured out knowledge in abundance. This is very evident in the field of science, and especially in medicine, in communication, in transportation. These scientific developments are the minor blessings of this generation. Add to these blessings that of the gospel, with the priesthood and the blessings of eternal sealings.

We have a knowledge of the plan of life. We know where we are going. We then should know that this life should be full of hardships and trials, and only thereby can we grow. Trials which come to us are not those which came to our ancestors. Our posterity will have still different trials, yet we would not care to trade our opportunities of living in this generation for that of living in any other generation we have known of.

Yet, when we look ahead of us in this world of confusion and chaos, my heart goes out in sympathy especially to the youth who have a war and military service staring them in the face. They say, "What is the use of all this education, training, preparation for the future?" We look ahead, and we see political and economic confusion, so complicated, I wonder whether mortals have the ability to solve the problems at hand.

Satan is always trying to thwart the work of the Lord, and the Lord repeatedly uses Satan's efforts to fulfil his own purposes. Satan tried to break up our missionary work, but the Lord is at the helm, directing the affairs of man, and especially his work on earth. What was the source of our missionary supply, was taken and put into one of the greatest mission fields of the day, the armed services. There is a most important missionary work among the servicemen that can be done by none other than the servicemen, themselves. If these servicemen will but live the gospel and teach it to their associates, teach it to those with whom they come in contact, they will do a very great missionary service, that no one else can do.

We have had innumerable experiences from World War II, where people have joined the Church because of watching some serviceman who lived the gospel. And if the servicemen who are members of the Church will be real Latter-day Saints and live the gospel, using what leisure time they may have in a productive, beneficial manner, and in teaching others by example as well as by precept, they will be doing a most important missionary service.

Saturday, October 4

Second Day

After reading the Book of Mormon, ask yourselves, how long would this Korean conflict last if ten percent of the United Nations armed forces were living righteous lives? Then go another step in your imagination, say, if ten percent were Latter-day Saint men living the gospel, and about fifty percent of all the servicemen were living righteous lives, the power of God would touch the hearts of men and bring peace into the world. And I do not know how we can have real peace any other way.

Circumstances are so complicated I wonder whether mortal man has the ability to solve them without the help of the Lord.

We as Latter-day Saints must keep the faith in the future, faith in man, faith in God, live the gospel so that everyone who sees our actions will have a desire to be as we are. They will then sense the happiness and the joy that come to us as the result of our knowledge of the gospel and that are displayed in our everyday life. Thus we will be teaching the gospel.

God will never permit trials to come upon us beyond our power to withstand them, as long as we will put our trust and faith in him.

I think the story of Job is a very good example of that, an example of what life is here on the earth. Briefly and without quoting exactly, the story of Job, to me, tells the story of Satan making the statement to the Lord: Yes, Job is a righteous man; you surrounded him with so much I cannot reach him, but if you would let me go just a little way, if you would take just a little from him, I would show you that Job would curse the Lord. And so the Lord said, All right, I will permit you to go just so far. And so much was taken from Job, and Satan tried again and came back again, and said: If you would let me go just a little farther, I will show you that Job will curse the Lord. And each time, the Lord permitted Satan to go only so far. Satan could not go beyond that which the Lord permitted him. And time after time repeating it, until finally the Lord said, all right, Satan, you may have full control over Job except you cannot take his life. Job by this time had become so strengthened, the Lord had permitted only that to come upon him which Job had strength to resist. Job had thereby been strengthened from it until he had the ability to withstand all the trials of Satan. He had come to a state of perfection. And is that not the state which we all seek to attain? Then, without trials, how can we get there?

Have faith and show your faith in your works. Be of good cheer, Satan cannot stand cheerfulness which comes from righteous living. Accept the present as having the greatest opportunities of life and the future to become greater.

The modern scientific developments are a testimony to me that God is assisting the growth of his work on earth. Most of which has come since the restoration of the gospel. How would it be possible to carry on the administrative affairs of the Church, all over the world, and keep the Church in the unity of one faith and one doctrine, without the benefits of modern methods of scientific developments which we enjoy. How important is the press which makes possible standard instructions in doctrine, and through which we have the scriptures, and other methods of keeping our doctrine a unity all over the world.

How, too, could we do the abundance of sealing work for our dead, without microfilm and other like methods of obtaining records. How blessed are we that the Authorities can travel through the stakes and missions the world over and return so often to report and keep the unity of the doctrine together all over the Church.

How great are the blessings to the world because we have means of travel which permitted President McKay to make this wonderful trip to the missions of Europe, and in such a short time.

Thank the Lord for his blessings. May his choicest blessings be upon us, his people, with ever increasing faith and trust in him, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Elder Eldred G. Smith, Patriarch to the Church, has just addressed us. We shall now hear from Bishop Thorpe B. Isaacson, of the Presiding Bishopric.

BISHOP THORPE B. ISAACSON

First Counselor in the Presiding Bishopric

PRESIDENT MCKAY, President Richards, President Clark, and my beloved brothers and sisters, I am very grateful and thankful for the opportunity of being in attendance at this great conference of the Church, where we can be spiritually built up and strengthened in our faith, for surely we have felt the Spirit of the Lord here in every session of the conference, and we have been built up in our faith, and strengthened in our testimony.

We are here to receive instructions and to listen to the words of the prophets, seers, and revelators and servants of God, our Father.

The Lord said in the Doctrine and Covenants, 88 and 63:

Draw near unto me and I will draw near unto you; seek me diligently and ye shall find me; ask, and ye shall receive; knock, and it shall be opened unto you.

It is my humble and sincere desire and prayer that my Father in heaven will draw near unto me while I speak to you today, and I shall be grateful for an interest in your faith and prayers. This is always a very difficult assignment for me, and I am grateful to the Lord for his sustaining influence on previous occasions. The Spirit of the Lord has been here in rich abundance. Before the conference started, the General Authorities met together, and with the beautiful prayer offered by Brother Lee, surely we felt the Lord's influence. We are meeting in his name. We are meeting to bear testimony as to the truthfulness of his work.

Before I say more, I should like to pay tribute, as suggested by Brother Stayner Richards and Brother Cowley yesterday, to my wife. I am one of that type of men who have a hard time saying the things I ought to say as often as I ought to say them. It is her birthday today, and I want her to know that I am grateful for her. I am grateful that she took me by the hand, as Brother Cowley so beautifully portrayed to us. I am grateful that she has given me encouragement when she has known that I was discouraged and down. I am grateful for her faith. Everything that I do of any consequence, I must credit in a large measure to her and to my Father in heaven.

Sometime ago I had in this great Tabernacle a man and his wife and a boy from the East, a man with whom I have been associated in business but who had never been here before. As he came in here and stayed awhile, after the recital, he said, "There is something different here. What is it?" I gave him a Book of Mormon, and then we walked around, and he asked me again, and I said, "It is a little hard to explain, but I would like to tell you what I think it is. This is a house of worship, and if you could read the prayer that was offered at the dedication, you would know that this is a sacred building, and the thing that makes it different is that the Spirit of the Lord is here." It was not long until he spoke and said: "Well, it has to be something like that."

I want to say just a word to the youth of the Church, the young men and women, the young married couples. I would like to say a few words with reference to the value of your personal

Saturday, October 4

Second Day

testimony, probably your most precious possession.

I realize there is great stress being placed on education, and rightly so. This Church has always sponsored and fostered education. Ever since the Pioneers came here, this Church has supported and sustained schools and universities, seminaries and institutes. The authorities have believed in education, but they have also stressed greatly spiritual, religious education in the hearts and souls of our young people.

Education has brought great credit to the Church and to this state. Just recently, there were four educators making a survey, an educational efficiency survey, on one of our great institutions in the state. They were all from the eastern part of the United States; none of them are native sons; and they have studied the trend of education in this state. They made great research, and the chairman of that committee came to me a while ago and said, "We have discovered two very unusual but very prominent factors about the education in the state of Utah." We are a small state and a poor state, and as we learned this morning from Dr. Woodward, speaking to the welfare workers, only three percent of the soil in this state is tillable, so we are not a rich state. The two factors that this great educator said astounded him were: (1) there is a greater percentage of the population in the state of Utah twenty-five years of age and over who have a high school education than in any other state in the union; and (2) there is a larger percentage of the people of Utah twenty-five years of age and over who have a college education than any state in the union. That is a great tribute to our pioneer fathers and to this Church and to this state.

But I would like to tell you, also, another word from Newton N. Riddell, when he made this comment, speaking of spiritual, religious education:

He who knows books knows much; he who knows nature knows more; but he who knows God has reached the goal of human wisdom.

To the young people, your personal testimony will give you great happiness; a testimony as to the divinity of the Savior of the world, born as a babe in Bethlehem, a testimony as to the teachings of the Savior, the life of the Savior, his crucifixion on Calvary, the actual resurrection of the Savior from the tomb. What for? So that you and I could have eternal life.

Yes, a personal testimony as to the restoration of the gospel in this dispensation, the visit of the Father and the Son to Joseph Smith, the Prophet, as so beautifully given to us by President Joseph Fielding Smith. He was truly God's servant. Then he sealed that testimony with his life's blood as did that marvelous brother of his, Hyrum. Young people, you do have a testimony that this is true, and it will be a source of comfort to you in the hour of need.

Yes, the object of all gospel teachings is to promote faith and build a testimony. Without a personal conviction or without a personal testimony, our teaching may lack warmth and light. Testimony inspires testimony; conviction begets conviction.

A personal testimony after we have received it, I have learned, and I am grateful that I have learned it, needs to be constantly reinforced. We may have had some faith-promoting experience in our lives, and many of us have; we may have even witnessed a miracle, and some of us have. Some one has said our testimony may be a dynamic concept based upon evidence, proof, and revelation. It may have been acquired through study and prayer, but if our testimony ceases to grow, it may finally cease to be.

Therefore, it requires each of us daily to try to improve our lives, strive to discipline ourselves and properly to conduct our behavior.

Our testimony needs to be constantly cultivated and strengthened to remain forceful and alive. A testimony of the gospel of Jesus Christ, a testimony as to the mission of the Prophet Joseph is a blessing earnestly to be desired, to be prayed for, and to be lived for. When once obtained, that testimony will shine as a beacon to others, and its flame will burn that other torches might be lighted; but if our testimony ceases to glow, it may be lost.

In the New Testament, we read of the experience of Saul of Tarsus. He was contending against the truth; he was persecuting the saints. He denied the divinity of Jesus, and then as he was en route to apprehend them and imprison them, he was suddenly confronted by the Master. He saw a blinding light, and he heard the Master say, "Saul, Saul why persecutest thou me?" And Saul said, "Who art thou, Lord?" And the Lord said, "I am Jesus whom thou persecutest." (See Acts 9:4-5.) Saul was stricken blind and led away, but later he was miraculously healed of that blindness. Surely, if any man had had a testimony to justify the feeling of having arrived, if any one experience would seem sufficient to entitle anyone to say, "This is enough, I need no more" Saul had that experience. He had been made to see, but if he had been content to relate his experience to his friends or if he had stopped growing, he would never have become the great Paul the Apostle. Saul of Tarsus was the acorn, and Paul the Apostle was the oak.

During the balance of his life he taught as a great missionary. In bonds he bore his testimony to kings, and on the ship, and in the dungeons. He was inspired by his testimony, and he bore that testimony the rest of his life.

The youth of the Church may sometimes wonder if they have a testimony. They may ask how it may be obtained. Some young people may be discouraged, and they may compare their knowledge and testimony with that of others, but let me plead with the young people never to become discouraged. Always remember that the full-bloom rose was once an unopened bud and that the ripened fruit was once just a blossom and that all great things came from small beginnings.

Yes, it is our individual problem, and probably a continual one, for all of us to make sure as best we can that our lives are such that we can hear the promptings of the Holy Ghost which we have received, that great Comforter, the whisperings of the still, small voice.

The Lord once said,

But he that believeth these things which I have spoken, him will I visit with the manifestations of my Spirit and he shall know and bear record. For because of my Spirit he shall know that these things are true; for it persuadeth men to do good.

And whatsoever thing persuadeth men to do good is of me; for good cometh of none save it be of me. I am the same that leadeth men to all good; he that will not believe my words will not believe me—that I am; and he that will not believe me will not believe the Father who sent me. For behold, I am the Father, I am the light, and the life, and the truth of the world.

Come unto me, O ye Gentiles, and I will show unto you the greater things, the knowledge which is hid up because of unbelief.

Come unto me, O ye house of Israel, and it shall be made manifest unto you how great things the Father hath laid up for you, from the foundation of the world; and it hath not come unto you, because of unbelief. (Ether 4:11-14.)

Prayerful, humble seeking will give you the answer, young people. I would say to all of you whenever you are in doubt, you need never hesitate to know where you can go and get the answer. The Lord will hear you; he will remove those doubts from your mind.

Oh, a testimony does not all come at once, but if continually developed and cultivated, it is a power and a strength that will be felt forever.

As Latter-day Saints our own personal testimony is not alone sufficient. Once acquired and reinforced, it is our duty as individual members of the Church to bear that testimony constantly to the world, to preach the gospel, and to bring salvation to the souls of men.

Saturday, October 4

Second Day

The Savior said:

And if it so be that you should labor all your days in crying repentance unto this people and bring, save it be one soul unto me, how great shall be your joy with him in the kingdom of my Father! (D. & C. 18:15.)

Oh, the Master must have placed great value on every soul; precious are they in his sight.

An ancient philosopher once said:

Unless you bear with the faults of a friend, you thereby betray your own.

Young people, do not lose your testimony. You may discover sometimes that you are in doubt. I think we all have. You may sometimes wonder if your testimony is waning, but let that be a signal to you, let that be the time that you come to one of your brethren, one of your friends; that is the signal for you quickly to associate yourself with the Church and become very active in the Church, that is the time that you must confide in God your Eternal Father.

The person whose fate is most distressing is he who has lost his faith and his testimony. He may live near you or me—he may go about performing his daily work, yet he is very much alone. He is unhappy, and he lacks a sense of belonging. Life seems to have no purpose to him; he is the man who having had a testimony has now lost it, but faith and prayer can return him to us and bring about a renewal of that testimony. It has happened to many, and it will happen again.

I want to plead with my friends and my associates, my brothers, my acquaintances, and with all men, to put aside those things which may be keeping you inactive in the Church. I would say to all men, repent of that which you have done that is wrong, go to your Father in heaven, go to your brethren whom you love. There is no reason you cannot go to your brethren. We love you; your bishops love you; you can come to us about anything; and we will treat you truly as our brothers. Do not live longer on the outside, no matter what is keeping you inactive in the Church, whether it be your profession, whether it be your habits, whether it be that somebody has hurt your feelings; no matter what it is, put it aside. Come back into the pales of the Church, and receive those blessings that the Lord has in store for you. Great will be your joy; great will be your happiness.

It ought not to be hard for us to repent. None of us feel good when we do wrong. All of us feel better when we can go to the Lord and ask his forgiveness and when we can go to our brethren and put our hands in theirs and tell them of our shortcomings. Surely no man will take advantage of that kind of confidence. That is the feeling that exists in this Church. That is the brotherhood that is intended between us as brethren in the priesthood and brothers and sisters in the Church.

God grant that we can each have a strong testimony to pull us over those rough spots in life. I am satisfied the happiest men I know of are these men, and I know why they are happy and you know why they are happy, because of the great testimony they have, because of their living close to the Lord, and partaking of his wonderful and sweet spirit.

May God grant that we may always have that brotherhood that President Stephen L. Richards often talks about. Just the other day I heard him say something like this: "All great men are engaged in some great cause," and what greater cause is there than the cause that we are engaged in, the cause of bringing salvation to the souls of men, and eternal life?

God grant that we may be strong, that we may stay close to the Lord, and when he says, "If you will draw near unto me, I will draw near unto you," (see D. & C. 88:63); may that be our happy lot, I humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

The German-speaking Choir and the congregation will now sing, "O Say, What Is Truth?"

Elder Oscar A. Kirkham, of the First

Council of the Seventy, will speak to us following the singing.

Singing by the Choir and congregation, "O Say, What Is Truth?"

ELDER OSCAR A. KIRKHAMOf the First Council of the Seventy*

I HUMBLY pray that the Lord will bless me, as I address you. How serious and important is this responsibility! Yesterday I read from the Book of Isaiah; the first lines were a theme for the M. I. A. some time ago.

Seek ye the Lord while he may be found, Call ye upon him while he is near. . . .

Then shall thy light break forth as the morning, and thine health shall spring forth speedily; and thy righteousness shall go before thee; the glory of the Lord shall be thy reward. (Isa. 55:6; 58:8.)

I would like to address myself, with the blessings of my Heavenly Father, to my sons. I am very happy that one of them is in the audience today. The others are scattered in different parts of the world. This is the admonition I would give to them: Be worthy, and advance in the priesthood of God.

What a glorious thing it is to be sufficiently humble, to live sufficiently worthy that one may speak and perform and bless and grow in the name of the Lord! What a glorious blessing our Heavenly Father has made possible in his great plan of salvation for the men of his Church to receive the priesthood of God. This great blessing I pray may be part of the blessings that the gospel brings to my sons. I hope they are worthy to advance in that glorious opportunity from deacon to high priest. A truly great adventure? Yes—adventure with the Lord, full of blessings the like of which no man can give you, it will bring them to spiritual heights, and the enjoyment of full living.

How happy I was last summer on shipboard with 627 American youth going to Austria to a world jamboree of Scouts. When the Sabbath day came, we were having a sacrament service. Two of our young men took care of this sacred ordinance of the Lord. A stranger was standing in the door watching the ceremony. He was listening carefully to what was going on, and after these boys, holding the priesthood of God had humbly performed their sacred duty, he walked across the dining room and said to me,

I want two hours. I want them as soon as possible. I have seen nothing like this. I have felt nothing like this on our journey. These young men, blessing the sacred sacrament, calling upon the Lord that they may renew their covenants with the Lord to keep his commandments, that they may have his Spirit to always be with them. This is deeply impressive. Let me meet with you soon.

Yes, truly this is the greatest blessing from God, to speak and perform, to bless and grow in his holy name.

And I would like to express another wish to my sons and I say it with reverence, and with sincere desire: "Be an active Christian citizen." On September 1, President Clark on his eighty-first birthday, was interviewed by the press. I was impressed by the message he gave to them. "This is a great day for each youth," said President Clark, "but he must conquer it for himself, by work, and by right living." This is a theme for a young Christian citizen.

Not long ago I read a story of Benjamin Franklin. On one occasion he went to visit a friend. He took with him his seventeen-year-old son. When he came to the home of his friend, he said to him, "I wish you would bless my boy." The aged man put his hands upon the head of this youth, and said to him, "My son, God and liberty. God and liberty—remember these two words." So I say to my son, and your son, to every mother's son throughout the land, as you exercise the glorious right and privilege of Christian citizenship, let this be ever in your heart and mind, "God and liberty."

Saturday, October 4

Second Day

Next summer, July 17 to 23, fifty thousand boys will camp on the hills of southern California. My, what a glorious experience, a high privilege will be theirs, learning the art of living happily together, and to live as Christians, at least all have expressed their faith in God. I hope your son will be there. I would love to pitch my tent next to his. I would love to see him, as I have seen thousands of others, and before they retire at night, hear them give their prayers to God in thanksgiving and for guidance.

I have a friend whose son was killed in Japan. When his effects were sent home, the parents found a note in his uniform. The note read:

If I happen to die in this war, here is something I want you to do. I have a ten-thousand-dollar insurance policy, and I want you to take that money, and when the war is over, bring to America a Japanese boy and educate him, so that when he may go back to that enemy land, it will help him that he may build his life in the spirit of our democracy.

There is Christian citizenship in its high expression.

I would love to have my son fill a worthy and honorable mission, yes, humbly and worthily. I just returned from touring the Canadian Mission. When I asked the young missionary men what is their greatest spiritual need, nearly all of them would answer, "To be humble—that's my need. To seek the Lord, to know the strength which comes when he is near." What a glorious experience it is for a young man to have the privilege of going on a mission, as a servant of the Lord, and I appeal to this great audience, today, and those listening on the air, God grant to you that high privilege, for the world is on its knees, waiting for you or your son or my son to come and bring the gospel's glorious message, that their lives may be made more beautiful before the Lord with spiritual blessings.

A final wish I make:

Son, go courting with a lovely Latter-day Saint girl, and go to a temple of the Lord and be married there, and build a good Latter-day Saint home.

What a lovely thing it was one year at M. I. A. time when nineteen couples came from California and were married in the temple here at Salt Lake City. How charming! What a delightful excursion that was! How eyes were filled with tears of rejoicing as they stood before the altar of the Lord and were married for eternity. What a beautiful experience when eleven young ladies of one of the Ogden stakes made a dress, a wedding gown, together, and in their turn, as opportunity came, each one of them was married in this lovely dress. There are no more beautiful experiences than these. What a grand expression of love and appreciation it was in Prescott, Arizona, for a Brother Johnson and his good wife to sacrifice and save and plod along through the years until their seven boys and girls had had the privilege of going on a mission. Then one happy wedding anniversary time, the boys and girls had saved quietly, and the bishop had spoken to them about their father and mother, and they also were privileged to go on a mission. What a glorious blessing, and I wish it for my sons and daughters—a happy Latter-day Saint home.

These things I wish for my children and your children, and for them I humbly pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

We shall now hear Elder George Q. Morris, Assistant to the Twelve, who will be followed by Elder Henry D. Moyle.

ELDER GEORGE Q. MORRIS

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles

MY DEAR brethren and sisters, I am thankful for the privilege of being with you in this great conference. As I approach this duty that has been assigned me, I humbly pray for the Lord to direct that which I should say, and I invite your sympathetic feelings and prayers in my behalf.

I think there is nothing any man can say of himself that will tend towards our salvation. The Lord has said that we can do nothing in this work without him. I have been grateful in my heart during these services that we have the truth. How wonderful it is to have the truth upon which to stand; and to have it as a guide, as a support, as an enlightenment. The Apostle Paul referred to the gospel as "the power of God unto salvation." Truth is of God, and only truth tends towards salvation. There is no power in error except to destroy, to spoil, to bring sorrow and regret and failure. We often speak and frequently dwell upon the need for salvation. May we assume that we accept the truth, that we need salvation. We are here in the earth, banished from the presence of God until we come back into his presence through faith and through his gospel and through obedience. We can only come there through principles of truth and righteousness. We can come back into his presence, where we belong, only by following the plan that he has outlined for us. No one else could outline it. That is his prerogative. It is his work and his glory to bring salvation to his children, and he is the one to plan for that salvation. It is planned according to eternal principles.

I urge our young people with all my heart to learn the doctrines of this Church, for in its doctrines, in its precepts, in its teachings is the power of God unto our salvation. I urge the young people in this Church to accept as a fact, that whatever success they may attain to in life, if they do not secure salvation in the kingdom of God, then that success is failure. We are the children of God. We belong back in his presence when this life is over. If we do not reach there, we have failed. Only the principles of eternal life taught in the gospel will bring us to that salvation.

So many people say, "Well, we want to be honest. We want to be good citizens. We want to be true to our neighbors and our friends. We need no intermediary between us and God. We will do what is right and trust to the future." Well, they are leaning on a broken reed. God has prescribed the principles that will save us and exalt us in his presence, and they are embodied in the teachings of the Church. And we are taught these principles because they are necessary for our salvation. I would that all our young people would study the doctrines of this Church faithfully, be constant readers of its scriptures, and know what is truth. Then when they go forth in the world, in their affairs, in college, in their occupations, they would have standards by which to judge all things; and if any things are contacted in their lives that do not conform to the teachings of this Church, that are contrary to it and the teachings and principles of the gospel, then those things should be rejected or laid on the shelf. They should not be adopted.

Now the Lord teaches us that we are the children of God, that we have a Father in heaven. That is a fundamental truth of the gospel. And that we are to worship him and keep his commandments. I remember not long ago reading of a survey made among college students. They were asked to give their conception of what God was like, and one of them said he considered that God was like an oblong cloud. Well, now I don't know where he got that idea, that God was an oblong cloud. He didn't get it out of the teachings of the Lord Jesus Christ or the gospel of

Saturday, October 4

Second Day

Jesus Christ. What salvation can there be in believing that God is an oblong cloud. It is an error. It cannot save. It can only destroy. We frequently go, and our elders have gone to others to bring them the message of the gospel, and as we begin to teach them the reality of God as our Father, they immediately reject the idea of God being in the form of man or being in any form that we can conceive of and understand because they say, in their superior knowledge, that God is unknowable. If we could know God, they say, he wouldn't be God. Well, to such extremes have gone the speculations and rationalizings of men who have not known the truth. Can there be inspiration? Can there be help, such as the brethren have been speaking of in having blessings and guidance and comfort and support, from an unknown God? The teaching of the gospel is that a knowledge of God and of his Son, Jesus Christ is essential for our eternal life and salvation.

We are taught to believe in faith and repentance and baptism, for admission to his Church and kingdom. Can we believe in something else and be saved through it? It is impossible.

I went into a great New York church, one of the finest in New York, at the beginning of last year. There was a splendid audience of men and women. I respect them and give them full credit for sincerity in their worship. It happened to be the time when they received new members into their church. There stood up on the front row about five or six people who had come to join the church. One of the ministers came down to the front seat and said to them, "Do you believe in Jesus Christ?" They said, "Yes." He stepped up to them and shook hands with them, and said, "We welcome you into the church." Now does that mean salvation for them through that church? He didn't say, "I welcome you into the Church of Jesus Christ." He was consistent in that, because people are not brought into the Church of Jesus Christ in that way. The Apostle Peter told them how to come into the Church—when they had repented of their sins to be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of their sins that they might receive the gift of the Holy Ghost. That's a true principle. If we believe in that and obey that principle, then there comes salvation to us as we go forward obeying the truth. And so we may progress with respect to all truth.

The statement is frequently made that the gospel embodies all truth, and I can see one very good reason for saying that, because the Lord says that if we will keep his commandments, we will grow in knowledge and in truth until we have all truth. It is our prerogative as children of God, by obedience, to gain all truth. It is all embodied in the gospel of Jesus Christ.

I hope that when our young men go out to college that they will continue their study of the scriptures, that they will continue their activities in the Church insofar as it is possible where they are located; and if they are desiring with all their hearts to continue in their activities, they will probably find a way of doing it. I believe that young men may go through college and preserve their faith and grow in faith and in intelligence and understanding if they will be faithful and true to their religious obligations, but if they do not do that, they may lose their faith. If there is anyone who wants to go to college and hasn't the spiritual capacity to take on a college education without losing his faith, he had better stay on the farm and do his duty in the Church, and serve his fellow men and serve God, and grow in knowledge and intelligence and power there, because all the things he might get in colleges do not lead to intelligence. If a thing is true, it does. If it isn't true, it does not.

So, my brethren and sisters, thank the Lord for the truth. Thank the Lord for the gospel of Jesus Christ. Thank the Lord for the splendid leaders God has raised up to instruct us and counsel us and direct us. Let our youth preserve teachable hearts and minds, enlightened by the spirit and power of the Holy Ghost. Then they can go through all the colleges in the world, and all the occupations and needed experiences in the world, and preserve their faith and be successful as men among men, and always be thorough Latter-day Saints, and then they are successful indeed.

May God give us power, and the youth of our Church power, to hold on to the faith, to love it with all their hearts, to incorporate it in their lives, to give it first place, so that God may bless and preserve them, and may we all do this and follow this principle, I humbly pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER HENRY D. MOYLE

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

O that I were an angel, and could have the wish of mine heart, that I might go forth and speak with the trump of God, with a voice to shake the earth, and cry repentance unto every people! (Alma 29:1) was the statement of the Prophet of old.

I am sure today in our lives many of us wish that we were something other than we are, thinking likely that their lot is preferable to our own. But Alma said further:

Yea, I would declare unto every soul, as with the voice of thunder, repentance and the plan of redemption, that they should repent and come unto our God that there might not be more sorrow upon all the face of the earth.

But behold, I am a man, and do sin in my wish; for I ought to be content with the things which the Lord hath allotted unto me. (Ibid., 29:2-3.)

I believe that we, as fellow workers in the priesthood, might well take to heart the admonition of Alma and be content with that which God hath allotted us. We might well be assured that we had something to do with our "allotment" in our pre-existent state. This would be an additional reason for us to accept our present condition and make the best of it. It is what we agreed to do.

We are told in the Doctrine and Covenants that

He that keepeth his commandments receiveth truth and light, until he is glorified in truth and knoweth all things.

Man was also in the beginning with

God. Intelligence, or the light of truth, was not created or made, neither indeed can be.

Then the Lord says:

All truth is independent in that sphere in which God has placed it, to act for itself, as all intelligence also; otherwise there is no existence. (D. & C. 93:28-30.)

For that to be true, we had our own free agency in our pre-mortal existence, and whatever we are today is likely the result of that which we willed to be heretofore. We unquestionably knew before we elected to come to this earth the conditions under which we would here exist, and live, and work. So little wonder it is that Alma of old said that we sin in the thought, or in the desire, or in the wish that we were someone other than ourselves. He said further:

Now, seeing that I know these things, why should I desire more than to perform the work to which I have been called?

Why should I desire that I were an angel, that I could speak unto all the ends of the earth?

For behold, the Lord doth grant unto all nations, of their own nation and tongue, to teach his word, yea, in wisdom, all that he seeth fit that they should have; therefore we see that the Lord doth counsel in wisdom, according to that which is just and true.

I know that which the Lord hath commanded me, and I glory in it. I do not glory of myself, but I glory in that which the Lord hath commanded me; yea, and this is my glory, that perhaps I may be an instrument in the hands of God to bring some soul to repentance; and this is my joy. (Alma 29:6-9.)

I have a conviction deep down in my heart that we are exactly what we should be, each one of us, except as we may have altered that pattern by deviating from the laws of God here in mortality. I have convinced myself that we all have those peculiar attributes, characteristics, and abilities which are essential for us to possess in order that we may fulfil the full purpose of our creation here upon this earth.

Once again, that allotment which has come to us from God is a sacred allotment. It is something of which we should be proud, each one of us in our own right, and not wish that we had somebody else's allotment. Our greatest success comes from being ourselves.

I think that we can console ourselves best by believing that whatever is our allotment in life, whatever is our call in the priesthood, the Lord has been wise and just, and I might add, merciful, in giving to us that which we need to accomplish the particular purpose of our call.

Furthermore, when we are in the full exercise of our faculties, and live in obedience to the laws and commandments of God, that which we do in fulfilment of our call as holders of the priesthood or officers in the Church is all that the people who are thus affected deserve. Otherwise, God could not be just, and we know he is.

If we apply that principle to our lives, practically, does it not mean that when the bishop or the stake president, or the President of the Church, calls upon us to fill an office or to render a service to our fellow men, we should accept that call with an assurance that we possess the essential qualifications given to us of our Heavenly Father in order to properly fulfil that mission?

I think this is peculiarly true of those of us who may be called upon missions to go into the world and preach the gospel of Jesus Christ, the highest calling that can come to man, that call which the Savior of mankind gave to his disciples last of all preceding his ascension to heaven, to go into the world and preach the gospel to every nation, kindred, tongue, and people.

I wish we could take to heart the admonition of President Joseph Fielding Smith today and utilize those faculties which God gave us that have been religiously and sacredly allotted to us for our use in the fulfilment of life's mission, that we might be fully qualified through our own efforts, as well as through that endowment which we inherited and received from our Father in heaven to go into the world and preach his gospel to his children who wait in darkness to have truth and light brought to them by men who have been qualified by endowment, and by perseverance, and by their own work thus to accomplish this purpose.

We cannot be satisfied with the fact that we are Latter-day Saints and that we have received the priesthood, and that various calls have come to us. If we have the true perspective of life and of our mission, we would qualify ourselves from youth to meet any and every responsibility that might come to us. That is peculiarly necessary for a people to believe and to practice when they profess to the world that the men who preside over them in the Church and in the priesthood of God have been called of God by those who are in authority to preach the gospel and administer in the ordinances thereof.

If we truly believe the fifth Article of Faith, if we truly believe that we have such a mission upon this earth to fulfil, then indeed will we be diligent in preparing ourselves to meet the responsibilities of life. We shall feel qualified to go anywhere and to listen to any doctrine, whether it be of man or of the devil, and be sure before we go that we will come back firm in the knowledge of the eternal truths that God has revealed in these latter days through his prophets.

We need not fear the philosophies of the world. We will not need any enlightenment or any instruction or any assistance from anyone but the Comforter. For I bear witness to you today that if we accept of the Lord the allotment which he has given to us as our birthright, as our inheritance, and we build upon it as we should, that we will enjoy all through our lives that Comforter which the Savior promised his disciples.

The Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you. (John 14:26.)

I hope and pray, my brethren and sisters, that we will be diligent in understanding and appreciating the eternal truths of the gospel of Jesus Christ, that we will live and not merely exist. There can come into our lives no greater thrill than to be conscious of the fact that we have taken those faculties that God has given us and utilized them as our Father in heaven intended that we should.

I was thrilled beyond measure the other day. I have a little grandson three years of age. I found him and myself in front of a show window. He said: "Granno, buy me something." I looked hastily over the articles, and I thought every article in the window was intended for a little girl, dolls, etc.

I said, "There is nothing there for a boy," but almost in an instant he looked up at me with his big eyes, and he said, "Why, Granno, there is a truck there. Men drive trucks."

I was thrilled to think in that mind three years of age that that power to utilize the intellect, to think and to reason existed there so early in life, and brought to that young man, at the moment at least, the desired results.

Now I hope and pray, my brethren and sisters, that we will all place ourselves in the position where we can utilize these faculties just as that child did, in every circumstance of life, and have come before us, through our obedience, and through the guidance and direction of the Holy Ghost the right answer to all our problems.

May God so bless us I humbly pray in the name of the Lord, Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

We have just listened to Elder Henry D. Moyle of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles.

The German-speaking Choir will now sing "The Lord Is My Shepherd," conducted by Heinz Rimmach, the leader.

The closing prayer will be offered by Elder LeRoy R. Mallory, recently president of the Tahitian Mission, after which this conference will be adjourned until 7 o'clock this evening, when the general meeting of the Priesthood of the Church will be held in the Tabernacle.

Only those holding the Priesthood are invited to be present. Persons not holding the Priesthood will kindly refrain from attempting to enter the building. That session will not be broadcast.

Overflow meetings will be held in the Assembly Hall and Barratt Hall. At both places, we are informed, there will be television.

The session at 10 o'clock Sunday morning will be broadcast over Station KSL and by arrangement through KSL over the stations named in the first session of this conference. That session will also be televised over KSL Television Station Channel 5.

The Church of the Air Broadcast will be from 8:30 to 9 o'clock tomorrow morning. Elder LeGrand Richards of the Council of the Twelve will be the speaker. The Tabernacle Choir Broadcast will be from 9:00 to 9:30 tomorrow morning. Those desiring to attend those broadcasts must be in their seats by 8:20 a.m. The doors will not be opened between broadcasts.

It is requested that the audience, during the broadcasts, refrain from making any disturbing noise. Large crowds will undoubtedly be waiting outside the closed doors. We suggest and earnestly plead with those thus standing that they be courteous when the doors are opened, and considerate to others in the crowd.

Avoid pushing or crowding, please. Let us remember to be courteous and considerate to others who are also standing.

Saturday, October 4

Second Day

The regular session of the Conference will begin at 10 a.m. tomorrow.

The singing for this session has been by the German-speaking Choir under the direction of Brother Heinz Rimmasch, with Alexander Schreiner at the organ. We are truly thankful and appreciative of the service rendered by our brethren and sisters who come from Germany. While you have been singing, our minds have gone back to your friends and your relatives who are in Germany by the thousands. When you write to them, will you please tell them that we thought of them, and that in commendations given you, you were told that you represented them and the Church most creditably. Thank you.

At the conclusion of this meeting, the General Sessions of the Conference will be adjourned until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

The Choir will now sing "The Lord is My Shepherd."

Singing by the Choir, "The Lord is My Shepherd."

President David O. McKay:

The last five sessions in this renowned Tabernacle since we met yesterday morning, and the house has been crowded to overflowing, so far as we can note from this rostrum, the Tabernacle is just as neat and clean in appearance as when we opened the first session. Thank you. Let us continue to keep it so throughout this evening and tomorrow.

Elder Mallory, recently the president of the Tahitian Mission will offer the benediction, and we will stand adjourned until tomorrow morning.

The closing prayer was offered by LeRoy B. Mallory.

GENERAL PRIESTHOOD MEETING

The General Priesthood meeting of the Church was held in the Tabernacle at 7:00 p.m., Saturday evening, October 4, with President David O. McKay presiding and conducting the exercises.

The great Tabernacle was crowded to capacity with men holding the priesthood, also the Assembly Hall to the south of the Tabernacle, and Barratt Hall (60 North Main), in which latter buildings those present listened to the services and witnessed them by means of television. In addition, thousands of men assembled on the Tabernacle grounds and listened to the proceedings by means of amplifiers. A direct wire having been provided for the purpose, between 800 and 1000 brethren of the priesthood assembled in the Joseph Smith Memorial Building on the Brigham Young University campus (Provo, Utah), where they listened by means of radio to the General Priesthood meeting.

President David O. McKay:

I see before me an audience of ten thousand men holding the priesthood, but I fancy I see something far more impressive and glorious, I see in the heart of each of these great leaders, a testimony such as Peter bore to his Master when the latter said, "Whom do ye say that I am?" Peter answered, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the Living God." And the Master said, "Blessed art thou Simon Barjona: for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven. . . . and upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." (Matt. 16:15-18.)

I just feel as I look at you, my brethren, and look into your hearts, that our Savior knowing your testimony, would say, "Upon this rock, I will build my church and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." God bless you and this service, that we may have an inspirational and memorable time together.

The singing during this session will be furnished by the Tabernacle Choir Men's Chorus, with J. Spencer Cornwall as Director, and Alexander Schreiner at the organ. We shall begin by the Tabernacle Choir Men's Chorus singing, "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," and Elder Reuel E. Christensen, President of the South Sanpete Stake, will offer the opening prayer.

The Tabernacle Choir Men's Chorus sang the hymn, "Jesus, Lover of My Soul."

The invocation was offered by President Reuel E. Christensen of the South Sanpete Stake.

The Tabernacle Choir Men's Chorus sang "Discovery."

President David O. McKay:

President W. Noble Waite of the South Los Angeles Stake and other stake presidents in Los Angeles, Southern California, head a committee, members of which have accomplished an outstanding work pertaining to the erection of the Los Angeles Temple. We believe you will be interested in hearing his report.

ELDER WILLIAM NOBLE WAITE

President of South Los Angeles Stake

SOMEONE said yesterday, that this is a frightening experience. I want you to know that I can concur in that statement. Really, I am scared.

I pray humbly that our Heavenly Father will bless me with his Spirit, and that each one of you will offer up a prayer in my behalf, that I may make this report satisfactorily to all concerned.

Last October the Presidents of the Stakes in the Los Angeles Temple area received a commission by the First Presidency. We were called into session. President Richards instructed us that morning, and then at the close of the meeting, he gave out this information to the Presidents: That it is customary in the temple areas for people to make contributions to the temple and "we have decided that possibly a million dollars would be your fair share." Now, President Richards, you do not know how nearly you knocked out fourteen stake presidents with that statement.

We kept our chins up and it was only afterwards when we got out, and we confided in each other that really we were staggered. But we had received the commission, and so our instructions before we left were to make a plan, organize, and submit the plan, and get the approval of the First Presidency and then we would be given the green light to go forward.

We made such a plan, when we got back to Los Angeles, and we submitted it. The First Presidency made some changes and eliminated some of the suggestions we had made, and the plan was finally adopted and as a result we started to raise the million dollars.

It was suggested that we indicate to the people, first of all, how much they should give, that is, how much it was necessary for them to give. We broke it down on a stake level and allocated the quota on a per capita basis to each of the stakes and missions in California.

We put out the literature, the little pamphlet that aided and assisted in the raising of the money, and then we decided we would launch the campaign on February 4th. President McKay agreed to come and start that meeting.

There were 1200 people, those were the leaders, the stake presidencies and the high council, the stake clerks, the bishops and their counsellors, and their clerks, in attendance from all of the stakes and the missions in the Temple area. We called upon each of the stake presidents, and when this plan was submitted to President McKay, he thought, maybe, knowing stake presidents, as he does, they would take too long to speak, all twelve of them or all fourteen of them, but they were given a minute and a half each and of course there was a little method in our moving in that direction, because we asked one or two that we knew were very enthusiastic, to speak first and they committed their people, and then, of course, we sandwiched in some of the others who were not too enthusiastic. By the time we got through they all committed themselves to reach the quota, and that was what we were after.

Saturday, October 4

Second Day

Everything went along very smoothly, but I want the Priesthood of this Church to know, that with all of the organization and all of the planning that the stake presidents did, the whole thing would have fallen flat if it had not been for the soul-inspiring discourse of President McKay. He electrified those 1200 people, and they went out of that meeting with a determination in their hearts that they were going to consummate that commission that was given by the First Presidency.

I talked with any number of them, and they said, "We just can not fail. We will raise the money."

In the plan was this method, that each stake president first would give his fair share. To sell a program you must sell yourself, and the stake president naturally would have to give and if he expected the people over whom he presided to give generously, it was necessary for him to do so.

And then his counsellors and then the stake clerks, and then we called in the members of the high council, and each in turn gave his generous fair share. We called in the bishops and their counsellors, and their ward clerks. We had the leadership, and then we said, "Go out into the wards, and sell this program and give the people the opportunity of receiving great blessings by contributing generously to the Temple." And they did.

We told President McKay in April we would be to Conference and report to him and that we hoped to be able to report that we had raised the million dollars. I think he was quoted in the last Conference as saying that we had raised, that is we had pledged and promised to pay one million six hundred fifty thousand dollars at that time.

Since these pledges have been made, some people seem to be a bit apprehensive as to whether when a person gave a generous pledge he would live up to his pledge. It is our responsibility to follow it up and see that they do in every ward. In every ward in every one of these stakes there is an assistant ward clerk, who has a record of every giver, and a record of how much he has paid. When a person gets behind, he is tactfully reminded of the fact that he is a little behind, and that he is depriving himself of a lot of blessings when he fails to pay the things that help to move the work of the Lord along, and the money comes in.

This organization is set up in every ward. I should like to report now to you, that we are ahead of schedule in the Temple area. We have paid in excess of a quarter of a million dollars in cash, and we are better than $40,000 ahead of the schedule.

I want to assure the First Presidency and the General Authorities of the Church and the Priesthood of the Church, that our people in the temple area will continue to respond as they have done, and we will pay every dollar of the $1,650,000. and not just a million. Not only that, but we have issued ten thousand pieces of literature to pass out to the newcomers into the area and to the converts that have been made. We want everyone to have an opportunity including the individuals who did not give as much possibly as they would have liked to give at the time, together with the inactive ones who felt at the time that they could not give. So we feel definitely that we will raise the $1,650,000. and if any of the brethren have had any fears or apprehension in regard to that, we should like at this time, to allay those fears, because we feel that we are going to raise that amount of money.

In regard to the temple itself, progress is being made, the excavations have been accomplished, the cement is being poured for the foundations. Incidentally, some of you may not know where the temple is located; it is located on the old Harold Lloyd estate, on a hill that overlooks all of Los Angeles, very close to Santa Monica. It is on Santa Monica Boulevard and Selby Avenue. We are in the process of completing a retaining wall completely around this property. It is high enough that it will overlook the whole city. A very beautiful site.

The old building that was there has been renovated, offices have been made out of the building, and they are very comfortably situated.

Soren Jacobsen is the superintendent of construction, and this is something else I should like to say, that possibly no section in the Church is blessed with a greater number of expert mechanics than we have in that area, and they are very anxious, our people are, to contribute of their time, and their talents, in addition to the money they have contributed. We hope they can be given that opportunity, we appreciate there are difficulties in connection with it, but I hope the situation will not get so serious that our people will be deprived of the opportunity and the blessings that will come to them by getting their hands in the mud and plaster and working as they would like to work in the construction of the temple.

I am sure that the way will open up so that our people can contribute of their time and their talents in the construction of the temple.

All of the employment, all of the labor is handled by the employment placement counselor. Dakon Broadhead, who is the employment placement counselor under President Hunter of the Pasadena Stake, is in charge of that work, and all of the employment placement counselors are assisting him. We can supply all of the labor that they will want and that they will need. President Broadhead is doing an excellent job.

We are enthusiastic, my brethren. We are very happy and very proud, and we are very thankful that the First Presidency and the other General Authorities of the Church are building a temple in our area. I am sure it is going to do a great deal of good in Southern California.

I vision a spiritual renaissance in that area. Our people will be spiritually uplifted. It will be a great blessing. We want you people to know that we are happy. We are enthusiastic. We are resolute in our determination to fulfill the commission which was given to us. Unflinchingly and unhesitatingly, we shall move forward doing everything in our power to see that everything goes in accordance with the plans of the First Presidency of this Church.

In closing, I should like to bear my testimony that I know that this is the work of the Lord, I know that we are being guided and directed by men of God, and all we need to do, brethren, is to follow the counsel and never become so wise that we think we know more than those who give the plans for the direction of this great work, and if we get into line and follow the counsel, there is no question as to the outcome.

God help us to be true to the faith, to magnify the Priesthood that we bear, and to assist in rolling the work forward! May God bless us in our determination to do this, I humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Thank you President Waite, your associates and all the good people who are so unitedly putting forth effort to the consummation of that great building, the largest temple built in this dispensation.

We shall now hear from Bishop Joseph L. Wirthlin, Presiding Bishop of the Church who holds the presidency of the Aaronic Priesthood.

BISHOP JOSEPH L. WIRTHLIN

Presiding Bishop of the Church

WITH ten thousand eyes upon you, with ten thousand receptive minds, and ten thousand open hearts before you, an individual in this position must approach his assignment in the spirit of prayer and with a spirit of humility to the end that the Lord's Holy Spirit will give him inspiration for the moment or two that he stands before you. That is my earnest prayer.

One of the most thrilling and inspiring events in connection with the restoration of the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ, took place when two young men who were translating a holy record, came across a passage that had to do with the ordinance of baptism.

It was not clear to them, and as they were wont to do, they went into the woods on the banks of a great river in the state of Pennsylvania, and supplicated the Lord mightily that they might have an understanding relative to the ordinance of baptism, and in answer to that prayer, a heavenly being appeared unto them, announced himself as John the Baptist, indicating to them that he had been sent by Peter, James and John, the First Presidency of the Church in the days of the Apostles, the Presidency of the Holy Priesthood.

Peter, James and John had sent John the Baptist to restore the Aaronic Priesthood, and laying his hands upon Joseph Smith's and Oliver Cowdery's heads, he said these words: "Upon you my fellow servants in the name of Messiah I confer the Priesthood of Aaron, which holds the keys of the ministering of angels, and of the gospel of repentance, and of baptism by immersion for the remission of sins; and this shall never be taken again from the earth, until the sons of Levi do offer again an offering unto the Lord in righteousness." (D. & C. 13)

Brethren, when we think of the marvelous restoration of the Aaronic Priesthood, that divine power that John the Baptist held at the time Christ was upon the earth, it is no small matter to hold the Aaronic Priesthood.

Joseph Smith said, "The Priesthood is an everlasting principle that existed with God from eternity, and will to eternity, without beginning of days or end of years." The keys have to be brought from Heaven whenever the Gospel is sent, the Aaronic Priesthood had been taken from the earth because of the great Apostasy that took place shortly after the Apostles, and in order for it to be restored to mankind, it had to be brought from the heavens. Hence John, the servant of God who had held those keys 2000 years previously returned with it.

Joseph Smith said again: "It is that which places a man in the condition to receive the ministration of angels and to enjoy the presence of God the Father and his Son, Jesus Christ."

In this Church, the Church of the Lord Jesus Christ, there are 113,000 holders of the Aaronic Priesthood. There are thousands of men who hold the Melchizedek Priesthood, and with this precious gift, the Lord expects us to be diligent and earnest in his service. He declared in the 107th Section, 99th verse, of the Doctrine and Covenants: "Wherefore, now let every man learn his duty, and to act in the office in which he is appointed, in all diligence."

We find in the 113,000 members of the Aaronic Priesthood there are 60,000 over the age of 21 years, and 53,000 under the age of 21. In 1951, 3,300 of these brethren over the age of 21 were advanced to the Melchizedek Priesthood, but there were 2516 men who joined the older group of the Aaronic Priesthood, 2516 more than were advanced to the Melchizedek Priesthood.

Some of the factors contributing to the size of the older group of the Aaronic Priesthood of the Church are these: We have noted over the war years that many have enlisted in the Armed Services of the nation at the ages of 16, 17, and 18 and have remained in the Armed Services so long that by the time they have returned home they have attained the age of 21, which has left them without a quorum affiliation.

Another contributing factor is that we do not make enough contacts with these brethren. There seems to have grown into the Church a feeling of segregation. These brethren have felt that they are somewhat apart from the rest of the Aaronic Priesthood. There is a lack of a feeling of belonging to some quorum, and no doubt they have the right to that feeling because these 60,000 men have no quorum affiliations.

With the restoration of the Aaronic Priesthood, the Lord revealed to the Prophet its organization. There were to be quorums of deacons with twelve members; quorums of teachers with 24 members; quorums of priests with 48 members; presided over by a presidency, a quorum president, his two counselors and a secretary, and the head of the whole ward Aaronic Priesthood presidency would be the bishop as the president, and his two counselors.

If all of these 60,000 men were organized into quorums, as the Lord indicated they should be there would be 2793 more Aaronic Priesthood quorums in the Church. If officers were selected for the teachers' and the deacons' quorums, three members in the presidency and one secretary, there would be brought into activity to officer these new Aaronic Priesthood quorums, 7064 officers. Just imagine the potential strength in 2793 new quorums, the available service, and the activity that individual members would derive from priesthood assignments, fulfilling the mandate of the Lord, found in Section 107; verse 99 of the Doctrine and Covenants: "Wherefore, now let every man learn his duty, and to act in the office in which he is appointed in all diligence."

So after careful consideration, the Presiding Bishopric presented the following plan to the First Presidency and the Council of the Twelve which they have approved. The plan is as follows:

We have felt for a long time that the title, "Adult Aaronic Priesthood," should be changed for many reasons. Hence, the names, senior deacon, senior teacher, and senior priest were suggested to the First Presidency and the Council of the Twelve, which they approved. The older group of the Aaronic Priesthood will now be known as the Senior Aaronic Priesthood. Its members will be known as senior deacons, senior teachers and senior priests.

In addition to this vast number of older men holding the Aaronic Priesthood, we have another group of men over the age of 21 who hold no priesthood. There are 20,000 of them. The bishops of the wards are responsible for this group because they are members of the various wards in which they reside.

We are inviting the bishops of the wards in the Church to make a very careful survey of all members of the Aaronic Priesthood over the age of 21, to the end that they might be organized in quorums of deacons, teachers, and priests as the Lord revealed to us through the Prophet Joseph Smith. From their numbers the bishopric should select men to preside over these quorums as presidencies with the exception of the priests' quorum over which the bishop presides.

In addition to organizing these quorums and calling 7000 men to officer them there will be a great need for the help of elders, seventies, and high priests, and in the wards of the Church there are many elders, there are many seventies, there are many high priests, who are available for this glorious service to assist this vast army of the Aaronic Priesthood to effect quorum organizations to the end that they might render the service the Lord expects of them.

The present plan provides one Melchizedek Priesthood adviser to every five men. This plan will continue, these advisers in the Aaronic Priesthood quorums will be of great assistance to the presidencies, each senior member of the Aaronic Priesthood to be visited,

Saturday, October 4

Second Day

persuaded and counseled to join his quorum.

This work demands of all Aaronic Priesthood workers the spirit of tolerance, the spirit of patience and the spirit to persevere and never give up. These men cannot be criticized into activity, neither can they be preached into the Church, but by the spirit of love, tolerance and patience, brethren, they will follow us if we will but mark the way for them.

We will set up as of the first of the year, a study course for the senior members of the Aaronic Priesthood, and as a text we have chosen the book, "A Marvelous Work And A Wonder," written by Elder LeGrand Richards of the Council of the Twelve, one of the great missionaries of the Church, a man, who because of his understanding of the Gospel and his missionary experiences, has had the ability to put into book form the teachings that are necessary to convert people to the Gospel.

We feel that many of these men will need conversion and hence this splendid text will be used during the year 1953. In addition thereto, there should be an activity program. It is true that they have rendered a great service in the Welfare Program. They enjoy working in the Welfare Program, and when they are organized into quorums they should have assigned to them definite projects.

We have the blind in our midst. A survey is now being made of the Church to determine how many of our members are blind. We know in the state of Utah there are over 1200 of them, and we wonder how often they get to sacrament meeting. How many times do they have the privilege of attending Sunday School or their Priesthood meeting?

This would be a fine project for the senior members of the Aaronic Priesthood to take care of, and see that these older brethren and sisters and the blind have the privilege of attending all of their meetings.

We think it would be a fine thing if senior Aaronic Priesthood quorums might organize a personal welfare committee for the purpose of helping any of their fellow quorum members who might be in distress, where there might be sickness and unemployment.

In connection with the Aaronic priesthood work, it seems over the years that one barrier to the activity of our brethren has been the matter of age. The Lord is no respecter of persons with reference to age.

When the Aaronic Priesthood was organized in the days of Aaron and Moses and at the time that Moses was taken away, and the Melchizedek Priesthood was taken away with him, the Aaronic Priesthood was the only Priesthood that the Children of Israel had in their midst. Aaron stood at its head. Twenty-two thousand members of the tribe of Levi were given to him to render the service needed in that priesthood, and in that group of 22,000 men, there were older men and there could have been younger men.

Now in contrast to that I want to call to your attention the ordination of John the Baptist. You will recall that through the centuries, from the time of Aaron to the advent of John the Baptist, the Aaronic Priesthood had deteriorated. It had become an instrument in the hands of wicked men, its powers were taken back into the heavens, and in order to prepare the world for the second coming of the Christ, the Lord sent his servant, John the Baptist, to preach the Gospel of repentance, and of baptism by immersion for the remission of sins, and to call all men to repentance, for, said he: "There is one that will follow me that is greater than I."

John the Baptist was called into the service of the Aaronic Priesthood at a tender age. The Lord revealed this interesting event to the Prophet Joseph in Section 84, verse 28 of the Doctrine and Covenants, when he indicated that an angel from Heaven came down and ordained John at the age of eight days, and so brethren, as far as age is concerned, it is of no consequence.

In the days of Aaron, the Lord selected older men, and in the case of John the Baptist, he selected a child. So as far as the Aaronic Priesthood is concerned, and its responsibilities and the service it must render, age is no barrier.

During the presidency of Peter, James and John, those selected to render service in the Aaronic Priesthood were older men. Paul's message to Timothy declared, "Likewise must the deacons be grave, not doubletongued, not given to much wine, not greedy of filthy lucre;

"Holding the mystery of the faith in a pure conscience.

"And let these also first be proved; then let them use the office of a deacon, being found blameless.

"Even so must their wives be grave, not slanderers, sober, faithful in all things.

"Let the deacons be the husbands of one wife, ruling their children and their own houses well." (I Timothy 3:8-12)

This quotation is an evidence that in the days of the Apostles, men were called to serve in the office of a deacon, in the office of a teacher and in the office of a priest.

As I consider the duties of the Aaronic Priesthood and the duties that Senior members of the Aaronic Priesthood should accept and fulfill with all the dignity and the honor at their command, there are some services in the Aaronic Priesthood wherein experienced and older men are needed.

I refer particularly to the 84th Section, verses 107 to 111 of the Doctrine and Covenants, where the Lord had revealed to the Prophet Joseph that the time had come when the elders and the members of the Melchizedek Priesthood should go out into the world and preach the Restored Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ.

The Lord declared: "Therefore, take with you those who are ordained unto the lesser priesthood, and send them before you to make appointments and to prepare the way and to fill appointments that you, yourselves, are not able to fill.

"Behold, this is the way that mine apostles, in ancient days built up my Church unto me." (D. & C. Section 84:107-108)

Here is a mandate coming from the Lord to the holders of the Melchizedek Priesthood to use members of the lesser priesthood to go before them and to prepare the way, make appointments, and should there be occasions where these brethren of the Melchizedek Priesthood could not keep their appointments, then these brethren of the lesser priesthood are to have that responsibility.

Again the Lord speaks: "Therefore, let every man stand in his own office and labor in his own calling; and let not the head say unto the feet it hath no need of the feet; for without the feet how shall the body be able to stand?

"Also the body hath need of every member, that all may be edified together, that the system may be kept perfect." (D. & C. Section 84:109-110)

So, by the use of the lesser priesthood in connection with the promulgation of the Gospel as the Melchizedek Priesthood carried it forward in the early days of the first Apostles, the Lord requires the use of the lesser priesthood to the end, as he said, that the system may be kept perfect.

I am sure we want to keep the system of the Priesthood perfect today, that the Melchizedek Priesthood cannot say to the lesser priesthood, "I have no need of thee," neither can the Lesser say to the Melchizedek Priesthood, "I have no need of thee," but that they labor together, and be edified together, as the Lord indicates in this revelation.

Again, the Lord goes on to say: "And behold, the high priests should travel, and also the elders, and also the lesser priests; but the deacons and teachers should be appointed to watch over the Church, to be standing ministers unto the Church." (D. & C. 84:111)

And should the time ever come again, and it might come, when the Melchizedek Priesthood will be called out to preach the Gospel to all the world, and that those who shall be left behind to stand as ministers unto the Church, may well be deacons and teachers as the Lord reveals—should that time come, I am sure it will require members of the Aaronic Priesthood, men of experience, and men of judgment.

Saturday, October 4

Second Day

And, there is definitely a place in the Aaronic Priesthood for older men, and there is no such thing as an age barrier. I think as these Aaronic Priesthood quorums are organized and begin to function, and these men qualify to render service, it would be a grand and glorious thing to call upon a senior quorum of deacons to pass the sacrament.

I know of no more inspiring experience than to participate in the administration of the Lord's last supper, and the matter of collecting the Fast Offerings. I am sure they could be most helpful in connection with the younger deacons, particularly in the widely spread areas of the Church, where they might take their automobiles and with a younger companion, visit the homes of the Saints, and gather up the Fast Offerings, that the necessities of life might be in the Bishop's Storehouse, and those who are in distress taken care of, the orphans, the widows, and the unemployed, which Paul called "pure and undefiled religion."

The duties of the ordained teacher are inspiring and uplifting for all who participate in this glorious project of teaching. Senior members of the Aaronic Priesthood should be called upon for this service as soon as they qualify, to go out at first with a member of the Melchizedek Priesthood, to teach the people the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ, to watch over the Church always, to be with and strengthen them, and to see that there is no iniquity in the Church, etc.

I am quite sure that any man who has the spirit of his calling in the Aaronic Priesthood as a teacher would feel it a glorious and a grand opportunity to follow in the footsteps of the great teacher, even Jesus Christ.

The office of a priest offers many glorious and inspiring experiences, particularly when a priest has the assignment to perform the ordinance of baptism. Taking the candidate into the water and raising his arm to the square, he repeats the revealed baptismal prayer which is as follows: "Having been commissioned of Jesus Christ, I baptize you in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost. Amen."

This is a short prayer, but in it there is a great revelation to the world, and that revelation, the restored commission to baptize people in the name of the Father, in the name of Jesus Christ and in the name of the Holy Ghost, was returned to the earth when John the Baptist bestowed these keys upon Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery. This sacred opportunity every senior priest should gladly accept with a testimony in his heart that he has a divine commission and authority.

My, what a glorious experience comes when a priest kneels beside the sacrament table and has the privilege of blessing the broken bread and the cup in commemoration of the sacrifice of the Son of God.

I am sure that all of these services, and all of these experiences will go to building into the hearts of the senior members of the Aaronic Priesthood in this Church, a testimony that they indeed hold authority from on high.

Now in connection with our brethren who hold no priesthood, and who are over the age of 21, they will be invited to attend the deacons' quorums, where they, too, might receive instruction with reference to the Gospel, and the duties of the priesthood.

The question may be asked, "When can these men render service?" May we say they can render service as quickly as they qualify. Among these men there are thousands and thousands of men with noble hearts—good men, good citizens, fine individuals. All they need is leadership, kindness, patience, and I assure you that many of them will readily accept the opportunity of becoming affiliated with one of the priesthood quorums of the Church of Jesus Christ.

May I emphasize again that the bishops of the wards stand as the presidency of the Aaronic Priesthood. They do not preside over the Melchizedek Priesthood. That presidency rests in the presidencies of the stakes and the First Presidency of the Church. The bishops of the wards only preside over Melchizedek Priesthood members as members of the wards, but as members of the ward they can be called upon by the presiding authority, the bishop, to render such service as he may deem necessary.

Now, brethren, if we render service in this, the Priesthood of God, he has made us definite promises, and God always keeps his promises to those who are faithful and obedient. He has promised us in the 84th Section of the Doctrine and Covenants, verses 33 and 34, this:

"For whoso is faithful unto the obtaining of these two priesthoods of which I have spoken and the magnifying their calling, are sanctified by the Spirit unto the renewing of their bodies.

"They become the sons of Moses and of Aaron and the seed of Abraham, and the Church and kingdom, and the elect of God."

Can you anticipate any blessing more desirable than to become the very elect of God? To become the very elect of God anticipates that when we return to him and live with him through the eternities yet to come, it will be in the Celestial kingdom, and that is the objective for which all of us are striving here in mortality.

But all of these blessings are contingent upon this mandate given to us in the 107th Section and the 99th verse of the Doctrine & Covenants: "Wherefore, now let every man learn his duty, and to act in the office in which he is appointed, in all diligence."

I humbly pray that the Lord will bless all of us, that we will learn our duty, that we will act in the offices to which we are appointed with all diligence, to the end that we may become the very elect of God, and live with him in the Celestial kingdom, which I humbly pray will be the blessing of all of us, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

This afternoon, in announcing the Priesthood Meeting, it was stated that the attendance would be confined to the Tabernacle, the Assembly Hall, and the Barratt Hall, and only those holding the Priesthood should attempt to enter, implying that these services, of course, would not be broadcast, as they are not.

However, since the beginning of this meeting, we have received the following: "There are thousands of people on the grounds who are anxious to hear the Priesthood message. Would it be possible to have the loud speakers on. Many of the men here are from distant cities and are disappointed at being unable to hear." Signed by a counselor in a bishopric.

Upon receiving that, the Brethren of the Presidency permitted the loud speakers to be used, so all the proceedings now are being broadcast over our loud speakers on the grounds. If we just had a tent over the Tabernacle Grounds we would have our Priesthood audience.

In addition to that we have just received a telephone message from the Field House in Provo. Brother Terry reports that some 800 to 1000 are listening in over a private line and are getting a clear reception.

Will the ushers kindly make as accurate a count as you can of the attendance in all three buildings, on the grounds, and we shall add this thousand in Provo.

The congregation and all listening in will now join in singing, "I'll Go Where You Want Me to Go, Dear Lord."

---

The Tabernacle Choir Men's Chorus and the congregation sang the Hymn, "I'll Go Where You Want Me To Go, Dear Lord."

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.Second Counselor in the First Presidency*

MY BRETHREN, from his vision, his enthusiasm, and vigor, we seem to have a real Presiding Bishop. I hope that all you bishops will get in training, because if you keep up with him, you are going to have to run. I congratulate him on the very thorough consideration which he has given to the problems which are within his jurisdiction.

My brethren, again, it is a great, I can hardly say pleasure, because this is not a pleasure for me, but it certainly is a great privilege, and a great honor to stand before this great body of the Priesthood, and a great responsibility to try to say something that would be helpful to you, encouraging to you, and perhaps instructive. I do not intend to speak long. President McKay and President Richards are still to talk, the house is warm, and I am sure from the way you are packed in, that you are not too comfortable. We up here have plenty of room. Somebody said, "there is always room at the top."

I have thought I might say just a word, and I can crystallize what I have to say in a very few words, about our living up to our opportunities and our privileges and our rights. We hear so often that these are troublous times and dread times, that we become weary of the constant reminder of something of which we are practically all too fully aware.

I recently had an experience, I am still having it, in my own family, of a dread disease, polio. As I have watched this little granddaughter of mine, who is getting well very rapidly and is promised a full recovery, I have become conscious of how relatively helpless we stand in the presence of some of these modern diseases. It seems as if the medical profession no sooner gets hold of some disease (some that we have known for generations, for centuries, have not yet been conquered), but so soon as the medical profession gets hold of them something else, unknown, pops up to take its place.

This morning in the Welfare meeting, Dr. Woodward was explaining how they were building resistance seeds, and he referred to the smut which affects our grains. He said that nature was just as busy inventing new varieties of smut that we did not know anything about and could not handle, as we were busy in trying to find some way of fighting those we knew about. And it does seem to me sometimes as if that is the way in which nature acts with reference to the bodily ailments of the human family.

Now coming to the point: Brethren, I know, as I know that I am talking to you, that the spirit of the Lord can help, and does help, where medical science is helpless. You have all had, I am sure, that experience. I do not need to tell it to you, but if you have not had it, then if you do have it, you will feel yourselves blessed beyond all measure if you are in a position to go to the Lord and ask for his help.

When physicians tell you that little can be done, that they know nothing about the disease, I tell you, you fall back awfully fast on the Lord, and if we go to the Lord, in humility, having lived reasonably righteously, the Lord will hear us. And I am sure the Lord overlooks many, many imperfections, overlooks some transgressions, doubtless. He gives us the benefit of all of the doubts, and then, it being his will and in his wisdom, he gives us the blessings we ask for, for ourselves or for our loved ones.

I am told that the three-year-old son of Brother Darley, our assistant organist, has just been stricken today with polio. I know what is in that poor man's heart and the heart of the mother. May the Lord bless and heal his little one.

Now, brethren, are you living, and this is the point I want to get out, are you living so that you can go to the Lord with reasonable confidence that he will hear you? Can you go and ask him to heal your little ones? or yourselves? or your wife? If you can, when the time comes you will be happy and you will go to the Lord in faith, and the prayer of faith availeth much.

As I said this morning, it has always seemed to me that in our prayer, and in our faith, we should always say to the Lord, "not our will, but thine be done."

Now, brethren, do not put off putting yourself in order, if you are not in order, yielding obedience to the commandments of the Lord, so that, when the time comes, if it comes, and I pray that it will not come to any of you, but when the time comes, you will be able to go to the Lord with a pure heart, and invoke his blessings upon you.

I have often, I think always, since I have been talking to you here, I have spoken of unity. The Presiding Bishop tonight has pointed out in a striking way, how we can unitedly help to save these tens of thousands of our brethren, bring them back into the fold, get them active, get them so that they have a right to enjoy the blessings of the Priesthood, the rights to which we are entitled. Join hands with the bishop, help him to work out his problems, help to bring these brethren to a knowledge of the truth.

Somewhere in them, if they have ever been baptized and if they have not, if they come from Latter-day Saint families, there is a spark which may be but faintly glowing, but spark it is, and with a breath of helpfulness, solicitation, you can fan that spark into a flame that will build in that man or that woman with faith in God, and ultimately develop in him, a testimony of the Restored Gospel.

Brethren, I wish I could make you feel the urgency of this. I do not know when the Lord is coming. I have no idea about it. But I do know this, that the signs we have today are the signs which he said would precede his coming. Similar signs have been in other days and he did not come. But these signs we do now have, and if the Lord's prophecies, the prophecies of his servants shall come true, and they will, we shall have more than one plague against which to preserve ourselves, against which we shall want to call all the faith that we can possess, to buttress our call to our Heavenly Father for his sustaining power, his comfort, his consolation, and for the healing influences of his Spirit.

God pour this Spirit into the hearts of all of us, I humbly pray, in the name of Jesus. Amen.

PRESIDENT STEPHEN L RICHARDS

First Counselor in the First Presidency

I SHALL be very grateful, my brethren, if I may be blessed in a brief effort to render some help and encouragement in a division of the work which has become very dear to my heart. I speak of the missionary work of the Church.

I bring you a few items of report that may be of some interest since we inaugurated six months ago some few changes in the administration of our work and in plans for it. We have had some little diminution in the stakes in the number of missionaries serving in a stake missionary capacity, but fortunately we have had more converts, and more converts per missionary, than we had even with larger numbers of missionaries, which would seem to be reasonably interpreted as being an indication that the following of careful plans has been productive.

In the foreign mission fields in the last six months, we have had a decline in numbers of missionaries of approximately one thousand, but up to date there has been no sizable decline in the number of baptisms, and in fact some missions with declining numbers have produced more converts, and many more converts per missionary, than in preceding periods, all of which, I believe, can be said to be something of a vindication of good methods, close observance of the standards pointed out for the work, and diligence on the part of our missionaries. I believe that many of our missionaries, now nearing the ends of their mission terms, are really putting in the best efforts of which they are capable, in order to complete their missions with great good to the people to whom they are sent, and with honor and credit to themselves. Unfortunately, in the next six months, it looks as if our decline in the number of missionaries would be very great, because about two years ago, we had large numbers of young men going into the mission field, who in normal course will have reached the end of their missionary terms. Our mission presidents are very much concerned about how to carry forward. Some of them are fearful that some of the outlying branches of the missions, which have recently been organized, may not have the strength to carry forward without missionary help; and we recognize the fact that it will be difficult to meet all the exigencies which may arise with large numbers of our missionaries going home.

Saturday, October 4Second Day

I am pleased to report to you, however, that in recent months we have had some of our returning ex-servicemen respond to missionary calls. It has been encouraging to us to have young men report that they desired to waste no time whatever, and that as soon as they came home and were eligible for a call, they would like to begin their missions. We have admired their devotion to the work, which has prompted them to take this course. And I am permitted to say to you all tonight that in the event these ex-servicemen may make themselves available for missions, that we have decided that if necessary we will not retain them beyond the time when they can avail themselves of their GI schooling privileges. In some cases that will shorten missionary terms a little, but we need the service of these young men so much that we are willing to make that concession.

I would like to say to these young men, and to those of you who may reach them, that if they will make it convenient to enter into missionary service after coming out of the Army or Navy, or wherever they have served, they will add an experience to their lives of value beyond estimation. They will bring into their lives a service, a feeling for service, and a devotion to the Church, and a love for their fellows that they haven't been able to get in the Army, and that they won't get any other place to the same extent. So we will heartily welcome them, if they will prepare themselves on returning home, to undertake missions. And let us all hope that they who come home from this service to country have come home clean and wholesome, without the loss of their testimonies, prepared to go forward and do the missionary work.

We have had at least two instances recently reported which give us much encouragement about these servicemen; you have heard something heretofore about them. We just had a letter from the President of the Japanese Mission, in which he said to us, in substance, "I think it won't be necessary for you to send us any more money to help pay the expenses of local missionaries. Our servicemen have committed themselves to monthly contributions which we think will be adequate to take care of about as many local missionaries as we can get."

And we recently had similar notice from Great Britain that the servicemen there had formed a club and made their commitments to support some local missionaries in the British Mission field. That is surely encouraging. However, with the diminution in the numbers of our foreign missionaries to some of the foreign-speaking countries, it may be very necessary to give some support to local missionaries who may be called to take their place. In South America, over in Germany, and perhaps in other sections, in Mexico, many of the people who are willing to undertake missionary service have not the means to do so, and while they are willing to contribute time, and perhaps some little aid may come from their homes, they can't bear the whole expense.

I am very glad to say to you that since we last reported a condition of this kind there has been a very generous response on the part of good men and women in the Church, and we have been supplied, wholly gratuitously and spontaneously by numbers of men and women, with funds which enable us to give support to some of these missionaries in the foreign mission fields. I can't refrain from mentioning one dear old sister, who said in substance, "I am a product of the missionary system. I shall never cease to be grateful for the blessing that the missionaries brought to me. I herewith enclose a check for $3,000.00 to help support other missionaries." Such was her devotion and her appreciation of the great blessing that the missionary system had brought to her, and, I presume, her family.

Now, my brethren, we encourage you, and particularly the Bishops, to search out all who may be available for missionary service. I lay rather special emphasis upon the returning servicemen because they are in good position to help us very much. We hope you will be careful in sending older people to send those of good health, that they may not break down in the mission fields, and be an embarrassment to themselves and something of an encumbrance to their associates in the mission field.

I believe that none of us could have listened to the President's opening address at this Conference without having his concept enlarged, and his vision extended, as to the scope and universality of the great work of this Church. That was a great contribution to give us all the understanding that this is not just a local cause, confined here to the valleys of the mountains and California, and a part of the United States, and the adjoining sections of Canada and Mexico, but that here is God's work set up for all humanity wherever men may live. And when we received the report of the reception accorded to the President of the Church in the various countries of Europe I am sure it made us all feel that the realization of this world dream of ours for the establishment of Zion is more possible of attainment. And I believe it is possible of attainment.

Following the admonition just given to us by President Clark, if the signs of the time point to the beginning of the end, does not the obligation rest more poignantly upon us to discharge the great duty that we have to God's children in the world, and carry this message of truth to them, so that every man and woman and child may have his election, when he understands what his election means. And I conceive it to be the duty of this great people who constitute the custodians of the truth to spread the truth throughout this entire world. There are no boundaries. There should be no boundaries which preclude our Father's children from receiving a knowledge of the truth, and being permitted to come into his great Kingdom.

So if we regard the missionary work in the light of its great potential, if we think of it as being our first assignment to preach the Gospel to every nation, kindred, tongue and people, may we not be induced to give every consideration possible to the securing of missionaries, to the supplying of missionary funds, and to doing all that lies within our power to carry the Gospel to the peoples of the world.

I congratulate Stake Presidents upon their careful choice of mission presidents in the stakes. There is a great and wonderful field for their service, and I see the time coming in the not-too-distant future when the number of converts they may be able to make will equal if not surpass those that we are able to make in foreign fields, at least until our missionary forces there may increase.

May the Lord bless you, my brethren, and bring this great missionary spirit close to your hearts, for while there are now available to us innumerable facilities, which make the world very small, (methods of transportation and communication have become such that we are readily transported to distant lands, and our voices are carried instantaneously over the globe) not any of these facilities, however much they may conduce ultimately to the advancement of our work, will ever take the place of and supplant that personal contact which is involved in our missionary service. The reaction of one personality upon another, the bearing of a personal testimony to a fellow, in order that he may know and feel the truth that the real missionary carries with him,—nothing will take the place of that, so we will always need to supply missionaries.

I pray the Lord that he will guide and direct us in our missionary efforts, and that he will inspire our people in some way to meet the needs of the hour, and bless mankind with the dissemination of the great truths of the eternal Gospel. I do so in the name of Jesus. Amen.

PRESIDENT DAVID O. McKAY

LAST evening in the meeting of the bishoprics of the Church a youth chorus furnished the music. It was inspiring. At the singing of the closing song I had to leave this building. Tonight, in the presence of all of you, I apologize to those young men and young women and to you bishoprics, 4000 of whom, approximately, were here assembled. It is true, I had an excuse, to meet some eastern men at nine o'clock who had to leave the city at seven this morning, and we met that appointment. But that in no way lessened my sense of having shown what to me, always seems disrespect, if not irreverence, on the part of anybody who leaves a house of worship before the close of the exercises. To the Bishopric, to you bishops, to you leaders who had those young people there, and to them especially I offer my apology.

We have had tonight, as we had last night, presented to us by the Presidency of the Aaronic Priesthood, an expanded vision, of the great work of the Lesser Priesthood. God bless you, the Presiding Bishopric and the bishops throughout the Church, as you enter upon this new activity, and he will bless you if you follow the instructions of your leaders and the impressions that the Spirit of the Lord will give you.

Tonight I have a message in my heart, whether I can give it to you, as I should like, it may be a question, and I pray for your sympathy and faith and prayers.

I am going to lead up to the topic by referring to a kind of will that a man wrote to his son. Among other things he said, "It has not been my fate, in life's sharp struggles to win the honors other men have won. Mine has not been a life of great achievements; I have not done the deeds some men have done. But I have kept unsullied and untarnished that thing, a name entrusted to my care. I have not let dishonor dim its luster, nor have I let shame leave its black mark there." And then, he finally tells what he has done, "I have made, instead, my name synonymous, in all men's minds, with things the most worthwhile." And here, in his opinion, they are: First, "with strength to do the right, though none might see me." Second, "with grit to meet disaster with a smile." Third, "with loyalty to those with claims upon me." Fourth, "with justice equally toward foe and friend." Fifth, "with honor, truth, integrity, square-dealing,—'My word my bond.'"

All the virtues he had striven to develop, it seems, he climaxes, with "My word my bond." And that is the subject of my message to you. The sacredness of promise.

Recently, in this city, a prominent physician lay dying. Realizing that the end was near, he called his sobbing wife to his side and said, "Years ago when I was on a mission I promised a woman who was ill in the hospital that if she did not recover I would do her work in the temple. She did not recover. I tried to get her genealogy but could not, but I have her name, and I ask you now to see to it that my promise to her is fulfilled." His word was his bond. He was called to the other side before he fulfilled it, but he transferred that responsibility to his wife. She came to me following his death, and said, "I have promised to do that woman's work." Now this wife is not a religious woman, and has done very little in the Church, but she has given her promise and she wants it fulfilled. Her Word her Bond!

I have told you before about a man, a prominent English lord, who had to borrow funds from his two friends. To the first he gave his note, but before he could pay that note, his lordship found himself in financial distress again and borrowed from another friend, to whom he gave his promise. When his lordship's income was sufficient to repay those loans, the two men were present. The man who held his lordship's note was surprised to learn that both could not be paid, and that the gentleman intended to pay the second lender, first. To that the first protested, saying, "Your lordship, I was first to lend you and therefore should be paid first." His lordship answered, "You have my note, guaranteeing payment; this gentleman has only my word of honor. I shall redeem my word of honor first." At that the holder of the note pulled the note from his pocket-book, tore it into shreds and threw the pieces into the wastebasket, saying, "There, your lordship, I have only your promise." "As you have put it upon that basis, you shall be paid first."

Only a little, simple incident of a man outside the Church who sensed that his word was his bond.

Fellow members of the Priesthood, do you so esteem your word? In all sincerity I ask it, tonight. You and I have given our words, our covenants.

Do we hold them as sacred as did the people of Ammon, the story of whom you find in the Book of Mormon, who made an oath that they would never shed blood, and the time came when their benefactors were being punished, persecuted, killed, and the people of Ammon thought they would break that oath, but Helaman said no. And so those good men and women preferred death, if necessary, rather than break their word, violate their oath.

You know the story of how two thousand boys went out to sacrifice their lives if necessary, so that their parents would not violate that oath. I wish to read something about those boys.

"And they were all young men, and they were exceedingly valiant for courage, and also for strength and activity; but behold, this was not all—they were men who were true at all times in whatsoever thing they were entrusted." (Alma 53:20.)

That is a great story, and an inspiration to young men in all the world.

Now, the application—Do you realize that we made a promise, a covenant at the water's edge? You and I are pretty well along in years, some of you, but we remember our baptism on our eighth birthday. There was a sense that came to us that we would not swear after that baptism, that we would do whatever our parents asked us to do, that we would do our part, or render service in the Church when called upon to do it. We were only children at eight years of age, that is true, but I can remember those feelings and sentiments as clearly as though they were yesterday. Don't you?

Later we realized what that covenant is. We buried the "old man," with all of his weaknesses, his jealousies, his tendency to slander, that we might come forth and walk in the newness of life. We refer to it now as the covenant made at the water's edge.

You made it, you gave your word. Is your word your bond? I ask the Church, and especially the men who hold the Priesthood.

Again, every Sunday in Sacrament

Saturday, October 4

Second Day

meeting we give our word of honor, that we are willing to take upon us the name of the Son, that we will always remember him, that we will keep his commandments which he has given us, that we may have his Spirit to be with us. What a covenant! and we make it in the presence of one another and in the presence of God whom we are worshipping that day.

Another promise: do you remember what you said when you took your sweet wife through the Temple, your confidence in her, her purity, her worthiness was supreme—as pure as a snowflake, as spotless as a sunbeam, as worthy of motherhood as the purest of virgins. And she had that same confidence in you, as a husband and father; and together you stood in the House of the Lord and covenanted with each other that you would be true.

Is your word your bond? If so, then there should be no divorces, and the man who, because of his tendency to drink, abuses his wife and severs that connection, the man who, through desire to gratify his passion, becomes untrue to his wife, violates his word. There is no other explanation for it.

We are a covenant people. I am thankful we are. We develop the virtues mentioned by the gentleman to whom I referred at the opening of my remarks. We keep unsullied and untarnished our name; we have not let dishonor dim its luster, nor have we let shame leave its dark mark there. We pray for strength to do the right, though none might see us. We want grit to meet disaster with a smile. We teach loyalty to all who have claims upon us. We advise to exercise justice equally to friend and foe. We teach honor, truth, integrity, and square-dealing, but to all this we add sacredness of our word of honor.

God help us to keep our covenants. With all my soul I pray that the Priesthood of the Church may have that power in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

There are in the Tabernacle, 10,251; the Assembly Hall, 2,936; Barratt Hall, 838; on the Grounds, as near as they could count, 3,800. Or a total of 17,885 in attendance on the grounds, and we will add 800 down in Provo, so we have 18,625. What an army! What a power! Oh, it is thrilling! God bless you, you armies of Israel, you leaders in Zion. I repeat with all my heart, God bless you, your wives and your children! May the Church radiate an influence throughout the world that will lead men to peace and good will, I pray in Jesus' name. Amen.

"The Lord bless you and keep you," how appropriate, by the Tabernacle Choir Men's Chorus; and Elder Hollis G. Hullinger, President of the Roosevelt Stake, will offer the closing prayer.

Selection by the Tabernacle Choir Men's Chorus, "The Lord Bless You and Keep You."

President Hollis G. Hullinger of the Roosevelt Stake, offered the closing prayer.

THIRD DAY

CHURCH OF THE AIR

The Church of the Air broadcast was presented Sunday morning, October 5, from 8:30 to 9:00 over radio station KSL and the Columbia Broadcasting System, with Elder LeGrand Richards as the speaker. The following is a report of this service:

The Tabernacle Choir, under the leadership of J. Spencer Cornwall, furnished the singing numbers. Frank W. Asper was at the organ. Richard L. Evans was the announcer.

(Organ and humming Choir: "Sweet is the Work.")

Announcer: The Church of the Air is presented by CBS Radio so that men of many faiths may speak to a nationwide congregation. Today's service is presented in conjunction with the Semi-Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, and comes from the Mormon Tabernacle on Temple Square, through the facilities of Station KSL in Salt Lake City. The speaker will be LeGrand Richards of the Council of the Twelve Apostles of the Church. Music is provided by the Tabernacle Choir under the direction of J. Spencer Cornwall. Frank W. Asper is at the organ.

The Choir opens with a hymn by Eliza R. Snow sung in a setting by Ebenezer Beesley: "Great is the Lord; 'tis good to praise His high and holy name: Well may the Saints in latter day His wondrous love proclaim."

(The Choir sang "Great is the Lord.")

Announcer: "Guide Us, O Thou Great Jehovah. . . . When the earth begins to tremble, bid our fearful thoughts be still; when Thy judgments spread destruction, keep us safe on Zion's Hill."—"Guide Us, O Thou Great Jehovah."

(The Choir sang: "Guide Us, O Thou Great Jehovah"—Hughes-Robinson)

Announcer: "How wondrous and great Thy works, God of praise! How just, King of Saints, and true are thy ways! O who shall not fear thee, and honor thy name? Thou only art holy, Thou only supreme."

(The Choir sang: "How wondrous and Great"—Haydn)

Announcer: We shall now hear on this Church of the Air service LeGrand Richards of the Council of the Twelve Apostles of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, frequently referred to as the Mormon Church. LeGrand Richards was formerly Presiding Bishop of the Church, and, in addition, has long and widely served in civic and business affairs. He has titled today's talk by the scriptural text: "CHOOSE YOU THIS DAY WHOM YE WILL SERVE."

ELDER LEGRAND RICHARDS

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

I GREET you this morning as one who, for many years, has been particularly interested in the problems of youth. I have come face to face with thousands of the young people of this great land. I have looked into their promising countenances, have grasped their hands, have shared their dreams and aspirations. I love them and I feel concern for them. I have come to feel that, more than anything else, they need to be taught faith in God and in His eternal principles. They live in a world of changing standards and attitudes; but God has not changed, for He is the same yesterday, today and forever, and His principles and commandments are immutable.

And so today I should like to direct my remarks to the youth of the land, and to all who lead them. They are at the crossroads, and I speak with their future happiness in mind.

Jesus, the Great Teacher, in order to help men choose the proper course of life, the road which would bring them eternal happiness, said:

Enter ye in at the strait gate: for wide is the gate, and broad is the way, that leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat:

Because strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it. (Matthew 7:13-14)

To every individual comes the responsibility of choosing his way; the wide and broad way, that leadeth to destruction; or the strait and narrow way which leadeth unto life,—and, I should like to add: to respect, achievement and happiness.

With this in mind, I call attention to three of many problems with which our youth are faced. The first I mention is the growing practice of profanity.

Sunday, October 5

Third Day

Our young people are particularly susceptible to it. During the war many communications were received from men in the Armed Forces containing alarming statements such as this:

"I have been amazed, astonished, and disgusted at some of the things I have seen and heard in the six weeks that I have been with Uncle Sam. I never expected to hear the swearing and vile talk that I have heard, not in a so-called Christian country. Where have the parents been to let a generation grow up so morally wrong?"

And to this question might be added: Where have the teachers of our youth been, and have we of the clergy done all that we might have done?

The Lord has never rescinded the commandment He gave to Israel of old through His great Prophet Moses:

Thou shalt not take the name of the LORD thy God in vain; for the LORD will not hold him guiltless that taketh His name in vain. (Exodus 20:7)

Have we as parents taught our children this great commandment in sincerity, so they may have reason to feel their parents believe the Lord meant what He said? It is difficult to understand how a person may truly approach God in prayer, seeking a blessing at His hand, and at the same time be so disrespectful as to take His name in vain. During the dark days of the Civil War, Lincoln issued an order to the Army and Navy which contained the following statement: "The discipline and character of the National Forces should not suffer, nor the cause they defend be imperiled by the profanation of the Sabbath Day or the name of the Most High."

We are told that he went "so far as to admonish a certain general, who was addicted to the habit of profanity, to abandon the habit himself and to use his authority to discourage it among the soldiers."

Profanity is incompatible with reverence. Surely in this critical time in our nation's history, when we need the sustaining help of God, we should see that we offend Him not by reason of our language. I appeal to our young people everywhere to hold in reverence the sacred name of Deity, that they may walk acceptably before the Lord and so that should there come a time in their lives when they need His sustaining help they may go to Him with good conscience and call upon Him with faith that He will hear their plea.

I now pass to a second problem confronting our youth, and that is the indiscriminate and intemperate use of alcoholic beverages. A short time ago I was asked to speak to the inmates of a state penitentiary. At the close of the meeting quite a number remained to discuss their problems with me, and I was invited to return and talk to the Alcoholics Anonymous group. I listened to the stories of some of this group. The leader, a comparatively young man, said something like this: "I thank God for the privilege of being in this institution." I was surprised at what he said, but he went on to explain: "Before I came here I was no good to myself, to my family, or my country. I was just no good—period. But now I have hope that when I leave here I will be worth something to somebody."

Can you imagine a man having followed the "broad" road so far that he could thank God for the privilege of being behind prison bars in the hope that he might be able to extirpate himself, and again be able to plant his feet on the strait and narrow way "which leadeth unto life"?

One cannot go among such men without having his heart touched with great sympathy for them and their families. You think of all the factors which brought them to this status. You think of blighted hopes and aspirations. You wonder if perhaps their parents set them along this path by reason of a bad example. As you look at a man helpless, no longer master of himself, you think of the man who induced him to take his first drink.

The Lord has made it clear that our bodies are the tabernacles of our spirits. We cannot abuse and offend the body without offending our Creator. To our young people I should like to say that we live in a time when competition, whether in war or in peace, demands clear minds and steady hearts. It becomes each of us to refrain from those substances which in any way might impair our abilities or which might place us in a position where we no longer would feel that we were on the Lord's side.

I have time to mention only one other matter and I do so with concern in my heart for our young people. I speak of virtue and chastity. It is encouraging to find men and women in all walks of life who are seriously disturbed about our moral standards. I state my case with a quotation from the "Womans Home Companion" of September, 1949, under the heading "Is Chastity Outmoded?"

"Today we talk about sex with an embarrassed frankness that would have filled our grandparents with amazement and horror. This new liberty of speech has its counterpart in behavior. In many circles the traditional restraints in sex conduct are considered stuffy and out of fashion. Chastity, say modern people, is outmoded."

People may have changed their thinking, but God has not changed. His laws are eternal. Truth is eternal. If we will save our civilization, it will be because we return to an observance of God's laws.

The Lord gave unto ancient Israel the commandment: "Thou shalt not commit adultery." (Exodus 20:14) And the Savior put His stamp of approval upon this commandment and added:

Ye have heard that it was said by them of old time, Thou shalt not commit adultery:

But I say unto you, That whosoever looketh on a woman to lust after her hath committed adultery with her already in his heart. (Matthew 5:27-28)

In the light of such a statement, surely no Christian can feel that chastity is outmoded.

An American prophet, Alma, taught his son Corianton that adultery was "most abominable above all sins save it be the shedding of innocent blood or denying the Holy Ghost"; that "wickedness never was happiness"; and that "no unclean thing can inherit the kingdom of God."

I am happy to represent a people who have taught such from the beginning of our history. We are striving to teach our children, as our parents have taught us, that there is no double standard of morality and virtue in the sight of God; that He expects every man to protect his virtue, and that of every woman, even though it might cost him his life so to do. To the boys of our Church, upon entering the Armed Forces and leaving their homes, the Presidency of the Church made this statement: "Better dead clean than alive unclean."

During the last war, a doctor who was returning from service in the Islands of the Pacific, said to me: "In the islands everyone lets his standards down." Then he added, "But there was a young nurse there from your community whom no man could touch. She said, 'I left my home clean and I am going to return the way I left.'" It was her faith in God, and her respect for the teachings of her parents and church that gave her the courage to choose the strait and narrow way, "which leadeth unto life."

Surely her children and her children's children unto the latest generation will call her blessed for the nobility of her soul. When I think of this girl, and thousands of others throughout the land like her, I compare them with Joseph who was sold into Egypt by his brothers and who later became the savior of his father's family. Potiphar's wife tried repeatedly to seduce him, but as he resisted her and fled from her he said:

... How can I do this great wickedness, and sin against God? (Genesis 39:9)

"How glorious is he who lives the chaste life. He walks unfearful in the

Sunday, October 5

Third Day

full glare of the noonday sun, for he is without moral infirmity. He can be reached by no shafts of base calumny, for his armour is without flaw. His virtue cannot be challenged by any just accuser, for he lives above reproach. His cheek is never blotched with shame, for he is without hidden sin. He is honored and respected by all mankind, for he is beyond their censure. He is loved by the Lord, for he stands without blemish. The exaltations of eternities await his coming." (Message of the First Presidency, October, 1942)

And so I plead with the youth, keep yourselves clean. Virtue may be old-fashioned, but it is the foundation on which great characters, and great families, and great nations are established; and without it decay is inevitable.

I have some fear that we, the spiritual leaders of the people, in our interpretation of the word of the Lord with respect to the great principles of repentance and forgiveness of sin, have so emphasized the principle of forgiveness that an attitude of complacency is growing among us based on the assumption that if we sin a little we may be forgiven to go on our way without loss. I am inclined to believe that we are in need of placing greater emphasis on abstinence from sin and less on forgiveness, for God has not abrogated the law that as ye sow, so shall ye reap.

And so, in conclusion, I should like to urge our youth as they go into the Armed Services, or as they prepare to meet life, to resist the temptation to profane the name of Deity that they may be blameless before the Lord; to keep their bodies free from those substances which will impede their progress; and to live according to the laws of virtue that generations to come may call them blessed.

Finally, a word to those who teach and lead the youth of the land: Our great responsibility is to teach the youth, with the full power of example and precept, that the Lord desires that His children should be happy, and that the way of happiness is righteousness.

If we are remiss in this responsibility, God will not hold us guiltless.

My parting counsel and advice I give unto you in the words of the Prophet Joshua who said in speaking to the hosts of Israel:

... choose you this day whom ye will serve; ... but as for me and my house, we will serve the LORD. (Joshua 24:15)

God help us to choose the right and to assist others so to do, I humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ, our Lord. Amen.

---

(The Choir sang: "The Morning Breaks"—Careless-Pratt)

Announcer: And now the Choir closes this Church of the Air service with words by Harriet Beecher Stowe, sung to the music of Harry Row Shelley in a song that speaks of a glorious eternal continuance: "So shall it be at last in that bright morning, when the soul waketh and life's shadows flee. Oh, in that hour, fairer than daylight's dawning, shall rise the glorious thought, I am with thee."

(The Choir sang: "Still, Still with Thee"—Shelley)

Announcer: You have been attending CBS Radio's Church of the Air, coming to you from the Mormon Tabernacle on Temple Square, through the facilities of Station KSL in Salt Lake City. This service was presented in conjunction with the Semi-Annual General Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, and the speaker was LeGrand Richards of the Council of the Twelve Apostles of the Church. Music was provided by the Tabernacle Choir under the direction of J. Spencer Cornwall. Frank Asper was at the organ. . . .

Time and facilities for the Church of the Air are provided without charge by CBS Radio and its affiliated stations, and in the same spirit the participating speakers and choirs give their services.

CHOIR AND ORGAN BROADCAST

The following broadcast, written and announced by Richard L. Evans, and originating with Station KSL, Salt Lake City, was presented from 9:00 to 9:30 a.m., Sunday, October 5, through the courtesy and facilities of the Columbia Broadcasting System's network, throughout the United States. The broadcast was as follows:

(Organ played "As the Dew," and on signal the Choir and Organ broke into the hymn, "Gently Raise," singing words to end of second line, and humming to end of verse for announcer's background.)

Announcer: Once more we welcome you within these walls with music and the spoken word from the Crossroads of the West.

The CBS Radio network and its affiliated stations bring you at this hour another presentation from Temple Square in Salt Lake City, with J. Spencer Cornwall conducting the Tabernacle Choir, Frank Asper, Tabernacle Organist, and the spoken word by Richard L. Evans.

We open with words selected from the Psalms, sung to the music of C. Albert Scholin: "Hear my cry, O Lord, attend unto my prayer . . . for my soul trusteth in thee—yes in the shadow of thy wings I will make my refuge."

(The Choir sang: "Hear My Cry, O God.")

Announcer: A devotional theme arranged from the music of Franz Josef Haydn is Frank Asper's first organ offering on Temple Square today: "Truth Divine."

(Organ number: "Truth Divine.")

Announcer: The men's chorus of the Tabernacle Choir now recalls a hymn by Annie S. Hawkes: "I Need Thee Every Hour, Most gracious Lord; No tender voice like thine can peace afford. I need thee . . . every hour I need thee."

(The Men's Chorus sang: "I Need Thee Every Hour"—Lowry-Cornwall.)

Announcer: From an Arioso by Handel Frank Asper presents a solid and satisfying sacred song that takes its title from the text: "Thanks to Thee, O Lord."

(Organ selection: "Thanks to Thee, O Lord"—Handel.)

Announcer: And now we hear John Henry Newman's cherished hymn sung in a setting by John B. Dykes: "Lead Kindly Light, amid the encircling gloom; lead thou me on; the night is dark, and I am far from home; Keep Thou my feet; I do not ask to see the distant scene; one step enough for me."—"Lead Kindly Light."

(The Choir sang: "Lead Kindly Light.")

Announcer:

There seems to be little evidence that the Creator of the universe was ever in a hurry. Everywhere, on this bounteous and beautiful earth, and to the farthest reaches of the firmament, there is evidence of patient purpose and planning and working and waiting. Perhaps this is a point to remember when we become too impatient with our own personal problems, or with the great unanswered questions that are in the minds of most of us. And when our troubles trouble us too much, it may be well to take a long look—perhaps a billion light years away, which is presently possible—across "worlds" that can't be counted—in sight of "suns" that can't be numbered—into space that can't be contemplated by the mortal mind of man. "And any man who hath seen any or the least of these hath seen God moving in his majesty and power." (D. & C. 88:47.) Everywhere there is evidence of a long, unhurried plan and pattern and purpose, of intelligence and continuous creation, and of the Creator—which makes one ask in all earnestness: "What is man, that thou art mindful of him?" (Psalm 8:4.) He must be important in the infinite plan and purpose or he wouldn't have the intelligence and the opportunities he has. And yet here on this pin-point planet, where in some ways we serve one another and in some ways we do our best to annihilate one another, the most penetrating mind among us has profound reason to feel small and humble and repentant—for with all our brilliance and accomplishment (and stupidity) we are only children on the sands of the shore of an eternal sea. There is infinitely much that we must leave to time—including some of our troubles and some of our sorrows, some of our unsolved problems, and some of our unsatisfied questions. And a long look at the endless, orderly plan and purpose of the Father of us all may make some of the petty and passing things appear not so important as they have sometimes seemed. And when we find ourselves in conflict and confusion, we can well learn to wait a while for all the evidence and all the answers that now evade us. Thank God for a glorious and interesting world, for truth, and for “infinity” and “eternity” in which to find it—and for faith in the limitless future.

Sunday, October 5

Third Day

(Organ selection: “Prayer Is the Soul’s Sincere Desire”—Careless.)

Announcer: With Frank Asper at the organ we have heard the music and melody which George Careless gave to a beloved hymn by James Montgomery: “Prayer Is the Soul’s Sincere Desire.”

And now we close from Temple

Square this day with a glorious chorus of conviction—an immortal message from the “Messiah”—the Hallelujah Chorus, by Handel: “Hallelujah! for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth. The kingdom of this world is become the kingdom of our Lord and of His Christ; and he shall reign for ever and ever—King of kings, and Lord of lords.”—“Hallelujah.”

(The Choir sang: “Hallelujah Chorus.”)

Announcer: Once more we leave you within the shadows of the everlasting hills. May peace be with you, this day—and always.

This concludes the twelve hundred and seventh presentation, continuing the 24th year of this traditional broadcast from the Mormon Tabernacle on Temple Square, brought to you by CBS radio, and originating with Radio Station KSL in Salt Lake City.

J. Spencer Cornwall conducted the Tabernacle Choir with its three hundred seventy-five singing voices. Frank Asper was at the organ. The spoken word by Richard L. Evans.

In another seven days, at this same hour, music and the spoken word will be heard once more from the Crossroads of the West.

SUNDAY MORNING GENERAL CONFERENCE SESSION

The Sunday morning session of Conference convened at 10:00 a.m.

The great Tabernacle was crowded to capacity long before the time to commence this meeting, great crowds of people having gathered on the grounds and in the building in advance of the hour to commence the Church of the Air broadcast at 8:30 a.m. The Assembly Hall and Barratt Hall were also completely filled with people who listened to the services and watched them by means of television. Thousands assembled on the Tabernacle grounds, the weather being delightful, where they listened to the proceedings by amplifying equipment as the services went forward in the Tabernacle.

President McKay called the meeting to order promptly at 10 o'clock.

President David O. McKay:

For the information of the listening audience, this is the sixth session of the 123rd Semi-Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. We are convened in the Tabernacle on Temple Square in Salt Lake City.

We have just received word that Dr. Widsøe, member of the Council of the Twelve, is not able to attend this session and has not been able to attend the previous sessions because of ill health. We should like to say that this is the first Conference in 64 years that Brother Widtsoe has missed, other than when he has been out of the state. Elder A. E. Bowen is confined to his room because of illness, but he is much better than he was when he was stricken a few months ago in the Temple while he was assembled with the Brethren. He has our love. If you are listening in, Brother Bowen, you have our faith and prayers and love for your complete recovery, and all the thousands who are assembled join in that prayer.

We have received word just now that Brother W. W. Seegmiller passed away last evening. We make this announcement because his former missionaries and many friends from all over the state would like to be informed of his passing. We do not know when the funeral services will be held, probably Tuesday or Wednesday, in the Bonneville Ward.

The services this morning will be broadcast in the Assembly Hall and Barratt Hall over the loud-speaking system and by television. The proceedings of this session will be broadcast also over station KSL and by arrangement through KSL over the stations named in the first session of this conference. We shall not repeat the names, but we wish the stations to accept our appreciation for their cooperation in broadcasting the proceedings of this great conference. This session will also be televised over the KSL television station, channel five.

The singing at this morning's session of the Conference will be by the Tabernacle Choir, with J. Spencer Cornwall conducting and Elder Frank W. Asper at the organ.

We shall begin the services by the Congregation and the Choir singing, "Come, Come, Ye Saints," conducted by Brother Cornwall.

The opening prayer will be offered by Samuel I. Goodwin, Patriarch to the Inglewood Stake.

The Tabernacle Choir and congregation, under the direction of J. Spencer Cornwall, sang the hymn, "Come, Come, Ye Saints."

Elder Samuel Goodwin, Patriarch to the Inglewood Stake, offered the invocation.

The Tabernacle Choir then sang the anthem, "O Divine Redeemer."

President David O. McKay:

President Stephen L. Richards of the First Presidency of the Church will be our first speaker. President Richards will be followed by Elder Levi Edgar Young.

PRESIDENT STEPHEN L RICHARDS

First Counselor in the First Presidency

I FEEL very deeply the responsibility of this great opportunity. I assure you I need the aid of the Holy Spirit, and I humbly pray that I may enjoy it.

I desire to use this opportunity to extend an invitation. In giving this invitation I feel that I shall have the approval and support of my associates in the Presiding Councils of the Church, not necessarily in its manner of presentation, but in its substance, and that they will sustain me in speaking for them as well as for myself. To the people of the Church, there is nothing novel in this invitation. Although it has gone out to the people of the world for more than a century, there are still few of the world who fully understand its import.

This is the invitation, addressed:

To All Men, Women, and Children

Dear Friends:

You are cordially and earnestly in-

Sunday, October 5

Third Day

vited to participate in building the kingdom of God in the earth.

Place—Everywhere.

Time—Now.

Signed:

THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER-DAY SAINTS

The acceptance of this invitation will not materially alter the living habits of many good people. Those who have within their hearts a love of God and their fellow men, and devote themselves to Christian service, will discover in identifying themselves with our Father's kingdom a significance to their high idealism and their humanitarian service which will surpass any concept of living they have ever known. They who have not conformed their lives to the divine will and have succumbed to the weaknesses of the flesh, will discover that in participation in the kingdom there is help, merciful and understanding, which fosters repentance and forgiveness and gives strength and courage to overcome and be happy.

I shall try to tell you something about the kingdom and some of its features which hold so much of attraction and promise to all the various segments of the world society.

First, there is the common man of the world. I use "common" in no derogatory sense. The world makes distinctions among men on the basis of education, wealth, and position. Fundamentally, I make no such distinctions, but we are all obliged to admit that the great preponderance of all men are not in worldly preferential classes. This common man in some respects is the most important element in the world society. In democratic nations, where aristocracy, caste, and statism do not circumscribe his activities, he often rises to leadership. Likewise in democratic countries, he chooses the leadership because of his voting preponderance. Perhaps even more importantly, he is at the head of most of the households of the world. He begets its populations, supports its infancy and youth, influences and in large measure determines social and other trends.

What does participation in the kingdom do for the common man? First, it brings to him an enlarged and more adequate understanding of himself. It defines for him in a realistic and not merely in a visionary way his relationship to his God and his fellow men. Second, it brings conscious purpose into his living. It dignifies his service and enables him to distinguish between the really worth while and the frivolous, or less important. It gives to him the legitimate pride of being associated with a great cause, the greatest in all the world; and third, and perhaps in importance greatest of all, membership in the kingdom makes it possible for him to receive the delegation of divine power itself and rejoice in the blessings brought by it to our Father's children.

This wide distribution of the Holy Priesthood is one of the most distinctive features of the restored kingdom of our Lord. There is creditable evidence to believe that when the Savior set up his Church in the Meridian of Time, he caused a wide distribution of the priesthood to members of his Church then, as he has done in his restored Church. How logical it seems, upon reflection, that this should be his desire. Why should he wish to restrict the holding of his divine power, which may be delegated to men, to any favored group or ecclesiastical order? If men are the sons of God, created in his image and endowed with divine attributes, why should not all who make themselves worthy in righteousness be eligible for the divine commission of the priesthood? All are eligible in the kingdom of our Father. Adherence to his law is the only requirement, and the officers of the kingdom are under compulsion to bring this great benefaction to all who are worthy.

If I had time at my disposal, I should like to give to the men to whom I present this invitation a more complete explanation of the nature of the Holy Priesthood and the manner of its exercise, as set forth in revelations given at the founding of the Lord's kingdom in this dispensation. I must content myself merely with the statement that the priesthood of Almighty God, bestowed upon his servants, is a very different thing from what many men of the world suppose it to be. It is an authoritative power given by divine commission, but in essence and use it is invested with the virtue, kindness, mercy, and judgment of its Divine Author, the Savior himself.

Now to the common man—he who has not known the emoluments and preferments which the world gives—what a distinction, what an encouragement, what an uplift of spirit, and what high hopes await him as he shares with his brethren the Holy Priesthood in the Lord's kingdom. The common man has aspirations, even though their attainment may seem remote and very dim. Improvement and progression are the laws of life. Here, with the investiture of the Holy Priesthood lie opportunities unlimited for the fulfilment of worthy and lofty ambitions for the common man, as for all men of high or low station in life.

It must have seemed a great and daring project to build a Church without a professional clergy. It was even a greater innovation to set one up without laity, where every man and boy is a minister of religion. Joseph Smith had no precedent for such an organization, save only in the Church set up by the Master himself in his own earthly ministry. It is no wonder that such a novel concept was shocking to the Prophet's contemporaries. It undermined the necessity of the callings of the "gentlemen of the cloth" and wiped out the need for the so-called spiritual experts. While the new doctrine abjures ignorance and acclaims intelligence, its objective is to make every man his own spiritual expert, with divine power in himself to understand and apply the laws of the gospel to himself and those dependent on him. This universal and generous bestowal of the priesthood makes every recipient a teacher and preacher of the word of God; whether or not he be called to a special position, his diocese is as large as his circle of family, friends, and acquaintances, and he is under obligation to teach to them the revealed truth. If he has limitations of utterance, there are no limitations to the power of his example and the radiation of his personality among those who know him. Here in the Lord's kingdom is the most perfect exemplification of his great law of fairness and equality that "God is no respecter of persons."

Now I have very great pleasure in extending this invitation to all women. I am sure I cannot make it as attractive as it could be made, but perhaps I may be able to point out a few items which should be of serious concern to women, and which may intrigue their interest. It would be expected that in the women's world I should first bring forward the subject of the home. Despite modern social trends, and the so-called emancipation of women from the alleged drudgery of home life, I am sure we need no statistical proof to convince us that the great preponderance of our women want husbands and families; and I am optimistic enough to believe, even in the face of shocking figures on divorce, that the overwhelming majority of women would like to keep their husbands and preserve the enduring solidarity of the home. If these assumptions are correct or nearly correct, I am justified in giving women the assurance that in no other place or institution in the world will they find such high and lofty concepts of marriage and home as in the restored kingdom of our Lord. Here a woman is neither a slave nor a doll, but a real partner in the enterprise of building the kingdom. The part she plays is one of great dignity, with opportunity for the abundant expression of all the finer feelings, the tenderness, the patient love, and the ennobling qualities which are attributes of her sex.

In the kingdom a woman does not hold the priesthood, but she shares it with her husband, and she is the immediate beneficiary of many of its great blessings. When she unites in marriage with a man of the priesthood in one of the temples of the kingdom, the blessings pronounced upon her are of equal import to those given her husband, and these blessings are to be realized only through the enduring compact of the marriage, for "man [is not] without the woman, neither the woman without the man, in the Lord." (1 Cor. 11:11.) If every woman fully understood this lofty concept of marriage, she would want no other. It is not a marriage solemnized with elaborate ceremony and pageantry, for show and social prestige. No great church is filled with spectators; only a few are present—the contracting parties, a humble man of the priesthood to officiate, the witnesses, usually the parents, and a few of the family and close friends. Such a marriage contemplates taking the Lord into the partnership, so the participants meet in his house and make their covenants with him and each other, in privacy, in humility, without ostentation, safeguarded from the stare of the curious or the praise of the indulgent. Does a man or a woman seek public acclaim for a private prayer? Why should a couple, entering into the most solemn engagements they will ever make in their lives of a private and personal nature, expose themselves to public scrutiny, and distract their minds from a sacred ceremony by the exigencies of style and show? I am speaking of the marriage ceremony, not the wedding reception. I remember once reading an article written by an old minister who had officiated many years in Trinity Church in downtown New York. He said that during his time he had seen the Christian ceremony of marriage, at one time sacred and impressive, degenerate into a paganistic pageant designed to achieve social notoriety. That can never happen to a temple marriage. It is a calamity for it to happen to any marriage, for such a tendency may be in no small measure responsible for the instability of marriage in recent years.

Sunday, October 5

Third Day

The home-loving women will find in the kingdom other revealed concepts about life, which will bring to them great happiness and hope and satisfaction. They will learn that the home, of which they are such an indispensable part, lies at the very basis of purposeful living here in this life and of our aspirations for the higher blessings in the life to come. They will learn that a couple, rightly married, are called to officiate in a transcendently beautiful and vital service. As a priest and priestess in the temple of the home, it is their high privilege to receive the spirit children of our Eternal Father into mortality; then to nurture, train, and lead these chosen ones coming to their home back into the eternal presence whence they came. It takes but a moment to say this sentence; it takes a lifetime to fill the mission of parenthood. It is a glorious mission when it is accepted and fulfilled. It is a tragic experience when it is resented. Women of the kingdom find the supreme joy of their lives in their families despite the sacrifices and self-denial entailed in their care and training. They are taught, and they believe that the highest blessings of heaven will be realized through the projection of their homes into eternity. They have complete confidence in the perpetuity of the family relationship when sanctified and sealed under the power of the Holy Priesthood. If a child is parted from the family group, they do not feel that he is lost. They confidently expect a reuniting in the eternal family circle, and while they are sorrowful at earthly partings, the only thing they really fear is sin, which may deprive the erring one of his place in the eternal home. Women who enter into these eternal unions with their husbands are far better fortified to withstand irritations not uncommonly incident to domestic life. They and their husbands look ahead, and in their long-range vision, they are disposed to overlook many of the temporary obstacles to happy, compatible living. Just think of the tragic plight of innocent children averted by this concept of enduring marriage. Every woman who has serious concern for the attainment of a full and happy life will do well to ponder the eternal truths of the kingdom.

There is an ever-increasing tendency for women to seek activity outside the home. I count it as fortunate that modern conveniences have served to shorten the hours necessary for a mother to spend in home and family care. You will observe that I did not characterize a mother's duties as drudgery. It has been my observation that devoted mothers have never so regarded their duties to their family, however long the work may have taken. Even when home care required very long hours, mothers of the kingdom found time and means for countless acts of mercy and kindness in both organized and private capacity. Now under the favorable conditions mentioned, a large part of the work of the kingdom of our Lord is carried forward by good women. They have immediate responsibility, under the direction and counsel of the priesthood, for great organizations of women, and they give invaluable assistance in substantially all of the institutions of the Church. They have so many avenues of service that there is opportunity for the utilization and expression of all their talents and great abilities. There is no place in the world where women can render service more completely acceptable to the Father and more satisfying to themselves than in his kingdom.

And now I must extend the invitation to youth, boys and girls in school, on the farm, in the factories, in the military establishments, wherever youth is found. I invite all of you young people to come to a divinely appointed society where there is more knowledge about your beginnings, your needs, and your legitimate purposes and ambitions than is to be found in any other place in the world. I am aware that you may regard that statement as arrogant and presumptuous, but I think you may view it differently when I tell you that the knowledge of which I speak is not man-made; it is not the product of scholastic research; it is God-given, revealed by him for his kingdom. This knowledge brings reconciliation of all truths, however much at variance the findings and statements of men may seem to be. The whole learning process is simplified. All aspects of life and living are properly evaluated and the objectives made clear, freeing youth from the frustrating uncertainties of much of modern philosophy and teaching.

My young friends, you can scarcely appreciate what a relief it will be for you, and how much it will contribute to your peace of mind and your happiness to have clearly defined objectives to which you can confidently direct the energies of your life. I invite you into activities which will stimulate you to the development and exercise of the best within you. Your latent talents, your love of people, and all of your native abilities shall find opportunity for abundant expression. This society will teach you how to acquire happiness in goodness, which is the only lasting happiness. It will teach you how to become master of yourself, to control appetites and passions, and thus acquire the attributes of great character. It will thus contribute to your success in occupations of your choosing because no permanent success comes to those who do not possess good character.

Perhaps your greatest acquisition in coming into this society and allying yourself with the kingdom will be the knowledge of God and how you can best serve him. You will discover for the first time your mission in life, what the Father has for you to do. You will rise in your own righteous self-respect. Young men will be endowed with the Holy Priesthood. They will discover, while not foregoing the happiness of youth, that much of its frivolity and levity may positively be replaced with joyful service in a great cause. Young women also will discover the same thing and be made to rejoice in the good they can do. I have seen thousands of young men and young women go into the mission field. I have heard these testimonies and witnessed the great happiness the work of saving souls has brought to them. I have heard them proclaim these years of unselfish devotion to the Master's work the finest of their lives. Where, my young friends, can you find comparable opportunities to those furnished to you in the kingdom of the Living God?

Sunday, October 5

Third Day

And now, my friends, both old and young, I ask you this question: Is it well to procrastinate your decision on the matters I have briefly submitted to you? Is the tenure of life so secure that we can safely wait until next year for the consideration of matters so vitally affecting our lives here and hereafter? I attend many funerals. Some lives are terminated very abruptly, most unexpectedly. I witness the sorrow of loved ones in sad partings. A funeral is not a time for criticism. We think and speak of those who are gone in charitable, kindly terms. We leave the judgments to the Great Judge, but I think that many a family suffers its greatest sorrow in parting with a loved one in a remembrance of opportunities lost, omissions and commissions, that they sadly wish might have been averted. Such are the hazards in the postponement of our reconciliation with the Lord, and the acceptance of the holy gospel. None of us can be sure that he can finish the course of life in perfect faith and devotion, but all of us can be certain that we can never run the course without starting. My invitation is to start the course of life in the Lord's way, now, while there is time.

I cannot close without saying a word about my own personal experience in the kingdom of our Father. If I have any justification in doing this, it is in the hope that there may be some who listen who may find a measure of encouragement in what I tell them. I was not trained for the ministry in the sense in which the world understands such training, a condition which I share with my brethren for reasons I have heretofore explained. I was trained in a limited way for the law and for business. Perhaps my most liberal education has come out of contacts with men in many walks of life. With few exceptions I have admired the men and women I have known, and men and women of high intelligence, deep learning and capacity to serve well in good causes have commanded my respect and esteem. In the presence of a great mind, I have a feeling akin to reverence.

There has been over the years, however, one observation which I have made, which, I may say frankly, has reduced my admiration for many able men and women, and has brought to me great concern about them. I have observed that many, successful in material achievements, have seemingly taken pride in emancipating themselves from spiritual things, with a boastful indifference expressed in such statements as "I am not naturally religious"; "Religion is for the women and the children"; "I carry my religion in my wife's name." Personally I think these attitudes are defensive tactics, not truly representative of the inner feelings and sober consciousness of those who present them. I am not speaking now of men who have permitted sin to deaden their conscience. I am speaking of men whom I have known in the world of business, and countless others like them.

I wish to make this statement to all such men and women, and I hope I can do it without appearing boastful. I have known professional ambition. I have had association with business institutions for almost a half century of time. I have served in various capacities in commercial and community enterprises, and have enjoyed the emoluments, the satisfactions, and friendly relationships emanating from such associations. With this background of experience, not as a preacher, although it is my duty and privilege to preach, I give to my friends the assurance that if they will recast their ideas and attitudes about the relative importance of the spiritual to the material, and bring themselves to participate in the mighty cause of establishing God's kingdom in the earth, they will find a satisfaction, a sureness of purpose, a peace and contentment, surpassing anything they have ever known. They will not be ashamed to say to themselves and to their fellows that God and his work come first. When they can develop the faith and the courage to make this acknowledgment, self-sufficiency and egotism will be replaced by humility of spirit. The brotherhood of man will become real to them. Their service will be ennobled, and they will lay the foundation for the attainment of the highest rewards and blessings vouchsafed to humanity.

I have observed that ambitious, intelligent, "red-blooded" people are seldom satisfied except with the best. When I invite men and women into the kingdom, I invite them to come and get the best, which is obtainable in no other place or institution in this wide world. I know that is true, and the reason I know it, and the reason you should believe it is that the Lord himself has declared that it is so. The prophets of old predicted it, as did the Lord and his disciples in the Meridian of Time, and irrefutable evidences of the authentic establishment of the kingdom in our day invite the scrutiny and investigation of all honest people.

In addition, there is available the testimony of the Holy Spirit, more confirmatory and more personally satisfying than all other evidences. I promise you in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ that divine testimony will come to you, my friends, if you will enter the re-established kingdom of our Lord and participate in his glorious work in the world. I pray that the Lord will bless you and remove prejudice and bitterness and indifference from your hearts, and bring to you a humble desire to share the truth with your brethren and sisters in the family of God, who loves you. I so pray in the name of Jesus Christ, the Lord of the kingdom. Amen.

ELDER LEVI EDGAR YOUNG

Of the First Council of the Seventy

MY BRETHREN AND SISTERS: The history of the Latter-day Saints since the organization of the Church in 1830 is one of the most marvelous stories of all time. The glory of its history is the fact that there has been a divine purpose and ideal to be worked out in this life. This divine purpose is based on faith in God, intelligence, and foresight. Many visitors from all over the world come to ask about the real meaning of our religion. A few days ago there sat in my office a Mr. Walter Mallin, a representative of one of the surviving newspapers of Western Germany. With two other newspapermen, he had been sent to America to make a study of the government, the education, and the religion of America. He came to Salt Lake City, as this was one of the centers he had been directed to visit, for he knew that we had many German converts. It would be impossible to tell you the many questions he asked, but the most important one to him was how our religion has worked for education. He was told about our ideals of education and religion.

In a recent book entitled Education—America's Magic by Raymond M. Hughes, President Emeritus, Iowa State College, and William H. Lancelot, Professor of Vocational Education, Iowa State College, we have the latest statement concerning education in America and in the respective states of America. Speaking of the place of the states of the Union in education, the authors of this book tell us that, "Utah has first place among the states by a wide margin." In speaking of the place of Utah, we find it leads all the states in adult education.

This appears to be due almost wholly to the high value placed on education by the people of Utah, coupled with high efficiency in the expenditure of funds devoted to school purposes. This combination of great effort and high efficiency in the utilization of school funds seems to have operated in a remarkable manner to overcome many handicaps.

Sunday, October 5

Third Day

The general condition of education in Utah is also made by Professor Ellsworth Huntington of Yale University in his interesting book, entitled Civilization and Climate, when he writes:

The proud position of Utah is presumably the result of Mormonism. The leaders of that faith have had the wisdom to insist on a thorough system of schools, and have obliged the children to attend them. The "Gentiles" have in self-defense been forced to do equally well, and the result has been admirable. Whatever one may think of Mormonism as a religious belief, it must be credited with having accomplished a remarkable work in spreading a moderate degree of education almost universally among the people of Utah. . . .

Furthermore, the German correspondent was told what his compatriot, Count Keyserling, once wrote. The learned philosopher visited America a few years ago, and on his way across the continent, he stopped off in Salt Lake City. As a result of his visit, he wrote in his famous two-volume work these words:

Undoubtedly Joseph Smith and Brigham Young were just as genuine prophets as were Moses, Luther, and Calvin; only they were exceedingly uneducated.

Then he continues:

We Occidentals are not men of understanding, but men of action. The same Mormons whose religious ideas seemed so childish, have achieved a civilization hardly attained by any other people; in barely half a century, they have changed a salt desert into a garden. They are moreover admirable citizens, law-abiding, honest, and progressive. . . .

It is the farsightedness, the quiet and confident patience, the supreme faith in God with which our people have worked. Beginning with the Kirtland Temple, they built, not for present satisfaction, but for some deep and noble purpose for their God. In the Kirtland Temple, the Prophet Joseph Smith showed a great love for education and established Hebrew, Greek, and Latin classes, and attended them himself. In Nauvoo, schools were established and a university founded, all for a great and noble purpose. Their lives were the embodiment of political, civil, and religious faith. Let us consider for a moment just one line of thought, an idealism that remains always among the Mormon people. We speak of schools in Kirtland and later in Nauvoo, activities in educational pursuits that eclipsed all other peoples on the American frontier.

Taking their name from a number of our Lord's disciples, the "Seventies" of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints form the central council of the missionary activity of the organization. As early as the Nauvoo period of Mormon history, the need for a fine library was keenly felt, for the seventies must then as now be eagerly reading and searching for the truths of the gospel. In Times and Seasons, January 1, 1845, the following item was published:

Among the improvements going forward in this city, none merit [sic] higher praise, than the Seventies' Library. The concern has been commenced on a footing and scale, broad enough to embrace the arts and sciences, every where: so that the Seventies', while traveling over the face of the globe, as the Lord's "Regular Soldiers," can gather all the curious things, both natural and artificial, with all the knowledge, inventions, and wonderful specimens of genius that have been gracing the world for almost six thousand years. . . . (forming) the foundation for the best library in the world!

Nauvoo was destroyed while the Saints were marching to their new home in the far west. But the dreams of the people were never lost, and on July 15, 1851, we read in the Fifth General Epistle of the Church, describing Salt Lake City, the following:

On November 27th, the quorum of Seventies in conference assembled, agreed to erect an extensive rotunda in Great Salt Lake City, to be called the "Seventies' Hall of Science," and Joseph Young, their President, was appointed trustee and superintendent of the work. The foundation of the hall is commenced on East Temple and Second South streets. [Now Main and Second South Streets.] . . . The design is highly commendable to the brethren and such a building is much needed in this place.

Truman O. Angell, later named as the architect of the Salt Lake Temple, was commissioned to draw the plans for the building, as shown by the long forgotten drawing recently found.

Had the project been carried out, the structure undoubtedly would have possessed unusual architectural interest, for it had a majesty and beauty all its own, surpassing anything on the frontier in originality and dignity. Truman Angell's plans show his response to the contemporary Gothic revival, then in its early stages. It was designed to be the repository for the first library brought to Utah in 1851, but owing to the poverty of the people who were just beginning to establish their homes, President Brigham Young prevailed upon his brother Joseph, President of the Seventy, not to build for some years to come. For this reason the edifice was never started. The seventies continued collecting books, however, and they soon had a fine library of the modern and ancient classics. From the time of the organization of the First Quorum of Seventy in Kirtland, their duties were pointed out by the Prophet Joseph Smith, and they came to realize that they were to be the teachers, the missionaries of the Church. Sensitive to the words as found in the 109th section of the Doctrine and Covenants:

. . . Seek ye diligently and teach one another words of wisdom; yea, seek ye out of the best books words of wisdom, seek learning even by study and also by faith. (D. & C. 109:7.)

They had a deep desire to have a library of religious, historical, and literary works, that would give them the urge for self-development.

The seventies became readers of the finest literature of the world, beginning with the Holy Bible, the Book of Mormon, and the two other Church works. The people were poor in purse, but they were concerned with certain influences which were given in the writings of great authors. Sublime was their reverence for knowledge which is akin to the love of truth. They knew that a great work of any sort could only be achieved by the power of some ideal. And it is high ideals in the conduct of life that survive.

There was hardly a family living in remote parts of the territory but what had books, and I think many of you can recall the libraries of the Sabbath schools of the early days. President Joseph Young and his co-laborers in the First Council of the Seventy continued through the years to collect books, and the Mormon people became great readers of literature. Many of you older members of the Church can recall the great teachers that were once in the schools and colleges here. A Princeton University professor in his Life of Mr. Justice Sutherland has written reverently of Dr. Karl G. Maeser, and others have given the history far and wide of many of the glorious intellects of this people who lived back in pioneer times. There were writers, too, in the earliest days, and it was William Cullen Bryant who chose one of the poems of Sarah E. Carmichael to be in his anthology of American verse. Many of the missionaries who went abroad long years before the railroad, carried in their hand-carts the works of Shakespeare and the German writer, Goethe. My own father carried with him to England in 1857 the essays of Francis Bacon. Practically in every ward of Utah, a library was established in connection with the Sabbath schools. Fortunately, we have in our possession a catalogue of the Seventies Library, which does not classify the books, but there were writings on religion, languages, government, education, ethics, and the various phases of the sciences.

In addition to the Seventies' Library

Sunday, October 5

Third Day

was the territorial library brought by ox teams to Utah in 1851. It had been purchased in New York City by Dr. John M. Bernhisel and was a wonderful collection of books. There were the works of Shakespeare, Milton, Bacon, Homer, Juvenal, Lucretius, Virgil, Euripides, Sophocles, Plato, Montaigne, Tacitus, Spenser, Herodotus, Goldsmith, and many others of the great masters of the world's best literature. The library received copies of the New York Herald, New York Evening Post, the Philadelphia Saturday Courier, and the North American Review. Of the scientific works there were Newton's Principia, Herschel's Outlines of Astronomy and Von Humboldt's Cosmos. These books were also well-known to Orson Pratt. The treatises on philosophy included the works of John Stuart Mill, Martin Luther, John Wesley, and Emanuel Swedenborg.

The subject of education was just one phase of the conversation with our German visitor. The most important subject was that of religion and our sacred books: the Holy Bible, Book of Mormon, Doctrine and Covenants, and Pearl of Great Price, which took up many hours of the three days our friend was here. I called his attention to the scholarly statement made by the famous German scholar, Adolf Harnack, rector of, and professor of church history in, the university, and member of the Royal Prussian Academy, Berlin:

Gentlemen, it is religion, the love of God and neighbour, which gives life a meaning; knowledge cannot do it. Let me, if you please, speak of my own experience, as one who for thirty years has taken an earnest interest in these things. Pure knowledge is a glorious thing, and woe to the man who holds it light or blunts his sense for it! But to the question, Whence, whither, and to what purpose? it gives an answer to-day as little as it did two or three thousand years ago. It does, indeed, instruct us in facts; it detects inconsistencies; it links phenomena; it corrects the deceptions of sense and idea. But where and how the curve of the world and the curve of our own life begin,—that curve of which it shows us only a section,—and whither this curve leads, knowledge does not tell us. But if with a steady will we affirm the forces and the standards which on the summits of our inner life shine out as our highest good, nay, as our real self; if we are earnest and courageous enough to accept them as the great Reality and direct our lives by them; and if we then look at the course of mankind's history, follow its upward development, and search, in strenuous and patient service, for the communion of minds in it, we shall not faint in weariness and despair, but become certain of God, of the God whom Jesus Christ called his Father, and who is also our Father.

To close our conversation, mention was made of the life and work of George Santayana who was once professor of philosophy at Harvard University and one of the greatest philosophers of our day. We had read the thirteenth chapter of I Nephi in the Book of Mormon and quoted the reference to a man who was called from among the gentiles.

And I looked and beheld a man among the Gentiles, who was separated from the seed of my brethren by the many waters; and I beheld the Spirit of God, that it came down and wrought upon the man; and he went forth upon the many waters, even unto the seed of my brethren, who were in the promised land.

And it came to pass that I beheld the Spirit of God, that it wrought upon other Gentiles; and they went forth out of captivity, upon the many waters. (1 Nephi 13:12-13.)

George Santayana once wrote a beautiful poem entitled "Faith" which concerns this first journey of Columbus. The opening words are:

O world, thou choosest not the better part!
It is not wisdom to be only wise,
And on the inward vision close the eyes,
But it is wisdom to believe the heart.
Columbus found a world, and had no chart,
Save one that faith deciphered in the skies;
To trust the soul's invincible surmise
Was all his science and his only art.

To you, my brother seventies, let me say, "That which thy fathers have bequeathed to thee, earn it anew if thou would possess it."

Be strong and of good courage, fear not, nor be afraid of them: for the Lord thy God, he it is that doth go with thee; he will not fail thee, nor forsake thee. (Deut. 31:6.)

May the Lord bless us all, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Elder Levi Edgar Young of the First

Council of Seventy, has just spoken to us.

The Tabernacle Choir and Congregation will now sing, "O Ye Mountains High," conducted by J. Spencer Cornwall, and after the singing we will hear from Bishop Wirthlin.

The Choir and congregation sang the hymn, "O Ye Mountains High."

BISHOP JOSEPH L. WIRTHLIN

Presiding Bishop of the Church

I SINCERELY trust, my beloved brethren and sisters, that I might enjoy the Lord's favor during the few minutes that I shall stand before you.

I should like to read to you the thirty-fifth verse of the first section of the Doctrine and Covenants:

For I am no respecter of persons, and will that all men shall know that the day speedily cometh; the hour is not yet, but is nigh at hand, when peace shall be taken from the earth, and the devil shall have power over his own dominion.

As we observe conditions in the world today, I am sure we are all agreed that peace has literally been taken from the nations of the earth. We see in Korea a bloody struggle which seems to have no end. Europe is an armed camp. On the other side of the Iron Curtain preparations are being made for a great Third World War. In Iran and in Egypt we observe rebellion. There seems to be a spirit of unrest all over the world. We have been in the midst of war for almost thirteen years. It is true that the representatives of nations have tried to negotiate peace, but we have no peace.

We have all of the difficulties that the Lord spoke of, that peace would be taken from the earth, and that the spirit of Satan would have dominion over the world.

I question if those who sit at the peace table have in their hearts the real spirit of peace. The spirit of peace is the spirit of the Lord Jesus Christ. I regret when the United Nations was founded, the name of the Redeemer of the World was not used, and for that reason I feel the genuine spirit of peace has not and does not influence the dealings of peace negotiations.

Those who have been sitting around the so-called peace tables of the world, have been cunning and cagey men, negotiating for the sole purpose of acquiring more power, more territory, and in the final analysis of it all, millions of people now find themselves under the heel of the dictator; they have lost their free agency and liberty. They have lost their land.

And as I contemplate these terrible conditions that exist in the world, with me you ask, what counsel or advice has our Heavenly Father for us? Please read the eighth verse of the eighty-seventh section, therein you will find the counsel of the Lord. He said:

Wherefore, stand ye in holy places, and be not moved, until the day of the Lord come; for behold, it cometh quickly, saith the Lord.

What are these holy places? They are the holy temples of God. They are the meetinghouses, one in each ward, dedicated to the worship of our Heavenly Father. I would say that our homes can become holy places, if we cultivate the Spirit of the Lord Jesus Christ, the spirit of peace.

As I look into the faces of this vast congregation and I think of the vast radio audience, I know there are many among you who live under a cloud of uncertainty. Present are fathers and mothers and sons and daughters, wives and sweethearts of the soldiers engaged on the bloody battlefields of Korea. The word may come that your loved one has made the supreme sacrifice, or that your loved one has been wounded and is maimed for life, or your loved one is a prisoner in the hands of a heathen enemy.

There are other perplexing problems that many of us have. Men of affairs walk the floor at night, wondering how their problems are to be solved. We fail to think of the Savior, of his counsel, and his teachings.

I quote to you the twenty-eighth to the thirtieth verses in Matthew eleven, wherein the Savior said:

Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest.

Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls.

For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light.

And again he said to us, in the twenty-third verse of the nineteenth section of the Doctrine and Covenants:

Learn of me, and listen to my words; walk in the meekness of my Spirit, and ye shall have peace in me.

These declarations of the Savior are the peace-call to the faithful, to the obedient, to those who have accepted him as the Redeemer of the World.

With the peace-call comes this admonition to attend the peace meeting of the Prince of Peace.

But remember that on this, the Lord's day, thou shalt offer thine oblations and thy sacraments unto the Most High, confessing thy sins unto thy brethren, and before the Lord. (Ibid., 59:12.)

And again the peace-call comes,

And that thou mayest more fully keep thyself unspotted from the world, thou shalt go to the house of prayer and offer up thy sacraments upon my holy day. (Idem, 9.)

Here we find the source of real peace in the house of the Lord, upon the Sabbath day, here a peace conference is in session with the Savior of the World. The presiding officers of this peace conference are three high priests, the bishopric of the ward. Under their direction the peace table is prepared by the Aaronic Priesthood, the emblems of the broken body and the spilt blood are laid upon the table before the congregation. Those officiating are priests, teachers, and deacons of the Aaronic Priesthood. And in turn, the sacramental prayers are offered.

I think of the sacramental prayers as prayers of the covenant, for after all, in the blessing upon the bread and the blessings upon the cup there are covenants that we all ascribe to. First, when the bread is blessed, it is sanctified to all those who partake of it. Secondly, they covenant to eat in remembrance of the body of the Prince of Peace, they covenant to remember the spilt blood. Thirdly, they agree to witness unto God their willingness to take upon them the name of Jesus Christ, and remember him always. To take upon one the name of Jesus Christ, to me, means that we will accept the Son of God as the Redeemer of the World, that we will accept his plan of salvation and live it as he has commanded us, and then to remember the great sacrifice that he made upon Calvary's hill.

I feel as we attend the peace meeting of the Savior in holy places of worship, that we have no idea of the suffering that the Savior passed through both in the Garden of Gethsemane, and also on the cross.

We covenant to keep his commandments which he has given us. And the Lord covenants with us, if we will keep his commandments, if we will remember his great sacrifice, if we will accept him fully, that he, in turn, will reward us with the association of his Holy Spirit.

And as the Sabbath comes to an end, and we return to our homes, we should go forth with the determination to keep the commandments of the Savior of the World. The first one being:

... love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. . . .

And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself. (Matt. 22:37, 39.)

We speak of love. As I define it, it is the great motivating, stimulating passion which activates us to render service to God, to keep his commandments, and to express our love for him by obedience to his commandments. And if we love our neighbor we will render service to him, whether it be of a materialistic or a spiritual nature.

Third, the Savior said to pray always that ye may not faint. I am sure that we will all agree these are times when the hearts of men are faint, when their hearts fail them.

But in our homes, with the Spirit of Jesus Christ in our souls, we can pray to God, father and mother, sons and daughters meeting together around the family altar of prayers, the Spirit of the Christ will be there in rich abundance, giving us the spirit of love for one another, the spirit of wanting to serve God, the spirit of unity, and the spirit of cooperation in all of our endeavors.

Fourth, that we garnish our thoughts and our minds with virtue. Only clean minds and clean bodies can enjoy the Spirit of the Lord Jesus Christ, the spirit of peace.

Fifth, as servants of God, holding his Holy Priesthood, we will recognize our responsibility therein and perform our duties with willing and prayerful hearts.

Sixth, that we will remember the widow, the orphan, the unemployed, and the aged, that we will pledge our support to the welfare program, to the end that there will be in the storehouse of the bishop, the necessities of life to take care of those who are in distress.

This is pure and undefiled religion. Herein we are expressing love for our neighbor who may be in need.

We must remember our dead ancestry, that we will follow the admonition of the prophet, when he declared the time would come when the hearts of the fathers would be turned to the children, and the hearts of the children would be turned to the fathers lest the Lord come and smite the earth with a curse.

We will meet all of our obligations with glad hearts, remembering that if the kingdom of God is to grow and expand in the earth, it is necessary that finances be available to pay for the operation and the expense of the Church. That none of us are going to find means and ways where we might deduct from the Lord's tenth this item or that item. If we will pay our tithing in full, the promise of the old prophet will be ours when he said if we would take our tithes to the storehouse of the Lord, the heavens would be opened and abundant blessings would come upon us to the extent that we would not be able to hold them.

Brethren and sisters, if we love the Christ, if we keep our covenants at his peace table, each Sabbath day, and keep his commandments throughout the week, there is no question in my mind but what our homes will become holy places, where the Spirit of Christ will abide in rich abundance, and where we will be protected from harm and the evils of the world. I am sure if we will do this, subscribe to the peace covenants made at his peace table, through his Holy Spirit the words will come,

Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid. (John 14:27.)

Yes, there may be war, there may be famine, there may be the disturbances of nature, nations may crumble into dust at our feet, but I promise you that our Redeemer, the Prince of Peace, will keep his covenant with us. He will give us hope and assurance, and whether it be in death, or whether it be in life, he will receive us.

How many of us are attending the peace meeting of the Lord Jesus Christ. In the Church at the present time twenty-five percent of its members attend the sacrament meeting on the Sabbath day. However, it is inspiring and encouraging to know that the Latter-day Saint girls between the ages of twelve and nineteen attend sacrament meeting in the summertime to the extent of forty-eight percent and in the wintertime fifty-five percent. The average attendance at sacrament meeting of the Aaronic Priesthood bearers is thirty-seven percent.

Sunday, October 5

Third Day

What a grand and wonderful thing it would be if this holy place of the Lord on the Sabbath day were filled to capacity, that each and every individual member of this Church that has made covenant in the waters of baptism, would follow the commandments of the Christ and in particular attend the sacrament meeting.

Who am I to say that we should have a fifty percent attendance at sacrament meeting, or a seventy-five percent attendance at the sacrament meeting? I have no right to put a limitation on the number that should attend. The Lord has put no limitation on it any more than to expect every member of this Church to attend to the revealed meeting, the most important meeting of the week, the peace-meeting of the Lord Jesus Christ and to partake of the emblems of the Last Supper and renew our covenants with him.

And in partaking of the sacrament it is well that we follow the admonition of Paul to the Corinthians:

But let a man examine himself, and so let him eat of that bread, and drink of that cup.

For he that eateth and drinketh unworthily, eateth and drinketh damnation to himself, not discerning the Lord's body.

For this cause many are weak and sickly among you, and many sleep. (1 Cor. 11:28-30.)

Paul declared to the Romans in the seventeenth verse of the fourteenth chapter of Romans:

For the kingdom of God is not meat and drink; but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost.

I submit the question, "How many of us think that the kingdom of God is meat and drink, made up entirely of the materialistic things of the world?" When we spend our time in the fields plowing, when we spend our time in our businesses, when we spend our time in seeking pleasure in the world on the Lord's day, it is an indication that we accept the kingdom of God as one of meat, drink, and the materialistic things of life, rather than righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Ghost, the things of the kingdom of God.

There is a growing tendency in the Church to think if we attend Sunday School on the Sabbath morning and partake of the sacrament, all of the requirements have been met. I hear the words of the Prophet Brigham Young on this point. He said, speaking of the sacrament,

Teach its observance to your children; impress upon them its necessity. Its observance is as necessary to our salvation as are any of the other ordinances and commandments that have been instituted in order that people might be sanctified. (Discourses of Brigham Young, p. 171.)

He further declared,

In some of our wards and settlements the administering of the sacrament has been introduced in the Sunday schools. It is very pleasing and gratifying to the spirit that I possess, for the parents to see that their children attend Sunday school, and receive the proper instruction with regard to their faith. [And I want you to mark this and I emphasize it]: After the Sunday school is over, let the parents take the pains to bring their children to meeting. (Ibid., 173.)

What meeting? The sacrament meeting, the peace meeting of the Prince of Peace.

The Sunday School is under mandate to teach the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ to the membership of the Church. I am sure in the Sunday School they teach the children the significance of the sacrament, and I am sure along with it, they also teach them the necessity of attending the sacrament meeting.

The sacrament meeting, brothers and sisters, should become the family meeting of the Church, where father, mother, sons, and daughters attend together and renew their covenants as they partake of the emblems of the Last Supper.

The Lord Jesus Christ said:

Suffer little children, and forbid them not, to come unto me: for of such is the kingdom of heaven. (Matthew 19:14.)

If we fail to take our children to the sacrament meeting, we are not taking them to the Savior as he commands us. I am sure that every child that partakes of the sacrament, and has an understanding of it, must feel the kindly spirit of the Savior of the World.

The Lord Jesus Christ keeps his promises if we keep ours. This terrible war is constantly upon my mind. I think of young men in the foxholes and in the bunkers on the rocky hillsides of Korea, where under the direction of their group leader, or possibly one of our chaplains, they surround the peace-table of the Lord Jesus Christ, partake of the emblems of the Last Supper, make covenant with him to always remember him, and as a reward, I am sure that his Spirit whispers to them, "My peace I give unto you." They are comforted, they have solace in their hearts, and whether in life or in death, the Lord will bless them and receive them unto him.

The great obligation that rests upon us as long as we enjoy membership in the Lord's Church, is to attend the peace meeting, to participate in the negotiations of the sacrament table wherein we again renew our covenants with the Lord Jesus Christ. And just as surely as we live, regardless of what the conditions in the world may be, the word of the Savior will be kept when he said,

Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid. (John 14:27.)

Brethren and sisters, in these hours of distress, war and destruction, I promise you if we will go to the peace meeting of our Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ, every Sunday, his Spirit will be there in rich abundance, we will take it into our homes, and by keeping his commandments our homes can become a holy place, they can become houses of God, which blessing I pray we will all enjoy, in the name of the King of Peace, the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER ALMA SONNE

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles

MY BRETHREN AND SISTERS: I trust and I pray that the good spirit which has been present throughout these conference sessions may continue with us during the few moments I stand here. I am convinced that there is something greater than man's wisdom back of the great conference system, which was inaugurated by Joseph Smith, the Prophet, in the early days of the Church. We have come here, you and I, to be refreshed and to be strengthened; to be edified and reassured in our faith. We have never gone away disappointed. The Lord has blessed his people abundantly, and will continue to bless them in the future. Who can estimate the influence and the spiritual power which emanate from these inspiring conference sessions? We come here full of eagerness and anticipation; we listen to the sermons, to the fervent prayers, to the music and the songs of Zion, to the stirring hymns sung by the congregation and last but not least to the anthems and the renditions by our great choir. We are deeply touched and uplifted. Surely, it is good to belong to a Church that is progressive, farseeing, and inspirational in its program—a program that is calculated to prepare us as members for the eventualities which are sure to come.

We recognize and are aware of a similar power and influence emanating from the missionary system of the Church. Who can measure the influence of just one missionary who goes into the world to proclaim the gospel message? The missionary spirit which rests upon him, somehow or other, reaches out to the home from which he comes, to his relatives and friends and to all with whom he comes in contact. His life becomes a great missionary force in the world.

Sunday, October 5

Third Day

The Latter-day Saints believe in a God who is not only the Creator, but who is also the Ruler of the universe. He intervenes in great crises when God's plan is in jeopardy and his divine purposes are threatened. I recall, as an example, an incident in the Civil War. It occurred when the Confederates brought out the strange battleship known as the Merrimac. The people of the North were alarmed. The advisers of Lincoln became hysterical. Fear and apprehension took hold of the people. Many complaints came to President Lincoln. "They will shoot down the Capitol," they said. He replied, "God will not permit it. This is his fight." I am sure Lincoln prayed. I feel certain he trusted in God, for on one occasion he is reported to have said, "I have been driven to my knees with the overwhelming conviction that I had nowhere else to go." Lincoln's prayer was answered, because on a beautiful morning, there appeared in the same waters opposite the nation's Capitol, another strange battleship. It was John Ericson's Monitor. The battle that ensued between these two ships was not unlike the battle between David and Goliath. The Merrimac was defeated as was the great giant, Goliath.

I recall, four years ago, driving through the ruined city of Dunkirk, the city which has become famous in world history, because it has suffered ruin and devastation so many times. As we drove through the city, I remember the road led us along a narrow canal. On the right of us lay the ruined city, almost entirely destroyed, on the left was the open country over which the German army approached. Three hundred and fifty thousand British soldiers lay with their backs to the ocean behind improvised fortifications. It looked like annihilation, capture, or defeat for the British army; but at the crucial moment when Britain's soldiers needed help, the God of heaven intervened. What happened? At that moment, a dark, black mist settled down directly over the narrow canal. All visibility disappeared and military operations ceased. How long? Just long enough for Britain's soldiers to escape and make their way across the channel to English shores. I firmly believe that the Almighty can and does intervene in great crises for the benefit of his children, especially when freedom and liberty are at stake.

Another incident is recorded in world history. It happened in the year 1588 when King Philip of Spain sent his "invincible armada" out to destroy the inferior British navy. The British navy was no match for the powerful Spanish fleet of one hundred and twenty ships, armed and equipped for battle. Once again the Almighty came to the rescue of the British. At the right moment a storm arose on the high seas, and the Spanish fleet was scattered. A few of them made their way into the French harbor of Calais, but were forced to leave. They were eventually overtaken and destroyed by the British. Thus the tyranny of Spain came to an end, and a new era in human history was begun. Do you question this intervention of God who presides over the destiny of nations?

When President Levi Edgar Young and Bishop Joseph L. Wirthlin referred to Christopher Columbus as the discoverer of the New World, I thought of him standing high on his little craft fighting and defying, not only the elements and the turbulent waves, but also the superstition and ignorance of his crew to discharge his God-appointed mission. It was no accident that he was permitted to reach the shores of San Salvador in the flimsy vessels he had at his disposal. He was right when he said he was "moved by the Holy Ghost" to achieve his ambition. And thus a new world, new opportunities, and new ideas were given to men to be developed and to be used for God's purposes. Neither can we doubt that Brigham Young, prophet, statesman, and colonizer, was similarly called and inspired in his great pioneer achievement. He and his people were protected in their migrations. By every law of probability they should have perished in the desert. But they did not perish, for God's protection was upon them.

I pray that we may appreciate our membership in the Church and that we may be true and faithful to the standards by which we are guided. An investigator once said to me, "Your Church is the only Church on the face of the earth that advocates high standards and noble ideals." His conclusion, I hope, was not correct, but we must preserve the standards, the ideals, and the faith committed to us through Jesus Christ. May we do so, I pray in his name. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

You will be pleased to learn that at the fifth session of this General Conference, there were in attendance in the Tabernacle, the Assembly Hall, Barratt Hall, and on the grounds, 17,825 members of the Priesthood. In addition to that, we learned by telephone that there were assembled down in the Joseph Smith auditorium, Brigham Young University, from 800 to 1000 other members of the Priesthood. That gives you an idea of the activity and strength of the Priesthood of the Church.

This morning Elder LeGrand Richards delivered an excellent sermon over the Church of the Air. We hope all of you heard it. And at 9 o'clock there was presented the usual Choir broadcast over the national hook-up, the Columbia Broadcasting System. They, with the excellent two-minute sermonette given by Elder Richard L. Evans, were heard by probably several million people. We commend President Evans for the great service he is thus rendering. It is marvelous how he maintains that high standard of excellency week after week. This morning was no exception. The Lord bless the Choir, President Evans, and all other forces contributing to the preaching of truth, the spreading of the Gospel of Peace.

We are glad this morning to note in the audience the presence of several of our representatives in Congress, the presence of our State, County and City officials, leading educators, members of the faculty of the University of Utah, President of the Agricultural College, and others; President and Deans from the Brigham Young University; President and members from the Ricks College; of course we have the members of the Church Board of Education a hundred percent,—those are the members of the Council of the Twelve and Presidency; also Directors of Institutes and Seminaries; and the President of the Weber College and some members of the faculty we note. I am not sure whether the Director of the Branch Agricultural College is present. If so, we welcome him also.

The closing song will be by the Tabernacle Choir, who will sing that exquisite little poem by Tennyson "Crossing the Bar." It breathes the truth of immortality. The Choir will be led by Elder Spencer Cornwall and the closing prayer will be offered by Elder David I. Stoddard, formerly President of the California Mission, after which this Conference will stand adjourned until 2 o'clock this afternoon.

---

The Choir sang, "Crossing The Bar." Elder David I. Stoddard offered the benediction.

Conference adjourned until 2 o'clock p.m.

THIRD DAY

AFTERNOON MEETING

The concluding session of the Conference convened promptly at 2 o'clock, Sunday afternoon, October 5th.

Once more the various buildings were crowded with people: The Tabernacle, the Assembly Hall, and Barratt Hall, and once more thousands assembled on the Tabernacle grounds to listen to the proceedings of the Conference.

President David O. McKay:

We have been requested by our solicitous City officials that we keep the aisles clear, particularly the aisles in the gallery. If anyone should be taken suddenly ill, it would be difficult for the ushers to bring immediate relief. Will you please cooperate with them. We thank these officers at this time for their attentive and effective activity on the Temple Grounds and at street crossings. We commend the people, generally, who are on the grounds and in the Tabernacle, for their care in keeping the grounds neat and presentable.

The officers, also, would like us to suggest that all who drive automobiles be a little more careful. There should be no reckless driving on the streets at any time, and particularly during the crowded conditions of the streets during our General Conference.

To our listening audience on the air I announce that this is the concluding session of the 123rd Semi-Annual conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. We are convened in the Tabernacle on Temple Square in Salt Lake City. These services are being broadcast in the Assembly Hall, also in the Barratt Hall, over a loud speaking system, and by television. The proceedings are also broadcast over KSL and through KSL over all the stations mentioned at the opening session last Friday morning. Again we thank these stations in our surrounding states for their cooperation.

The music for this session will be rendered by the Tabernacle Choir, under the direction of J. Spencer Cornwall, Alexander Schreiner is at the organ.

We shall begin the service by the Tabernacle Choir singing, "Fierce Raged the Tempest," composed by a member of our Church, with J. Spencer Cornwall conducting.

---

Singing by the Choir, "Fierce Raged the Tempest."

President David O. McKay:

Brother Cyril Jenkins of Australia composed the anthem to which you have just listened. He is now in London.

---

Elder O. A. Sonne, Patriarch to the South Los Angeles Stake, offered the invocation.

The Tabernacle Choir then sang the hymn, "Though Deep'ning Trials Throng Your Way," Brother Cornwall conducting.

President David O. McKay:

Elder Ezra Taft Benson will follow President J. Reuben Clark, Jr., of the First Presidency, who will now present the General Authorities, General Officers and General Auxiliary Officers of the Church for the sustaining vote of this General Conference.

President J. Reuben Clark, Jr., Second Counselor in the First Presidency presented for the vote of the people the General Authorities, General Officers, and General Auxiliary Officers of the Church, and they were unanimously sustained by those present. The list as presented and sustained is as follows:

GENERAL AUTHORITIES OF THE CHURCH

THE FIRST PRESIDENCY

David O. McKay, Prophet, Seer and Revelator, and President of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Stephen L. Richards, First Counselor in the First Presidency.

J. Reuben Clark, Jr., Second Counselor in the First Presidency.

PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL OF THE TWELVE APOSTLES

Joseph Fielding Smith

QUORUM OF THE TWELVE APOSTLES

Joseph Fielding Smith
John A. Widtsoe
Albert E. Bowen
Harold B. Lee
Spencer W. Kimball
Ezra Taft Benson

Mark E. Petersen
Matthew Cowley
Henry D. Moyle
Delbert Leon Staples
Marion G. Romney
LeGrand Richards

PATRIARCH TO THE CHURCH

Eldred G. Smith

The Counselors in The First Presidency, the Twelve Apostles, and the Patriarch to the Church as Prophets, Seers and Revelators.

ASSISTANTS TO THE TWELVE

Thomas E. McKay
Clifford E. Young
Alma Sonne
George Q. Morris

Stayner Richards
ElRay L. Christiansen
John Longden

TRUSTEE-IN-TRUST

David O. McKay

As Trustee-in-Trust for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

THE FIRST COUNCIL OF THE SEVENTY

Levi Edgar Young
Antoine R. Ivins
Richard L. Evans
Oscar A. Kirkham

Seymour Dilworth Young
Milton R. Hunter
Bruce R. McConkie

PRESIDING BISHOPRIC

Joseph L. Wirthlin, Presiding Bishop
Thorpe B. Isaacson, First Counselor
Carl W. Buehner, Second Counselor

CHURCH HISTORIAN AND RECORDER

Joseph Fielding Smith, with A. William Lund as Assistant

GENERAL CONFERENCE

Third Day

CHURCH BOARD OF EDUCATION

David O. McKay
 Stephen L. Richards
 J. Reuben Clark, Jr.
 Joseph Fielding Smith
 John A. Widtsoe
 Albert E. Bowen
 Harold B. Lee
 Spencer W. Kimball
 Ezra Taft Benson

Mark E. Petersen
 Matthew Cowley
 Henry D. Moyle
 Delbert Leon Stapley
 Marion G. Romney
 LeGrand Richards
 Adam S. Bennion
 Franklin L. West

COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

Franklin L. West

SEMINARY SUPERVISORS

J. Karl Wood
 Joy F. Dunyon

AUDITING AND FINANCE COMMITTEE

Orval W. Adams
 Albert E. Bowen

George S. Spencer
 Harold H. Bennett

TABERNACLE CHOIR

Lester F. Hewlett, President
 J. Spencer Cornwall, Conductor
 Richard P. Condie, Assistant Conductor

ORGANISTS

Alexander Schreiner      Frank W. Asper
 Roy M. Darley, Assistant

CHURCH WELFARE COMMITTEE

ADVISERS

John A. Widtsoe
 Albert E. Bowen
 Harold B. Lee
 Henry D. Moyle
 Matthew Cowley
 Delbert L. Stapley
 Marion G. Romney
 LeGrand Richards
 Thomas E. McKay

Clifford E. Young
 Alma Sonne
 ElRay L. Christiansen
 John Longden
 Antoine R. Ivins
 Oscar A. Kirkham
 Joseph L. Wirthlin
 Thorpe B. Isaacson
 Carl W. Buehner

General Presidency of Relief Society

GENERAL COMMITTEE

Henry D. Moyle, Chairman
 Harold B. Lee, Managing Director
 Marion G. Romney, Assistant Managing Director

Paul C. Child
 T. C. Stayner
 Mark B. Garff
 Leonard E. Adams
 J. Leonard Love
 W. T. Lawrence

Lorenzo H. Hatch
 Walter Dansie
 LeRoy A. Wirthlin
 A. Reed Halversen
 Henry C. Jorgensen
 Walter Stover

GENERAL AUXILIARY OFFICERS OF THE CHURCH

RELIEF SOCIETY

Belle Smith Spafford, President
 Marianne Clark Sharp, First Counselor
 Velma N. Simonsen, Second Counselor
 with all members of the Board as at present constituted

DESERET SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION

George R. Hill, General Superintendent
 David Lawrence McKay, First Assistant Superintendent
 Lynn S. Richards, Second Assistant Superintendent
 with all members of the Board as at present constituted

YOUNG MEN'S MUTUAL IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION

Elbert R. Curtis, General Superintendent
 A. Walter Stevenson, First Assistant Superintendent
 David S. King, Second Assistant Superintendent
 with all members of the Board as at present constituted

YOUNG WOMEN'S MUTUAL IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION

Bertha S. Reeder, President
 Emily H. Bennett, First Counselor
 LaRue C. Longden, Second Counselor
 with all members of the Board as at present constituted

PRIMARY ASSOCIATION

LaVern W. Parmley, President
 Arta M. Hale, First Counselor
 Florence H. Richards, Second Counselor
 with all members of the Board as at present constituted

President J. Reuben Clark, Jr:

President McKay, so far as I could see the voting was unanimously in the affirmative, with no negative votes cast.

President David O. McKay:

You have just heard President Clark of the First Presidency present the General Authorities, General Officers, and General Auxiliary Officers of the Church. We thank you, brethren and sisters, for your unanimous vote in the affirmative.

Our first speaker will be Elder Ezra T. Benson of the Council of the Twelve. He will be followed by Elder Stapley of the Council of the Twelve.

ELDER EZRA TAFT BENSON

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

MY BELOVED brethren and sisters, in deep humility I pray for the sustaining power of the Holy Spirit and for an interest in your faith and prayers.

I have rejoiced in this great conference of the Church and kingdom of God. My soul has echoed approval to everything that has been said and done. I am grateful for my testimony of this great latter-day work, proud to be a part of it, grateful to see the great progress that is being made as it moves forward in the accomplishment of its great mission.

With you, I thrilled at the opening

Sunday, October 5

Third Day

address of our beloved President, David O. McKay, a great message of hope, love, and encouragement. I was happy to have him refer to his visit abroad, and I was pleased that Brother Stayner Richards filled in a few of the gaps which President McKay left unfilled because of his sweet modesty.

My thoughts have been turned back a few years to a glorious, yet trying, but profitable year spent abroad. Not only through these first two addresses, but also through the singing of the German Saints in our sessions on Saturday, my thoughts have been turned to the hazardous, but never-to-be-forgotten year 1946 spent in Europe.

I have lived again, my brethren and sisters, months spent among these wonderful people in our missions in Europe. I shall ever be grateful to the First Presidency and my Brethren for the rich opportunity which was mine, and I am grateful to the Saints for the great lessons which they taught me. I shall ever be indebted to them for the blessings that came to me because of my association with them.

As I listened to the singing of our German-speaking choir, I thought of the first time I heard the Saints singing in war-torn, occupied Europe. In the city of Karlsruhe, where we had gone to try to attend a conference of the Saints, we had difficulty finding the meeting place. We had to leave our car blocks away because of the rubble that filled the streets until there was only a narrow path. Finally when we sighted the partially bombed building, we heard the strains of one of our great Latter-day Saint hymns.

I do not believe that "Come, Come, Ye Saints" ever stirred the souls of the Pioneers more deeply than it did that little party of missionaries as we approached that meeting of the Saints. I shall never forget looking into their upturned faces that Sabbath day. God bless them one and all!

I thought, too, of our visits to other cities—to Frankfurt, Friburg, Hamburg, Hanover, and our first visit to Berlin. The three and one-half hour meeting with the Saints in Berlin will never be forgotten, nor shall I forget my feelings as we looked into the faces of refugees who had come across country on foot from Poland—people half-starved, with all their earthly belongings on their backs, and yet with the light of truth and faith in God shining in their eyes.

I shall never forget some of the accounts that were related of the hardships which had been endured by members of the Church in Germany and in Austria, way up in Norway, in Holland and Finland, Denmark, France, Belgium, Czechoslovakia, England, and in other countries in Europe.

I remember, too, my brethren and sisters, when the first Church welfare supplies arrived in Berlin. I presume you have never had the great and trying experience of looking into the faces of people who are starving when you are unable to give them even a crust of bread. We faced that as we first met with the Saints in parts of Europe.

But when the welfare supplies came, it was a time never to be forgotten by these faithful Saints. I can see them now in tears, weeping like children, as they looked upon those first boxes of welfare supplies when they reached occupied Germany.

I have recalled also during this conference, driving through the cities, through the streets, down the once most beautiful street of Unter den Linden and looking over at the once beautiful Tiergarten in Berlin. I remember the Saints pointing out the Kaiserhof Hotel, in ruins, where President Grant and President Clark had stopped when they visited in Germany, and also the destruction of government and university buildings. Yes, I have recalled driving through the industrial Ruhr, once the pride of a great nation but now blasted and silent as death.

I thought, too, this morning and during the conference of our visit to Poland, into the city of Warsaw by freight plane, our meeting with the Saints down in Breslau, recently taken over by the Polish nation under the direction of the communists.

I remembered our meeting with the Saints way up in East Prussia, near the Russian border, Saints who had known slave labor, who had suffered indescribable privation and hardship, worse than death, and yet whose faith and whose testimonies were still burning brightly.

I recalled visiting the great centers of destruction, where under the rule of the powerful despot and dictator, hundreds of thousands of human beings have been slaughtered as evidenced by piles of human ashes. In Dachau alone, there were 138,000 destroyed, and this but a small part of some twenty million total who had been brutally slaughtered.

I remember, my brethren and sisters, great tracts of once fertile and productive land lying idle. The anomaly of land idle, and people starving because there was no seed to plant, no machinery with which to plant, cultivate, and harvest, and no power because power machinery had been destroyed and horses had been killed during the bombing and many others killed and eaten for human's food! All these and many other things have passed through my mind the last few days as we have been assembled here in conference.

The aftermath of the war is usually worse than the actual physical combat. Everywhere there is the suffering of old people, innocent women and children. Economies are broken down, the spirits of people crushed, men and women bewildered and a spirit of frustration prevails. It is a saddening thing to see people who have lost their freedom—the right to choose—who have lost their right to move about freely, to assemble together as we meet here today. I recalled, too, the sin and corruption, the immorality and the starvation that always follow war.

As a result of witnessing these conditions, there came a deep feeling of gratitude in my heart for enduring faith and an appreciation to our faithful Saints for the lessons which they taught me. I came to have a new appreciation for some of our principles and teachings because of the devotion and example of these good people.

I came to love the Word of Wisdom more than ever before, as I saw its effects in the lives of our people. I saw them get their limited rations, in some of which there would be a small quantity of tobacco. Then the Saints would trade that small quantity for more food, while those with the tobacco habit would trade their limited amount of food for more tobacco even at the risk of starvation. I feel sure that many of the Saints are, no doubt, alive and well today because of their acceptance and living of this simple, and I think often unappreciated, law of health given to the Saints through the goodness of the Lord.

I saw people whose craving for drugs and stimulants had been intensified because of hunger. Men and women offering to sell their clothing, to barter their children's food, and in some cases to surrender their own bodies for immoral purposes in order to satisfy the craving for cigarets.

I have here an excerpt from an article by Louis Hagen, correspondent for the London Sunday Express, who had reported on conditions in 1946, in Germany particularly. This article is entitled, "How the Cigaret Rules Germany." He states:

At times they have become quite maniacal, selling their children's food, their belongings, and even themselves to get cigarets. One cannot possibly imagine the length to which people who lack tobacco will go to get a smoke. It is far worse than hunger. If you are hungry and smoke, you don't feel so hungry. But hunger intensifies tenfold the desire to smoke. Most German people are usually hungry.

If anyone thinks that Germany is not yet punished sufficiently, they might suggest the withdrawal of all cigarets. That would be worse than any other punishment that could be devised.

We stood on the street corners of some of the cities in the occupied areas and watched men literally fight for a cigaret butt flipped into the streets by American soldiers. We saw mothers stand on the

Sunday, October 5

Third Day

street corners and direct their little daughters down the sidewalks to pick up cigaret stubs thrown out of jeeps and other military vehicles and bring them back while those mothers stood on the street corners and smoked.

Yes, the Saints taught me a new appreciation for the Word of Wisdom. They taught me also a deeper appreciation for this intangible thing we refer to as a testimony—this thing that provides an anchor for men and women during times of great stress, trial, and hardship, yes, a testimony that brings peace to the soul even during times of war and struggle and hardship, that gives hope to the weary, and the depressed. Yes, a testimony that brings great power into the hearts of men and women during their darkest hours.

This is one of the peculiarities of this great people—the Latter-day Saints—a personal, individual testimony. I saw people peacefully happy in their hearts, while standing amidst the ruins all around them. I heard people bear testimonies to the goodness of the Lord unto them, although they were the sole remaining member of a once prosperous and happy family, the others all destroyed in the great struggle. Yet their spirits were sweet. They thanked God for the knowledge that was theirs and the assurance they had that some day in the Providence of God they would be reunited with their loved ones.

I came to know, my brethren and sisters, through the lives of our Saints abroad, that men and women who have a testimony of this work can endure anything which they may be called upon to endure and still keep sweet in spirit.

The Saints in Europe taught me a new appreciation for the priesthood of God. I heard them bear testimony of their gratitude for the priesthood in their homes. Many families who had been isolated from other representatives of the priesthood during the bombing and during sickness told of their gratitude that they had in their homes the authority and the power to lay their hands upon members of their families, and under the inspiration of heaven invoke God's healing power upon them.

My brethren and sisters, this is a priceless blessing. I heard them speak of their gratitude that in their homes, while isolated from the rest of the members of the mission, they were able to administer the sacred emblems. Yes, even at times when they did not have bread, they used potatoes or potato peelings as the emblem but had the sacrament administered to members of their own household.

Oh, my brethren of the priesthood, no honor that will ever come to any of us conferred by men of the world, or any man-made honorable body, will ever approach in importance the great honor and blessing which came to us the day we were ordained to the Holy Melchizedek Priesthood. This is a priceless blessing, an eternal blessing, and I hope and pray that we will honor it all the days of our lives.

Wealth, power, position, are as nothing, by comparison, to the honor and blessing which comes through the priesthood of the Living God. I know that many of our brethren today are facing responsibilities as we go to the polls. Many of them will be elected to legislative bodies; others will be chosen as chief executives in municipalities, to positions of trust in counties and states. We honor you because of your interest in political affairs, and we have confidence that you will always remember that no political power or office which may ever come to you will even approach in importance the great blessing and honor which came to you when you were ordained to the Holy Priesthood of God.

I thank the Saints abroad because they gave to me a deeper appreciation for the blessings of the holy temples. Sometimes, my brothers and sisters, I feel that we take these blessings largely for granted. Sometimes we live almost under the eaves, in the shade of the temple, and fail to take advantage of the priceless blessings that are available to us in the House of the Lord. The richest blessings of this life and of eternity are tied up with these sacred ordinances.

When I heard and saw the yearning in the hearts of the Saints that they might some day go to the temple and have open to them the richest blessings known to men and women in this world, I got a new appreciation of the blessings which we have available to us in these sacred buildings. I rejoice in my heart in the announcement of the First Presidency that a temple will be constructed in Switzerland. It is an answer to a prayer of years in my heart that some day temples might be erected close to those devoted Saints in Europe. I hope and pray that some day temples will be built in other parts of the world.

Many of the Saints would give their all if they could just enter the House of the Lord and have those sacred ordinances performed.

I remember one lovely old lady, a devoted sister that I met in a meeting of the Saints way down in Vienna, Austria. She was a little old lady, faithful and true. She had been ostracized by her people, by her community. She had been thrown into prison because she failed to bow at the feet of the man who at one time was the minister of her church. She endured hardships; she had been in a concentration camp; and after much struggle and effort on the part of the members of her family here in Zion, and members of Congress from Idaho and Utah, she finally arrived in Zion. When I saw her in a little community up in southeastern Idaho, she expressed, through her daughter, because she could not speak English, her gratitude for her arrival in Zion, and then she added:

"The American doctors do not give me much hope that I'll ever be strong again. I have been starved so long, they say." Then her face lighted up and she added, "But it doesn't matter, just so long as I get strong enough to go up to Idaho Falls or down to Logan and go through the temple. Then I am ready to go."

I am grateful to the Saints for the lessons which they taught me while I mingled among them. My brethren and sisters, may we appreciate the blessings which are ours. May we realize that all these material things are but a means to an end. We are but stewards here in mortality. God will hold us accountable for the use of the material things with which he has blessed us. Let us ever remember that the end is spiritual.

May we, as individual members of the Church, realize that all of our blessings come from above. May we be true to our covenants. May we live the gospel. May we appreciate the blessings of the Word of Wisdom, the priesthood of God, the blessings of the House of the Lord, and the priceless blessings of a personal testimony of the divinity of this work.

May God bless us to this end, I humbly pray as I add my testimony to those borne, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Elder Delbert Leon Stapley of the Council of the Twelve will now speak to us, and he will be followed by Elder Clifford E. Young, one of the Assistants to the Twelve.

ELDER DELBERT L. STAPLEY

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

MY BROTHERS AND SISTERS—I have rejoiced in the spiritual messages of this conference. My faith has been stimulated. I have resolved to be more devoted and more diligent in my service to the Master. I do not want to take much time this afternoon, and the things that I had thought of saying, I think I shall reserve for some future time.

Sunday, October 5

Third Day

I need the strength of the Lord as I talk to you for a few moments, and do solicit an interest in your faith and prayers, my brothers and sisters.

This conference has been devoted to a love for and an appreciation of the great blessings that the Church affords to each of us. We have been challenged to devoted service and to live according to the standards, the ideals, and the teachings of this great Church of ours. I also hope we have felt the need of searching for the blessings of the fathers, that those things enjoyed by the ancients may be restored to us and enjoyed by us in this the Dispensation of the Fulness of Times.

I remember that the progenitor of the great Israelite family was not satisfied with the conditions found in his homeland, and said to secure happiness and peace it was necessary for him to seek for the blessings of the fathers, and the right to administer the same. He had been a follower of righteousness, desiring to receive instructions and to keep the commandments of God, and sought the great blessings of the priesthood, and to be a father of many nations.

And as descendants of this great leader, we, too, should be followers after righteousness, and should seek to know the mind and will of God in order that our lives might conform thereto.

I remember the great devotion of Enoch, who labored constantly and faithfully to perfect his people that they might behold the face of God, and enjoy his presence. He labored valiantly as a servant of the Master, and while many failed to accept the gospel message of salvation, there were many who did, and through obedience to the gospel, they were perfected, and were not only permitted to look upon the face of God but were privileged to dwell in his presence and became so sanctified that the Lord received them to himself.

Moses the great deliverer of the Israelites, sought through the Holy Priesthood and the gospel of the Redeemer to perfect and sanctify the Israelites as they wandered in the wilderness, but they would not obey the great law of the gospel. They could not forget the idolatry and the fleshpots of Egypt; they sought to worship images and do things that were contrary to what God would have them do, and as a result this great leader was unable to perfect his people to behold the face of their God as he attempted to do, therefore God took Moses, the Holy Priesthood, and the gospel, from the Israelites, and in the place of the gospel with its great blessings, gave them the carnal code of laws.

The Savior came at the appointed time, and this carnal code of laws given as a schoolmaster to prepare the children of God for his coming, failed in its great purpose.

But the Lord established his work, called chosen servants to assist him in the service of the ministry, and as the Apostle Paul said to the Ephesians,

... he gave some apostles; and some prophets; and some evangelists; and some pastors and teachers;

For the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ. (Eph. 4:11-12.)

These devoted servants gave their time and talents willingly to the saving of souls, but apostasy crept in, and the great work of the apostles and others in a measure, was lost. They failed to perfect the people to behold the face of their Redeemer.

And again in this day, the same officers are in the Church and kingdom of God, and have the same commission of perfecting the Saints and edifying the body of Christ.

Now, my brothers and sisters, it seems to me we do have a great responsibility as members of the Church, for the Lord has placed upon us the responsibility of carrying this gospel message to every nation, kindred, tongue, and people. I do not think we can accomplish the great purposes the Lord has placed upon us unless we perfect ourselves and sanctify our souls to enjoy the inspiration and the direction of the Holy Ghost, that each of us is entitled to as baptized and faithful members of his kingdom. I believe a bishop called to preside over a ward, needs to perfect and sanctify himself above that of his brethren and sisters, otherwise he cannot give the quality of leadership required in his ward.

I think that same principle holds true for a president of a stake, and on up to and including the President of the Church. I am sure that in our beloved President we have an individual who has well perfected himself, enjoys the love of our Creator, and is inspired of him in the great ministry and service he renders to his fellow men.

My brothers and sisters, we need to incorporate into our lives all the refining influences of the gospel of Jesus Christ. There is much that pertains to the gospel we need to know, and that we need to use for our own benefit and blessing.

Not so long ago I heard a man excommunicated from the Church indict the leadership of the Church for their failure to teach the virtues of life as the cause of his downfall. Now, I am wondering if as leaders of this people, are we failing to teach the simple virtues of life, that would prevent many of our brothers and sisters from going astray and doing things that cause them to fail to receive the great blessings of this Church?

We need to consider the principle of honesty. Our beloved President mentioned it in his talk to the priesthood last evening. We must be honest and sincere as a people. We cannot lie nor cheat in our dealings. We should not take advantage of our fellow men. We cannot receive something that we have not worked for and earned. As a people, we need to teach the principle of honesty; it is a virtue that makes for character and good Latter-day Saints.

We need to be true. We need to be chaste. We have heard much said about chastity in the sessions of this conference.

Now, my brothers and sisters, there are many other simple virtues that go to make up good character. Let us consider these simple virtues as important in the perfecting and sanctifying of our souls, that in obeying these divine principles we may perfect and sanctify ourselves not only to behold the face of God, but also to be worthy when he comes the second time—to enjoy his presence and be with him in the great ministrations that he has to accomplish among the children of men.

We need also to consider, as parents and particularly couples of the age that can expect more children in the home, and also our young people who are anticipating marriage, when they accept the great responsibility of bringing children into this world they cannot take the position that because they have gone into the temples of our God and been sealed by the power of the priesthood for time and all eternity, that is all that is necessary to assure to their children every blessing and benefit it is their right to expect.

I would advocate that every Latter-day Saint young man and woman anticipating marriage, go into the temples of our God and by the authority of the priesthood be sealed for time and for all eternity. But I would want them, and I would want all other married couples expecting children into their homes to remember that they must ever be faithful to their covenants. I want them to remember that they must utilize their God-given gifts, these heavenly endowments of the spirit, that each is blessed with, that when children come, they may receive all parental gifts and blessings that they should enjoy, and have a right to expect being born under the new and everlasting covenant of marriage.

Now, it is important to us parents to remember our responsibility in respect to all of these holy ordinances and covenants entered into in the temples of our God. We must keep them sacred, and do nothing to violate the provisions of these covenants, otherwise the blessings that are pronounced upon us, and all blessings are predicated upon our obedi-

Sunday, October 5

Third Day

ence, will not be ours to enjoy and perhaps we shall not bestow to our children the gifts and endowments they have a right to receive.

And I know, that in addition to keeping sacred and holy these ordinances, and being faithful throughout our lives, we must also develop the native talents God has blessed us with, and they can be developed in the service of this Church, for if men and women will develop their talents, they have an opportunity of passing on to their children these great blessings and gifts of the Spirit. And so, when we consider perfecting ourselves and sanctifying our souls to behold the face of God and enjoy his presence, we must think of our children and their children's children.

Parents who live righteously and develop every natural gift and talent through service are entitled to choice spirits from our Heavenly Father and have a greater opportunity to endow them richly with their own perfected qualities and virtues which should assure their children a happy and useful life. My brothers and sisters, what joy and happiness would come to us as a result of our own righteousness? The greatest dividends we could experience would be ours, and these dividends can only come as we honor the holy ordinances and covenants that we have entered into. May we do this and be faithful and true in all our obligations and duties I humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER CLIFFORD E. YOUNG

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles

THIS has been a very inspiring conference, my brethren and sisters. This afternoon we have indicated by the raise of our hands that we will sustain the men and women whom God has called in their respective positions as leaders in this Church. This means that as we go from this conference, we will be a little more faithful in the discharge of our duties as Latter-day Saints. We will be a little more loyal to the bishop of the ward where we reside. We will be a little more loyal to the president of the stake and those associated with him. We will be a little more loyal to those who are near and dear to us because they perhaps come first. We will be a little more considerate of our children, their well-being; they need our help; they need our counsel; they need an understanding heart.

We have pledged here today that as we sustain this work, and I take it that in sustaining the Authorities that means we will sustain this work, we will sustain ourselves. We will sustain all that pertains to the Church and kingdom of God in the earth. We have that obligation. This is not just a perfunctory exercise that we witness every general conference, at stake conferences, but it is a solemn service. We enter into an obligation that we are in harmony with the work of the Lord. We renew our covenant that we will keep his commandments, if you will, because in keeping his commandments, we uphold this work, God's work, and we sustain all that pertains to it. And so we have witnessed here today a sacred part of our services, renewing our faith, and witnessing by our uplifted hands that we will sustain those whom God has chosen and thus sustain his work.

I am reminded here of an incident that may illustrate what I am trying to say, and then I will be through, for I realize the time is passing rapidly. There presided over one of our stakes some years ago a very worthy stake president. I need not hesitate to mention his name. It was President Heber Moon of the Duchesne Stake. President Moon met with a tragic accident, he and his wife. They lost their lives through an automobile accident on slippery roads as they were coming to Salt Lake City. One of my first appointments was to attend his stake conference. It was not too long after the depression. We were just getting on our feet. Livestock men were beginning to see daylight, and Brother Moon was in the livestock business, and he related this experience. His bank had said to him, "If you will stay with your sheep, cutting your expenses to the quick, we will not let you down; we will try to see you through." It was a time when the bank owned the major part of President Moon's herds. President Moon assured his banker that he would do it. And then he counseled with his family, and it was decided that his boys would give up school and go out to the herd. One day in visiting the herd, he found on the sheep camp table a sack of tobacco. He was concerned about it. His boy was camp tender but was then out with the sheep. He waited until the boy returned, and then he said, "Son, saddle another horse, and let's ride around the sheep." So the boy saddled another horse, and they rode around the sheep, and as they were riding along over the range, President Moon remarked about the range and the conditions, and then he said: "Son, I am not so sure but what we would be better off if I sold out." The boy said: "Why, Father, what's the matter, is the bank pressing you?" "No," he replied, "we're making headway and now have some equity, but you boys, your welfare mean more to me than all the sheep and range combined." The son didn't say anything as they rode back, but on reaching camp the boy went inside and, taking the lid from the camp range, threw the sack of tobacco in the fire. Then turning to his father he said: "Dad, you can depend on it, it will never happen again." That boy is now a member of a stake presidency.

There are two lessons here, my brethren and sisters. One was referred to by Brother Stapley—a man's honor, and that is a part of our pledge here today, a man's honor not only to himself, but to those who trust him. And the other, our desire and resolve to have an understanding heart with our children and our families. It seems to me that as we covenant here in these sacred exercises, we pledge for a renewal of understanding. We pledge a greater desire to serve and to be true to every trust, the Church, our business associates and our families. May God help us so to be, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

The Tabernacle Choir and congregation will now sing two stanzas of "Redeemer of Israel," Brother Cornwall conducting.

After the singing, we shall hear from Elder Bruce R. McConkie, of the First Council of the Seventy.

The Choir and congregation sang the hymn, "Redeemer of Israel."

ELDER BRUCE R. McCONKIE

Of the First Council of the Seventy

JUST this brief word:

Be clean, be pure, be chaste, for no unclean thing, no impure thing, and no unchaste thing can inherit the kingdom of God.

God spoke to Father Adam and said,

... teach it unto your children, that all men, everywhere, must repent, or they can in nowise inherit the kingdom of God, for no unclean thing can dwell there, or dwell in his presence. (Moses 6:57.)

The voice of the Lord was given by Amulek, saying,

... no unclean thing can inherit the kingdom of heaven; therefore how can ye be saved, except ye inherit the kingdom of heaven? Therefore, ye cannot be saved in your sins. (Alma 11:37.)

And when Christ summarized the plan of salvation to the Nephites, he did it by saying,

Sunday, October 5

Third Day

And no unclean thing can enter into his kingdom; therefore nothing entereth into his rest save it be those who have washed their garments in my blood, because of their faith, and the repentance of all their sins, and their faithfulness unto the end.

Now this is the commandment: Repent, all ye ends of the earth and come unto me and be baptized in my name, that ye may be sanctified by the reception of the Holy Ghost, that ye may stand spotless before me at the last day. (III Nephi 27:19-20.)

No unclean thing can inherit the kingdom of heaven. "... Be ye clean that bear the vessels of the Lord." (D. & C. 133:5.) In the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

That short and impressive sermon just delivered was by Elder Bruce R. McConkie, of the First Council of Seventy. We shall now hear from Elder Richard L. Evans of the First Council of Seventy.

ELDER RICHARD L. EVANS

Of the First Council of the Seventy

I WAS quite willing, I think truthfully I can say, even eager, that you should be spared this. Before the meeting began, I gave to President McKay all rights I might have to any time this afternoon—with the result that you see.

I should like to say before proceeding, that, with you, I have much missed here the presence and the utterance of Dr. John A. Widtsoe and Brother Albert E. Bowen. These men have meant much in my life, as they have in yours. I pray that the healing, sustaining, strengthening, peace-giving influence of our Father in heaven, may be with them to give comfort and health and peace to their thoughts and to their souls.

From the first utterance of the conference, the impressive and satisfying statement of comfort and encouragement and caution from President McKay, down to the present, we have been fed and strengthened. A wonderful sermon of summary could be given here, I think, by taking a sentence or a theme from each of the brethren, and putting them together, and almost I think it would be well to do it. I cannot attempt it fully, but some have lingered indelibly in my thoughts, beginning with the message of encouragement from President McKay; the earnest invitation this morning of President Richards to come into the kingdom, to enjoy its full fruits and fellowship; the fervent utterance of President Clark yesterday as to the power and blessed privilege of prayer. And so we might continue.

I remember Brother Moyle's appeal to live in accordance with our opportunities, to serve in accordance with the lot that is ours, each of us; and a sentence from Bishop Wirthlin lingers from last night, and runs through my thoughts: that we cannot criticize people into activity.

It has been a glorious conference, a summation of which would be impressive and soul-satisfying any place in the world, to any group of men and women, as it has been to us here.

I should like to make this plea to all of us: that we do not wait for another prophet to come to tell us what we already know. I think if we shall miss realizing our highest happiness and possibilities and opportunities and progress and peace and development, it will not be because of what we do not know; it will be because of what we ignore, for I believe verily that the Lord God has given us in his plan and purpose a knowledge of every principle that is essential to our happiness and salvation and to the realizing of our highest possibilities here and hereafter.

In all that we do, of course, there is the element of the human and the divine, a mixture of the two. We are not a perfect people; we are not perfect as individuals, but I hope, and repeat, that we shall not wait for other prophets or for yet another prophet to come to tell us what we already know, but that we shall act on what we have, and go forth from here with renewed purpose and determination to do our best according to our opportunities in the place and in the circumstances and with the gifts and talents with which we find ourselves, with which the Lord God has blessed us, each of us.

And where we have need of repentance, I plead that we shall repent—as a nation, as a people, as individuals. Where we have made mistakes, I plead that we shall face the facts and admit them. It is well-nigh impossible for a man to repent who is not willing to admit that he has need for repentance. I plead that we shall search our own souls, each of us, that we shall search ourselves individually and as organized entities, as a nation, as a people, as communities, as families, and where we have need for repentance, that we shall not withhold it.

Repentance should be a very popular principle. It has not always been so. Prophets have been stoned and ridiculed and rejected for proclaiming the need for it. But it is the one great, peace-giving principle that is open to him who has erred. It is the principle that is open to all of us that makes it possible to improve.

And over and over again I am comforted with this great, sustaining, strengthening thought, and I leave it with our young people, and with all of us, for such consideration as it may merit: Our Father in heaven knows us; he knows our hearts; he knows our thoughts. He understands us and loves us as his children, as we love our own children but with his infinitely greater capacity and wisdom and understanding. He knows the motives which move us to do the things we do or fail to do. He knows the influences by which we are sometimes swayed. He understands our missing a perfect performance. He knows our desires, our difficulties, our sorrows, our disappointments, our hopes, our objectives, our wants and our wishes. And he will help us, if we will take him into our confidence in our daily lives, if we will admit him into the counsel of our hearts, and approach him in prayer. He will help to sustain us in life against all adversity and difficulty and disappointment, against all uncertainty, against all the evils of the day. In the fulfilling of our worthy plans and purposes and our cherished hopes, he will help us. It is his declared purpose and intention to help us to immortality and eternal life. It is always comforting and sustaining to know that he understands us and that this is his declared purpose, if we will take him into our confidence and live to merit his companionship and direction, with this great saving, comforting, sustaining principle of repentance ever in mind.

May God be with each of us and all of us. Let this be a time for returning to him in those things in which we might have erred or strayed, a time for considering the values that endure, for calling our families together and teaching them truth, for working and praying and living for the preservation of free principles, for furthering our Father's work, with all that we have and all that we are. Let it be a time for looking inside ourselves, and searching honestly and improving and repenting and altering our ways where they need altering, and strengthening them where they need strengthening, and pursuing them further where they need so pursuing.

And let us not wait for another prophet to come and tell us what we already know—for I believe with all my heart, and know, and testify to you, that the principles of salvation and eternal happiness and progress and peace are within our knowledge and reach, and if we fail in realizing all that the Father intends for us, it will not be because he has left us in darkness, but because we have ignored something that was within the sphere of our understanding and within our reach.

Sunday, October 5

Third Day

May our Father be with all of us, in our decisions, with our families. May he be with you young people with your problems, and in all that you face; with President McKay and his counselors, and all associated with them in the far-reaching decisions and weighty problems that pertain to the Church officially; and with each of us, and all of us in our personal lives, that his peace may go forth from here with us, with his guiding, directing, sustaining influence, that we may carry back to our homes, back to our wards, back to our businesses and our varied places of activity and acquaintance and association a greater determination to live life to the best of our ability and in accordance with the great knowledge which has been given unto us, I pray in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

PRESIDENT DAVID O. MCKAY

AS WE draw near the closing hour of this great inspirational conference, I think we can say in the words of Peter on the Mount of Transfiguration, "Lord, it is good for us to be here."

I believe conscientiously nearly every person who has assembled with the vast audiences beginning with the Relief Society last Wednesday to this moment may feel a gratitude in his or her heart for the conferences that have been held.

We can express this feeling in prayer and gratitude. At this moment we have a prayer in our hearts that the Lord will bless those of our number who are ailing. We pray that comfort and healing may attend our beloved brother, Albert E. Bowen. What a strength he has been to me personally! Brother Bowen, I want you to know we are not unmindful of your loyalty and your hours and hours of devotion to the special assignment given you during the last two years. Today one heart, throughout the Church, says, "God bless you."

Brother Widtsoe, our prayers go to you, also. Your loyalty and faith we all know. Now, as your body is somewhat weakened, we unitedly pray our Father in heaven to sustain you.

Our hearts go out to those in the Church who are grieving and worried because of sore affliction to their loved ones, and to those who have recently been bereft of loved ones, particularly through polio. As I look over those to whom we should express appreciation, I notice the absence of Brother Roy Darley, one of our organists. He and his wife are at the bedside of their only son, stricken with polio. Our prayers go out to them, and to President Clark and his daughter. President Clark's little granddaughter, Luacine, has been suffering from that same affliction. We are thankful that she is recovering. We want the parents whose little child was stricken last evening, necessitating the father's being called out from the priesthood meeting, to know that our prayers are that that dread disease may not be fatal to your loved one.

That goes to all parents whose hearts are filled with anxiety because of afflicted ones. This is a prayerful Church. We are one body, and when one suffers, we all, to a degree, share that suffering.

I wish to express appreciation for the sustaining help of these noble counselors, President Stephen L. Richards and President J. Reuben Clark, Jr. No man—I make no exception—has been more blessed with the strength and wisdom, loyalty and devotion, of two counselors than I, and I express in your presence deep gratitude for their loyalty.

Likewise to the members of the Council of the Twelve and to the other General Authorities of the Church—I want them to understand that I am not unmindful of their willingness to minimize my weaknesses which often stand out so glaringly, and of their magnanimity in magnifying any virtue they might see. They are loyal men, seeking first the kingdom of God and his righteousness. Thank you, noble fellow workers!

We thank the members of the Church for their sustaining prayers in behalf of the General Authorities of the Church. You may know, we wish you to know, that these prayers are effective, and I wish to testify to you, to the Church, and to the world that the inspiration and protecting care of a kind Father in heaven are real. He is closer to the Church than anybody outside the Church—and some within the Church—realize.

The Lord is not just an absent, far-away source. He is a kind father, solicitous of the welfare of his children and ready and willing to hear and answer their call. The answer may be negative, as sometimes a wise parent gives a negative answer to the pleadings of a child, but he is ever ready to hear and to answer.

His Beloved Son stands at the head of this Church. It is his Church. Oh, may the world realize that in the very near future, open their minds to study the needs of the war-torn world, and see that those needs may be supplied by obedience to the principles of the revealed word of God!

This is Christ's Church. God help us all that we may be faithful members therein, and so live that others, seeing our good deeds, may be led to glorify our Father in heaven.

We wish to express appreciation to the choir. What a glorious work these faithful men and women are doing! We appreciate the effort and ability of the conductors, the organists, the officers of the choir, for their work at the conferences, and for their regular broadcasts.

We are grateful for the excellent weather we have enjoyed, unexcelled in all the world, grateful for the responsiveness of the audience to the messages that have been given, grateful for your co-operation, your ready adherence to any suggestion that will be helpful to the Church or to others.

We appreciate all who assisted in any way during this conference, the cooperation of the city officials, rendering ready and efficient service, the traffic officers who have stood at the crossings, who have guarded well the safety, and perhaps the lives, of some who might have otherwise been injured, who might have placed their lives in jeopardy.

We are grateful for the flowers from kind hearts that were prompted to place these silent messengers of love here for your pleasure and your inspiration. We thank the ushers who have been so attentive, careful, who have kept these grounds so clean and neat, and in that respect we thank everyone of you for your assistance and care.

We are grateful to the radio stations for their gratuitous service in enabling thousands and thousands to hear the messages of the General Authorities of the Church.

Now, in conclusion, may I venture a suggestion. Twice, during the conference, reference has been made to the fact that we are approaching a general election, in which tension becomes high; sometimes feelings are engendered; often false reports are made; and innocent people are misjudged.

Recently we heard that in one meeting, for example, it was stated authoritatively by somebody that two members of the General Authorities had said that the General Authorities of the Church had held a meeting and had decided to favor one of the leading political parties over the other, here in this state, particularly.

In Utah and surrounding states, contests for victory at the polls are being waged on national party lines. Regarding reports already received that the General Authorities of the Church have held a meeting and decided to wield their influence in favor of the candidates of one of these political parties, we will say:

This report is not true, and I take this opportunity here, publicly, to denounce such a report as without foundation in fact.

In the Church, there are members who favor the Democratic party. There are other members who sincerely believe and advocate the principles and ideals of the Republican party. The First Presidency, the Council of the Twelve, and other officers who constitute the General Authorities of the Church, preside over members of both political parties.

Sunday, October 5

Third Day

The President is President of the Church, not favoring in this election either political party. The welfare of all members of the Church is equally considered by the President, his Counselors, and the General Authorities. Both political parties will be treated impartially.

The Deseret News is the organ of the Church. It will be equally fair and impartial in the treatment of both political parties. This does not mean, however, that error will be condoned. Teachings and ideologies subversive to the fundamental principles of this great Republic, which are contrary to the Constitution of the United States, or which are detrimental to the progress of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, will be condemned, whether advocated by Republicans or Democrats.

We are all united in admonishing the members of the Church to register. We confirm the admonition already given from this pulpit regarding that important duty. We advocate the necessity of all members of the Church showing appreciation of your franchise, your citizenship, by voting, exercising your right to say who shall be your leaders. They become our servants. That is the spirit of the Constitution.

You hold the right—I hope we still have it—to say who shall direct this nation and who shall direct our affairs in state, county, and municipality. Everybody in Utah and our surrounding states where our people are influential should exercise this right.

Now in conclusion, my brethren, I should like to say just a word to the priesthood of the Church, eighteen thousand of whom gathered here last evening. Let us all follow the example of our great Leader and Savior, Jesus Christ, when he sat with his Twelve in that upper room and taught them the lesson of humility. He walked to the doorway where a basin of water stood, covered by a palm leaf, according to the custom of the day, girt himself with a towel as a servant, and washed the disciples' feet, and wiped them with the towel.

You will remember that when he came to Peter, the chief Apostle protested: "Thou shalt never wash my feet."

"If I wash not thy feet thou shalt have neither part nor parcel with me."

"Nay then," said impetuous Peter, "Not my feet only, but my hands and my head" (see John 13:8-9), and then after the Savior completed that ceremony, he ungirt himself, took his place at the head, and said:

"Ye call me Master and Lord: and ye say well; for so I am.

"If I then, your Lord and Master, have washed your feet, ye also ought to wash one another's feet.

"For I have given you an example, that ye should do as I have done to you." (Idem 13-15.)

In the 121st section of the Doctrine and Covenants, we have one of the greatest lessons in government ever given. I, as you, have studied pedagogy, a little psychology, but in principles of government I think you cannot find anywhere such sublime principles as follows:

"That the rights of the priesthood are inseparably connected with the powers of heaven, and that the powers of heaven cannot be controlled nor handled only upon the principles of righteousness.

"That they may be conferred upon us, it is true; but when we undertake to cover our sins, or to gratify our pride, our vain ambition, or to exercise control or dominion or compulsion upon the souls of the children of men, in any degree of unrighteousness, behold, the heavens withdraw themselves; the Spirit of the Lord is grieved; and when it is withdrawn, Amen to the priesthood or the authority of that man." (D. & C. 121:36-37.)

"We have learned by sad experience that it is the nature and disposition of almost all men, as soon as they get a little authority, as they suppose, they will immediately begin to exercise unrighteous dominion.

"Hence many are called, but few are chosen.

"No power or influence can or ought to be maintained by virtue of the priesthood, only by persuasion, by long-suffering, by gentleness and meekness, and by love unfeigned;

"By kindness, and pure knowledge, which shall greatly enlarge the soul without hypocrisy, and without guile—

"Reproving betimes with sharpness, when moved upon by the Holy Ghost"—not when moved upon by selfishness, retaliation, or enmity—"and then showing forth afterwards an increase of love toward him whom thou hast reproved, lest he esteem thee to be his enemy;

"That he may know that thy faithfulness is stronger than the cords of death." (D. & C. 121:39-44.)

And to all, we close with this: "Let thy bowels also be full of charity toward all men, and to the household of faith, and let virtue garnish thy thoughts unceasingly; then shall thy confidence wax strong in the presence of God; and the doctrine of the priesthood shall distil upon thy soul as the dews from heaven.

"The Holy Ghost shall be thy constant companion, and thy scepter an unchanging scepter of righteousness and truth; and thy dominion shall be an everlasting dominion, and without compulsory means it shall flow unto thee forever and ever." (Idem 45-46.)

O Father, grant that we may magnify these high ideals of government and instill in our hearts and the hearts of those over whom we preside a love and confidence in thee and thy Beloved Son. In the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

The Choir will now favor us with, "How Beautiful Upon the Mountains."

The closing prayer will be offered by Brother Albert Choules, formerly president of the Southern States Mission, after which this conference will adjourn sine die.

The Deseret Sunday School Union will convene in this building at 7 p.m. tonight. All Sunday School workers will wish to be in attendance. Others are invited to attend.

---

The Tabernacle Choir sang: "How Beautiful Upon the Mountains."

President David O. McKay:

We express special appreciation to KSL for keeping the channels open until the meetings are closed. We ask them kindly to give us credit for having closed once on time.

---

The Benediction was offered by Elder Albert R. Choules.

Conference adjourned sine die.

---

The congregational singing of the Conference was directed by J. Spencer Cornwall, Conductor, and Richard P. Condie, Assistant Conductor, of the Tabernacle Choir.

The Salt Lake Tabernacle Choir was in attendance at the Sunday Sessions and furnished musical numbers for those sessions.

The Tabernacle Choir male chorus furnished the choral numbers for the General Priesthood meeting Saturday evening.

The Relief Society Singing Mothers from the Salt Lake and Ogden areas and from the three Sevier stakes, with Sister Florence J. Madsen conducting, furnished musical numbers for the Friday sessions.

At the Saturday morning and afternoon sessions, the choir music was furnished by the German-speaking L.D.S. Choir, with Heinz Rimmasch conducting.

The music of the Chuch of the Air

Sunday, October 5

broadcast and also the Tabernacle Choir and Organ broadcast, Sunday morning, was directed by J. Spencer Cornwall. Alexander Schreiner was at the organ, and the spoken word was by Richard L. Evans.

Accompaniments and interludes on the great organ were played by Alexander W. Schreiner and Frank W. Asper.

Third Day

---

Stenographic notes of the Conference were taken by Frank W. Otterstrom and Joseph Anderson.

JOSEPH ANDERSON
Clerk of the Conference.

Index

	Page
Anderson, Elder Joseph .....	4
Authorities and Officers Present .....	1
Authorities and Officers Sustained .....	115
Benson, Elder Ezra Taft .....	117
Buehner, Bishop Carl W. ....	22
Changes in Church Officers and Organizations .....	4
Choir and Organ Broadcast .....	95
Christiansen, Elder ElRay L. ....	53
Church of the Air .....	90
Clark, President J. Reuben, Jr. ....	41
Clark, President J. Reuben, Jr. ....	84
(General Priesthood Meeting)
Clark, President J. Reuben, Jr. ....	115
(Presentation of General Authorities and Officers)
Cowley, Elder Matthew .....	26
Evans, Elder Richard L. ....	95
(Choir and Organ Broadcast)
Evans, Elder Richard L. ....	126
First Day—Afternoon Meeting .....	21
First Day—Morning Meeting .....	3
General Authorities, Officers and Auxiliary Officers Sustained .....	115
General Authorities and Officers Present .....	1
General Priesthood Meeting .....	74
Hunter, Elder Milton R. ....	36
Isaacson, Bishop Thorpe B. ....	63
Ivins, Elder Antoine R. ....	19
Kimball, Elder Spencer W. ....	46
Kirkham, Elder Oscar A. ....	67
Lee, Elder Harold B. ....	16
Longden, Elder John .....	25
Morris, Elder George Q. ....	69
Moyle, Elder Henry D. ....	71
McConkie, Elder Bruce R. ....	125
McConkie, Elder Oscar W. ....	56
McKay, President David O. ....	7
(Opening Address)
McKay, President David O. ....	88
(General Priesthood Meeting)
McKay, President David O. ....	128
(Closing Address)
McKay, President David O. ....	3, 4, 19, 20,
21, 22, 26, 29, 32, 39, 40, 41, 51, 55, 57, 58, 63, 67, 68, 73, 74, 75, 77, 83, 90, 96, 97, 107, 113, 114, 117, 121, 125, 126, 131.

	Page
McKay, Elder Thomas E. ....	43
Obituaries .....	7
Petersen, Elder Mark E. ....	29
Presentation of General Authorities and Officers .....	115
Priesthood Meeting, General .....	74
Richards, Elder LeGrand .....	91
Richards, Elder Stayner .....	12
Richards, President Stephen L. ....	85
(General Priesthood Meeting)
Richards, President Stephen L. ....	97
Romney, Elder Marion G. ....	32
Second Day—Afternoon Meeting .....	58
Second Day—Morning Meeting .....	40
Smith, Elder Eldred G. ....	61
Smith, President Joseph Fielding .....	58
Sonne, Elder Alma .....	111
Stapley, Elder Delbert L. ....	121
Sunday Morning General Conference Session .....	96
Sustaining of General Authorities, Officers and Auxiliary Officers .....	115
Tabernacle Choir and Organ Broadcast .....	95
Third Day—Afternoon Meeting .....	114
Third Day—Church of the Air .....	90
Waite, Elder William Noble .....	75
Wirthlin, Bishop Joseph L. ....	78
(General Priesthood Meeting)
Wirthlin, Bishop Joseph L. ....	107
Young, Elder Clifford E. ....	124
Young, Elder Levi Edgar .....	103
Young, Elder S. Dilworth .....	51

Education Lives As Long As You Read GOOD BOOKS

The Gospel and Man's Relationship to Deity.....$1.50

B. H. Roberts

New Witness for Christ in America

Francis W. Kirkham

Volume I .....$2.75

Evidence of Divine Power in the "Coming Forth" of the Book of Mormon

Volume II .....$2.75

Attempts to prove the "Book of Mormon" man-made

Witnesses of the Book of Mormon .....$2.25

Preston Nibley

Doctrine and Covenants Commentary.....$5.00

Joseph Fielding Smith

Autobiography of Parley P. Pratt .....$3.00

Key to Theology .....$1.50

Parley P. Pratt

J. Golden Kimball .....$3.50

Claude Richards

New Witness for God—Vol I, II, III .....$2.50

B. H. Roberts

Each

Treasures to Share .....$2.00

Melvin Westenskov

---

ALL PRICES ARE SUBJECT TO CHANGE WITHOUT NOTICE

---

DESERET BOOK COMPANY

"THE BOOK CENTER OF THE INTERMOUNTAIN WEST"

44 East South Temple Street, Salt Lake City 10, Utah

Some Suggestions for Your Church Library

Books of lasting inspiration by our Church leaders

On the Way to Immortality and Eternal Life.....	$3.50
J. Reuben Clark
Priesthood and Church Government .....	$2.50
John A. Widtsoe
Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith .....	$3.50
Joseph Fielding Smith
Essentials in Church History .....	$4.00
Joseph Fielding Smith
Jesus the Christ—Cloth Edition .....	$3.00
James E. Talmage
Articles of Faith—Missionary Edition.....	$1.50
James E. Talmage
Gospel Standards .....	$2.25
Heber J. Grant
Sharing the Gospel With Others .....	$2.50
George Albert Smith
Word of Wisdom .....	$2.75
John A. Widtsoe
Discourses of Brigham Young .....	$3.00
Compiled by John A. Widtsoe
The Spoken Word .....	$2.00
Richard L. Evans
Unto the Hills .....	$2.00
Richard L. Evans
This Day and Always .....	$2.00
Richard L. Evans
At This Same Hour .....	$2.00
Richard L. Evans
Tonic For Our Times.....	$2.50
Richard L. Evans

---

ALL PRICES ARE SUBJECT TO CHANGE WITHOUT NOTICE

---

DESERET BOOK COMPANY

"THE BOOK CENTER OF THE INTERMOUNTAIN WEST"

44 East South Temple Street, Salt Lake City 10, Utah

One Hundred Twenty-third

ANNUAL

CONFERENCE

OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST
OF LATTER-DAY SAINTS

Held in the Tabernacle
Salt Lake City, Utah

April 4, 5 and 6, 1953

With Report of Discourses

Published by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints
Salt Lake City, Utah

Printed in the United States of America

Education Lives As Long As You Read

GOOD BOOKS

Life of a Great Leader .....	$2.50
Biography of President Heber J. Grant Bryant S. Hinckley
Presidents of the Church .....	$4.00
Preston Nibley New revised edition including biographical sketch of President David O. McKay
Brigham Young, the Man and His Work.....	$3.00
Preston Nibley
James H. Moyle .....	$3.50
Gordon B. Hinckley
A Marvelous Work and a Wonder .....	$1.75
LeGrand Richards
Sermons and Missionary Services of Melvin J. Ballard .....	$2.75
Bryant S. Hinckley
Prophecy and Modern Times .....	$1.75
W. Cleon Skousen
Ancient America and The Book of Mormon.....	$4.00
Milton R. Hunter and Thomas Stewart Ferguson
Outlines of Ecclesiastical History .....	$2.25
B. H. Roberts

---

ALL PRICES ARE SUBJECT TO CHANGE WITHOUT NOTICE

---

DESERET BOOK COMPANY

"THE BOOK CENTER OF THE INTERMOUNTAIN WEST"

44 East South Temple Street, Salt Lake City 10, Utah

The One Hundred Twenty-third Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints

The One Hundred Twenty-third Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints convened in the Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, Utah, Saturday, Sunday and Monday, April 4, 5 and 6, 1953.

The general sessions of the conference were held at 10:00 a.m. and 2:00 p.m. Saturday, Sunday and Monday, and the General Priesthood meeting was held in the Tabernacle Saturday evening, April 4, at 7:00.

The proceedings of the general sessions were broadcast over Station KSL, and by arrangement through KSL over the following stations:

In Utah: KSUB at Cedar City, KSVC at Richfield, KJAM at Vernal, KVVU at Logan.

In Idaho: KGEM at Boise, KID at Idaho Falls, KJRL at Pocatello, KBIO at Burley, KEEP at Twin Falls, KRXX at Rexburg.

In Colorado: KEXO at Grand Junction.

In Nevada: KELY at Ely and KLAS at Las Vegas (Sunday only).

In Arizona: KTYL at Mesa (by transcription).

In California: (Sunday only), KCSB at San Bernardino, KWTC at Barstow, KPMO at Pomona, KBLA at North Hollywood, KNOB at Long Beach.

In Hawaii: KULA at Honolulu (Sunday only).

The proceedings of the general sessions were also televised over KSL television station, Channel 5.

All general sessions of the conference and the General Priesthood meeting were broadcast in the Assembly Hall, on Temple Square, and in Barratt Hall (60 North Main Street), over a loud-speaking system and by television. Thousands, in addition, listened to the services on the Tabernacle grounds by means of amplifying equipment.

The proceedings of the General Priesthood meeting were broadcast by special wire to the Brigham Young University Fieldhouse in Provo, Utah, for the accommodation of a large group of brethren holding the priesthood who had assembled there to listen to the services.

President David O. McKay presided and conducted the services at each of the sessions of the Conference, including the General Priesthood meeting.

A full report of Columbia Broadcasting Company's Tabernacle Choir and Organ broadcast is also included in this record.

GENERAL AUTHORITIES OF THE CHURCH PRESENT

Of The First Presidency: David O. McKay, *, and J. Reuben Clark, Jr.

Of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles: Joseph Fielding Smith, **, ***, Harold B. Lee, Spencer W. Kimball, Ezra Taft Benson, Mark E. Petersen, Matthew Cowley, Henry D. Moyle, Delbert L. Stapley, Marion G. Romney, LeGrand Richards, and Adam S. Bennion.****

Assistants to the Twelve Apostles: Thomas E. McKay, Clifford E. Young, Alma Sonne, George Q. Morris, Stayner Richards, ElRay L. Christiansen, and John Longden.

The First Council of the Seventy: Levi Edgar Young, Antoine R. Ivins, Richard L. Evans, Oscar A. Kirkham, Seymour

*Stephen L. Richards absent because of illness.

**John A. Widtsoe passed away November 29, 1952.

***Albert E. Bowen was absent because of illness.

****Adam S. Bennion was sustained at this Conference (April 6) as a member of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles, filling the vacancy caused by the death of Elder John A. Widtsoe.

Dilworth Young, Milton R. Hunter, and Bruce R. McConkie.

Presiding Bishopric: Joseph L. Wirthlin, Thorpe B. Isaacson, and Carl W. Buehner.

GENERAL OFFICERS AND OTHER AUTHORITIES PRESENT

Church Historian and Recorder: Joseph Fielding Smith, and A. William Lund, Assistant.

Members of General Welfare Committee, Church Welfare Program.

Members of General Board of Education, Commissioner of Education, Seminary Supervisors, Directors and Associate Directors of Institutes.

Presidents of Stakes and their Counselors, Bishops of Wards and their Counselors, Presidents of Temples, Patriarchs, High Priests, Seventies, Elders; General Stake and Ward officers of Auxiliary Associations, etc., from all parts of the Church.

Mission Presidents: Richard L. Evans, Temple Square, Salt Lake City; Delbert G. Taylor, Eastern States; J. Howard Maughan, New England; Isaac A. Smoot, Northern States; Carl C. Burton, Great Lakes; John B. Hawkes, North Central States; John B. Matheson, East Central States; J. Orval Ellsworth, Central States; Peter J. Ricks, Southern States; Bryan L. Bunker, California; Thomas W. Gardner, Northern California; Benjamin L. Bowring, Texas-Louisiana; Ray E. Dillman, Western States; James A. McMurrin, Northwestern States; J. Melvin Toone, Canada; Scott Zimmerman, Western Canada; Lucian M. Meacham, Jr., Mexico; Lorin F. Jones, Spanish-American; Golden R. Buchanan, Southwest Indian.

FIRST DAY MORNING MEETING

The first session of the Conference convened Saturday morning, April 4, at 10 o'clock, with President David O. McKay presiding and conducting the services.

The Tabernacle was filled to capacity as the time approached for the opening of the Conference; great numbers occupied the Assembly Hall to the south of the Tabernacle and Barratt Hall (40 North Main Street), and in addition, many people assembled on the Tabernacle grounds.

President David O. McKay:

The time has arrived for the opening of this the 123rd annual conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. We are convened in the Tabernacle on Temple Square in Salt Lake City.

All the General Authorities of the Church are in attendance excepting President Stephen L. Richards and Elder Albert E. Bowen. President Richards was desirous of attending this session, but we advised against it. He is improving in his health. He met with the Presidency the other morning in preparing the details of the conference and is feeling well, but we deem it advisable and so does his doctor for him not to make too much exertion. I am very pleased to report to you that he is improving and gaining in strength.

This morning when I shook Elder Bowen's hand he said please give to the Brethren and the Saints assembled my greetings and love. He has been confined to the hospital for several months. I think he is gaining. His brilliant mind is active, his memory responsive, but the stroke has left part of his body helpless.

Since last conference in October one of our faithful associates has passed to the other side, as you know, Elder John A. Widtsoe. A man of even temperament, pleasant and agreeable under all circumstances, loyal to his Church, devoted to his family, to truth and to his God. One who devoted his life to the service of his fellowmen.

Elder Joseph Anderson is clerk of the conference.

These services and all general sessions of the conference will be broadcast in the Assembly Hall, in Barratt Hall, 60 North Main, over the loudspeaking system and by television. The Fire Department officials have only this morning requested that we keep the aisles clear, and also the exits. I replied that it will be difficult probably to keep the exits free because others who will not hear this announcement will be crowding in, so we shall appreciate that you respond to this request of the Fire Department and refrain from crowding the aisles or the exits. That is why we say overflow meetings will be held in the Assembly Hall and in the Barratt Hall.

This service and all general sessions of the conference will be broadcast over KSL, and by arrangements through KSL over the following stations: In Utah, KSUB, Cedar City; KSBC at Richfield; KJAM at Vernal; KVCNU at Logan; in Idaho, KGEM at Boise; KID at Idaho Falls; KJRL at Pocatello; KBIO at Burley; KEEP at Twin Falls, and KRXX at Rexburg. In Colorado, KEXO at Grand Junction; in Nevada, KELY at Ely, KLAS at Las Vegas. That will be only on Sunday. In Arizona, KTYL at Mesa, by transcription; in California KCSV at San Bernardino; KWTC at Barstow; KPMO at Pomona; KBLA at North Hollywood; KNOB at Long Beach. In Hawaii, KULA at Honolulu, by transcription on Sunday; and the California stations will be on Sunday. We will note that later. You will be interested to know in this respect that according to the figures of the radio and television manufacturers association, in addition to available information from local dealers and distributors of television receivers, a reliable estimate would place the number of sets at 100,000 television sets in the area now serviced by KSL-TV. We believe, therefore, that some sessions of conference, especially the Sunday sessions, could have an average tune-in of 5 viewers per each receiver. If 60% of the receivers were tuned into conference at any given session there would be 300,000 viewers watching as well as listening to the proceedings in the Tabernacle. We express appreciation to the stations named for their cooperation in broadcasting the proceedings of this conference. We thank them for their service which will continue throughout the conference. In the interest of time, however, we shall not repeat this announcement at every session, excepting probably on Sunday when the California stations are on the air.

Saturday, April 4

First Day

All the general sessions will be televised over KSL television station, channel 5.

Sunday morning, April 5th, at 8:30, Elder Longden, Assistant to the Twelve, will be a speaker over NBC's Faith in Action series. His address which will be heard in the area over KDYL is entitled, "Christ the Lord is Risen."

The singing for this morning's session will be furnished by the combined Scandinavian Choirs, with R. Hulbert Keddington conducting and Roy M. Darley at the organ. We shall begin this session by the combined choirs singing, "O Morn of Beauty," conducted by Elder Keddington.

The opening prayer will be offered by Franklin J. Murdock, president of the Highland Stake.

---

Singing by the combined Scandinavian Choirs, "O Morn of Beauty."

Elder Franklin J. Murdock, President of the Highland Stake, offered the invocation.

President David O. McKay:

The Scandinavian Choirs will now sing, "The Messiah is Coming," conducted by Elder Keddington. After the singing, Elder Joseph Anderson, Clerk of the Conference, will read the vital statistical data, changes in the ward and stake organizations, the obituaries of the Church, and some items pertaining to financial expenditures.

The Scandinavian Choirs will now sing.

---

The combined Scandinavian Choirs sang "The Messiah Is Coming."

Elder Joseph Anderson, Clerk of the Conference, read the following reports:

CHANGES IN CHURCH OFFICERS STAKE, WARD AND BRANCH ORGANIZATIONS SINCE OCTOBER CONFERENCE 1952

MISSION CHANGES AND NEW PRESIDENTS APPOINTED

Lee B. Valentine appointed president of Argentine Mission to succeed Harold Brown.

Charles V. Liljenquist appointed president of Australian Mission to succeed George A. Christensen.

Hilton A. Robertson released as president of Chinese Mission.

Isaac A. Smoot appointed president of Northern States Mission to succeed Waldo M. Andersen.

Howard B. Stone appointed president of Samoan Mission to succeed Earl S. Paul.

LeRoy H. Duncan appointed president of South African Mission to succeed Evan P. Wright.

William F. Perschon appointed president of Swiss-Austrian Mission to succeed Samuel E. Bringham.

John Kenneth Orton appointed president of Tahitian Mission to succeed Othello P. Pearce.

NEW STAKES ORGANIZED

Cannon Stake organized March 1, 1953, by division of Pioneer Stake.

Detroit Stake organized November 2, 1952, from Great Lakes and Canadian Missions.

East Ogden Stake organized November 23, 1952, by division of Mt. Ogden and Ogden Stakes.

East Sharon Stake organized November 24, 1952, by division of Sharon Stake.

Klamath Stake organized March 22, 1953, from Northern California Mission.

Layton Stake organized January 25, 1953, by division of North Davis Stake.

Lorin Farr Stake organized November 16, 1952, by division of Ben Lomond Stake.

Mt. Rubidoux Stake organized October 26, 1952, by division of San Bernardino Stake.

North Tooele Stake organized March 29, 1953, by division of Tooele Stake.

Riverdale Stake organized November 30, 1952, by division of Weber, South Ogden and Lake View Stakes.

San Jose Stake organized November 30, 1952, from Palo Alto Stake and Northern California Mission.

STAKE PRESIDENTS CHOSEN

Leonard T. Ralphs, president of American Falls Stake to succeed George R. Woolley.

Heber Jay Heiner, Jr., president of Ben Lomond Stake to succeed William Arthur Budge.

Clarence Neeley, president of Benson Stake to succeed Merle G. Hyer.

Fred H. Peck, Jr., president of Cannon Stake.

Winslow B. Whiteley, president of Cassia Stake to succeed Lewis R. Critchfield.

Alan B. Blood, president of Davis Stake to succeed LeRoy H. Duncan.

George W. Romney, president of Detroit Stake.

Scott B. Price, president of East Ogden Stake.

Henry D. Taylor, president of East Sharon Stake.

Carroll William Smith, president of Klamath Stake.

I. Haven Barlow, president of Layton Stake.

Francis M. Zimmerman, president of Long Beach Stake to succeed Virgil H. Spongberg.

Elton W. Wardle, president of Lorin Farr Stake.

Albert Leland Bott, president of Mt. Ogden Stake to succeed Olin H. Ririe.

Vern R. Peel, president of Mt. Rubidoux Stake.

George Smith Haslam, president of North Davis Stake to succeed George H. Holt.

Lloyd P. Mickelsen, president of North Idaho Falls Stake to succeed Henry Ray Hatch.

Orlando T. Barrus, president of North Tooele Stake.

Henry A. Smith, president of Pioneer Stake to succeed Fred H. Peck, Jr.

Rudolph Lincoln Van Kampen, president of Riverdale Stake.

Wilford Joseph Reichmann, president of St. George Stake to succeed Wm. H. Bennett.

Lavern M. Hansen, president of San Bernardino Stake to succeed Vern R. Peel.

Serge J. Lauper, president of San Francisco Stake to succeed J. Bryon Barton, deceased.

Vernard Lester Beckstrand, president of San Jose Stake.

Philo T. Edwards, president of Sharon Stake to succeed Henry D. Taylor.

John Byron Ravsten, president of Smithfield Stake to succeed George L. Rees.

Myron L. Western, president of West Pocatello Stake to succeed Twayne Austin, deceased.

NEW WARDS ORGANIZED

Bonneville Park Second and Ogden Fortieth Wards, Ben Lomond Stake, formed by division of Bonneville Park Branch and Ogden Twenty-Ninth Ward.

Saturday, April 4

First Day

Boise Ninth Ward, Boise Stake, formed by division of Boise Fourth Ward.

Bountiful Eighth and Ninth Wards, Bountiful Stake, formed by division of Bountiful Second and Third Wards.

West Suburban Ward, Chicago Stake, formerly West Suburban Branch.

Cottonwood Third, South Cottonwood Second and Holladay Fifth Wards, Cottonwood Stake, formed by division of Cottonwood, South Cottonwood and Holladay Third Wards.

Centerville Third Ward, Davis Stake, formed by division of Centerville First Ward.

Denver Fourth Ward, Denver Stake, formed by division of Crestmoor Ward.

Ann Arbor, Dearborn, Detroit, Flint, Lansing, Pontiac, Saginaw-Midland and Toledo Wards, Detroit Stake, formerly branches in Great Lakes Mission.

Lethbridge Third Ward, East Lethbridge Stake, formed by division of Lethbridge Second Ward.

Anaheim and Costa Mesa Wards, East Long Beach Stake, formed by division of Fullerton Ward and all of Huntington Beach Branch.

East Mill Creek Second Ward, East Mill Creek Stake, formed by division of East Mill Creek Ward.

Clark Ward, Grantsville Stake, formed by division of Grantsville First and Second Wards.

Idaho Falls Fourteenth Ward, Idaho Falls Stake, formed by division of Idaho Falls Ninth Ward.

Redondo Second Ward, Inglewood Stake formed by division of Redondo Ward.

Dublan Second Ward, Juarez Stake, formerly Mexican Branch.

Ashland, Grants Pass, Klamath Falls, Klamath Falls Second, Lakeview and Medford Wards, Klamath Stake, formerly branches in Northern California Mission.

Lehi Sixth and Seventh Wards, Lehi Stake, formed by division of Lehi Wards.

Bonneville Park Ward, Lorin Farr Stake, formerly Bonneville Park Branch.

Henderson Second Ward, Moapa

Stake, formed by division of Henderson Ward.

Clifton-Morenci Ward, Mt. Graham Stake, formerly Clifton-Morenci Branch.

Clearfield Third and Fourth Wards, North Davis Stake, formed by division of Clearfield First and Second Wards.

Hunter Second and Redwood Second Wards, North Jordan Stake, formed by division of Hunter and Redwood Wards.

Oakland Fifth Ward, Oakland Stake, formed by division of Oakland and Diamond Wards.

Menlo Park Ward, Palo Alto Stake, formed by division of Palo Alto Ward.

Los Altos Ward, Palo Alto Stake, formerly branch in Northern California Mission.

Covina Ward, Pasadena Stake, formed by division of Monrovia and Baldwin Park Wards.

Pocatello Seventeenth Ward, Pocatello Stake, formed by division of Pocatello 13th Ward.

Downey Second Ward, Portneuf Stake, formed by division of Downey Ward.

Burton-Independence Ward, Rexburg Stake, formed by merging Burton and Independence Wards.

Balboa Second Ward, San Francisco Stake, formed by division of Balboa Ward.

Pacific Grove, Salinas, Santa Cruz and Watsonville Wards, San Jose Stake, formerly branches in Northern California Mission.

Kirkland Ward, Seattle Stake, formerly branch in Northwestern States Mission.

Idaho Falls Fifteenth Ward, South Idaho Falls Stake, formed by division of Idaho Falls Eighth Ward.

Ogden 37th, Ogden 38th and Ogden 39th Wards, South Ogden Stake, formed by division of Ogden 34th, Ogden 28th and Ogden 14th Wards.

Coalville Second Ward, Summit Stake, formed by division of Coalville Ward and includes membership from Cluff Ward.

Washington Terrace Third and Fourth Wards, Weber Stake, formed by division of Washington Terrace First and Second Wards.

WARDS AND BRANCHES TRANSFERRED

Mt. Ogden, Ogden 30th, Ogden 33rd, Ogden 35th, Ogden 36th and Highland Wards, East Ogden Stake, formerly of Mt. Ogden and Ogden Stakes.

Edgemont First, Edgemont Second, Pleasant View, Oak Hills First, Oak Hills Second Wards, East Sharon Stake, formerly of Sharon Stake.

Layton First, Layton Second, Layton Third, Layton Fourth Wards and Sahara Branch, Layton Stake, formerly of North Davis Stake.

Lorin Farr, Ogden Seventh, Ogden Eighth, Ogden Twenty-First Wards, Lorin Farr Stake, formerly of Ben Lomond Stake.

Arlington, Hemet, Ontario, Pomona, Riverside Wards, Corona, Elsinore, Mira Loma and Perris Branches, Mt. Rubidoux Stake, formerly of San Bernardino Stake.

Lakeview, Tooele Second, Tooele Third, Tooele Fifth, Tooele Seventh, Tooele Eighth and Tooele Ninth Wards, North Tooele Stake, formerly of Tooele Stake.

Ogden 22nd, Ogden 32nd, Riverdale, Washington Terrace First, Second, Third and Fourth Wards, Riverdale Stake, formerly of Weber and Lake View Stakes.

San Jose First, Second and Third Wards, San Jose Stake, formerly of Palo Alto Stake.

Ogden Ninth, Ogden Eighteenth, Ogden Twenty-Sixth, Ogden Twenty-Seventh Wards, Weber Stake, formerly of South Ogden Stake.

WARD NAME CHANGED

Pleasant Hill Ward, Berkeley Stake, formerly Pleasant Hills Ward.

Cottonwood First Ward, Cottonwood Stake, formerly Cottonwood Ward.

Cottonwood Second Ward, Cottonwood Stake, formerly Big Cottonwood Ward.

Denver Third Ward, Denver Stake, formerly Crestmoor Ward.

Oakland Second Ward, Oakland

Stake, formerly Elmhurst Ward.

Oakland Third Ward, Oakland Stake, formerly Diamond Ward.

Oakland Fourth Ward, Oakland Stake, formerly Maxwell Park Ward.

San Jose First Ward, San Jose Stake, formerly San Jose Ward.

San Jose Second Ward, San Jose Stake, formerly Willow Glen Ward.

San Jose Third Ward, San Jose Stake, formerly Naglee Park Ward.

INDEPENDENT BRANCHES ORGANIZED

Granger Branch, Lyman Stake, formed by division of Lyman Ward.

Yerington Branch, Reno Stake, formed by division of Hawthorne Ward.

La Sal Branch, San Juan Stake, formerly dependent upon Monticello Ward.

Alderwood Branch, Seattle Stake, formed by division of Seattle Fifth Ward.

BRANCHES TRANSFERRED TO STAKES FROM MISSIONS

Chatham, Sarnia, Windsor, Jackson and Selfridge Field Branches, Detroit Stake, formerly of Canadian and Great Lakes Missions.

Alturas, Etna, Tulelake and Yreka Branches, Klamath Stake, formerly of Northern California Mission.

Harmony Hills and Gilroy Branches, San Jose Stake, formerly of Northern California Mission.

Monroe, Oak Harbor and Sedro-Woolley Branches, Seattle Stake, formerly of Northwestern States Mission.

WARDS AND INDEPENDENT BRANCHES DISCONTINUED

Bench Ward, Bannock Stake, ward consolidated with Williams Ward.

Central Ward, Bannock Stake, ward consolidated with Grace Second Ward.

Mound Valley Ward, Bannock Stake, membership transferred to Cleveland Ward.

Belfry Branch, Big Horn Stake, trans-

Saturday, April 4

First Day

ferred to West Central States Mission.

Piute Branch, Millard Stake, membership transferred to Kanosh Ward.

Cambridge Ward, Portneuf Stake, membership transferred to Downey Ward.

Burton and Independence Wards, Rexburg Stake, merged to make Burton-Independence Ward.

Cluff Ward, Summit Stake, membership transferred to Coalville Second Ward.

Dove Creek Branch, San Juan Stake, changed from independent branch to dependent branch on Monticello Ward.

THOSE WHO HAVE PASSED AWAY

Elder John A. Widsøe of the Council of the Twelve.

President Harry L. Payne, President of Arizona Temple.

J. Bryon Barton, President of San Francisco Stake.

Twayne Austin, President of West Pocatello Stake.

STATISTICAL AND FINANCIAL REPORT

For the Information of the Members of the Church

The First Presidency issues the following statement of items concerning the condition and operation of the Church for the year 1952. The statement will include three sections: First, Statistical Information; Second, Financial Data; and Third, Miscellaneous Items.

I. STATISTICAL INFORMATION

Number of Stakes of Zion, at end of year .....	202
Number of Wards .....	1,565
Number of Independent Branches .....	202
Total Wards and Independent Branches, at end of year .....	1,767
Number of Missions .....	42

Church Membership:

Stakes .....	974,118
Missions .....	214,935
Total Membership (at end of year) .....	1,189,053

Church Growth:

Children blessed in Stakes and Missions .....	43,114
Children baptized in Stakes and Missions .....	25,896
Converts baptized in Stakes and Missions .....	16,813

Social Statistics:

Birth rate per thousand .....	39.34
Marriage rate per thousand .....	8.98
Death rate per thousand .....	5.85

(These data on births, marriages and deaths are computed from stake reports and do not include the missions)

Missionaries:

Number of missionaries in the missions of the Church (including those enroute to or from their fields of labor) .....	2,897
Number engaged in missionary work in the stakes .....	6,138
Total missionaries—December 31, 1952 .....	9,035
Number of missionaries who received training in the Missionary Home in 1952 .....	872

II. FINANCIAL DATA

This section will be presented under two headings:

First, Expenditures for Church organizations which originate directly and indirectly from the office of the Corporation of the President, which expenditures are funded in the main from the tithes of the Church.

Administrative Expenses

For salaries of Church employees in the office of the Presidency and the office of the Presiding Bishopric, the Tabernacle Choir employees, and special committees, there being about one thousand persons on the employees payroll; for the living allowances and traveling expenses of the General Authorities; and for equipment and miscellaneous items of office expense ..... $ 1,214,665

(The total Administrative Expenses are covered by non-tithing income.)

Stakes and Wards

For expenses of 202 stakes and 1,767 wards and independent branches, including the maintenance of buildings; expenses and mileage allowances of stake presidents and bishops; furnishings for stake and ward offices; erection, remodeling and repairing of stake and ward buildings ..... $ 9,516,508

Missions and Missionary Work

For maintenance and operation of the established missions of the Church; living and traveling expenses of mission presidents; return fares of missionaries; for expenses of bureaus of information and of the Missionary Home in Salt Lake City; for free literature, radio and publicity expense; for erection, remodeling, purchase, maintenance and renting of meeting houses and other buildings ..... $ 4,601,828

Temples

For expenses of the eight temples now in operation and for construction work, repairs and maintenance of temple buildings, outbuildings, and grounds ..... $ 689,418

Welfare

For the purchase of equipment, commodities and containers; for operating expenses of bishops' storehouses, and for the transportation of commodities; for the purchase, construction and remodeling of bishops' storehouses and other general welfare properties; for General Church Welfare Committee administrative expenses; and for the care of the needy—rents, light, fuel, hospitalization, burials, etc. .... $ 1,573,803

General Buildings and Grounds

For maintenance of and repairs and improvements to general Church buildings including the Church Administration building, Tabernacle, and Assembly Hall, and grounds, and of buildings situated immediately adjacent to the Temple Block, and $705,482 allowed to hospitals for new construction and for improvements ..... $ 1,109,266

Schools and Educational Activities

For operating expenses of the Brigham Young University, Ricks College, Juarez Stake Schools, 18 institutes, 134 seminaries, the McCune School of Music and Art, the Deseret Gymnasium, and the L.D.S. Business College; and for the erection and repair of buildings; and for purchase of building sites ..... $ 3,674,086

Genealogical Society

For the maintenance of the genealogical library, archives, temple index bureau, and allied departments; for recording, indexing, photographing and filing genealogical and temple ordinance data, including the names of 577,638 persons forwarded to the temples for ordinances; and for microfilm copies of genealogical records from 7 states and 9 foreign countries equivalent to 43,057 printed volumes of approximately 350 pages per volume ..... $ 811,581

Saturday, April 4

First Day

Other Expenses

For taxes and assessments; insurance; contributions to civic and educational institutions; for maintenance and repair of historic properties and monuments; for restoration of the Church Fire Insurance Fund; and for other purposes .....	$ 326,980
Total (Church General Funds Spent) .....	$23,518,135

Second, Expenditures which originate in the stakes, wards, missions, schools and other organizations and agencies of the Church, which are covered by collections and contributions other than tithing.

For construction and repair of meeting houses and other buildings and for purchases of sites, buildings and furnishings .....	$ 8,041,097
For Stake, Ward and Mission Maintenance purposes (including auxiliaries' recreation expenses) .....	4,600,088
For assistance to needy from Ward and Mission Fast Offerings .....	1,714,202
For acquisition of Storehouses and Budget Production Projects (including the operating expenditures of said projects) .....	822,198
For assistance to Missionaries from contributions received by Wards and Stakes .....	210,661
For operation of the Primary Children's Hospital, of the auxiliary general boards, and of the temples .....	332,941
Educational Institutions—from tuitions and dormitory and other service income .....	3,733,270
Hospitals—for care of the sick—in addition to contributions to the Primary Children's Hospital and in addition to the amounts paid from tithes included in Part I .....	32,485
Auxiliaries—from publications, sewing projects, and other business income..	1,365,672
Temples—from clothing rentals and other receipts .....	154,155
Deseret Industries, Deseret Clothing Factory, Deseret Woolen Mills and group canning projects—from operating income .....	717,660
Welfare budget production projects—from operating income .....	1,283,615
Total expenditures from contributions and collections other than tithing ....	$23,008,044
GRAND TOTAL—cash expenditures of the Church, from general funds, local contributions and other income, for the year 1952 .....	$46,526,179

III. MISCELLANEOUS ITEMS

Under miscellaneous items will be set forth information on the operation and accomplishments of some of the Church agencies.

The following items of interest are taken from the Church Welfare report for 1952:

Cash expended in the Welfare Program, all included in the report of expenditures given in Section II .....	$ 3,670,208
In addition to the foregoing cash expenditures of Church general funds, Welfare contributions and fast offerings, there were distributed to the needy, welfare commodities to the value of over .....	1,073,659
This makes a grand total of cash and commodities distributed under the Welfare Program in 1952 by the various agencies involved, of .....	$ 4,743,867

Distribution from Bishops' Storehouses of commodities amounted to 6½ million pounds of food and 360,000 items of household supplies, clothing and miscellaneous. This distribution is 12% lower than 1951.

In 1952 there were 37,649 persons assisted in the United States and Canada. This is an increase from 1951 of 2,521 persons.

During the year 1952 the Deseret Industries have had an average of 289 persons working in their plants, 64% of whom were handicapped persons. The Deseret Clothing Factory, another branch of the Welfare Plan, has provided continuous employment for from 30 to 70 individuals, many of whom were widows and elderly persons.

During the year, 66,011 man days of work and the use of equipment amounting to 9,518 unit days were donated in the production of the budget, 12,793 man days of work were donated in operation of bishops' storehouses, and 4,712 man days of work were donated in the construction of buildings for the operation of the Welfare Plan. In addition to these, 156 construction and remodeling projects were completed by the brethren, 90 of which were for the benefit of less fortunate members.

During 1952, 2,296 persons were given occupational counseling resulting in the solution of their employment problems, and 5,336 other persons were placed in remunerative employment. Reported unemployment has increased to nearly double the figure of a year ago.

Emergency Activity

In April of last year, canyon streams, swollen by heavy spring thaws, overflowed into the farms, streets, homes and business houses of northern Utah communities, causing extensive damage and forcing many families from their homes. In Salt Lake City, Ogden, Provo and other communities, 485 families were evacuated from their homes through the efforts of Church Welfare workers. Sixty of these families were housed in homes donated by Church members.

On a purely voluntary basis, 6,606 individuals spent 58,301 hours, and 383 motorized equipment units were contributed for 10,573 hours, in flood control and emergency relief activities. Eighty-one thousand sand bags were donated by our people, and gathered by the boys of the Aaronic Priesthood. Sixty-three thousand of these bags were filled with sand and used in flood control. For the brethren voluntarily working on flood relief projects, thousands of meals were prepared and served by the Relief Society.

In an immunization program sponsored and conducted by the General Church Welfare Committee, 6,734 individuals were immunized against disease, 15,326 injections being made by doctors who contributed 78 hours of service, nurses contributed 310 hours of service, and others assisting them worked 1,636 hours, all without any financial remuneration.

After the flood, the rehabilitation problem was met largely by the injured families themselves, and tribute should be paid to their spirit of independence and ability to re-establish themselves after great loss. However, the Welfare Program was called upon to assist in the reclamation of 74 homes and 2 places of business, and in the great task of cleaning away the mud and debris from homes, yards and streets. In this work, 823 persons contributed 9,880 hours and 58 motorized equipment units were contributed for 1,279 hours. Five homes were completely rebuilt.

President David O. McKay:

Elder Joseph Anderson has just read items pertaining to the statistical and financial data of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Elder Orval Adams, Chairman of the Auditing Committee, will now read the report of the Committee.

REPORT OF CHURCH AUDITING COMMITTEE

Elder Orval W. Adams of the Church Auditing Committee read the following report:

President David O. McKay and Counselors,
Salt Lake City, Utah.

Dear Brethren:

The balance sheet disclosing the financial condition of the Corporation of the President of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints for the year ending December 31, 1952 has been reviewed. The records appear to be adequate and the accounting system carefully kept. Disbursement of Church funds is controlled through a comprehensive budget system. Receipts for the year were in excess of expenditures. The Church is in a strong financial condition and free from debt.

Respectfully submitted,
Orval W. Adams
Albert E. Bowen
George S. Spencer
Harold H. Bennett
Church Auditing Committee

PRESIDENT DAVID O. McKAY

IN BEHALF of the General Authorities of the Church, I wish to extend to the ten thousand people or more assembled here in the Tabernacle and on the Tabernacle Block, and to the tens of thousands, perhaps hundreds of thousands, of listeners a cordial welcome to the opening session of this, the 123rd Annual Conference of the Church.

The General Authorities sense deeply the responsibility that rests upon them. Everyone, I am sure, feels, as I, the weight of this responsibility, and each one prays for your prayerful sympathy and your co-operation in the carrying on of this great work of establishing the kingdom of God on earth.

We are especially pleased this morning to note in the audience, His Excellency, Honorable J. Bracken Lee, governor of the state of Utah; His Honor, Mayor Earl J. Glade, and representatives of the leading educational institutions, President A. Ray Olpin of the University of Utah, President Ernest L. Wilkinson of Brigham Young University, Superintendent M. Lynn Bennion of the City schools, and Superintendent E. Allen Bateman, state superintendent of schools. I am not sure whether President Louis L. Madsen of the Utah State Agricultural College is present or not; if he is, we bid him welcome with the others. We wish to welcome also Dr. Franklin L. West, Church commissioner of education, and his associates; Dr. John L. Clarke, president of Ricks College, and other leading educators.

May we have your sympathy—I appeal to all who are listening in to give us your faith and prayers, as we present to you this morning the messages that will come from those who will be called to occupy the pulpit.

In addition to the statistical and other data just presented to you by the Clerk of the Conference, you will undoubtedly be interested in the following items which pertain more directly to the spiritual interests of the Church. This is merely a summary, and I shall present it as quickly as possible.

The activity of the men holding the Melchizedek Priesthood is especially gratifying. A summary of the past five years discloses the fact that there is an increase in the following activities: (1) in the number of full tithepayers, (2) the number holding family prayers, (3) the number attending weekly group meetings, (4) the attendance at sacrament meetings shows no increase, and (5) visits by quorum officers to quorum members show a decrease of two percent, but participation in Church work, an increase from forty-four percent to eight-one percent. These figures refer only to Melchizedek Priesthood workers. Favorable as the record is, we admonish them to more activity and urge them to participate more generally in Church activities.

The Relief Society of the Church gives an equally pleasing report, growing in membership, accomplishment, and spirituality. During 1952 there were 7900 names added to the membership. The sisters fully co-operate with the priesthood and lend great strength to wards and stakes, missions and branch activities, such as building programs and welfare projects.

The compassionate services are receiving careful attention. During 1952 there were 209,890 visits made to the sick and the homebound, and 22,500 eight-hour days bedside nursing on a voluntary basis. This is particularly important in view of the pronounced nurse shortage. The sisters have strong testimonies of the truth of the gospel, as is attested by the righteousness of their lives, and evidenced in the testimonies borne during the testimony period held in connection with the monthly theology lessons.

"It is our personal opinion," say the Presidency, "that the Church has never had a generation of Relief Society women more spiritual, more diligent, or more devoted to the work of the Church."

The Sunday Schools—a goodly number of Sunday Schools whose superintendents have been left in that position long enough to catch the spirit of effective Sunday School work—has made strides in increasing the testimony and spiritual attunement of a large proportion of members by the following means: first, ward teacher training classes for prospective teachers; second, increasing numbers of stakes are holding monthly union meetings which had to be abandoned during the war; third, great numbers of Sunday School teachers report having been helped immensely by the inspiration, the lesson enrichments, and the teaching “know-how” contained in the great magazine for Sunday School teachers, The Instructor; and, fourth, by double use of ward chapel and classrooms; for example, one overcrowded Sunday School has increased its average attendance from a crowded 342 in 1950 to a comfortable 424 in 1952. And that is not an increase in the membership of the ward.

Young Men’s Mutual Improvement Association—Increase of enrolment during last year, 29,000. Last year over 30,000 young people participated in choral productions; not one of them failed significantly to lift the spiritual sights of the participants. Over 25,000 individual talks or speeches were given, most of them on spiritual topics. Over 35,000 young people participated in some way or other in an M.I.A. drama.

Young Women’s Mutual Improvement Association—The great purpose of the Young Women’s Mutual Improvement Association is to build testimonies in the lives of the young women of the Church, both members and investigators. This purpose is promoted in three major ways: First, there is the girls’ program which stresses, along with full activity in the Church, regular attendance at sacrament, Sunday School, and M.I.A. meetings. For the past year over 25,000 individual awards were given to girls.

This means that they attended at least seventy-five percent of the Sunday School and M.I.A. meetings, fifty percent of the sacrament meetings. Over 2000 leaders received an award, which in their case, also indicated attendance at seventy-five percent of the leadership meetings. In December 1952, all girls, twelve to nineteen, in the Church, achieved an average of fifty-seven percent attendance at sacrament meeting, sixty-six percent at Sunday School and sixty-seven percent at M.I.A. This is an increase over the previous year of four percent at sacrament meeting, and three percent at Sunday School and M.I.A.

Primary—Four objectives have been highlighted in the Primary Association this year: first, stimulate interest in the reading of the Book of Mormon; second, promote greater reverence in our chapels—a most commendable objective; third, teach the children to pray—equally important; fourth, stress the importance of the boys receiving the Aaronic Priesthood. Thirty-two thousand officers and teachers have been reading the Book of Mormon as a scripture assignment.

Primary teachers throughout the Church have been urged and advised to accept the responsibility and privilege of teaching the children to pray and to help them to trust in our Father in heaven, believing that he will hear and answer their prayers. Over 7000 boys have been graduated from Primary and have been assisted in their preparation to receive the Aaronic Priesthood.

I wish that the ten thousand people here assembled might have seen the program that was given to the presidents of the Primary Associations in the Hotel Utah last Thursday evening.

We commend the priesthood workers and all the auxiliary workers of the Church. God bless you in your sincere and untiring efforts to teach the young ones and the older ones the principles of truth and salvation.

TWO FUNCTIONS

And now, my dear fellow workers, a few words in general, regarding the great mission that is yours in preaching the gospel of Jesus Christ. In anticipa-

Saturday, April 4

First Day

tion of this hour, I have been impressed to emphasize two great functions of the Church: first, the putting in order of our homes, and keeping them in order; and second, the proclaiming of the divinity of the mission of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ. With these two objectives in mind, may I have your attention, your faith and prayers.

"For what is a man profited," said the Savior, "if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul? or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?" (Matt. 16:26.)

The first recorded question of the Savior after his baptism in the river Jordan, was, "What seekest thou?" In the text I have just read, he again refers to the dominant incentive prompting man's actions in daily life. If a man seek wealth, worldly honors, pleasures, and all that riches and honor can bestow but neglects and leaves undeveloped the eternal riches of his soul, what is he profited?

Thus does the Lord emphasize in a simple though majestic comparison of material and spiritual possessions.

On another occasion, in the Sermon on the Mount, he admonished his hearers to seek "first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you." (Ibid., 6:33.) Seeking to establish the kingdom of God and to foster his righteousness should be the paramount purpose of life. I think none will gainsay that.

Leading statesmen, clear-thinking educators, in public addresses and in magazine articles, frequently refer to what they declare is an apparent spiritual poverty of the present age, and they cite the need for higher moral and ethical standards.

Some months ago, you will recall, a British jet plane crossed and recrossed the Atlantic Ocean in about eight hours. Shortly thereafter a cartoon appeared in the New York Times, which pictured a jet plane traveling at fantastic speed. The plane was labeled, "man's scientific progress." On the ground was a huge turtle moving slowly and ponderously. It was labeled, "man's moral progress."

Commenting upon this, Professor William G. Russell, instructor in the Memorial High School at Pelham, New York, writes:

"In a vivid way this cartoon symbolizes what could be the tragedy of the modern age, and what is without doubt one of the most compelling reasons for greater attention to moral and spiritual values in our homes and in our schools."

And then he adds as a school man: "Courses required of all students in our public schools should include all the important areas of study that directly or indirectly provide the student with opportunities for spiritual growth and religious inspiration.

"From such study," he continues, "it is reasonable to expect that our students will better understand how vital has been the role of religion at critical moments in history, how important spiritual insights and religious faith can be in the lives of men and women, how closely related are true human greatness and such qualities as honesty, integrity, humility, generosity, compassion. We may expect in our students more idealism and less of cynicism, more of a wholesome courage and faith in the future and less of pessimism and foreboding and fear.

"We may hope for increased tolerance of racial and religious differences, increased respect for those of opposite political views or of lower social and economic levels, increased awareness of the basic and inviolable dignity of the individual man or woman. We may contribute to the development of a more sensitive social conscience, a greater sense of responsibility for the less fortunate in our society. We may even, perhaps, without knowing it, bring a boy or girl closer to God." I cite that because of the opportunities which I think lie ahead of us in our public schools.

In his great inaugural address, President Dwight D. Eisenhower referred to this same great need. "In the swift rush of great events we find ourselves groping to know the full sense and meaning of these times in which we live. In our quest of understanding, we beseech God's guidance. We summon all our knowledge of the past, and we scan all signs of the future. We bring all our wit and all our will to meet the question:

"How far have we come in man's long pilgrimage from darkness toward the light? Are we nearing the light—a day of freedom and of peace for all mankind? Or are the shadows of another night closing in upon us?

"At such a time in history, we who are free must proclaim anew our faith.

"This faith is the abiding creed of our fathers. It is our faith in the deathless dignity of man, governed by eternal moral and natural laws.

"This faith defines our full view of life. It establishes, beyond debate, those gifts of the Creator that are man's inalienable rights, and that make all men equal in his sight.

"In the light of this equality, we know that the virtues most cherished by free people—love of truth, pride of work, devotion to country—all are treasures equally precious in the lives of the most humble and of the most exalted.

"The men who mine coal and fire furnaces, and balance ledgers, and turn lathes, and pick cotton, and heal the sick, and plant corn—all serve as proudly and as profitably, for America as the statesmen who draft treaties and the legislators who enact laws.

"This faith rules our whole way of life. It decrees that we, the people, elect leaders not to rule but to serve. It asserts that we have the right to choice of our own work and to the reward of our own toil.

"It inspires the initiative that makes our productivity the wonder of the world. And it warns that any man who seeks to deny equality among all his brothers betrays the spirit of the free and invites the mockery of the tyrant.

"It is because we, all of us, hold to these principles that the political changes accomplished this day do not imply turbulence, upheaval, or disorder. Rather, this change expresses a purpose of strengthening our dedication and devotion to the precepts of our founding documents, a conscious renewal of faith in our country and in the watchfulness of a divine providence.

"The enemies of this faith know no god but force, no devotion but its use. They tutor men in treason. They feed upon the hunger of others. Whatever defies them, they torture, especially the truth."

And so we have the call of men of clear vision and sound judgment, for a re-dedication of schools and homes to moral and spiritual values.

Our most precious possession is the youth of the land, and to instruct them to walk uprightly and to become worthy citizens in the kingdom of God is our greatest obligation.

Religious freedom and the separation of church and state are clearly set forth in the first amendment to the Constitution of the United States, and no governmental agency can have any supervision, control, or jurisdiction over religion. Though our public schools may emphasize moral, ethical, and spiritual values as essential elements in the public school program, they cannot favor any particular religion or religious system. The teaching of religion is therefore definitely a responsibility of the home and the Church.

In discharging this responsibility, I say again, members of the Church should ever keep in mind two paramount obligations: (1) to put and to keep your home in order; and (2), to proclaim the divinity of Jesus Christ and the essentiality of his teachings to the salvation of the human family.

If, upon examination, you were to find that termites are undermining the foundation of your house, you would lose no time to have experts make thorough examination and have the destructive insects exterminated. You would have the weakened materials removed and the foundation strengthened and, if necessary, rebuilt.

Saturday, April 4

First Day

Well, more important than the building of your house is the rebuilding and purifying of your home.

"Our home joys," says Pestalozzi, "are the most delightful earth affords, and the joy of parents in their children is the most holy joy of humanity. It makes their hearts pure and good; it lifts them up to their Father in heaven."

Well, you know, and I know, that such joys are within the reach of most men and women if high ideals of marriage and home be properly fostered and cherished.

But there are destructive termites of homes, as well as of houses, and some of these are backbiting, evil-speaking, faultfinding on the part either of parents or of children. Slander is poison to the soul. "Slanderers are like flies that pass all over a man's good parts to light only on his sores." In the ideal home, there is no slanderous gossip about day schoolteachers, about public officials, or Church officials. I am more grateful now, as years have come and gone, to my father, who with hands lifted said, "Now, no faultfinding about your teacher or anybody else."

Quarreling and swearing also are evils that lower the standards of the ideal home. I cannot imagine a father or mother swearing in the presence of children or even letting it pass their lips.

George Washington set us a good example in this regard. When he learned that some of his officers were given to profanity, he sent a letter to them on July 1, 1776, from which I quote:

"The general is sorry to be informed that the foolish and wicked practice of profane cursing and swearing, a vice heretofore little known in an American army, is growing into fashion. He hopes the officers will, by example, as well as influence, endeavor to check it, and that both they and the men will reflect that we can have little hope of the blessing of heaven on our arms if we insult it by our impiety and folly. Added to this, it is a vice so mean and low, without any temptation, that every man of sense and character detests and despises it."

Another deterrent to happiness in the home is the refusal to bear the full responsibility of motherhood and fatherhood. Members of the Church who are healthy and normal should not be guilty of restricting the number of children in the home, especially when such action is prompted by a desire for a good time, or for personal gain, or to keep up with the neighbors, or by a false impression that one or two children in a family can be better educated. These are excuses which members of the Church should not harbor, for they are unjustified.

The question of size of families, I know, brings up many problems: the question of woman's career, the false cry of "quality, not quantity," which one writer rightly says should read "extinction, not preservation," or the matter-of-fact question of daily living and getting on in the world.

With the high ideal of marriage as revealed to the Prophet Joseph Smith, members of the Church should have but one goal, and that is to keep in mind the fact that marriage, the foundation of society, is "ordained of God" for the building of permanent homes in which children may be properly reared and taught the principles of the gospel:

The following, I am sure, will strike a responsive chord in the hearts of the majority of parents in the Church. I quote:

"Every period of human life is wonderful; the irresponsible age of childhood, the thrilling years of adolescence and courtship, the productive, fighting, burden-bearing era of parenthood; but the most wonderful time of life comes when the father and mother become chums of their grown-up, successful sons and daughters, and can begin to enjoy their children's children. . . .

"Youth is confined with restrictions, limitations, schedules, and dominations; adolescence is full of mysteries, longings, and defeats; early fatherhood is absorbed in struggles and in the solution of problems; extreme old age is shadowed by eternal mysteries; but middle age and normal old age, if life has been rightly and fully lived, are filled with the thrills, not merely of success, but of companionship with children and grandchildren.

"Every normal individual should complete the full cycle of human life with all its joys and satisfactions in natural order: childhood, adolescence, youth, parenthood, middle age, and the age of grandchildren. Each age has satisfactions which can be known only by experience. You must be born again and again in order to know the full course of human happiness. When the first baby is born, a mother is born, a father is born, and grandparents are born; only by birth can any of these come into being. Only by the natural cycle of life can the great progressive joys of mankind be reached.

"Any social system which prevents the individual from pursuing the normal cycle of life, from marrying young, from rearing a family before the age of fifty or so, and from obtaining the deep, peculiar joys of middle life and grandparenthood defeats the divine order of the universe and lays the basis of all sorts of social problems.

"When a young man and woman of the right biological type marry in the early twenties and are prepared to earn a living and support and rear a family, they have started in the normal cycle of life. They are likely to give society far fewer problems of crime, immorality, divorce, or poverty than are their unmarried companions. They will have children and rear them while they are strong, enjoy them when they are grown up and successful, depend upon them in weakness, and profit by the finest type of old-age insurance ever invented by man or God, an insurance which pays its annuities in material goods when necessary, but which mainly pays in the rich joys of love and fellowship. . . . The crowning joys of human experience will come in middle age and onward, through the companionship, love, and honor of children and grandchildren." (R. J. Sprague.)

We appeal to all members of the Church to set their homes in order and to enjoy the true happiness of harmonious family life.

As already stated, the second paramount obligation is to proclaim the divine mission of Jesus Christ. Nineteen hundred years ago, a valiant defender of that cause said: "This is the stone which was set at nought of you builders, which is become the head of the corner.

"Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved." (Acts 4:11-12.)

The man who thus declared Jesus to be the one and only safe leader and guide in the world was an ordinary fisherman who lived nearly two thousand years ago. He grew to manhood, experiencing life among common folk such as you and I. He was not a dreamer. He was thoroughly a man of action, though somewhat impetuous. He was fairly prosperous, possessed qualities of leadership, and, above all, he was honest.

Circumstances drew Peter into close relationship with Jesus of Nazareth. For nearly three years this hardheaded fisherman accompanied Jesus almost constantly. He became intimately acquainted with the Master. Jesus' philosophy of life became Peter's philosophy. Not suddenly, but gradually, through careful, critical observation and inward experience, Peter arrived at a firm and sublime conviction, expressed clearly and unhesitatingly when he declared before his accusers, the leaders of the Jewish Sanhedrin, ". . . there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved."

Saturday, April 4

First Day

MODERN VIEW OF SALVATION

Saved is a trite word, frequently applied by religious leaders to a real or imagined instantaneous change of heart. The sense in which we use it this morning is expressed by Dr. Charles Foster Kent, professor of biblical literature in Yale University, who, in answer to the question, "From what does man need to be saved?" writes:

"This question must be answered today, not in the light of metaphysics or abstract theology, but of physiology, psychology, political science, economics, and sociology. In the light of modern psychology, it is apparent that while a man may experience instantaneously what is commonly called conversion, his salvation is not attained in a moment but is a continuous educational process. It is accomplished not by negations, but by developing within him nobler impulses and ideals and by bringing him into normal relations with his environment and by teaching him how to function, that is, effectively to accomplish his lifework in the environment in which he is placed.

"This is precisely what Jesus did for the needy men and women who gathered about him during his work in Galilee. And what he did for them then he is able to do for men today, for the needs and the processes of salvation are eternally the same. He was able to perform his saving work because he himself had felt many of the same needs and had found the only way of satisfying them.

"No teacher of the past was more awake to the weakness of human nature than Jesus; but he also saw and proclaimed clearly its divine possibilities. He saw that those possibilities could be realized only as each individual was brought into normal living touch with the Heavenly Father. A man's recognition of his sonship to God opens his eyes at once to the fact that all men are his brothers. Herein lies the miracle of the religious life. It is the eternal mystery of conversion.

"When once a man enters fully into his filial attitude toward God and fraternal relations with his fellow men, he suddenly finds himself saved from the dominance of his passions, his selfish impulses, from worry and fear. Even the consequences of his past sins no longer master him, but a great alluring field of service opens before him. With this self-forgetting service there come peace and the joy and exultation that crown worthy achievement."

Furthermore, members of the Church declare at Easter season, and throughout the year, that the Church of Jesus Christ stands with Peter, with Paul, with James, and with all other Apostles who accepted the resurrection not only as being literally true, but as being also the consummation of Christ's divine mission upon the earth. Religious leaders since history began have taught virtue, temperance, self-control, service, obedience to righteousness, and duty; some have taught a belief in one supreme ruler and in a hereafter; but only Christ broke the seal of the grave and revealed death as the door to immortality and eternal life. To the unimpeachable evidence of the ancient Apostles to the resurrection of our Lord we add the sublime declaration of the Prophet Joseph Smith:

"And now, after the many testimonies which have been given of him, this is the testimony, last of all, which we give of him: That he lives!" (D. & C. 76:22.)

As Christ lived after death, so shall the human family, each one taking that place in the next world which he or she merits through actions during earthly life. Since love is as eternal as life, the message of the resurrection is the most comforting, the most glorious ever given to man; for when death takes a loved one from us, we can look into the open grave and say, he is not here; he is alive.

Happy homes give to their inmates a taste of heaven on earth—acceptance of the divinity of Christ's mission and compliance with the principles of his gospel, give assurance of immortality and eternal life.

I testify that a knowledge of his existence and of the truth of his gospel is the source of the greatest comfort and happiness to man.

May the day speedily come when honest, sincere men and women throughout the world may have in their souls this assurance, I earnestly pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

PRESIDENT JOSEPH FIELDING SMITH

President of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

YESTERDAY, with my Brethren, I was in session with some thirty missionary presidents. We heard a report from all in relation to their work and the work of the missionaries who labor under them. At the close of the meeting, and all through the meeting, we felt to rejoice because of the glowing reports that they were able to give to us.

There is one reason why these missionaries go forth and that is to fulfil the promise that was made by our Redeemer that his gospel of the kingdom should be preached in all the world as a witness before the time of his second coming. In his discourse as recorded in the twenty-fourth chapter of Matthew which came in response to the request of his disciples to know concerning his second coming, and the events that would take place before his coming, he told them of the calamities, the distress among the nations, the wars, the rumors of wars, the commotions, men's hearts failing them, and that they would turn away from the truth. Then speaking of the latter days he said to them:

"And again, because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold; but he that shall not be overcome, the same shall be saved.

"And again, this Gospel of the King-

President David O. McKay:

The Choir and congregation will now sing, "O Ye Mountains High," with Richard P. Condie conducting.

After the singing, Elder Joseph Fielding Smith, President of the Council of the Twelve will speak to us.

The congregation and the Choir joined in singing the hymn, "O Ye Mountains High."

dom shall be preached in all the world, for a witness unto all nations, and then shall the end come, or the destruction of the wicked." (Pearl of Great Price. Joseph Smith. 1:30-31.)

Fulfilling that prediction that the gospel would again be preached, inferring that there would be a time when it would not be preached and it would have to be restored, these missionaries are going forth and spending their time which is appointed among the nations of the earth.

Unfortunately, because of conditions which cannot be controlled by the Church, our missionary forces are reduced. We need missionaries. It is true today, as it was one hundred years ago, that the field is wide; the harvest is great; but the laborers are few. Likewise the field is white and ready for the harvest. In a revelation given to the Church November 1, 1831, the Lord said he would send forth his missionaries, or his servants.

"And the voice of warning shall be unto all people, by the mouths of my disciples, whom I have chosen in these last days.

"And they shall go forth and none shall stay them, for I the Lord have commanded them.

"Behold, this is mine authority, and the authority of my servants, and my preface unto the book of my commandments, which I have given them to publish unto you, O inhabitants of the earth.

Saturday, April 4

"Wherefore, fear and tremble, O ye people, for what I the Lord have decreed in them shall be fulfilled." (D. & C. 1:4-7.)

Now the Lord has said that his missionaries shall not be stayed and that they shall go forth until he says the work is finished. In this same revelation he also says this:

"For they [the people of the earth] have strayed from mine ordinances, and have broken mine everlasting covenant;

"They seek not the Lord to establish his righteousness, but every man walketh in his own way, and after the image of his own God, whose image is in the likeness of the world, and whose substance is that of an idol, which waxeth old and shall perish in Babylon, even Babylon the great, which shall fall.

"Wherefore, I the Lord, knowing the calamity which should come upon the inhabitants of the earth, called upon my servant Joseph Smith, Jun., and spake unto him from heaven, and gave him commandments;

"And also gave commandments to others, that they should proclaim these things unto the world; and all this that it might be fulfilled, which was written by the prophets—

"The weak things of the world shall come forth and break down the mighty and strong ones, that man should not counsel his fellow man, neither trust in the arm of flesh—

"But that every man might speak in the name of God the Lord, even the Savior of the world;

"That faith also might increase in the earth;

"That mine everlasting covenant might be established;

"That the fulness of my gospel might be proclaimed by the weak and the simple unto the ends of the world, and before kings and rulers." (Ibid., 15-23.)

And so in fulfilment of these promises to the world, our missionaries go forth. No power has been able to stay their hands. It has been tried. Great efforts were made in the very beginning when there was only a handful of missionaries, but the progress of this work could not be stopped. It cannot be stopped now. It must and will go forth that the inhabitants of the earth may have the opportunity of repenting of their sins and receive the remission of their sins and come into the Church and kingdom of God, before these final destructions come upon the wicked, for they have been promised.

There is in the world today distress, turmoil, trouble, commotion, and contention among the nations. There is no peace. There will be no peace until the Prince of Peace comes to bring it. And his warning is to the world to repent. This I might have read, for it is the first verse of this revelation I have been quoting. The righteous have been called on to come out of Babylon, or the world, to receive the gospel of Jesus Christ as it has been restored, and find a place in the kingdom of God.

And these missionaries, mostly young men, untrained in the ways of the world, go forth with this message of salvation and confound the great and the mighty, because they have the truth. They are proclaiming this gospel; the honest and sincere are hearing it and are repenting of their sins and coming into the Church. The ungodly will not repent. This truth is also stated in this revelation. They will not repent because today, as in times of old, men love darkness more than light.

I wish to testify to you, my brethren and sisters, and to all the world, that God lives, that he has spoken again from the heavens, and the heavens have never been closed against those who are honest and true, who earnestly seek the guidance of the Lord. The Lord never closed the heavens. Men closed the heavens and said there should be no more revelation, no more commandments, only those which are in the canon of scripture. It was men who said that, not God. Men have said that the Lord finished his work. They have said there could be no more coming of angels, no more scripture, and that we would have to depend on the dead letter of the law as it is recorded in the books contained within the lids of the Bible. Men are saying that—God did not say it.

And he has restored to us the everlasting gospel and has given us revelation and made known to us many of the plain and important things pertaining to his kingdom—things revealed anciently, and also in the day in which we live, and he will give revelation to this Church from time to time according to the needs of the people, for the heavens are not sealed, only as men have sealed them against themselves.

Let us seek to know his will, hearken to the counsels of the First Presidency of this Church, and the President, who is the mouthpiece, the servant of God, with the authority to receive revelation for the guidance not only of the Latter-day Saints, but also for the people of all the world if they will only hearken to it. The Lord bless you, I pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

President Joseph Fielding Smith, President of the Council of the Twelve, has just concluded speaking. Elder Thomas E. McKay, Assistant to the Twelve, will now address us.

ELDER THOMAS E. MCKAY

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles

PRESIDENT MCKAY and Counselors, President Smith, other members of the Council of the Twelve, brethren and sisters, and friends:

It is good to be here, to partake of the wonderful spirit of this occasion.

I am grateful to my Father in heaven for this privilege. I am grateful to my brethren. I love my brethren. I love you, brothers and sisters, and appreciate your support, your cooperation. I love the Lord for what he has done for me and my family, as referred to by President McKay, the great importance of the family life, for my missionary experiences the importance of which was referred to by President Smith.

This is a beautiful world in which we live. The Lord has given us this world; men, as has been stated, have made a mess of certain things, but in spite of that it remains a beautiful world. I am sure we appreciate the music we have heard this morning, the beautiful music furnished by the combined Scandinavian choirs, and of the weekly broadcasts of the Tabernacle Choir, organ, and "The Spoken Word."

I recommend listening to them firsthand or transcribed.

I am reminded now of Richard L. Evans' "Spoken Word," of two weeks ago, on the dream of John Ruskin, which Brother Evans referred to—of the children in the garden and in the home. Books, music, and entertainment were supplied, with freedom for the children to enjoy themselves. They had everything that a child's heart could desire, and still they were not satisfied. Some of the leaders began pulling the nails, the brass, shiny-headed nails, out of the chairs and other furniture, and others joined them, and in a short time they were all engaged in that useless, destructive pastime, to see how many nails, shiny nails, they could collect. Some of the leaders were jealous of some of the others, and the stronger ones helped themselves to the nails, and before they knew it, they were fighting for nails, shiny nails. No one was satisfied; everybody wanted some of somebody else's. They fought on for the nails, though they knew they would not be allowed to carry as much as one brass nail away with them. But no, it was who had the most nails at the moment.

John Ruskin said he awoke from his dream because of the noise of the children, and then he thought that it could not have been children that were fighting for such foolish things. "Only men do." And so it is with the world. Many have forgotten God.

As one writer stated, we look upon our religion, upon our Church, as a spare tire to be used only in time of emergency. An example comes to my mind of this emergency in an instance, told by President McKay (I hope he will pardon me for referring to it), when he was returning from his first mission. It was in the summer, August 1899, I think. The boat had gone off its path in its desire to shorten the distance, and ran into an iceberg. The boat stopped; the cargo was shifted a little and the boat listed and quivered. Everything was in darkness. There was a man on that boat who had been touring Europe, a member of the Church, and he was there, not associating very often with the missionaries and the members, for which some of the missionaries were grateful because his face was flushed from visiting the bar too often; but when that iceberg was struck, this man was the first one, so President McKay relates, to come and suggest that we call the missionaries together and pray. Afterwards he stated, "All I could see was my wife and seven children before me." And all during his visit to Europe, and his time on the boat, he had forgotten his religion, forgotten his wife and his children at home, but now, in the case of an emergency, he was the first one to think of the Lord.

Too many of us are like that. We forget the Church, the gospel, and its many values. Within the Church are enviable opportunities for spiritual and cultural development. Our expanding universities and our chapels furnish opportunities, whereby we can participate and develop. Within these walls is produced the highest type of music.

We live in a land of unequalled beauty.

The more we observe this, the more we will realize and appreciate these blessings. One of our great Utah artists, who has moved from Utah and now lives in New York, I believe, states that this Wasatch Range east of here is the most beautiful range of mountains in the world, and I believe he is right. When you go up north to the beautiful peaks north of Brigham City and especially Willard, and down to Ben Lomond and to Mount Ogden, on down to Timpanogos, and the Twin Peaks, Mount Nebo in the distance, that can be seen for miles, it is uplifting. Why should we leave such beautiful things, to gather nails, brass-headed nails?

It is a great Church, and I am grateful for my membership in it.

At one of the sessions, I think it is generally on the anniversary of the Church, which will be Monday, the Authorities of the Church will be presented for our sustaining vote. I would recommend to the tourists who are in our midst that they attend that session. It is a revelation. It is a wonderful feature of our conferences, of all our conferences.

I am tempted to refer to the presentation at one of our southern conferences. Some of the brethren and sisters take this feature of the conference and think it is not very important. Brother J. Golden Kimball, my dear friend, was attending a conference in one of the stakes in southern Utah, so the story is told. He was presenting the names of the General Authorities and presented the Presidency of the Church. They voted upon them separately—then the Council of the Twelve, the First Council of the Seventy—there were fewer hands coming up each time, and then he slipped this in: "It has been proposed that we move Mount Nebo in the southern part of the valley to the northern. All in favor, manifest it." And they voted it. "Any opposed by the same sign." And nobody voted against it. So he presented the names of the Presiding Bishopric and then asked the president of the stake to continue with the presentation of the stake authorities.

The sustaining of the officers is a revelation—it will be to the visitors—to see how many men and women have definite appointments in this Church. Work is the greatest blessing that can come to us, and this is not a one-man Church, brothers and sisters. In the stakes, also, the same procedure will be pursued, and I have here the number of stakes, and the number of people engaged in each stake with definite appointments, also, 206 stakes and approximately three hundred people given definite appointments in each stake, fifteen hundred ninety-five wards, approximately two hundred forty-seven people given definite appointments to work in each ward; two hundred four branches, and practically one hundred seventy-five people given definite appointments for the people to work in each branch.

There is no excuse for anybody in this Church not having work. Yes, it is not a one-man Church. It is not the Church of Joseph Smith, nor of Brigham Young, nor of any of the men, the leaders who have succeeded them. They have all been called of God by the proper authority, but it is the Church, brothers and sisters, of Jesus Christ. He is our head, do not forget that. I testify to you, my friends, my brethren and sisters, that I know that Jesus lives, that he is the Christ, that he is our head, the head of this Church, and I bear you that testimony in his name. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Elder Thomas E. McKay, Assistant to the Twelve, has just addressed us.

The combined Scandinavian choirs will now sing, "Almighty God of Our Fathers," conducted by Elder R. Hulbert Keddington. The closing prayer will be offered by Elder Gordon C. Young, formerly President of the New Zealand Mission, after which this Conference will stand adjourned until two o'clock this afternoon. The proceedings of that session will be broadcast over KSL at Salt Lake City, and by arrangement through KSL over the other stations named at the beginning of the session.

The Conference will also be broadcast over Television Station KSL, channel five.

Once again we wish to announce that important messages and calls that have come to us for persons supposed to be in attendance at the conference, and for persons to meet others, will be announced at the dismissal of the meeting over the loud speaking system on the grounds. Similar messages coming in will be likewise broadcast at the close of each general session without further notice. Please listen carefully to these announcements.

The music for this session has been furnished by the combined Scandinavian choirs, conducted by R. Hulbert Keddington; Roy M. Darley has been at the organ.

You have all enjoyed these lovely callalilies, which adorn the banister here on the right and left of the rostrum. They have been furnished by the Berkeley Stake of California. Members of that stake have made such a presentation a traditional project for April Conference. They are particularly appropriate this year at the Easter season.

We thank the members of the Choir, the combined choirs and Brother Keddington, for the time you have put forth in practicing, and for the beautiful singing, the inspiring service, that you have rendered during this session.

We shall now hear the Choir sing, "Almighty God of our Fathers," and Elder Young will offer the benediction.

---

Singing by the Scandinavian Choirs, "Almighty God of Our Fathers."

Elder Gordon C. Young, former president of the New Zealand Mission, offered the closing prayer.

Conference adjourned until 2:00 p.m.

FIRST DAY AFTERNOON MEETING

Conference reconvened at 2:00 p.m., Saturday, April 4.

President David O. McKay:

We repeat that the notices that come to the rostrum will be announced over the loud speaker on the grounds. We shall have to be fair to all, if we announced any one of these that are coming to us, we should be showing partiality. All announcements for meeting your friends or your relatives and of meetings will be announced over the loud speaker, please.

This is the second session of the One Hundred Twenty-Third Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. We are convened in the Tabernacle on Temple Square, Salt Lake City. These services and all general sessions of the conference, will be broadcast in the Assembly Hall, in Barratt Hall, 60 North Main, over a loud speaking system and by television.

Last Thursday morning, this tabernacle was filled with the Primary workers of the Church. Friday night, last evening, it was filled to overflowing with the bishoprics of the Church. This morning and this afternoon it is filled to overflowing by members in attendance at the conference. It is evident that one pressing need of our Church is a larger building. We need a Coliseum that will seat fifteen or twenty thousand people, even to accommodate those officers and teachers who come to these conferences.

The proceedings of this session will be broadcast over station KSL of Salt Lake City, and by arrangement through KSL over the stations named in the first session of this conference. This session will be televised also over KSL television station, channel 5.

The singing will be furnished by the combined Scandinavian choirs, with Elder R. Hulbert Keddington conducting, and Alexander Schreiner at the organ. We shall begin this service by the Combined Choirs singing, "Send Out the Light," conducted by Elder Keddington. The opening prayer will be offered by Elder Edward H. Sorensen, formerly President of the Danish Mission.

The Scandinavian Choirs sang: "Send Out Thy Light."

Elder Edward H. Sorensen, former President of the Danish Mission, offered the opening prayer.

President David O. McKay:

Elder Edward H. Sorensen, formerly President of the Danish Mission, has just offered the invocation.

The combined Scandinavian choirs will now favor us with, "Let Not Thy Heart Be Troubled," after which Elder Harold B. Lee of the Council of the Twelve, will speak to us.

Singing by the Choir, "Let Not Thy Heart Be Troubled."

President David O. McKay:

Elder Harold B. Lee of the Council of the Twelve will now address us. He will be followed by Elder Eldred G. Smith, Patriarch to the Church.

ELDER HAROLD B. LEE

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

I AM overwhelmed, and my soul is subdued by the marvelous spirit of this great conference. I think no one needed more the message of that beautiful number just sung by the choir than I—"Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid." I seek therefore earnestly for an interest in your faith and prayers for these next few minutes.

Several years ago in company with President S. Dilworth Young and his wife, we toured the New England Mission. At Glace Bay on Cape Breton Island we were introduced to a lovely sister who had been studying the gospel with our missionaries and had been very much attracted to them, but as we talked with her about her understanding of what they had taught, she said:

"I cannot accept this part of your teachings about the gospel of the second chance."

As we talked on, I discovered that what she was alluding to were the teachings of the missionaries with reference to the statement of the Savior when he said:

Verily, verily, I say unto you, the hour is coming, and now is, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God: and they that hear shall live.

For as the Father hath life in himself: so hath he given to the Son to have life in himself. (John 5:25-26.)

She was referring to the missionaries' interpretation of the words of Peter as he wrote them to the Saints in his day,

For Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God, being put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the Spirit:

By which also he went and preached unto the spirits in prison;

Which sometime were disobedient, when once the longsuffering of God waited in the days of Noah, while the ark was a preparing, wherein few, that is, eight souls were saved by water. (1 Peter 3:18-20.)

They had taught her what Peter explained from what the Master must have told of his visit to that spirit realm, when he said:

For this cause was the gospel preached also to them that are dead, that they might be judged according to men in the flesh, but live according to God in the spirit. (Ibid., 4:6.)

I answered her, "You misunderstand our teachings. We don't believe in the gospel of the second chance. We do not believe in the gospel of the first chance, but we believe in a chance or full opportunity for everyone to hear and to accept the gospel."

Then I recalled to her what the Master had said,

And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come. (Matt. 24:14.)

I quoted to her from revelation given to the Prophet Joseph Smith in which the Lord said:

Behold, I sent you out to testify and to warn the people, and it becometh every man who hath been warned to warn his neighbor. Therefore, they are left without excuse, in the day of judgment, and the sins be upon their own heads. (D. & C. 88:81-82.)

I read to her from the words of the Prophet of the Book of Mormon where he declared:

For after this day of life, which is given us to prepare for eternity, behold, if we do not improve our time while in this life, then cometh the night of darkness wherein there can be no labor performed. (Alma 34:33.)

I told her of the vision of the Prophet Joseph that he had in the Kirtland Temple in January 1836, when he saw in vision Adam and Abraham, and saw his own father and mother. He saw his brother Alvin, who had departed this life before he was baptized, saw them in the celestial kingdom, and he marveled, and then the Lord spoke to him and said:

All who have died without a knowledge of this gospel, who would have received it if they had been permitted to tarry, shall be heirs of the celestial kingdom of God; and those who die henceforth without a knowledge of it who would have received it with all their hearts shall be heirs of the celestial kingdom, for I, the Lord, will judge men according to their works, according to the desires of their hearts. (Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith, 107.)

Saturday, April 4

First Day

Many times I have thought back over that conversation, and I believe now I am beginning to understand what the Master meant when he said to Peter, after Peter had declared his testimony of the divinity of the Savior. The Master had told him that this was a revelation from God, and then added,

And I say unto thee, that thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it. (Matt. 16:18.)

There are those with limited or little understanding who believe that statement to refute our teaching that there has been an apostasy. They say, "If there was an apostasy, then the gates of hell did prevail against the Church, contrary to the words of the Savior to Peter."

As I have thought of the true meaning of that statement, I have said to myself, "Oh, how great is the wisdom of God as contrasted with the foolishness of men."

What was the purpose of our Father concerning us and his work? He declared it to Moses:

This is my work and my glory—to bring to pass the immortality and the eternal life of man. (Moses 1:39.)

It was John who said that Jesus was as a lamb "slain from the foundation of the world" (Rev. 13:8) or, in other words, Jesus was prepared for an atonement; his sacrifice was to be made as a ransom for all of those who would obey him and keep his commandments.

The Prophet Joseph Smith in speaking about this matter said this:

The great Jehovah contemplated the whole of the events connected with the earth, pertaining to the plan of salvation, before it rolled into existence, or ever "the stars of morning sang together" for joy; the past, the present, and the future, were and are with Him, one eternal "now". . . . He knows the situation of both the living and the dead, and has made ample provision for their redemption, according to their several circumstances, and the laws of the kingdom of God, whether in this world or in the world to come. (Smith, Joseph Fielding, Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith, p. 220.)

That plan, which had been laid in the heavens before the foundations of the world were laid, contemplated a testing in the spirit world. It contemplated the plan of salvation given in various dispensations of the gospel here upon the earth.

As President Joseph Fielding Smith told us this morning, it was not God who sealed the heavens following a dispensation of the gospel. It was man. Hence, we are to believe that there would have been but one dispensation beginning with Adam and reaching down to now, except had it been for the wickedness of men.

That plan contemplated the preaching of the gospel to those who were in the spirit world, who had departed this life without having had ample opportunity of hearing the gospel. It contemplated the vicarious work to be carried on in behalf of those who had died without that knowledge in holy temples here in order that they might be judged as though they had heard the gospel here in the flesh.

The gates of hell would have prevailed if Satan had been victorious in the war in heaven, and if his plan, which would have nullified free agency, had been the order. The gates of hell would have prevailed had there ever been a time when the power to administer the saving ordinances of the gospel would not have been in each dispensation of the gospel upon the earth.

The gates of hell would have prevailed if the gospel had not been taught to the spirits in prison and to those who had not had ample opportunity to receive the gospel here in its fullness. It would have prevailed if there was not a vicarious work for the dead, and had it not been instituted to provide for those in the spirit world who desired to accept the gospel.

The gates of hell would have prevailed were it not for other vicarious work pertaining to the exaltation which those who accept the gospel might receive, both ordinances for the living and for the dead.

Now, as I think of that plan, so perfect in its conception, it is clear that this plan could not have existed except it had been by the revelations of the Living God.

So we begin to understand what the Lord meant when he said to Peter,

... upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it. (Matt. 16:18.)

He was speaking of the revelation of the Lord to his authorized servants and all the forces of hell combined could not prevent it.

Several years ago while I served as a missionary, I came to the door of one who belong to an apostate faction which fell away after the death of the Prophet Joseph Smith. For a considerable time we had a rather spirited discussion, although not unfriendly, in which she argued her case, and that we, the Latter-day Saints, and not their faction, were the apostates from the truth.

As we talked on into the afternoon, there came an interesting turn to our conversation. It developed that this couple had had but one child, a little boy, who, when about seven years of age, was stricken with an incurable disease. When he came to the age of accountability, of eight, he was still sick, and at nine or shortly thereafter he passed away, still unable to be taken into the waters of baptism.

Now, they accepted the revelation of the Lord through the Prophet Joseph that at eight years of age, the age of accountability, children are to be baptized, except for which they should not enter into the kingdom of heaven.

"Now," she asked, "what do you think we ought to do for our child?"

I replied: "Oh, that is easy. Have him baptized for in the temple. That is what temples are for."

But she said, "We have no temple." Then there came into my mind a scripture in which the Lord said,

Now the great and grand secret . . . and the summum bonum of the whole subject that is lying before us, consists in obtaining the powers of the Holy Priesthood. For him to whom these keys are given there is no difficulty in obtaining a knowledge of facts in relation to the salvation of the children of men, both as well for the dead as for the living. (D. & C. 128:11.)

Truly as I thought about her plight, the gates of hell had prevailed against her church because the keys and the power to reveal knowledge from heaven was not to be found in that church.

In other words, the Lord has said to Joseph Smith what he said to Peter and what he has said to every prophet in every dispensation. He gives to each the keys to the kingdom of heaven, and the power to receive revelation in order that the gates of hell shall not prevail against his plan.

What he said to Peter was tantamount to saying to Joseph, if I can make this meaning clear—he might well have said,

And I say unto thee, thou art Joseph, and upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it.

What he said to Joseph, might well have been said to Peter:

I give unto thee the keys to the kingdom of heaven, for he to whom these keys are given shall have no difficulty in obtaining a knowledge of both the salvation of the living and the dead.

The importance of revelation on which to found this Church was again impressed on the day this Church was organized, when the Lord said, to the Church, not only to those few who were then members, but also to all of us who have since been members,

Wherefore, meaning the church, thou shalt give head unto all his words [meaning the words of the President of the Church, the Prophet of the Lord] and commandments which he shall give unto you as he receiveth them, walking in all holiness before me;

For his word ye shall receive, as if from mine own mouth, in all patience and faith.

For by doing these things the gates of hell shall not prevail against you; yea, and

Saturday, April 4

First Day

the Lord God will disperse the powers of darkness from before you, and cause the heavens to shake for your good, and his name's glory. (D. & C. 21:4-6.)

In other words, the Lord has said it was not only important that there be revelation to his Church through his mouthpiece, the one who held the keys, but his Church must also be founded on personal revelation, that every member of the Church who has been baptized and has received the Holy Ghost must be admonished so to live that each might receive a personal testimony and a witness of the divine calling of him who was called to lead as the President of the Church so that he will accept those words and that counsel as if from the mouth of the Lord himself. Otherwise, the gates of hell would prevail against that individual.

It was exactly that meaning that the Apostle Paul intended to convey when he wrote to the Ephesians,

And he gave some, apostles; and some, prophets; and some evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers. (Eph. 4:11.)

In other words, he organized the Church and set up the proper officers, "that we henceforth be no more children, tossed to and fro and carried about by every wind of doctrine, by the slight of men and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive." Upon this rock, the rock of revelation, to individuals who have the power of the Holy Ghost, and revelation from God to his Church, the Lord in wisdom has designed that therefore the gates of hell shall not prevail against it.

In the midst of travail and suffering the Lord sent this word of comfort to the Prophet Joseph:

God shall give unto you knowledge by his Holy Spirit, yea, by the unspeakable gift of the Holy Ghost, that has not been revealed since the world was until now; . . . According to that which was ordained in the midst of the Council of the Eternal God of all other gods before this world was, that should be reserved unto the finishing and the end thereof, when every man shall enter into his eternal presence and into his immortal rest. (D. & C. 121:26, 32.)

Thus the rock of revealed knowledge has built his Church, and the gates of hell have never prevailed against it.

With that overpowering thought that the plan of the Almighty has been so laid that never has Satan been able to shake it, how we should rejoice at the word of the Lord to Joseph when he said:

. . . What power can stay the heavens? As well might man stretch forth his puny arm to stop the Missouri river in its decreed course, or to turn it up stream, as to hinder the Almighty from pouring down knowledge from heaven upon the heads of the Latter-day Saints. (Ibid., 121:33.)

I am grateful as I stand here this afternoon to realize that this is his Church. We have at the head of this Church an earthly head who presides as the President thereof, the mouthpiece of God. In this day to those who will believe and will listen to counsel, the gates of hell shall never prevail. Those who die without a knowledge will have the right to hear that truth in the spirit world, and if they accept it, work may be done vicariously that they might be judged and blessed even as though they had accepted it in the flesh.

Thanks be to God that the devil's power has never prevailed against his plan of continued revelation to his servants, and never will prevail so long as the earth shall stand, for the gospel plan was laid in heaven and will continue throughout the eternities for the purpose of bringing about immortality and eternal life.

I bear you that humble testimony in the name of the Lord, Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

He to whom we have just listened is Elder Harold B. Lee, of the Council of the Twelve. Eldred G. Smith, Patriarch to the Church, will now speak to us. He will be followed by President Levi Edgar Young, of the First Council of Seventy.

ELDER ELDRED G. SMITH

Patriarch to the Church

I, LIKE THE other brethren, am in need of your faith and prayers, and I appreciate your faith and prayers in my behalf, especially while I stand before you.

As I look at this vast audience and think of the hundreds of thousands listening over television and radio, the responsibility is frightening in the extreme. There is only one consolation for me: even though you do not remember all that is said here today, there is more to be gained than from the words you hear or than your memory can hold. This is true when you are attending any meeting. You leave the meeting encouraged, your faith renewed, your testimony quickened, the spiritual uplift is beyond measure.

I am reminded of the story which is so often told, and which you all know, of the bishop who visited a member who had become inactive in the ward. They sat in front of an open fire in the fireplace in silence, and, presumably, the bishop thinking about how he could approach the subject, reached forth with the tongs and lifted a hot live coal from the fire and set it on the hearth in front of the fire. They sat in silence and watched the hot, live coal gradually turn cold and black and lifeless. Then the bishop picked up the coal with the tongs again and set it back into the fire with the other living coals and watched it again regain its life and its fire and its heat and its warmth. Still nothing was said. Finally the man said, "Bishop, I see what you came here to tell me."

Through meeting together the fire of our testimony is kept alive and glowing. It is through meeting and working together that we grow in faith and in knowledge. When we withdraw from Church activity, we become as the lone coal on the hearth, cold and lifeless.

We are fulfilling a commandment of the Lord by attending meetings, but to grow in the Church, that alone is not enough. If we stop there, we would not differ much from those of other churches. James tells us:

Be ye doers of the word, and not hearers only, deceiving your own selves.

For if any be a hearer of the word, and not a doer, he is like unto a man beholding his natural face in a glass:

For he beholdeth himself, and goeth his way, and straightway forgetteth what manner of man he was.

But whoso looketh into the perfect law of liberty, and continueth therein, he being not a forgetful hearer, but a doer of the work, this man shall be blessed in his deed. (James 1:22-25.)

Now the perfect law of liberty referred to here is the law of free agency. So if we were to say,

But whoso useth his power of free agency and chooses the right way, he being not a forgetful hearer, but a doer of the work, this man shall be blessed in his deed.

So exercising our free agency and overcoming evil we become heirs to the blessings of the Lord, not just passive hearers of the word, but active doers of the word.

James also says,

For as the body without the spirit is dead, so faith without works is dead also. (Ibid., 2:26.)

Many have expressed the thought that if they receive a written patriarchal blessing it will be fulfilled to the letter without any effort on their part.

Which reminds me of the young woman who declared that she was going to be married in the temple when she got married and that was very certain and all her friends understood her attitude, yet when she was married, she not only married out of the temple, but she married a non-member of the Church. When one of her friends said to her afterwards, "Why, Mary, I thought you, of all people, were going to marry in the temple," she answered, "Well, my patriarchal blessing promised me that I would be married in the temple, so I guess I will someday."

Saturday, April 4

First Day

We must serve the Lord diligently and intelligently, keeping all his commandments, if we expect to receive his blessings.

When the question arises if the blessings come from our efforts in righteousness in fulfilling the law upon which the blessing is predicated, why have patriarchal blessings? We will get our blessings anyway, if we live for them. And that is very true, because "we must live for our blessings if we get them, but there comes great comfort and consolation from having our blessings both promised and sealed upon us by authorized servants of the Lord in obedience to his word and law, for the Lord has placed authorized agents on the earth to bear his power and his authority, not only to pronounce, but to seal these blessings, that the Lord may have an anchor upon the souls of men and women forever, for neither death nor the destroyer will end these blessings, but the receiver will possess and enjoy them forever and ever."

A patriarchal blessing gives us courage to live as we know we should live.

It helps to keep us from yielding to temptation, to do the things we have been taught to do.

Quoting James again,

Therefore to him that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin. (Ibid., 4:17.)

After he has received a patriarchal blessing, after he has been taught the Word of Wisdom, the law of tithing, been taught to attend sacrament and priesthood meetings, and been taught the law of celestial sealings, and then he does contrary to those teachings, to him it is sin. After he has been taught honesty, and there is no truth in him, for him it is sin. If he has been taught charity, and he has no charity in his heart, to him it is sin. He who has covenanted to devote his time and talents to the service of the Lord and does not do it, to him it is sin. He who has the gospel and teaches it not to others by example as well as by precept, to him it is sin.

Let us live worthy of the blessings of the Lord, by living the gospel every day. Let us show our faith by our works, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER LEVI EDGAR YOUNG

Of the First Council of the Seventy

MAN'S ENDOWMENT

The Lord created man of the earth,
He endued them with strength by themselves,

And made them according to his image,
And put the fear of man upon all flesh,
And gave him dominion over beasts and fowls.

Counsel, and tongue, and eyes,
Ears, and a heart, gave he them to understand.

Withal he filled them with the knowledge of understanding.

And shewed them good and evil.

He set his eye upon their hearts,
That he might shew them the greatness of his works,

He gave them to glory in his marvellous acts for ever,

That they might declare his works with understanding.

Beside this he gave them knowledge,
And law of life for an heritage,
He made an everlasting covenant with them,
And shewed them his judgments.
Their ways are ever before him;
And shall not be hid from his eyes.

(Ecclesiasticus 17:1,3,4,6-9,11,12,15.)

SO MANY words in holy writ will create within us the Spirit of the Lord as we hear them today, for it is the Easter time. All of the Evangelists write beautifully of the resurrection. We read the words of Mark:

And when the sabbath was past, Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of James and Salome, had bought sweet spices, that they might come and anoint him.

And very early in the morning, the first day of the week, they came unto the sepulchre at the rising of the sun.

And they said among themselves, Who shall roll us away the stone from the door of the sepulchre?

And when they looked, they saw that the stone was rolled away: for it was very great.

And entering into the sepulchre, they saw a young man sitting on the right side, clothed in a long white garment; and they were affrighted.

And he said unto them, Be not affrighted: Ye seek Jesus of Nazareth, which was crucified: he is risen; he is not here: behold the place where they laid him. (Mark 16:1-6.)

Every year at Easter time, our hearts are gladdened by the commemoration of the resurrection of Jesus Christ, the Savior of the world. Jesus died that we might by our faith be accounted worthy to attain eternal life. "It must needs be," he said, "that the Son of man should suffer and be put to death and rise again." (See Luke 24:7.) "Because I live, ye shall also live" is the divine message that has brought heavenly solace to millions of souls who have come to the knowledge that death is but the beginning of the greater and truer life.

An ancient prophet, Isaiah, in speaking of the resurrection of the Savior in language, poetic and lofty, says:

How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that publisheth peace; that bringeth good tidings of good, that publisheth salvation: that saith unto Zion, Thy God reigneth! (Isa. 52:7.)

This knowledge is the deepest need of mankind today, for while we honor his name and his call, we test our lives by other times and by other peoples, never allowing ourselves the one thing we need most of all—vision of the kingdom of God. The last words of Jesus from the cross were: "Father, into thy hands, I commend my spirit. . . ." (Luke 23:46), words of perfect trust and confidence. In all his life, there was that divine knowledge that from God he came and to God he would return. This is why the outward incidents of his life were vested with the splendor of eternity. When he died upon the cross, he assured us of the greater life beyond the grave.

The Spirit of the Lord has been in the hearts of the people who are assembled in this holy house. The lessons of the meaning of life which we will take home will long remain with us. Our minds may be open to the truths of the gospel. We cannot listen to the brethren who speak without being impressed with a new sense of power and a new source of comfort, because we have come to know God through the life of the Master: the Savior of the world. What could be more divine than to turn our thoughts to Jesus Christ our Savior at Easter time? The learned British author, Lord Erle, has written:

The belief in immortality rests on the belief in the government of the universe by one supreme, moral, and spiritual being. Happy are those whose faith on this point has survived the shock of recent years, and not the least part of their happiness lies in the sure and certain hope of a future life.

From the days of father Adam down through all centuries, God has made manifest his truths to his children. The divine light has ever shown forth to inspire the sacred teachings which will bring the children of God back to his holy throne. In Homer's Odyssey we have the religious beliefs of the Greeks of ancient Athens. "Men and gods are divine," says Homer. "In this life the spirit and body are one, and to escape worldly influence we must become purified by denying ourselves certain kinds of foods and dress and avoid contact with impurities. One must become as near to God as possible, and that means to become righteous and holy with the help of wisdom." Concerning the Hindus, their philosophy of life is found in their Bible, the Rigveda, which says: "All children are and have been of heaven and earth. All souls in time can be gods. Their highest ethical figure is Varuna, who is unified with a glorified body."

Saturday, April 4

First Day

Then comes the conception of the ancient Hebrews. Job shows not only his belief in immortality, but also in the resurrection of the body when he gives utterance to the noble words:

For I know that my redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth:

And though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God. (Job 19:25-26.)

How beautifully Daniel has written:

And many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt.

And they that be wise shall shine in the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars for ever and ever. (Daniel 12:2-3.)

How beautiful and with what deep humility the American Indians in the past have spoken words of faith in the Great Spirit. In Francis Parkman's biography of the celebrated Indian Chief Pontiac, we have a statement concerning the Indian's faith, which was uttered when he surrendered to the English in 1765. He spoke in behalf of the several nations assembled at the council of the English warriors and the Indians, and said:

Father, we have all smoked out of this pipe of peace. It is your children's pipe; and as the war is all over, and the Great Spirit and Giver of Light who has made the earth and everything therein, has brought us all together this day for our mutual good, I declare to all nations that I have settled my peace with you before I came here. And now deliver my pipe to Sir William Johnson, that he may know that I have made peace and have taken the King of England for my father, in the presence of all the nations now assembled. Father, we are thankful to you for lighting our council fire for us, and desiring us to return to it.

Every group of people in all history has looked to God and has known of the "life beyond." A shrine, a temple, or a church is a part of the great picture book of humanity and testifies alike to the goodness and beauty of human life.

Centuries ago, God gave the children of Israel through the Prophet Moses, the Ten Commandments, in which are written sublime truths:

I am the Lord thy God, which have brought thee out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage. . . .

Remember the sabbath day to keep it holy.

Honour thy father and thy mother: that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee. (Exodus 20:2, 8, 12.)

The Ten Commandments became the constitution of the Holy Land, and they have influenced the civic and political life of all civilization since that time.

All through the ages, since God sent his servant Adam to this earth, a divine power has ever directed mankind and given him a knowledge that God lives. The holy Bible is the product of men inspired of God, covering a period of four thousand years. The holy book shows that the Hebrew prophets gave their lives to the service of God. They wrote by the power of the Holy Ghost. God directed them.

The life of Christ our Savior, as given in the New Testament, is to old and young alike the most moving and convincing truth that he came from some higher sphere into our earthly history with the mission to reveal God and save man. He preached the gospel of the kingdom; and forever even until all the aeons have been closed, and earth itself, with the heavens that now are, have passed away, shall every one of his true and faithful children find peace and hope and forgiveness and his name shall be called Emmanuel or God with us.

We always keep in mind that in the great literature of the world's history, writers have extolled the powers of the mind and intelligences of mankind. Ever since the recording of history began, the divine power of man has been made manifest. "No other single force has entered so widely, so powerfully, so continuously into the renewal of the mortal spirit of man, into the shaping of men's ultimate ideals, and into the formation of personal character, as the sense of contact between the human and the divine." One of the old Hebrew singers—possibly David—summed up the lesson of Judah in these words: "They that trust in the Lord shall be as mount Zion, which cannot be removed, but abideth for ever." (Ps. 125:1.)

Today as we look forward to the time ahead, our vision will be clear if we have prayed and worked to have a testimony of the word of God among his children. We know of the truth that God lives and that Jesus Christ, the Redeemer of the world, will come again. With understanding hearts, we recall the words of Isocrates, an Athenian philosopher of the fifth century, B.C.:

The age in which we live should be distinguished by some glorious enterprise . . . Let the leaders contrive to put an end to our present troubles. The treaties of peace are insufficient for their purpose; they may retard but they cannot prevent our misfortunes. We stand in need of some more endurable plan, which will forever put to an end our hostilities, and unite us by the lasting ties of mutual fidelity and affection.

The writer of the Acts of the Apostles gives an account of the last meeting of the risen Messiah with his disciples in Palestine, and his last words to them:

And when he had spoken these things, while they beheld, he was taken up; and a cloud received him out of their sight.

And while they looked stedfastly toward heaven as he went up, behold, two men stood by them in white apparel;

Which also said, Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? this same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven. (Acts 1:9-11.)

Mosiah writes gloriously in the Book of Mormon:

But there is a resurrection, therefore the grave hath no victory, and the sting of death is swallowed up in Christ.

He is the light and the life of the world; yea, a light that is endless, that can never be darkened; yea, and also a life which is endless, that there can be no more death.

Even this mortal shall put on immortality, and this corruption shall put on incorruption, and shall be brought to stand before the bar of God, to be judged of him according to their works whether they be good or whether they be evil. (Mosiah 16:8-10.)

God the Father and Jesus Christ came to this earth and restored the gospel to Joseph Smith, and the Church of Jesus Christ was organized. Through the years the Prophet's life was filled with sorrow and bitter struggle to have men understand. A few came with him—men of great character and women of great souls, "That faith might increase in the earth, and that mine everlasting covenant might be established and proclaimed unto the end of the world." The world is weary of the religion about Christ. What it wants is the religion of Jesus Christ. To follow Jesus Christ means to have a part in the building of his kingdom on earth. Here we merge into the sunshine of a great experience.

In words that are forceful and clear, we have our tenth Article of Faith as written by the Prophet Joseph Smith:

We believe in the literal gathering of Israel and in the restoration of the Ten Tribes; that Zion will be built upon this [the American] continent; that Christ will reign personally upon the earth; and, that the earth will be renewed and receive its paradisiacal glory.

When Jesus Christ gave his holy prayer in speaking to the people on the mount, he uttered words which to this day are given by the millions of people who hold him as the Savior of the world. He said:

After this manner therefore pray ye: Our Father which art in heaven, Hallowed be thy name.

Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven.

Saturday, April 4

First Day

Give us this day our daily bread.
And forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors.

And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil: For thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, for ever.
Amen. (Matt. 6:9-13.)

And so we await his kingdom. We live day by day in preparation of his coming, for Christ will come again.

It was John Fiske, the historian at Harvard fifty years ago, who wrote:

The future is lighted for us with the radiant colors of hope. Strife and sorrow shall disappear. Peace and love shall reign supreme. The dream of poets, the lesson of priest and prophet, the inspiration of the great musician, is confirmed in the light of modern knowledge and as we gird ourselves up for the work of life, we may look forward to the time when in the truest sense, the kingdoms of this world shall become the kingdom of Christ, and he shall reign forever and ever, the King of kings and the Lord of lords.

President David O. McKay:

President Levi Edgar Young, senior president of the First Council of the Seventy has just addressed us.

Elder ElRay L. Christiansen, Assistant to the Twelve, will now speak to us.

ELDER ELRAY L. CHRISTIANSEN

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles

HOW BEAUTIFUL it is, my brothers and sisters, and how satisfying to the soul that hungers and thirsts after righteousness to sit here and listen to the voices of these inspired leaders as they teach us and expound the truths of the gospel, unadulterated, and unchanged, and everlasting! I have been thrilled with the proceedings of the meetings so far in this conference, and I am grateful to these brethren who are so firm and steadfast, so unassum-ing, and yet so vigorous in the defense of the truth.

I hope that you will bear with me, brothers and sisters, for a few minutes.
I should like to talk about a virtue, which I think becomes all of those who claim to be the children of God, the Saints of the Lord, his followers. I concluded to do this after listening yesterday to the mission presidents as they reported their labors, their successes, and the success of the missionaries. They did it so humbly that I concluded that humility must be one of the great virtues that helps to bring about success in doing the work of the Lord.

As I sat in that meeting, I turned to the songbook that was there and found a song, the words of which were written by Eliza R. Snow. I had never before noticed it. I should like to read two stanzas.

The trials of the present day
Require the Saints to watch and pray
That they may keep the narrow way
To celestial glory.
For even Saints may turn aside
For fear of ill that may betide
Or else induced by worldly pride
And lose celestial glory.

If we examine the history of the nations of the past that have been great and powerful but that have fallen, we will find nothing in them, I am sure, that would lead us to believe that any nation, or any civilization, or any people can find security merely in its own power and its own self-sufficiency.

The facts of history remind us that where nations and peoples continue to ignore the principles of justice and of right in regard to their peoples and the peoples of other nations, and where they put aside the teachings of God, they experience difficulties, hardships, calamities, and, in the due time of the Lord, history has proved that many of them have been destroyed.

A love of power and personal ambition in the hearts of individual leaders and their associates, pride and self-sufficiency that go with ambition and power, cause them to forget that the real God of the earth is Jesus Christ; that the "earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof," and that it does not belong to any people, or any nation, or any combination of nations.

Now, that same pride, my brothers and sisters, and the same self-sufficiency that nations and their leaders sometimes feel give them security, may cause an individual to forget that the Lord is God, and may cause him to lose faith in these principles which have been expounded here today unless he repents and turns to Christ, and takes upon him the name of Christ, recognizing him for what he is, the Son of God, the Savior, and the Redeemer of the world, who was crucified, and who in three days came forth from the grave, making it possible for all to receive redemption therefrom.

King Benjamin, recognized the destructiveness of pride and the necessity of humility. He taught this to his people saying to them:

For the natural man is an enemy to God, and has been from the fall of Adam, and will be, forever and ever, unless he yields to the enticings of the Holy Spirit, and putteth off the natural man and becometh a saint through the atonement of Christ the Lord, and becometh as a child, submissive, meek, humble, patient, full of love, willing to submit to all things which the Lord seeth fit to inflict upon him, even as a child doth submit to his father. (Mosiah 3:19.)

And he continues to remind his people, saying:

For behold, are we not all beggars? Do we not all depend upon the same Being, even God, for all the substance which we have, for both food and raiment, and for gold, and silver, and for all the riches which we have of every kind? (Ibid., 4:19.)

My brothers and sisters, we are all dependent upon the Lord. The riches of the earth are his and are provided us through his mercy only. Pride and self-sufficiency would lead us to believe otherwise. They are destroyers of the best that is in men, but on the other hand, humility, submissiveness, willingness to abide by the teachings of the Lord bring out the best that is in men because they become teachable and can be molded into agents usable to him. One must constantly remind himself and guard against pride or he will find himself taking to himself part of the glory that the Lord has said is his.

President Grant once reminded us that there are two spirits striving with all men—one telling them what to do that is right, and the other telling them to do that which will please themselves, that will gratify their own pride and ambitions. So, as King Benjamin said, unless we yield "to the enticings of the Holy Spirit, and putteth off the natural man . . . and becometh as a child," meek and submissive, and gentle, full of love, we are likely to spend our time in gratifying our own pride and following our own ambitions, and thus fail to develop the spiritual attributes and power. We will be led away from the divine destiny which may be ours.

Now, humility is not an abject, groveling, self-despising spirit. It seems to me that it is rather a right and proper estimate of what one is in the sight of God. When we have that estimate of ourselves, we become as children, and we realize that he controls the universe. We learn then, to appreciate even the very air that we breathe, and our ability to go and come and to see and to do, and to accept and to reject. But until he can submit himself to this status, man is an "enemy to God."

True humility, in my opinion, implies acknowledgment, thanksgiving, prayerfulness, all those virtues which become a Latter-day Saint. It is becoming to an individual no matter what his status in life, to acknowledge the Lord for his goodness and for his mercy, to be humble and prayerful and submissive to his will. True humility is uplifting, ennobling.

Alma, speaking to his son, Shiblon,

Saturday, April 4

First Day

emphasized this very thing, when he said:

See that ye are not lifted up unto pride; yea, see that ye do not boast in your own wisdom, nor of your much strength.

Use boldness, but not overbearance. (Alma 38:11-12.)

I think that most fathers could accept that counsel and give the same to their sons.

Pride and ingratitude in the hearts of men are grievous sins in the sight of God, and all of us are guilty of them; I know I am; I suppose you are to a degree as are people generally. When we stop to think, as has been expressed here today, that the Son of God created the world and all that in it is, and that by the shedding of his blood he made possible the redemption of men from the grave, we should not become self-sufficient, but we should remember that we are here living simply because of his mercy and of his kindness and of his love.

Humility, in my opinion, implies a grateful heart, and the Lord has warned us against ingratitude, for in the Doctrine and Covenants he has said:

And in nothing doth man offend God, or against none is his wrath kindled, save those who confess not his hand in all things, and obey not his commandments. (D. & C. 59:21.)

How can a man or a woman or a child learn to become humble and submissive, and gentle and meek? He has made that plain also here in the fifty-ninth section of the Doctrine and Covenants, and I would like to read a verse or two.

Wherefore, I give unto them a commandment, saying thus: Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, with all thy might, mind, and strength; and in the name of Jesus Christ thou shalt serve him.

Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. Thou shalt not steal; neither commit adultery, nor kill, nor do anything like unto it.

Thou shalt thank the Lord thy God in all things.

Thou shalt offer a sacrifice unto the Lord thy God in righteousness, even that of a broken heart and a contrite spirit.

And that thou mayest more fully keep thyself unspotted from the world, thou shalt go to the house of prayer and offer up thy sacraments upon my holy day;

For verily this is a day appointed unto you to rest from your labors, and to pay thy devotions unto the Most High. (Ibid., 59:5-10.)

And yet, only a part of us see fit to do some of these according to our statistics and reports. The person with true humility will not seek to aggrandize himself. He will serve for the sake of service. He will give his gifts in secret and let it be found out by accident. He will realize that all knowledge comes from God—for he knows all. He will not be contentious, unruly, or critical. He will not profane the name of Deity. As a literal child of God, he will feel it a privilege to do his will and keep his commandments.

Finally, the Lord has left us this: In order to shape ourselves to be fit candidates for his kingdom by leading lives of meekness and humility before him, he admonishes us to "let every man esteem his brother as himself, and practise virtue and holiness before me." (Ibid., 38:24-25.)

And if ye seek the riches which it is the will of the Father to give unto you, ye shall be the richest of all people, for ye shall have the riches of eternity; and it must needs be that the riches of the earth are mine to give; but beware of pride, lest ye become as the Nephites of old. . . .

And let your preaching be the warning voice, every man to his neighbor, in mildness and in meekness. (Ibid., 38:39, 41.)

What I have tried to say is that in order to be usable in the hands of the Lord, we must banish pride and self-sufficiency and be meek and humble. We must be submissive and easy to be entreated. We must love the Lord with all our heart, mind and strength and our neighbour as ourselves. (See Matt. 23:37-39.)

I appreciate the opportunity to receive this training in this great Church. I testify to you that I know that God lives, and that Jesus is the Christ, and that he, through Joseph Smith, restored the gospel to the earth in this day as it is predicted in the scriptures of old, and that only by following the pattern given by the Savior can we receive the blessings of eternal life.

To this I testify and do so in the name of Jesus Christ, the Lord. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Elder ElRay L. Christiansen has just spoken to us.

The Choir and congregation will now join in singing that inspired hymn, "O Say, What Is Truth?" Elder Richard P. Condie will lead us.

The Choir and congregation sang the hymn, "O Say, What Is Truth?"

President David O. McKay:

Our next speaker will be Elder Antoine R. Ivins, of the First Council of the Seventy, and he will be followed by Elder Ezra Taft Benson.

ELDER ANTOINE R. IVINS

Of the First Council of the Seventy

MY BRETHREN AND SISTERS, if I say anything that will be helpful to you this afternoon, it will be because you join your faith and prayers with mine that the Lord may bless me.

The other night Sister Ivins and I attended a meeting in the Assembly Hall in which the theme of the Mutual Improvement Associations was treated:

... be thou an example of the believers, in word, in conversation, in charity, in spirit, in faith, in purity. (1 Timothy 4:12.)

I would like to tell you the thoughts that that has brought to me.

Be thou an example of the believers—

I would like to add there the faithful Christian believer—"in word." What is the word of the faithful Christian? In those days the most electrifying thing that the world had experienced in years was so close to them that they no doubt were still startled by it—the resurrection, the actual, glorified resurrection of Jesus Christ our Lord. We are going to celebrate it now, but it was a new thought in that day, that it could be possible. It became a reality, and it was the thing that was passing from believer to believer, publicly and in private conversation. The resurrection of Jesus Christ verified the statement that he was and is the Son of God, and that must have been the theme of every devout Christian of that day, just as it must be today. Of course, they would amplify it, after bearing testimony that Christ had risen, that he was the Son of God, that he was born of Mary by miraculous means; then they would pass on to his teachings as to how men and women should live to gain an exaltation in the kingdom of God. That, it seems to me, would have been and should have been and must have been the "word" of every faithful Christian in that day. Likewise it should be your "word" and my "word" today. We, however, have something to add to that because we must tell the world not only these things but also that not too far back, Christ the Lord and his Father appeared to the boy Prophet Joseph Smith and brought back to man the testimony that Jesus Christ is the Son of God. Then we must teach also that Peter, James, and John, John the Baptist, the Angel Moroni, and the men who had held the keys of the various past dispensations, came back to the Prophet Joseph Smith restoring unto him the keys, all of the keys that had ever been given to man through the various dispensations of time. We are under that obligation, too, and we must do it, not only publicly, but we must do it in our conversations. This should be the theme of every religious conversation of a good member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. And it should go out as a living testimony that it is true. Of course when we bear that testimony to others who have not received it, we should do it in all charity, but we should do it with spirit, fearlessly, courageously, and never doubting. If we can develop the faith that will enable us to do that, a faith that God is the Father of our spirits, that he is the Father of Jesus Christ, that Jesus Christ is the Redeemer of the world, and that if we will repent and purify our lives, he will carry the burden of the sins of the world, (and it is only upon that condition, brethren and sisters, that he says he will do it), if we can develop that faith in our hearts, then we should be able to carry on. We must not only develop that faith, but also the faith of a good Latter-day Saint, the faith of a good Christian must be in himself, in his neighbors, and especially in his leaders, that the Church shall go forward vigorously, courageously to a wonderful realization of its purposes.

Saturday, April 4

First Day

Now I say, it must be done very largely in conversation, and in that each one of us becomes a missionary for the Church. He who is warned must warn his neighbor, and if we have that testimony given to us by the Spirit of God, it remains for us to pass it on by word of mouth to those who have not received it. It does not require a call from President McKay to enable us to bear our testimonies to our neighbors. We have been warned. God himself has given us the charge to do it. Then it is not only by word of mouth that we bear testimony, but it is also by purity of life. Through the power we hold in the priesthood of God, we must be able to demonstrate by our lives its value. We can if we will. Our problem is to will to do it, and we must do it in good spirit. I wonder if many of us are sorry that we have so many things that we are told we ought not to do, whether or not they become burdensome to us. I frequently tell the missionaries when I talk to them that they must consider the rules that are set up in the mission field for their protection, and so it is with these things which we ought not to do as members of the Church. They are for our protection; they are the reflection of purity of life.

Brethren and sisters, if we will be an example of the faithful believer, all these things we will do, and in this time of decreasing missionary help, those of us who can should make available our services and go forth to bear this testimony. There is no compromise with the testimony that Jesus Christ was born of Mary by miraculous means, that he is the Son of God, that he was the first fruits of the resurrection, that through that resurrection he made possible to you and me a return to the presence of God our Heavenly Father, contingent only, that is, an exaltation in his presence is contingent only upon faithful service unto him and our fellows. Let us let that service be in good spirit. Let us be glad to give up the things we are asked to give up. Let us be glad to devote ourselves to His service. Let us do it without fear, without compromise, with great courage, and with all the energy which we may possess. If we will do this, my brethren and sisters, we will always enjoy the Spirit of God, that testimony will always remain with us, and the devil will never prevail against us. God grant it, I pray, in the name of Jesus. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

We have just listened to President Antoine R. Ivins of the First Council of the Seventy. We shall now hear from Elder Ezra Taft Benson of the Council of the Twelve.

If Brother Samuel E. Bringham, recently president of the Swiss-Austrian Mission, is in the audience, he will please be on deck.

Elder Benson, we are glad to have you with us today.

ELDER EZRA TAFT BENSON

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

MY BELOVED brethren and sisters: I pray for strength that I may be able to control my emotions and give vent to my feelings. I thank the Lord for the inspiration of this conference. I could wish that it might go on not for two more days but for five or ten. I have thrilled with the proceedings of the day and with the sweet, quiet, peaceful influence that is here. The past three months have, to a degree at least, been a study in contrasts.

I am sure, my brethren and sisters, you will never know how very deeply I appreciate my associations in the Church. I appreciate the hundreds and thousands of messages that have come from all parts of this nation and foreign countries expressing confidence and love and giving assurance of your faith and prayers in the new assignment which came to one of the humblest of your number.

You will never know how deeply I have missed the experiences in the Church that have been mine from week to week during the past eight years. Of course I have missed my family and the peace and quiet and love of my home, and I want you to know how much I appreciate the messages that have come following a near-tragic accident to two of my loved ones. Messages have been received from all over the Church and from outside as well.

I want you to know how much I have missed the weekly visits to stake conferences, the opportunity of visiting in the missions. I want you to know how deeply I have missed the associations with my brethren of the General Authorities. I have missed the opportunity of performing sacred ordinances, of blessing people at stake conferences and at the Church Offices. I have missed very deeply the privilege of performing ordinations and setting apart my brethren to positions of trust in the Church and kingdom of God. I have missed the visits of humble members of the Church to my office in the Church Office Building.

I have missed the opportunity to go to the temple frequently to perform sacred ordinances, to officiate at marriages for young couples, and to have the opportunity of visiting with them intimately before and after marriage. I have missed very much my contact with the youth of the Church and with the great Mutual Improvement Associations with which I have had the pleasure, under the direction of the First Presidency, of serving.

And I have missed, even more, those Thursday meetings in the temple with my brethren, the sacred hour of prayer around the altar in the temple of God, and I have missed the meetings with the members of the Twelve as we have assembled quarterly. I have also missed the fast days on the first Thursday of the month.

I have been deeply grateful for the good people of the Washington Stake, under the faithful leadership of Brother J. Willard Marriott, for their kindness, their love, and their understanding.

I think my testimony of the truth has never been so strong as it is today. I love this work. I know that God stands at the head of it, that he lives, that he is directing this work on the earth. I know that his priesthood and power and authority are here among men, and I know, my brethren and sisters, better than I have ever known before that, even during hours of trial and anxiety, it is possible to draw close to the Lord, to feel of his influence and of his sustaining power—that one is never alone, if he will only humble himself before the Almighty. I am grateful for that testimony, for that assurance.

I know, my brethren and sisters, that the sweetest work in all the world is the work in which we are engaged in helping to save and exalt the souls

Saturday, April 4

First Day

of the children of men. There isn't anything so important, so precious, so enjoyable, so soul-satisfying.

I have been happy in the privilege to serve, in a small way at least, this great country and the government under which we live. I am grateful to the First Presidency and my brethren that they have been willing, not only to give consent, but also to give me their blessing as I responded to the call of the chief executive. I am grateful for their prayers and their faith, and I know that my leaving has, in a small way at least, added to the heavy load they were already carrying.

To me it is a great honor and a privilege to serve the government of the United States of America. Our problems are numerous, complex, and difficult. The responsibility is heavy, but I have felt the power of the faith and prayers of the Saints and Christian people generally throughout this nation, who believe in many of those eternal principles that are embodied in the gospel, the principles for which we stand as a people.

I am grateful that I have been able to get men closely associated with me who love America, who believe that the Constitution of this land embodies eternal principles. They are men of faith, men who are willing to join with me weekly in prayer in our staff meetings, men who love our free institutions, men who want to keep America strong, men who are willing to sacrifice financially in order to serve the government of the United States, this blessed land in which we live.

These men believe firmly that the supreme test of any policy, whether it be agricultural or otherwise, is this: How will it affect the morale, the character, and the well-being of our people? They are men who know that we need, and the world needs, a strong America for the critical years ahead; men, whose philosophy of life squares with the philosophy which has come to me through the teachings of the Church and kingdom of God, a philosophy which is based upon eternal principles which to me are priceless, a philosophy which teaches that freedom is a God-given, eternal principle vouchsafed to us under the Constitution.

This freedom must be continually guarded as something more priceless than life itself. Any program that would tend to weaken this freedom is inherently dangerous and should be guarded against. I will not say more today about this philosophy—this philosophy of individual freedom and citizenship responsibility, based upon the principle of helping the individual to help himself, and discouraging people from expecting the government to support them, but encouraging them to support their own government. I am grateful for this philosophy, and I am grateful to learn that this philosophy is accepted generally and rather widely in the hearts of our people throughout this land. I hope and pray that it may be accepted even to a greater extent in the days ahead. I trust that our great purpose shall be to strengthen the individual integrity, freedom, and moral fiber of each citizen.

Brethren and sisters, I love this great nation in which we live. To me it is not just another nation. It is my firm belief that the God of heaven raised up the founding fathers and inspired them to establish the Constitution of this land, and I believe that is Mormon doctrine. This is a part of my religious faith as it is of yours. This is a great and glorious nation, with a God-given, divine mission to perform for liberty-loving people everywhere. This mission cannot be performed unless America is kept strong and virile, unless this people adheres to those eternal principles embodied in the gospel and in the Constitution of our land.

So today I pray to God that no act of mine or program that I shall ever advocate will in the slightest tend to weaken this nation in the accomplishment of that God-given mandate.

Now, my brethren and sisters, we have recently, since our last general conference, passed through a great political campaign in which we have exercised our freedom, our God-given right at the polls. I rejoice in this privilege, that we have been able to go to the polls and express ourselves freely, with heads erect, unafraid. We have differed, as is our privilege, and I pray to God we may never lose this privilege. Many of us have supported men who were not elected. The American people spoke on election day. We chose one of our number as the chief executive, and he has a tremendous responsibility.

I was impressed with that responsibility a few days ago when I was invited to attend a prayer breakfast at the Mayflower Hotel in Washington, D. C. Gathered there at an early hour were men of various political faiths, various religious affiliations. Brief messages were given; prayers were offered. We heard an inspirational message from the President of the United States. I sat at a table with the Vice President, a prominent congressman from up in the northwest, several southern Democratic friends, and as we visited together and enjoyed the inspiration of that occasion, I couldn't help thanking God that in America it is still possible for men of differing political faiths to come together and in unity appeal to the Almighty for his blessings upon this land of America and him who has been called to serve as the chief executive.

One piece of literature distributed at that meeting came from Conrad L. Hilton, the head of the Hilton chain of hotels. It was a picture of Uncle Sam upon his knees in prayer. I learned from Mr. Hilton later that this had come as a result of an address he had given in Chicago over one of the national broadcasting chains in which he had tried to point out that if we are going to have victory in our battle for peace, then it must be obtained through greater spirituality and dependence upon the Almighty. The response to his message, through letters and telegrams, seemed to carry one theme from people of various walks of life from all over America. The theme was that final victory rests not on munitions, upon money or soldiers but that the final victory rests with the God of heaven.

Mr. Hilton was so impressed that he tried to picture this sentiment by showing Uncle Sam—America—on his knees in prayer. "... not beaten there by hammer and sickle," as he said, "but freely, intelligently, responsibly, confidently, powerfully." And then were added these words, "America now knows it can destroy communism and win the battle for peace. We need fear nothing or no one . . . except God."

Then there was penned a simple prayer beside this picture of Uncle Sam. I have taken the liberty of changing the pronoun in that prayer that it might conform with our language of prayer as we use it in the Church. I would like to read it to you:

Our Father in heaven:

We pray that thou wilt save us from ourselves.

The world that thou hast made for us, to live in peace, we have made into an armed camp.

We live in fear of war to come.

We are afraid of "the terror that flies by night, and the arrow that flies by day, the pestilence that walks in darkness and the destruction that wastes at noonday."

We have turned from thee to go our selfish way.

We have broken thy commandments and denied thy truth. We have left thine altars to serve the false gods of money and pleasure and power.

Forgive us and help us.

Now, darkness gathers around us, and we are confused in all our counsels. Losing faith in thee, we lose faith in ourselves.

Inspire us with wisdom, all of us of every color, race, and creed, to use our wealth, our strength to help our brother, instead of destroying him.

Help us to do thy will as it is done in heaven and to be worthy of thy promise of peace on earth.

Saturday, April 4

First Day

Fill us with new faith, new strength, and new courage, that we may win the battle for peace.

Be swift to save us, dear God, before the darkness falls.

Now, my brethren and sisters, a written prayer is not enough. A spoken prayer is not enough. If we are going to realize the hope that is in the hearts of all of us, then as American citizens, as Latter-day Saints, we must live worthy of the blessings for which we pray.

In closing, I would like to appeal to the Latter-day Saints, and all within the range of my voice today, that we seek to promote a spirit of humility throughout this great land, that we pray for the President of the United States. He is our President. He needs our faith and prayers. He has my confidence, as do the men associated with him in the cabinet.

As we bow our heads in prayer in cabinet meeting each Friday morning, I thank God that we still have in America men of faith who are not too proud to bow before the Almighty and seek his inspiration. We may not agree with all of the President's policies, and I hope if we do not, we will express ourselves vigorously and freely, either policies advocated or policies adopted. I hope the issues will be debated freely from one end of the land to the other, because therein is safety. There is always safety in an informed public.

But let us pray that the chief executive will make no serious mistakes. Let us pray for the Congress of the United States. They are made up mostly of good men, fine public servants, who want to do what is right. They also want to please their constituents, and I hope you will be wise in what you ask of them. Don't ask them for anything that is unsound. Don't put your own selfish, narrow desires ahead of the public welfare. Give our legislators your faith and your prayers.

Pray also for the great judicial branch of the government—these men who have been called and given the great responsibility of interpreting the laws of the land. May they have the power and influence of the Spirit of heaven that as they interpret those laws they may do so in keeping with the spirit of the Constitution in a manner pleasing to our Heavenly Father.

God bless us, my brethren and sisters, as Latter-day Saints, that we may wield our influence to the very maximum in promoting peace, in promoting spirituality among the people of this great nation, that this great country of which we are a part, may be preserved, and may continue to be, through all the days to come, a beacon and an inspiration to liberty-loving people everywhere. God grant his blessings to this people and upon this great land, I humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Elder Ezra Taft Benson of the Council of the Twelve has just spoken to us. We are glad that he has been able to leave the strenuous duties incumbent upon him as Secretary of Agriculture to attend at least some of the sessions of this conference.

Elder Samuel E. Bringhurst will be one of the speakers tonight.

The combined Scandinavian choirs will now sing "The Heavens Are Telling," conducted by Elder R. Hulbert Keddington.

The closing prayer will be offered by Elder Charles Oscar Dunn, president of the Boise Stake, after which this conference will stand adjourned until seven o'clock this evening, when, in accordance with the custom of the Church, the General Meeting of the Priesthood of the Church will be held. Only those holding the priesthood are invited to be present. Persons not holding the priesthood will kindly refrain from attempting to enter the building or any of the other buildings that will be occupied.

That session will not be broadcast, but overflow meetings will be held in the Assembly Hall and Barratt Hall.

Proceedings will be televised in the Assembly Hall only.

The session at 10 o'clock Sunday morning will be broadcast over Station KSL at Salt Lake City, and by arrangement through KSL over the stations named in the first session of the conference. That session will also be televised over KSL television station, Channel 5.

The Tabernacle Choir broadcast will be from nine to nine-thirty tomorrow morning. Those desiring to attend this broadcast must be in their seats by 8:50 a.m. It is requested that the audience during the broadcast refrain from making any disturbing noise of any kind.

The regular session of conference will begin at 10 o'clock.

The singing for today has been, as heretofore announced, by the combined Scandinavian choirs under the direction of Elder R. Hulbert Keddington, with Alexander Schreiner at the organ this afternoon.

You have been thrilled with the excellence of the singing by these combined choirs. We commend the leader and each member of the choir. We commend also your reverent attitude. I do not know whether you have been able to hear all that has been said from this pulpit. Sometimes it is difficult for those in the rear to hear, but we commend the reverent attitude of the choir, and particularly the excellence of their singing. The Lord bless them for the service they have rendered.

At the conclusion of this meeting the general sessions of the conference will be adjourned until 10 o'clock Sunday morning.

We will now have "The Heavens Are Telling."

The Combined Scandinavian Choirs sang, "The Heavens Are Telling."

President Charles Oscar Dunn of the Boise Stake offered the closing prayer.

The general sessions adjourned until Sunday morning, October 5, 1953.

GENERAL PRIESTHOOD MEETING

The General Priesthood meeting of the Church was held in the great Tabernacle at 7:00 p.m., Saturday, April 4, 1953.

President David O. McKay presided and conducted the services of this meeting, which commenced promptly at the time appointed.

President David O. McKay:

I repeat, brethren, what the Fire Department, City Fire Department, urged us not to do in our sessions today; undoubtedly they will be even more emphatic in their request that we clear the aisles. It hurts me to do this. Let us see if we can crowd in a little and clear some of these aisles.

I am pleased to announce that the proceedings will be broadcast not only in the Assembly Hall and in the Barratt Hall, but on the grounds; there are so many who are unable to get into either building, that we have just sent word to them that we shall broadcast the proceedings on the grounds, so if you cannot get a seat, you will hear the program anyhow.

Will Brother Hilton A. Robertson, recently President of the Chinese Mission, make his way forward, and report as soon as you get here, come up and occupy this seat on my right, please. Likewise Brother George A. Christensen, recently President of the Australian Mission.

This is the third session of the 123rd Annual Conference of the Church. The singing during this session will be furnished by the Men's Chorus of the Tabernacle Choir, with J. Spencer Cornwall as director, and Elder Alexander Schreiner at the organ.

We shall open these services by the congregation's singing, "Redeemer of Israel," conducted by Elder Cornwall.

Saturday, April 4

First Day

Elder Ariel S. Ballif, President of the East Provo Stake, will offer the opening prayer.

The congregation and the Men's Chorus of the Tabernacle Choir sang the hymn, "Redeemer of Israel."

The opening prayer was offered by President Ariel S. Ballif of the East Provo Stake.

Singing by the Men's Chorus of the Tabernacle Choir, "Guide Me To Thee."

President David O. McKay:

Our first speaker this evening will be President Samuel E. Bringhurst, recently President of the Swiss-Austrian Mission, and one who was very active and instrumental in choosing the Temple site at Bern. President Bringhurst.

ELDER SAMUEL E. BRINGHURST

Formerly President of the Swiss-Austrian Mission

THIS is indeed an inspiring sight. Also a very sobering one.

My dear Brethren: I am happy to be here tonight. I appreciate this opportunity. With the exception of eleven months in 1948, Sister Bringhurst and I have had the privilege of serving constantly in the mission field since 1944. We are grateful to the First Presidency and to the General Authorities of the Church for affording us the privilege and honor of presiding over two of the very fine missions of this Church.

I should like to pay tribute to my good wife tonight. She has stood constantly by my side and although when we went to Switzerland, she could not speak the German language, through hard work, study and prayer, she was able to conduct her meetings and take charge of them, whether with the Relief Society or Primary officers before we returned to our home, before we were released. I am real grateful to her for the splendid work and the leadership she brought to those two organizations in the mission field.

We have had the privilege of working with many of your fine sons and daughters during our time in the mission field, in those two splendid missions. I want you to know that they are the finest in the world, and I hope that you will not think that I am becoming too personal or that I am intruding myself into your business when I suggest to you fathers who have sons and daughters in foreign missions, where it is necessary for them to learn a foreign language, to write a little more often to them. Do not leave all the writing for your wives to do. The first six months in those foreign missions is a trying period. The missionaries must learn a new language. They must adjust themselves to new and changed conditions, and it is very difficult for them. And they need every encouragement they can possibly receive from every source.

When you have difficulties at home, take them to your bishop, if you need to, but do not write them to your sons and daughters in the mission field. They worry about them, it interferes with their efficiency, the only thing they can do to help you is to pray for you, and I assure you that you have their prayers and their faith in your behalf when you do have difficulty.

May I also ask you fine bishops—I know you do have a lot to do, I speak advisedly—write to your missionaries, occasionally, they appreciate those letters and they help them a lot.

Our missionaries in the Swiss-Austrian Mission and also in the Northwestern States Mission, have been some of the finest it has been possible to send to any mission. They have been diligent in their efforts, they have been loyal to the Cause, and I wish you fathers and your good wives could have been present on occasions when we have had testimony meetings. It thrills one to hear the humble testimonies of those fine boys and girls, and it always does us good to hear them praise their parents at home and ask our Heavenly Father to bless and to guide them.

There is another trying period in the lives of these fine boys and girls, and that is immediately upon reaching home. Please encourage them, give them help. They have a difficult time adjusting again when they get home. They have been active, they have been working ten hours, a day doing missionary work and they need your help and encouragement when they get home, until they get adjusted again.

It would be a fine thing, and I am sure every mission president would appreciate it, if the fathers of our missionaries would write the mission presidents occasionally. I will tell you why that is important. During the four years that we were in the Swiss-Austrian Mission, we kept a graph of several activities, tracting, cottage meetings, and total proselyting hours, also showing the expenses of the missionary. Without one single exception each time expenses went up, all three of the other activities went down, and when expenses went down, the other three activities went up. If you will write the mission presidents they will be happy to tell you the amount of money that your missionary boy or girl needs, and do not send them more than they need.

We are grateful to our Heavenly Father for the Gospel. We are grateful for the opportunity we have had of serving the Church. President McKay has mentioned the part we played in obtaining the Temple site in Bern, Switzerland. We deem that a great honor. The greatest privilege that ever came to us, and one that will never be forgotten by the members of our mission there, was the visit of President and Sister McKay and their son Lawrence and wife, they will never forget that, and the enjoyable time we had with them, the few days they were with us will always live in our memory.

May our Heavenly Father continue to bless President McKay, that he may continue to be our inspired leader.

I was thrilled this morning to hear my first mission president, President Thomas E. McKay speak a few minutes. He is a marvelous man, and I love him. Way back in 1910, when he was our mission president, and President Rudger Clawson was presiding over the European Mission, President Clawson prophesied that President Thomas E. McKay would hold a more important position sometime in his life than he held at that time, and I am happy to have lived to see that prophecy come true.

My brethren, I hope that you will take to heart the words of Brother Benson about our great country. It seems as though we have to leave and go away for a while before we are really ready to take into consideration the value of living in this great country of ours.

When Sister Bringhurst and I landed in New York, I got down on my knees and kissed this good old earth. This is the greatest country in the world. Let us keep it that way. All of Europe, every country in Europe, is looking to us for leadership, and also for help. It is important that we realize our position in the world today.

President Thomas E. McKay mentioned these mountains; every morning I thank my Heavenly Father for them. There are no finer mountains in the world, and every time I gaze at them I think of this poem written by the late Harrison R. Merrill, perhaps his last, as it was found on his desk after he had passed away.

Oh, God, let this be heaven—
I do not ask for golden streets,
Or long for jasper walls,
Nor do I sigh for pearly shores
Where twilight never falls;
Just leave me here beside these peaks,
In this rough western land,—
I love this dear old world of Thine—
Dear God, you understand.

Saturday, April 4

First Day

Oh, God, let this be heaven—
 I do not crave white stainless robes,
 I'll keep these marked by toil;
 Instead of straight and narrow walks
 I love trails soft with soil;
 I have been healed by crystal streams,
 But these from snow-crowned peaks
 Where dawn burns incense to the day
 And paints the sky in streaks.

Dear God, let this be heaven—
 I do not ask for angel wings,
 Just leave that old peak there
 And let me climb 'till comes the night—
 I want no golden stair.
 Then when I say my last adieu
 And all farewells are given
 Just leave my spirit here somewhere—
 Oh, God, let this be heaven!

I bear you my testimony tonight, my dear brethren, that the Gospel of Jesus Christ is the only plan that will bring peace and salvation to a troubled, sick world. I bear you my testimony that the messages we have heard today from these our brethren are true, and this group of men whom we will sustain and whom we have always sustained as our General Authorities are God's representatives here on the earth, and if we will but live according to their teachings and their advice, we need have no concern about the future. I have learned that my Heavenly Father will be just as near to me as my life will allow him to be. I have learned that he will take care of all my needs, if I do my part.

May he help us to be the kind of men that we ought to be, those of us who are privileged to bear his priesthood, may he continue to bless and support these our brethren, the General Authorities of our Church, I humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Elder George A. Christensen, recently President of the Australian Mission, will be our next speaker.

ELDER GEORGE A. CHRISTENSEN

Formerly President of the Austrian Mission

MY DEAR brethren, this is quite an experience. When President McKay announced my name and called me to the pulpit, I was sitting on the bottom of the baptismal font. I have been called, in the past, to various positions, but being called immediately from the baptismal font is my most unusual experience.

This, Brethren, is an opportunity and a privilege, yet, it is difficult for me and I do ask for your faith and prayers. I humbly pray that you will cooperate with me tonight as I give my report.

About three years ago, Sister Christensen and I were called and set apart to preside over the Australian Mission. Sister Christensen, because of illness, had to return home about five months later. I shall never forget the decision we made when President Smith sent a cable to us, after knowing her condition, and said in the cable: "Bring her Home." In the last sentence he wrote, "Use your best judgment, you and Sister Christensen. If she can come home alone, you may stay there." Sister Christensen would have nothing else but that she go home alone, and that I should stay, and I was very willing if she felt she could go home alone.

So, I stayed for the rest of my mission and until I was called home a few months ago I was there and she was home. Although I needed her badly yet I appreciate what she did, through her inspiring letters and her influence otherwise, in helping the Australian Mission. Under the conditions no one could have done more to inspire me.

That sickness experience was a very impressive experience to us,—to witness the faith, the prayers and the hopes of those good saints in Australia in her behalf. I have never seen the like, brethren, and I honor them and respect them for their kindness and their pleading to our Father in Heaven for her welfare.

The Lord has prolonged her life, she is getting better, and we are very grateful.

In our meeting in the temple yesterday with the mission presidents, I was deeply impressed with the vastness of this work. This is certainly a universal Church. Indeed it has to do with the salvation and redemption of all the souls of men throughout the duration of the earth—past, present and future.

Then this morning as I listened to President McKay, and to Brother Anderson give their reports, how marvelous, I could not help but think of the words given in 1869 at this pulpit by Secretary of State Seward of the United States Government, who, when he was here on a trip to celebrate the joining of the railways at Promontory Point, made this statement:

"I pray God that the great marvel which I witness here," (and by the way, he had been here a few days, and knew something of our history and our purpose, he knew something of the faith of our people and their program,) and so he said, "I pray that the great marvel which I witness here may result in establishing a good civilization in the heart of the American continent, and be a sign, a token, and an assurance to mankind in every nation of the earth that it cannot fail if it be prosecuted by industry and virtue in advancing the welfare of the whole human race."

If Secretary Seward could be here today, could have heard these reports, their far-reaching and saving effects upon the human family, to listen to the report on welfare, I am sure he would understand that his broad statement then given was rather confining in the light of what is being accomplished by the Church today.

I have had the joy brethren, as other mission presidents, of living close to the people in the mission, in administering to the sick, advising and counseling the brethren and sisters, talking with the investigators, listening to their prayers and praying with them; attending testimony meetings; witnessing baptisms; and then that great work of associating with the missionaries, your boys and your girls.

It is marvelous how the spirit of the Lord, after the authority has been given and the assignment made by the servants of God to a boy or a girl to proclaim the truth, how it modifies, lifts and inspires, how effective they become, how manly, dignified and gloriously impressive in their labors.

I should like to say this however, brethren, that you at home, you parents, have a great deal to do with the success of a mission. Here are a few statements made by some of our missionaries.

One, for instance: "My sister is being married in the temple, president, and I am so happy."

Another: "My father is now keeping the Word of Wisdom."

Another: "I never knew my father, really, until I began to write letters and received letters from him in the mission field. My parents have never been so happy. My father and mother are preparing to enter the temple with me when I return. My mother is now a teacher in the Relief Society."

I can discern from the missionaries, brethren, whether or not the parents are living as the missionaries teach. Possibly the greatest urge for those boys and girls to go forward with confidence, with joy and happiness, with a clear mind and conscience is to know that "my family members are living as I teach."

May I suggest that you help the missionary cause by living as they teach. It is worthwhile, and as one elder said, "My father and mother are happier than they have ever been," and so you

Saturday, April 4

First Day

parents become happier by living the Gospel and at the same time you strengthen the missionary cause.

In all my experiences in the mission I cannot help but feel that we had a seasoning at least of the spirit manifest by the Prophet Joseph Smith in the first Conference of the Church. I think it was in June of 1830 when he made this profound statement to the Saints and especially to the elders of the Church; "To find ourselves engaged in the very same order of things as observed by the holy Apostles of old, to realize the importance and solemnity of such proceedings, and to witness and feel with our own natural senses the like glorious manifestations of the powers of the priesthood, the gift and blessings of the Holy Ghost, and the goodness and condescension of a merciful God unto such as obey the Everlasting Gospel of our Lord, Jesus Christ,—all these combine to create within us sensations of rapturous gratitude to inspire us with fresh zeal and energy in the cause of truth."

So it does, and so we have felt it, and as the Lord sent out his Seventy to preach the Gospel, two by two before his face, into every city and place whither he himself should come, later on those Seventy returned with joy, saying, "Even the devils are subject unto us through thy name."

We have had that experience, brethren, we have had a taste of this that is referred to by the Prophet, these great evidences of the value and power of the Gospel of Jesus Christ and the joy in serving and the joy in proclaiming.

At one time in the mission I felt somewhat concerned about the decreasing number of our missionaries. I felt we could use more. I recalled that stirring spirit portrayed by the Prophet Alma when he declared in substance: "O that I were an angel and had the power of speech and could declare repentance unto all the world."

Then he realized his limitations and withdrew somewhat of his zeal and apologized in a way, to the Lord, and said this: "Why should I desire that I were an angel, that I could speak unto all the ends of the earth, for behold the Lord doth grant unto all nations of their own nations and tongue to teach his word; yea, in wisdom all that he seeth fit that they should have; therefore, we see that the Lord doth counsel in wisdom according to that which is just and true." (Alma 29:8.)

I was very much impressed with the thought that people of their own nation and tongue should also be responsible to do missionary work. After receiving the approval of the First Presidency, I called forty of our Saints, to part-time missionary work, and it proved a great boon to our mission. Although it did not bring about very many immediate converts and baptisms, yet these part-time missionaries grew in testimony and developed themselves to become more effective officers in the branches, and I am sure they will be.

Today we are lamenting the fact that because of the scarcity of missionaries, it becomes necessary to withdraw them from some of the small and new branches, new areas and new units. Most of these units are made up of new members and although they are faithful, yet it will be difficult for them to carry on in full without the association of the missionaries. What shall we do? We have many young men and women in Australia who could go on a full time mission. Many of them cannot finance a full time mission. Our people in Australia are not wealthy people. They are generally people of humble circumstances. They are a choice people but it is not easy for them to save and very few of them have laid by funds to finance a mission.

I now recall a divine injunction given by the Prophet in this dispensation when he, in exhorting the Elders in the 84th Section of the Doctrine and Covenants, makes this matter clear,—that even though we can't go ourselves, sometimes we may help provide the means and way whereby others may go, for he wrote thus:

"For I will forgive you of your sins with this commandment—that you remain steadfast in your minds in solemnity and the spirit of prayer, in bearing testimony to all the world of those things which are communicated unto you.

"Therefore, go ye into all the world; and unto whatsoever place ye cannot go ye shall send, that the testimony may go from you into all the world unto every creature." (D. & C. 84:61-62.)

I was very pleased a short time ago after a meeting when two brethren told me: "We will be glad to finance a missionary in Australia—one of the Australian saints. How much will it cost?"

I said, "It will cost about 20 to 22 pounds a month, equivalent to about $45.00." That seemed to be agreeable to them.

I hope and pray that it will work out. I hope President Liljenquist will find, and I am sure he can easily find some fine young women and young men who could be sent, and thus fulfill what Alma inferred, that the people of that nation should be called into service to proclaim the word, and that possibly if we can't go ourselves, we can send.

Of course, I am sure, it is not the intent of the Church that the Church should send, but is intended that the individual, or the small group should send by giving partial financial support to those who could respond.

Brethren, may I mention one more thing? We try to teach our people prayer and fasting. We try to teach them observance of the various standards of the Church, but we found a strange situation, when we made a survey of our inactive members, to learn the reason for their inactivity. We found that the main reason why they were inactive was because they claimed they had been offended for some reason or other. We, therefore, developed and presented this slogan, that, "Real Latter-day Saints never become offended, and they are least likely to give offense."

We proclaimed that repeatedly throughout the mission and it became favorably effective among most of the saints.

We also encouraged and we should encourage the spirit of charity and love toward our fellow men to those who are down-trodden and disturbed. We should all have charity and mercy toward such.

But we sometimes forget this other virtue, that of rejoicing in each other's achievements. If we would have the spirit of rejoicing in each other's successes, we would likely have charity, we would likely have forbearance, and so we asked the Saints to do what they could to make it a point to cultivate a sincere appreciation when others succeeded.

It may be when another's girl graduated from school with high honors. It may be when the neighbor's boy gave an inspiring talk in Sunday School, possibly a Deacon. There are so many situations where we could sincerely rejoice in the achievements of others.

Brigham Young taught that principle on the way out west, and the Indians also were taught the principle by the pioneers and they appreciated it deeply. The Indian word for that principle is "Pukachee." They found deep satisfaction in practicing that new and effective principle, pukachee.

As we told stories to develop this principle with our young people in the Church in Australia, we received glorious response and when we returned to those district conferences the young people seemed delighted to remind us of pukachee and the joy they found in practicing it.

It is an important virtue and works wonders.

Another helpful thing we did is reflected in these lines:

"For what do you live
For what you get or what you give?
What is the dynamo that makes you go Getting or giving?"

Saturday, April 4

First Day

Get you must if you would give
But give you must if you would live
For getting without giving
Is existence without living
So get, give and live."

We did not apply that so much in the material way, but we used it mostly with the missionaries. Missionaries can't give the Gospel unless they get it, therefore in order to get it they must be up in the morning at six; study class at seven, breakfast at eight and then a full day of proselyting and through faithfully following the missionary handbook they increased their proselyting to about seven hours per day and so the Lord blessed their efforts because they were prayerfully and humbly getting so they could inspiringly give.

I am so grateful that these missionaries were willing to sustain the program, to be loyal and faithful, and to bring about many good results.

In closing I would like to say a word about the Choir. The Mormon Tabernacle Choir is one of the finest influences in the Australian Mission. It is a door opener to our missionaries. I have had non-members tell me that their religion is the Mormon Tabernacle Choir and Richard L. Evans. That is their faith.

When our missionaries come to the door, and the occupants learn that these missionaries represent the same Church as our Choir and Richard L. Evans, the door is generally swung open and they are invited in.

So, I certainly commend our Choir. May God bless them, and the spirit of their music, the elevating nature of it, and also Richard L. Evans' fine talks on ethics, on fundamentals that anyone can accept. They believe it, and it touches their better selves, and it is good.

Now the way, I believe, is going to be opened, and I hope and pray it will be through the faithful efforts of our good friend and brother, Cyril Jenkins, that many other stations will play our records even the British Broadcasting Company, and if it does it will open the way by which many more thousands of good people in the world will hear the divine and lifting messages given by our wonderful choir and Brother Evans.

Brethren, the work of the Gospel in which we are engaged is true. I am proud to be a member of the Church. I am glad that I was a Deacon, a Teacher and a Priest, an Elder and a Seventy, and I have had ward experience and stake experience, and above all, I am so happy for the great joy of regularly and daily striving to do the best I can in the Gospel. I am now a block teacher in our ward, and I am grateful for it. I am a Special Interest class teacher in the M.I.A. and it is a real joy to be close to the people, to try and put over the work of the Lord.

I thank these brethren, the General Authorities, bless their hearts, for their confidence and their kindness. They are wonderful. Because of increase in members and attendance they have a building program in Australia that will involve 70 per cent of the branches. Some branches are buying lots, others remodeling, others building new chapels so there is great activity and faithfulness.

I am very grateful for this, and every time we have submitted a building proposal to the General Authorities they have been kind and generous. Even though that mission in the past has been self-sustaining, as far as buildings are concerned, it is just possible in the near future they will have to ask the Brethren here for a little help.

I pray the Lord to bless us all that we may be genuine in our labors, honest and faithful, for this work is of God, and this I declare in all soberness and in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Elder Harold B. Lee will present a special message to you regarding the Seventies.

ELDER HAROLD B. LEE

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

FOR SOME time there has been under study by the First Council of the Seventy with the Twelve as to what might be done in behalf of the Seventies who are not affiliated at the present time with any quorum.

In a number of stakes there are no Seventies' Quorums, and there is no Quorum of Seventy in any mission of the Church. As a result, at the present time there are many seventies throughout the missions and in some stakes who have no affiliations whatsoever with a quorum.

Now it is felt that every Seventy should be associated with some Seventies' organization. In order to correct this it is proposed that in the future there shall be three terms used in connection with the organization of Seventies.

First, the quorum as at present to designate an organization where there exists a majority of Seventy, or 36 or more Seventies in a given stake or mission, in which case they will be organized as a Quorum, and so designated.

The term, Unit, is to be used as a name for an organization of Seventies in a stake or a mission where there are less than 36 Seventies, and the term, Group, as at present to designate a segment of either a Quorum or Unit, organized as Priesthood Quorums Groups are now established throughout the Church.

It is expected that there will be no Units organized in any stake where there are more than 36 Seventies, in which event they are to be organized as a Quorum.

In every stake or mission in which there are 36 or more Seventies there shall be organized one or more Seventies' Quorums, depending on the number of men who are available.

In every stake or mission, then, in which there are not sufficient Seventies to organize a Quorum, there shall be organized a Unit, which will be presided over by a Unit Leader, with two counselors, and they will have the responsibility of carrying on the Seventies' program very much as the work is carried on by a Quorum of Seven Presidents when it is regularly organized.

When the Unit thus organized reaches a membership of 36 or more, it will then be organized into a Quorum, functioning as other Seventies' Quorums and given a full council of Seven Presidents to the Quorum.

As a Quorum often consists of two or more groups in the different wards, Units might likewise be made up of groups according to the need and scattered condition of the Unit as it may exist, either in the missions or in the stakes, and each group thus set up will operate under the general direction of a Group Leader and counselors, if desired.

Units will be supervised under the dual direction of the stake or mission president in conjunction with the First Council of the Seventy, as is the case with Seventies' Quorums throughout the Church.

The Units thus organized will be given consecutive numbers with Quorums, so that if changes come from Units to Quorums there will be no confusion in the numbering system. However, the number of the Unit will be followed by the suffix, U, so that the organization may be readily recognized by its number as being a Unit and not a Quorum.

When the Unit grows large enough in numbers to become a Quorum, the suffix, U, will be dropped, and the same number will be retained for the Quorum, thus organized from the said Unit.

Now, President McKay has asked that I make this announcement. This has been discussed by the First Presidency and the Council of the Twelve with the First Council of the Seventy, and it will be the recommended procedure hereafter to be followed in organizing the Seventies throughout the Church.

Saturday, April 4

First Day

The Men's Chorus of the Tabernacle Choir sang "The Palms."

President David O. McKay:

We assume, brethren, Bishop Isaacson and Brother Marble, that the ushers have been assigned their places so that we may get a fairly good estimate of the attendance, not only in the Tabernacle, but in the other assemblies.

Our next speaker will be President J. Reuben Clark, Jr., of the First Presidency.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

Second Counselor in the First Presidency

MY BRETHREN: Obedient to President McKay's request, which is founded, I know, on a good reason, I shall take a little more time tonight than I had intended to take, but I do not intend to deprive you of the pleasure and profit of having a few words from him.

I suppose from President McKay's observation about the duty of the ushers, that he has not yet received an estimate of the number of the Priesthood who are here, on the grounds, in other buildings, and of course, we do not know the number that are listening in at the Field House at the Brigham Young University, but I am sure it is a great multitude. I suppose it is the greatest gathering of Priesthood, the true Priesthood, that has occurred in the history of the whole world.

The Lord tried to make a nation of priests out of Israel, but Israel would not, and so the Lord had to organize, as he did, giving the Priesthood to one tribe, withdrawing the Melchizedek Priesthood from their midst, and setting up the Priesthood of Aaron.

We have been more fortunate, more blessed, and I hope we may say, in truth, more obedient, than ancient Israel, we do have a nation, a people of priests, for all our male members over twelve years of age do bear the Priesthood. This Priesthood has been known by various names, but apparently the full name is the Holy Priesthood under or according to the Order of the Son of God.

I want to read to you some verses from the Book of Moses, 1st chapter and the 31st to the 33rd verses, part of the 35th and then the 37th and the 39th.

"And behold, the glory of the Lord was upon Moses, so that Moses stood in the presence of God, and talked with him face to face. And the Lord God said unto Moses: For mine own purpose have I made these things." (That is, the things of this earth.) "Here is wisdom and it remaineth in me.

"And by the word of my power, have I created them, which is mine Only Begotten Son, who is full of grace and truth.

"And worlds without number have I created; and I also created them for mine own purpose; and by the Son I created them, which is mine Only Begotten. * * *

"... For behold, there are many worlds that have passed away by the word of my power. And there are many that now stand, and innumerable are they unto man; but all things are numbered unto me, for they are mine and I know them. * * *

"And the Lord God spake unto Moses, saying: The heavens, they are many, and they cannot be numbered unto man; but they are numbered unto me, for they are mine."

This revelation given to Moses, thousands of years ago, now finds its fruit through the great telescopes that have been recently erected, which show that there are universes, galaxies, unnumbered, some of them as much as a billion or two billion light years away, that is, it takes a billion or two billion years for light traveling 185 thousand miles per second, as I recall, to come from them to us.

Moses goes on: "And as one earth shall pass away, and the heavens thereof even so shall another come; and there is no end to my works, neither to my words."

The modern astro-physicists suggest that galaxies may have been formed in the past and disappeared ("passed away"), that the galaxies now formed may disappear ("pass away"), and that others may be formed to take their places, for there is no end to space.

Moses continues, "For behold, this is my work and my glory—to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man."

The Lord said that he did these works, the creation of the worlds, "by the word of his power," which is his Only Begotten Son. It seems as if when God speaks, the chaos of space answers, universes are formed, universes disappear, new worlds are created, old worlds disappear, and all this suggests, as I just read, the end is not yet.

Now, what is that "word of my power," which does these mighty works in the universe? I want to read to you what Brother Brigham said about that. He said: "If anybody wants to know what the Priesthood of the Son of God is, it is the law by which the worlds are, were, and will continue for ever and ever. It is that system which brings worlds into existence and peoples them, gives them their revolutions—their days, weeks, months, years, their seasons and times and by which they are rolled up as a scroll, as it were, and go into a higher state of existence."

That is, these measureless creations have been formed by the power of the Holy Priesthood of the Order of the Son of God. This Priesthood we, you and I, and all who stand in like places, possess, not in its fullness, as to the exercise of its power, but we do have the Priesthood. How great and how multiple are its powers, which we do in fact possess, some of you, all of you, have witnessed at one time or another in your lives.

I would like to read what the Prophet Joseph has said, some of the things he has said, about the Priesthood:

"The Priesthood," said the Prophet, "is an everlasting principle, and existed with God from eternity, and will to eternity, without beginning of days or end of years." Adam (I am taking isolated sentences and passages) . . . Adam stands next to Christ, who is the great High Priest. Adam obtained his Priesthood "in the Creation, before the world was formed."

And the following statement of the Prophet is, to me, most significant "Every man who has a calling to minister to the inhabitants of the world"—note that—"Every man who has a calling to minister to the inhabitants of the world was ordained to that very purpose in the Grand Council of heaven before this world was. I suppose (said the Prophet) that I was ordained to this very office in that Grand Council."

I like to think that not alone did such men as Adam and the Prophet Joseph receive the Priesthood before they came here. I like to think, I can give you no scripture for it, I like to think that those of us who are set apart, chosen and set apart, to come forth in this the last dispensation of time, which is to draw together all other dispensations, had a like conferring of Priesthood, though not perhaps a like setting apart.

The Prophet continues, "If a man gets a fullness of the priesthood of God, he has to get it in the same way that Jesus Christ obtained it, and that was by keeping all the commandments and obeying all the ordinances of the house of the Lord."

That lets us glimpse the fact that we poor humans, weak and clogged with mortality, cannot obtain the priesthood fullness here, not now at any rate, nor until we have yielded obedience to all the commandments and ordinances of the Lord; but when we do, that fullness will be ours.

He goes on: "It (the Priesthood) is the channel through which the Almighty commenced revealing His glory at the beginning of the creation of this earth, and through which He has continued to reveal Himself to the children of men to the present time, and through which He will make known His purposes to the end of time."

Saturday, April 4

Now brethren, I take it that we can all glimpse something of the nature and the power of this Priesthood, which each of us has. With the possession of that power, there comes a tremendous responsibility, so great indeed, that to contemplate it seriously, is almost to crush us. Certainly, it is a humbling thing to think and try to understand, and to contemplate that you and I are clothed with that Priesthood, the same Priesthood that obtained in the creation of heavens and of worlds. But remember, we do not have and so we cannot exercise, save only a fraction, a very small fraction, of the fullness of the Priesthood, and we must be most careful in our attempted use of what we have.

Years ago, I did a little work classifying somewhat the powers of the Priesthood exercised by the Savior, as recorded in the New Testament. First, I discovered that he had exercised certain creative powers, the powers of creation: witness the turning of water into wine, the feeding of the 5,000 and the 4,000, and I repeat what I think I have said here before, about those latter miracles, please do not accept the explanation that is made by those who are tinctured by this "higher criticism," please do not accept the suggestion that the reason the 5,000 were fed was because they had taken their lunches with them.

He exercised control over the elements. You will recall that he acted in seeming disobedience to some of what we call the laws of nature. He stilled the troubled waters on the sea that night when the disciples thought the boat was about to be swamped, and they awakened him in their dire distress and fear. He calmed the waters. On another occasion, while the disciples were going across the sea of Galilee, in their boat, they having left him on the other side of the lake, he came to them in the night, walking on the water. They thought he was a spirit. When they found out who he was, Peter, the impetuous Peter, asked the Savior to bid him to come to him. The Savior bade him, Peter went over the side and started to walk towards him. But the waves piling up in front of him, his faith failed him and he began to sink. He called to the Savior to save him. The Savior said, "O ye of little faith."

First Day

He controlled life. You will remember he raised the dead, he healed the sick, and the infirm, all of these manifestations, in one sense or another involved great creative powers. Most of these exhibitions of his power have been repeated in our time by the exercise of the powers of the Priesthood we hold. I hope that if you have not recently read, you will read the Life of Jacob Hamblin. There is a man to whom the Church has not yet paid due tribute. He was a great missionary. He was a diplomat of the highest order. He was a statesman. He, time and again, used these great priesthood powers to assist him in his work. I wish that we would reprint that faith-promoting series that we had once, and would use them in our schools to build up simple faith instead of sometimes furnishing material whose sole function seems to be to raise doubts.

Brethren, have simple faith, for faith is the implementing force of the Priesthood. I want to read to you what Brother Brigham said about that. He said, "If we speak of faith in the abstract, it is the power of God by which the worlds are and were made, and is a gift of God to those who believe and obey his commandments."

If you brethren will run over in your minds the use of the Priesthood you yourselves have made, you will find that all the uses which have to do, at any rate, with the alleviating of human suffering, the bestowal of spiritual powers and graces, all of these works we do are brought about through the exercise of faith.

Now, brethren, here we are, agents of the Lord, and he, our Lord and Savior, the agent of God, the Father. That is the power we have, that is the responsibility that is ours. We must ask ourselves what kind of agents are we. How well are we magnifying that agency, how nearly are we living in accordance with the commandments of God through which action only shall we ever receive a fulness of the Priesthood which we now possess.

I confess, brethren, that to me this is a tremendously important subject. It is a subject that can occupy our time and attention, and upon which we may exert all the mental powers we possess in order that we may gain some understanding thereon and thereof.

Brethren, let us take all of this to heart. Let us not treat the Priesthood lightly. Let us not think, as I have said to you before, that we can lay it off tonight and go out somewhere and do as the lust of pleasure dictates, and then come back and put it on and go forward again. The Priesthood cannot be treated in that way.

We should never go into a place, save we are sent on a spiritual mission, where there would be any likelihood that the Spirit of the Lord could not go with us. We should never engage in any act and so far as possible, we should not harbor any thought, to which we might not invite the Spirit of the Lord to participate with us.

Do not, let us not, I speak to myself as I speak to you, let us not think lightly of this priesthood, let us bend every effort which we possess to do nothing that will either deprive us of the Priesthood, or that will in any way impair our ability and power to exercise it.

During the last week of his sojourn on the earth as a mortal in Palestine, the Lord, returning from Bethany to Jerusalem one morning, became hungry. He saw a fig tree in the distance, and thinking to relieve his hunger, he went to it and found that it had only leaves, no fruit. So finding, he cursed the tree and declared that thenceforth forever it should not furnish fruit to any man. Critics have some difficulty in understanding that act. I do not intend to try to explain it, but I can think of it as an illustration of what will come to us, if we shall prostitute our Priesthood. Prostitute the Priesthood and I am sure it will be a long, laborious task to recover it in the measure to which we had it before. And when you think of what that Priesthood means, you men of families, with children,—how glorious it is to be able to go to the Lord when one of them is ill and particularly when the doctors tell you there is no hope, how glorious it is to go to the Lord and ask for his help, doing this through the power of the Priesthood which you possess, and with the knowledge that if not contrary to his wisdom, he will grant that help.

And what a tragedy it would be, if, when that time should come, and it will come to most of you, sooner or later, what a tragedy it would be, if your right to invoke your Priesthood had been lost through your transgression. What a tragedy to find you were in the position of the fig tree that had been forbidden thereafter ever to bear any fruit.

I can testify to you, my brethren, out of my own experience, that God hears and answers prayers. I can testify to you that through the exercise of the Priesthood and prayer I have seen miracles performed, persons healed. There is no question about that. One such healing of a loved one, otherwise lost, as to mortal life, is worth a thousand times more than all that it costs us to live so righteously that we do not lose our claim upon our Heavenly Father to honor our Priesthood.

Brethren, I cannot speak too earnestly and invoke too intently the wish that we shall, all of us, realize what this Priesthood means; that we shall keep ourselves clean so that nothing shall stand betwixt us and the Lord. I have spoken of the extreme case, in a way, the healing of the sick of our dear ones, but there is no hour of the day or the waking hours of the night, when we do not stand in need of comfort, of peace, of inspiration, of wisdom, that can come only from our Heavenly Father. Our priesthood is our authority to go to the Lord in times of stress.

Saturday, April 4

First Day

Let us not, my brethren, do anything that will rob us of this agency of ours, agency to represent the Lord, and he, out of his agency, to represent the Father. We stand where, in a limited way at least, we may exercise the powers which God himself might exercise if he were present.

May the Lord be with us, encourage us, help us to live as he would have us live, help us to keep his commandments, help us to act straight and to think straight, help us to guide our footsteps away from temptation (you know, frequently, I think temptation comes primarily when it is sought), I humbly pray in the name of Jesus. Amen.

Our next speaker will be President Hilton A. Robertson.

President Robertson presided over the Japanese Mission, he was the first president of the Chinese Mission, and was in Hong Kong. He and Brother Aki and their wives organized a branch in Hong Kong, and the Communists made it advisable to move out. They were advised to do so by the Government. The headquarters of the Chinese Mission was then moved over to San Francisco and he and his associate elders organized a branch. Though he has been released, we have under consideration ways and means of taking care of these Chinese branches.

President David O. McKay:

ELDER HILTON A. ROBERTSON

Formerly President of the Chinese Mission

THIS IS one of the most marvelous sights I have ever witnessed. There is nothing in the world like it.

Sister Robertson and I have been laboring with a people who comprise one-fifth of the population of the world. Where the spirit of the Lord is, there is freedom, and where men have lost a knowledge of the true and living God, they have had to create for themselves, because of the desires within them, a god of their own making, and so they have depended upon the arm of flesh.

I was grateful when I arrived back from Hong Kong and received a letter from the First Presidency stating that we were welcomed back to the land of liberty, the only place in the world where there is true liberty and freedom. I believe we are living in the greatest day and age of the world. No people have ever enjoyed the blessings that we are enjoying today. When you go into a foreign land, the land of China, where the people have been oppressed, where they have no school facilities, where most of the people are illiterate, where they have no opportunity to advance, where they have no knowledge of the true and living God, then you can realize the blessings that we enjoy.

Today, in China, with 465,000,000 people you would not see a sight like this. You would not be permitted, because of the oppression under which those people are living today to congregate as you are here this evening and to hear the word of the Lord spoken by his servants. I know you do not fully appreciate what this means.

The Chinese people live in villages. Those villages are made up of families, three or four generations of the same family. Sometimes they are in these for protection, and for other family reasons. China is made up of these villages. The evil forces which have come amongst them and oppressed them are now seeking to divide them, disrupt their family life, carry them away into captivity, disrupt any organization which might try to prohibit the advancement of that evil purpose.

Some of the families are taken away, and some individual members of families, some of the scholars, some of the greatest business men, any one who would think for himself or would be most likely to disapprove of these things is removed.

They have their schools, which they call brain washing, into which these people are taken. Those who still object, whom they are not able to train are moved out. Men are shot without even having an opportunity to defend themselves.

I know of one man who attended school at the University of Utah, an architect who was working on plans for a church building which the First Presidency had approved. This man was a fine, intelligent teacher in one of their schools. He told of young men, 17 and 18 years old who came to him every night and tried to teach him this doctrine of the Communist party. They were generous, would stay with him all night and come the next day. Then he found out that it was necessary in order to rid himself of them, he acknowledged that the doctrine was all right, then they assigned him to teach it to someone else.

Where the spirit of the Lord is, there is freedom. We are possessors of the great priesthood, brethren. It does not make any difference about the number, but it does of whether we possess the priesthood of God.

Yesterday I received a letter from Hong Kong, from a young man who was ill while we were there. He was afflicted with tuberculosis and was very seriously ill. He investigated our doctrine for more than a year. Two months before we left there he was so ill that he could not come to the Church, but at the time that we left to return, he came to the boat and we talked to him. He was very sad that he had not received baptism, along with 16 others that we had just baptized. I told him that as long as his heart was right, our Father in Heaven would accept that, until he had the opportunity to be baptized. We gave him a blessing that day on the boat at his request, and after we returned to San Francisco he wrote and told us the Lord had healed him and blessed him. He told us in a letter yesterday that President Mauss had just been there and met with the Saints in the home of a very splendid Catholic friend of ours—those members that he could get together—and he said "After this meeting, I was baptized." He said, "I am thrilled beyond words to express, and I wish you would send me a Book of Mormon that I might study more deeply the teachings of the Church." That Book is on its way to him.

Brethren, the time is late, I must not take more time. I know the blessings of this great priesthood. I recall that while I was living in Utah County, one of the finest physicians in this state, who was a member of the Catholic Church and whose wife belonged to another church, his child was very ill. He called me and said, "Would you come to my home. My child is very ill." This man had received blessings, he trained in the L.D.S. Hospital and he himself was blessed for his health while there. This man, one of the greatest medical men in this state handed over to me and my counselors as the bishopric of a ward, his child, and he said: "Unless the Lord does something for this child it cannot live, it has had measles and a relapse, and I have done all I can." We administered to the child and that child is alive and healthy today.

I have seen the Lord work in a marvelous way in the Hawaiian Islands. Two children I know of, Japanese children, who were blessed there, who had been taken all over the country because of asthma, were healed—they had not been to school a whole week in their lives, because of that treacherous disease, and yet the Lord blessed them and healed them.

Brethren, you have this power, do not abuse it. You have heard what Brother Clark has said today to you, tonight. Take it seriously. You have this power, do not become as the fig tree. Hearken.

May God bless you. I am happy to

Saturday, April 4

First Day

meet with you. I pray that the Lord will bless you that you will realize the power and the authority that has been given to you by our Father in Heaven.

We possess the greatest blessing that has ever come to man. May God bless you, I ask in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

PRESIDENT DAVID O. McKAY

When President Robertson referred to the freedom we enjoy in this great country, and gave us a glimpse of barbarism going on in China and other places, these lines came to my mind:

"Breathes there the man, with soul so dead,
Who never to himself hath said,
This is my own, my native land?"

Let us thank God every morning, every night, in our family prayers, that we live in the United States of America, the Constitution of which vouchsafes individual freedom, and let us pray also, that the Lord will frustrate the plans of the Communists who would deprive us of that freedom.

There are in the Tabernacle tonight, 10,432; in the Assembly Hall 2,932; in the Barratt Hall 1,220; on the grounds 1,792; the Field House at Provo reports 839; making a total of over 17,000 men of the Priesthood assembled tonight.

It has always been my nature to enjoy the company of my associates. I love to be with my friends. The older I grow the more intense becomes my appreciation of fellowship in the Brotherhood of Christ. I sense that tonight more deeply, more sincerely than ever before. As I have looked into your faces, partaken of your spirit, as I picture those in the Assembly Hall, in the Barratt Hall and on the grounds and down in the Field House, I feel that it is one of the greatest privileges, one of the most inspirational experiences in life to associate with men who hold the Holy Priesthood.

I have nothing but blessing in my heart for you. I love you. I like to call you my beloved associates and fellow workers, and that love is akin to the love we have for our wives and our children, and if we can keep this unity, this confidence, nothing in the world can stop the progress of this work.

You note tonight that the theme has largely been missionary. We have called these brethren from China, Australia, and Switzerland merely illustrative of how wide-spread our Gospel is. We have had them from the Islands, from South Africa. They are calling, calling for missionaries. Within the last few weeks, prominent visitors from India, Indo-China, from Hong Kong, have extended a cordial invitation to us to come to these places. This is a world-wide religion, brethren. It is the Gospel that must be preached to every nation, kindred, tongue and people.

Let me thank you and those of your families who have sent in checks by the scores, recently, with promises to repeat those checks monthly, to aid local missionaries in spreading the Gospel. We do not want any missionary in Australia or New Zealand or in any of the American nations, or in Mexico to have his or her expenses paid entirely, but we will assist whenever possible, local missionaries who need supplementary assisting. The response to suggestions of some of the brethren for such missionary funds is surprising and gratifying. As far as possible we let the donors know the names of those to whom this money is sent.

How the way opens up for the preaching of the Gospel! The calling of the boys into the military service has of course crippled our missionary work, more than it should have done. If anybody tells you that members of this Church are not carrying their share in the military work, you may just tell them that they do not know what they are talking about. I just take this opportunity to thank all who are contributing to the missionary cause.

Another phase of this missionary work tonight—Professor James L. Barker for years has urged that we give classes in foreign languages, that our young men may have an opportunity to study at home and get at least the fundamentals before going to a foreign country. Well, it is a good suggestion, but we have not yet been able to make it practical. It seems now that the time has come when we must do something. I have here before me an appeal for the teaching of languages in our high schools. I have a note from one who says that among all our senior high schools, only 15 offer one or more courses in foreign languages. In the Church there are men and women from every country in the world, in which there are missionaries. I should like to encourage our young men and young women, young men particularly, to include in their high school and college courses, some of these languages.

President Wilkinson informs me that twelve foreign languages are taught in the B.Y.U.—German, French, Portuguese, Greek, Syrian, Russian, Arabic, Latin, Swedish, Norwegian, Finnish, Dutch. In the University of Utah I learn that they have 810 students registered in 12 languages, and so the opportunity is at hand.

Recently there appeared in a local paper here an excellent editorial on the necessity, on the advisability of teaching languages here in our State, and in the United States. "Modern languages are not as widely or as successfully taught in United States schools as they should be to meet the requirements of the nation's position. The high school student who takes a language often finds he has practically forgotten it within a year or so. That may be due, in large part, to the fact that there is little opportunity to exercise language skills. The need to learn foreign languages should be accented and the acquisition and use of such languages stimulated. When men can talk together, they can get together."

The responsibility of preaching the Gospel rests upon us. When the people in Macedonia called to Paul, and the spirit told him to go over, he answered that call. They are calling for us in various nations, they are calling for more missionaries now in the missions already established, and we must answer that call.

Brethren, in conclusion, let me urge more diligence in living the principles of the Gospel. We may preach, we may write, and publish books, but the most effective way of preaching the Gospel to the nations of the world, is by example.

"Therefore whosoever heareth these sayings of mine," said the Savior, "and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man, which built his house upon a rock:

"And the rain descended, and floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell not: for it was founded upon a rock.

"And every one that heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them not, shall be likened unto a foolish man, which built his house upon the sand:

"And the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell: and great was the fall of it."

May God add his blessings to the instructions and the reports given this night, may we depart with greater determination in our hearts to serve the Lord and keep his commandments, may we go forth with greater resolution to defend and keep his commandments, may we go forth with greater resolution to defend one another in righteous living, to defend the Church, not to speak against our neighbors, nor against authorities of the Church, local, stake or general. Let us avoid evil speaking, let us avoid slander and gossip. These are poisons to the soul to those who indulge. Evil speaking injures the reviler more than the reviled. I heard a recent convert who came from Europe say, "I am surprised to hear how many people talk against the Authorities here in Salt Lake City." She was grieved, she had the right ideal of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, that we should speak well of one another.

Saturday, April 4

First Day

Brethren, peace be in your hearts, peace and harmony be in your homes. God bless every man and every woman who has entered the waters of baptism with a testimony of the truth, I bear that testimony to you tonight with all my soul. I know that the power of God rests with his servants. I know that he will reveal and does reveal his mind and will to them. The communications of man's spirit, of one holding the Priesthood, with our Father in Heaven through the Holy Spirit is real. Is there anything in the world more precious than that knowledge! It is more precious than life, because it gives assurance that if death does come, that spirit continues. I bear you that testimony, that communication with our Heavenly Father is real, that Jesus Christ, our Lord, stands at the head of this Church, and that he desires the members so to live that this truth, this Gospel, may be preached in all the world as a witness and then the end will come.

With all my soul I bless you my fellow workers and pray that his inspiration will abide in your hearts and that peace and harmony and love may abide in your homes, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Tomorrow morning from 9:00 to 9:30 will be the broadcast; please be in your seats at 8:30.

Monday night the Book of Mormon oratorio by Leroy B. Robertson will be given in this Tabernacle by the Utah Symphony Orchestra and Combined Choruses of the University of Utah.

The Chorus, Male Chorus of the Tabernacle Choir will now sing "The Pilgrim's Chorus," under the direction of J. Spencer Cornwall, after which Elder Evon W. Huntsman, formerly President of the Tongan Mission, will offer the benediction.

---

Singing by Men's Chorus of the Tabernacle Choir, "The Pilgrim's Chorus."

The benediction was pronounced by Elder Evon W. Huntsman, former President of the Tongan Mission.

SECOND DAY MORNING MEETING

Sunday morning, April 5.

The regular Sunday morning Choir and Organ broadcast was presented at 9:00 a.m., in the Tabernacle before the great Conference assembly. The regular session of the Conference convened at 10 o'clock a.m.

Long before the hour arrived for the presentation of the Choir and Organ broadcast the Tabernacle was crowded to capacity by members of the Church who had come from all parts of the Stakes and Wards and some of the missions. The Assembly Hall to the south of the Tabernacle was filled with people, as was also the Barratt Hall (60 North Main Street), where those assembled could see and hear the proceedings by means of television, and in addition, thousands of others assembled on the Tabernacle grounds and listened by means of amplifiers.

CHOIR AND ORGAN BROADCAST

The following broadcast, written and announced by Richard L. Evans, and originating with Station KSL, Salt Lake City, was presented from 9:00 to 9:30 a.m., through the courtesy and facilities of the Columbia Broadcasting System's network, throughout the United States. The broadcast was as follows:

(The organ played "As the Dew," and on signal the Choir and Organ broke into the hymn, "Gently Raise," singing the words to the end of the second line, and humming to end of verse for announcer's background.)

Announcer: Once more we welcome you within these walls with music and the spoken word from the Crossroads of the West.

The CBS Radio Network and its affiliated stations bring you at this hour another presentation from Temple Square in Salt Lake City, with J. Spencer Cornwall conducting the Tabernacle Choir, Frank W. Asper, Tabernacle organist, and the spoken word by Richard Evans.

For the opening music of this Easter hour, we turn to the Eight Favorite Anthems of Evan Stephens: "Christ is risen from the dead . . . Risen truly as He said."

(The Choir sang: "An Easter Song"—Stephens)

Announcer: An "Evensong" by Robert Schumann is Frank Asper's first organ offering from Temple Square today.

(Organ number: "Evensong"—Schumann)

Announcer: The women's chorus of the Choir recalls an Easter Carol by Mary E. Caldwell, with the words of

Robert W. McClellan: "That Blessed Easter Morn."

(The Women's Chorus sang: "That Blessed Easter Morn"—Caldwell)

Announcer: We turn next to an impression of the mood and music of the fountain's falling waters as Frank Asper presents Percy Fletcher's "Fountain Reverie."

(Organ selection: "Fountain Reverie"—Fletcher)

Announcer: The Tabernacle Choir now sings three songs of the Easter season—one a Markworth arrangement of a 19th century Welsh tune by Robert Williams; another from the same writer as arranged by C. Albert Scholin; and the first of the three being Paul Christiansen's setting for these words from St. John: "Mary Magdalene came and told the disciples that she had seen the Lord, and that he had spoken these things unto her. Then the same day at evening, being the first day of the week, when the doors were shut where the disciples were assembled . . . came Jesus and stood in the midst, and saith unto them, Peace be unto you." (John 20:18-19.)

(The Choir sang: "Easter Morning"—Christiansen)

(Choir selection: "Christ, the Lord, Is Risen Today"—Markworth)

(Choir selection: "Jesus Christ Is Risen Today"—William-Scholin)

THE SPOKEN WORD

The longer we live the more aware we are of the shortness of this life we live, and the more aware we are of a sense of loss and of loneliness as those whom we have lived among and loved leave us one by one. And ever in the background we are aware of the questions that confront all men: Whence? and Why? and Whither? What lies beyond? Shall we know them as we knew them here? The event to which this day is dedicated is the assurance that we shall—the reality of the resurrection of Jesus the Christ, and, through Him, of all others also. We read of it in scripture. We sing of it in song. We speak of it in sermon. We hold to it with full faith, but not perhaps without an ardent, living hope that we shall see it more certainly; or not, in a sense, without wishing that we had seen with our eyes and touched with our hands as did Thomas. But when all the evidence is before us it doesn't test our faith too far. True, we don't know how it will be brought about. There are unanswered questions. There are difficulties that may seem insurmountable. But how many unanswered questions are there concerning other things that are all around us? How can we account for the fact that we are, that we feel, that we love, that we live? How can we account for unnumbered billions of stars that are kept in their course? for the constancy of the sun and of the seasons? for the awesome miracle of a baby's birth? for the inborn instinct of animals? If we had never seen spring return would it not require a far-reaching of faith to imagine that it might be so? If we had never seen trees that seemed dead one day, break forth into full flower—if we had never seen these before our eyes, these things which we have come to call commonplace—to accept them could require a far reach of our faith. With ten times ten thousand questions that we cannot answer even about the things we can touch and feel and see, it is but a little further reach of faith to accept the reality of the resurrection and the assurance of everlasting life, and to trust Him who gave us life, to provide the way for us to see and know and live again with those we love—always and forever.

Sunday, April 5

Second Day

(Organ number: "Guide Me to Thee"—Huish)

Announcer: With Frank Asper at the organ we have heard a hymn by O. P. Huish: "Guide Me to Thee."

And now the choir recalls a "Galilean Easter Carol" by R. Deane Shure.

(The Choir sang: "Galilean Easter Carol"—Shure)

Announcer: And now, after the many testimonies which have been given of him, this is the testimony last of all which we give of him: That he lives!—"Christ the Lord Is Risen Today."

(The Choir sang: "Christ, the Lord, Is Risen Today"—Carey)

Announcer: Once more we leave you within the shadows of the everlasting hills. May peace be with you, this day—and always.

This concludes the twelve hundred and thirty-third presentation, continuing the 24th year of this traditional broadcast from the Mormon Tabernacle on Temple Square, brought to you by CBS radio, and originating with Radio Station KSL in Salt Lake City.

J. Spencer Cornwall conducted the Tabernacle Choir with its three hundred seventy-five singing voices. Frank W. Asper was at the organ. The spoken word by Richard Evans.

In another seven days, at this same hour, music and the spoken word will be heard once more from the Crossroads of the West.

SUNDAY MORNING GENERAL CONFERENCE SESSION

The regular Conference session commenced promptly at 10 o'clock a.m., with President McKay presiding and conducting the services.

The Tabernacle Choir, under the leadership of J. Spencer Cornwall furnished the choral singing for this session.

President David O. McKay:

"Ye seek Jesus of Nazareth, which was crucified: he is risen; he is not here: behold the place where they laid him." So spoke Mark the Evangelist regarding the greatest event in the history of mankind. For the Resurrection of our Lord broke the bonds of death and assured us of immortality and eternal life.

Thousands are assembled this morning in the Tabernacle, the Assembly Hall, Barratt Hall, on the walks and lawns of the Tabernacle Grounds, to worship our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ.

The third session of the General Conference was not broadcast. It was a General Priesthood Meeting held last evening in the Tabernacle, with overflow meetings in the Assembly Hall and Barratt Hall, and also a special meeting in the Brigham Young University Field House, where 800 people assembled. And for your interest as well, we should like to say, that as nearly as the ushers could count, there were assembled in the Priesthood meeting last evening, in the Tabernacle, the Assembly Hall and Barratt Hall, 16,376, plus 840 in the Field House in Provo, making a total of 17,212 members of the priesthood. It was a thrill and an inspiration to be in their presence.

The speakers were Elder Samuel E. Brighurst, recently president of the Swiss-Austrian Mission, Elder George A. Christensen, recently president of the Australian Mission, Elder Hilton A. Robertson, recently president of the Chinese Mission, (and still carrying that responsibility and that position)—Elder Harold B. Lee and President J. Reuben Clark; President McKay made a few remarks at the close. The Men's Chorus of the Tabernacle Choir furnished the music. This then is the fourth session of the 123rd Annual Conference of the Church. We are convened in the Tabernacle on Temple Square in Salt Lake City.

President Stephen L. Richards and Elder Bowen are listening in over the radio.

These services will be broadcast in the Assembly Hall and in Barratt Hall over a loud speaking system and by television. The proceedings of this session will also be broadcast over Station KSL and over the stations named in the first session of the Conference. In addition to these, we are pleased to announce this morning that by special arrangements the following stations are broadcasting the proceedings of today's sessions: KBLA of North Hollywood, KPMO at Pomona, KCSB at San Bernardino, KNOB at Long Beach, KWCA at Barstow—all these in California; KLAS at Las Vegas, Nevada; and KULA at Honolulu, Hawaii. We express appreciation to these stations for their cooperation and those named this morning and those given to you the first session of the Conference.

The Conference will also be televised over KSL television station, channel five.

This morning at 8:30 o'clock, Elder John Longden, Assistant to the Twelve, was a speaker over NBC's "Faith in Action" series. His address heard in this area over KDYL was entitled, "Christ the Lord is Risen."

The Choir singing for this morning's session of the conference, will be by the Tabernacle Choir, J. Spencer Cornwall conducting, and Frank W. Asper at the organ. We shall begin the services by the Choir and Congregation singing, "Come, Come Ye Saints," conducted by Richard P. Condie. The opening prayer will be offered by Elder Fauntleroy Hunsaker, President of the East Los Angeles Stake.

---

The Choir and congregation joined in singing the hymn, "Come, Come, Ye Saints."

The opening prayer was offered by President Fauntleroy Hunsaker of the East Los Angeles Stake.

President David O. McKay:

The Tabernacle Choir will now sing, "Our Father Which Art in Heaven, Hallowed Be Thy Name," dedicated to the Tabernacle Choir by the composer, whose name is McGinsey.

The Choir will now sing. Following the Choir we shall hear from President J. Reuben Clark of the First Presidency.

---

The Tabernacle Choir sang a number, "Our Father Which Art In Heaven, Hallowed Be Thy Name."

President David O. McKay:

As announced, our first speaker this morning will be President J. Reuben Clark, Jr. of the First Presidency. He will be followed by Elder Clifford E. Young, Assistant to the Twelve. President Clark.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

Second Counselor in the First Presidency

MY BRETHREN AND SISTERS: To my own prayer I humbly ask you to add yours, to strengthen me in my weakness, and to so order it that what I shall say in the few minutes I stand before you may be helpful and up-building to all of us.

Today is the day in which we commemorate the resurrection of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ. Always on this day, I like to run over in my mind the events that happened on that morning of the resurrection. We cannot be too certain of the order, but it could have been, and probably was, as I shall attempt to narrate.

Before it was light, while it was still dark, Mary Magdalene, the great lover, went to the tomb of Jesus and found the stone rolled back. Looking in, she perceived the body was not there. She hastened back to Peter and John and told them. They, running, John out-running Peter, reached the tomb. John looked in but did not enter. Courageous Peter, coming up, strode in and saw the burial clothes lying about. They then apparently returned to their quarters.

MARY FOLLOWED

It seems that Mary followed along after Peter and John, and, seeing a figure, she approached the figure, thinking it was the gardener, and asked where they had lain her Lord. The figure spoke, "Mary." She recognized him and would have embraced him, but he said, "Touch me not; for I am not yet ascended to my Father: but go to my brethren, and say unto them, I ascend unto my Father, and your Father; and to my God, and your God." (John 20:17.)

Shortly afterwards, the women from Galilee, carrying spices with them to prepare the body of Jesus for its final burial, came up. They looked in and the angels inside the tomb said, "Ye seek Jesus of Nazareth, which was crucified." (Mark 16:6.) "... Why seek ye the living among the dead? He is not here, but is risen." (Luke 24:5-6.) I am sure that at this moment, if not before, the dense darkness that had enshrouded this great Western Hemisphere broke, the clouds rolled back, the light came, for the life and the light of the world had left the tomb.

The angels told the women to go and notify the disciples. They did, but the disciples thought the words were idle tales and believed not.

APPEARS TO PETER

Later in the day, two of the disciples were on their way to Emmaus. The Lord drew near and walked with them. They did not know him. He inquired as to their sadness as they walked. They asked if he did not know what had happened in Jerusalem in these days. He feigned an ignorance of what they were thinking. They recounted the arrest, the trial, the crucifixion, and the empty tomb. Declaring to them, "O fools, and slow of heart to believe," (Ibid., 25.) he explained to them all the prophets that had prophesied concerning this great event. They entered the village and sat at meat; he broke bread and blessed it. Then they recognized him as he vanished from their sight.

During the same day he appeared to Simon Peter. In the evening, of the same day, the ten disciples (Thomas absent) had assembled together in a room. The doors and windows were shut, but suddenly Christ stood in their midst. They were affrighted. He disclosed himself to them, and ate with them.

A week later, the disciples were again assembled together, Thomas this time being there. He had said he would not believe unless he could touch the body of the Savior. Christ came again to them, though the doors were shut, and again instructed them.

Thereafter, at the sea of Tiberias, he appeared to several of the disciples, those who had gone fishing, thinking their work was over. Then took place that great conference, where he asked Peter if Peter loved him, and Peter saying "Yes," Jesus said, "Feed my sheep." (John 21:17.)

He appeared to James, apparently separately, then to a great multitude, then again to the disciples at the time of the ascension. He continued to walk with them at times over a period of forty days, and then came the ascension.

Thus his resurrection was abundantly verified.

The Jews and the pagans of the time seem to have had little difficulty with the idea of a Messiahship. The pagan theology was filled with pseudo-gods and goddesses who were merely glorified human beings. They could glimpse a Messiahship. But they seemed to have had no concept of the resurrection.

APOSTASY BEGAN

Early in the Christian Church there began to arise heresies regarding the Christ. These heresies were aided by the attempt of the early Christians to harmonize their beliefs with the pagan beliefs, by adopting pagan beliefs. But, finally, in the main, these basic anti-Christ heresies disappeared, and Jesus was recognized as the Christ.

Then the apostasy began. The Church began to transgress the laws, to change the ordinances, and to break the everlasting covenant. The simple principles of Christ's gospel were lost or changed. That was the first great apostasy.

But as time went on, some of the ancient heresies reappeared, and this re-appearance has been increasing in volume. The heresies began to question whether Jesus was the Christ, and that question, of course, really questions the Messiahship. Today one great body of the Christian world has abandoned Christ as the Messiah, the Atoning Sacrifice, the Redeemer of the world; they regard him now only as a great teacher and philosopher.

Another great section of the present

Christian world has more or less taken away from the Savior a great part of that spiritual personality which he gave himself, and which his early Apostles gave, and which we give him. They are dividing their worship between him and his mother.

We know, and it is our responsibility to carry forward what we do know, that Jesus is the Christ, that he is the Son of God, that he was in truth an atoning sacrifice for the fall, that through him and by him all mortals, whoever they are, will be resurrected, that through his gospel and by it, all may be saved, not only, but exalted in the kingdom of God.

It seems that we are almost alone in clinging to the Christ as he described himself and declared himself. This must be because we are the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Ours is the responsibility to see to it that no act or thought or teaching of ours shall in any way question the divinity of Jesus, nor in any way question that he was the Son of God, nor in any way question the atoning sacrifice which he made for us. If we do, we shall become guilty of that great offense where we shall crucify to ourselves the Son of God afresh, for which I am sure we shall hardly gain forgiveness.

Brethren and sisters, cling to the Savior. Accept him as he, himself, described himself: "I am the light and the life of the world." (Ibid., 8:12.) Salvation comes only through him, and as Peter said to his accusers: "... there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved." (Acts 4:12.)

May the Lord help us to keep this testimony in our hearts and increase it; may he give us the courage proudly to proclaim it; may our influence in the world be extended until we shall be able to bring the righteous everywhere to the knowledge which we possess, that they, along with us, if we shall hold our course, shall be saved and exalted in the celestial kingdom, I humbly pray in the name of Jesus. Amen.

Sunday, April 5

Second Day

President David O. McKay:

We shall now hear from Elder Clifford E. Young, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve. Brother Young will be followed by President Oscar A. Kirkham, of the First Council of Seventy.

ELDER CLIFFORD E. YOUNGAssistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles*

MY BRETHREN AND SISTERS, may I express to you my deep gratitude for the privilege of attending this conference.

The opening, impressive address of President Clark to which we have just listened has stimulated our faith and given us renewed hope, and I therefore trust that I shall say nothing to detract from it, for I have in my heart on this occasion to say only that which will add to the spirit of this glorious day.

There are one or two things that come to my mind as I contemplate the mission of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ: things that apply to us in our daily lives. You will remember that as the Savior hung on the cross, his suffering was such that he sweat great drops of blood, yet he offered that memorable prayer, "Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do." (Luke 23:34.)

A few days after the Savior had ascended into heaven, Peter and John went to the temple to pray. It was the ninth hour of the day, and as they entered the temple, they noticed a beggar, one who was brought to the temple everyday to ask for alms. He had been afflicted from his birth, and was unable to walk. Peter seeing him said, ... Silver and gold have I none; but such as I have give I thee: In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, rise up and walk.

And he took him by the right hand, and lifted him up; and immediately his feet and ankle bones received strength.

And he leaping up stood, and walked, and entered with them into the temple, walking, and leaping, and praising God. (Acts 3:6-8.)

This incident created quite a sensation because later on multitudes followed Peter and John seeking to know more of the power by which this great miracle had been performed. And then Peter, recognizing that some of the very throng were those who had participated in the crucifixion said to them:

"And now, brethren, I wot that through ignorance ye did it, as did also your rulers." (Ibid., 3:17.) We read that there were rulers with the multitude at the crucifixion. "I know that through your ignorance ye did it," is what Peter said to them; thus in accord with what the Savior had said, "Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do." (Luke 23:34.) Then Peter went on to say:

Repent ye therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out, when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord;

And he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you:

Whom the heaven must receive until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began. (Acts 3:19-21.)

This is an impressive lesson. It is a lesson to you and me, who have been made partakers of the truth. Much is expected of us, because we know. Jesus made it clear. Peter made it clear that in cases of ignorance, the Lord would be merciful, and kind, and just, but with those who know and who have the responsibility, it is a different matter. It is knowledge that brings responsibility.

I remember one occasion when President Grant attended one of our Alpine Stake meetings where at that time I was presiding. We called all the priesthood together and had invited members of the Church who had been indifferent to their responsibilities, and during that meeting President Grant made a characteristic talk on the Word of Wisdom. At the close of the meeting, one of the brethren remarked that he thought President Grant was rather harsh in his appeal for Latter-day Saints to keep the Word of Wisdom. I told Brother Grant of the comment, and he replied, "I was not talking to the outsiders, I was talking to you, to Latter-day Saints who know better." I repeat, it is knowledge that brings accountability.

And so we have this lesson. The Lord is merciful and just and kind because he recognizes that there is a difference in degree, that his children are not all reared under the same environment. Some come from good homes, from Latter-day Saint homes, where they have been taught the truth and where they know, or should know, the truth. Others have come from broken homes, where there is some question in their minds as to the divinity of this work and where there is a lack of understanding of the truth and of its great power. To them the Lord is merciful and kind. That is illustrated beautifully in the story of Jonah. You will remember that the Lord had told Jonah to warn Nineveh, and he had failed in his responsibility. He thought he knew better than the Lord, and finally, after a serious experience on the sea, and being cast up on the shore by a great fish, the Lord appeared to him again and said, "Now, Jonah, you do as I told you to do." And this time Jonah went to Nineveh and warned the people that if they did not turn from their evil ways they would be destroyed. He did not understand that there was an opportunity to repent. After preaching to the people he went over on the side of a hill and sat under a gourd which the Lord had caused to grow up to protect him from the sun. By and by the gourd wilted, and as Jonah waited and the city was not destroyed, he sulked and felt sorry for himself and the gourd. Then the Lord came to him again and said,

... Thou hast had pity on the gourd, for the which thou hast not laboured, neither madest it grow; which came up in a night, and perished in a night:

And should not I spare Nineveh, that great city, wherein are more than sixscore thousand persons that cannot discern between their right hand and their left hand. (Jonah 4:10-11.)

And so I say, my brothers and sisters, the Lord knows and understands the hearts of the children of men. He knows our intent, our desires, and he also knows what is expected of us. And we should know what is expected of ourselves. In harmony with this thought, I would like to read a statement that was made by Elder Albert E. Bowen from this pulpit about two years ago. He said, "The measure of a man's achievements lies not altogether in where he gets to. You have to have regard for the place from which he started; and the degree of his advancement, though he has not reached so high a place as one of his fellows, may be greater because of the handicap of the position from which he set out."

We do not all start from the same source.

Another thought in connection with this seems to me to be fundamental to repentance. The Lord has said that it is his glory and his work to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of his children. We know from our earthly experience how our hearts are drawn toward our children, and the great love and compassion we have for them even in their weaknesses. How great must be the compassion and love of our Heavenly Father for us, his children! He does not condone sin, but he exercises mercy for his children. He knows their weaknesses, and because of this understanding he exercises justice and mercy in connection with the operation of his divine law.

There is another matter to which I would like to call attention. I can only touch on it briefly. It is a matter, however, that emphasizes the need on our part of an understanding heart toward our children and also impresses us with this fundamental doctrine of the Church of eternal life, of living again. We have a glorious privilege given to us through the restoration of the Holy Priesthood by which we are permitted to go to the temples of the Lord and we may officiate in holy ordinances where parents may be sealed with their children for time and all eternity. Have you ever stopped to think what this connotes, my brethren and sisters? It is eternal life. The very gift that was made possible on that first Easter morning through Jesus Christ, that we may live again, that we shall not only live, but that we shall also have those whom we love who are dearer to us than life itself. Think what that means. That is another of the blessings that have been vouchsafed to us through the ministry of Jesus Christ.

Sunday, April 5

Second Day

In this connection we as parents have an obligation to our children to help them to prepare for these blessings. I sometimes think we are a little lax in not better preparing our children for the responsibilities of temple marriages. I think bishops could do much in that field, in helping our young people to prepare for this great responsibility so that they will have understanding hearts and will appreciate the great blessings of going to the house of the Lord and making holy covenants that will preserve them and their families forever. If all the young people of the Church could be impressed with the importance of temple marriage, with all the sacredness that goes with it, the keeping of covenants, the preservation of love and virtue in every home, it would indeed be one of the greatest factors in banishing hatreds, in eliminating broken homes and all the sorrows incident thereto. It would ultimately bring peace to the world. This is another of the great blessings that come to you and me through the ministry of Jesus Christ.

Now one closing thought—my grandmother on my mother's side was a Quaker. She joined the Church in Westchester, Pennsylvania and with her family immigrated to Nauvoo. After the martyrdom of the Prophet she was among those who moved out to Winter Quarters and then came west in 1847. I like to think of her as one of those of the "Last Wagon" that President Clark so beautifully speaks of in his book. Before her death she lived with my mother, and I remember on one occasion as we sat around the old fireplace, Grandmother seemed to be conscious of the fact that she would not be here very long. She had a strong testimony and a very deeply rooted faith. She had no fear of death. She seemed to realize fully that it was merely the passing from this life to the other side. After discussing some of the blessings of the gospel and expressing her gratitude that she and her family had been made partakers of its blessings, she remarked to my mother in her typical Quaker style, "Tbbie, when I am gone, thee must not come to the cemetery. I will not be there." I could not quite understand it then, but I do now. Reference has already been made to the statement of the angel to the women at the tomb of the Savior, "... Why seek ye the living among the dead?" (Luke 24:5.) And I repeat, why seek ye the living among the dead? We will not be there. That's the message of hope we are speaking of and thinking of today. Our spirits are eternal. They do not die. It is the cloak that covers our spirits that we lay aside. I know, brothers and sisters, that we do not understand the processes, but that does not change the eternal truth.

Every day we learn of great discoveries that are being made—the work of the astronomers, the galaxies that are being discovered—millions of them, beyond number. This scientific age is an age of miracles, and when we contemplate them, we cannot help thinking how presumptuous of us to question the miracle of being able to lay this body away, the cloak of our spirit, but that our spirits may continue to live. I repeat again, we will not be there because our spirits are immortal! Some day we will come back just as the Savior came back; and our bodies will be healed through the great natural processes; our spirits will again enter them; and we will become living souls. That does not mean we will live again; we have lived all the time, just as the Savior while his body was in the tomb, was preaching to those spirits in prison.

We will have responsibilities. But let us not forget that at the cemetery we are not there. I do not want to detract from the sacredness that you feel in your heart as you go to the resting place of those whom you love, not that at all. But, brothers and sisters, there is something far and beyond it all. As Jesus was the Christ, the Redeemer of the world, and lived again, so we live again eternal lives, and we will continue to live.

May God help us to appreciate this and sanctify to our good the lessons learned from this great Easter day, I pray in the name of Jesus. Amen.

ELDER OSCAR A. KIRKHAM

Of the First Council of the Seventy

I HUMBLY pray that the Lord will bless me this Easter morning. This is truly a great day when we contemplate what is happening across the earth. In ten thousand churches, on a thousand hilltops, everywhere, men and women are declaring their faith in the divine mission of Jesus Christ. We of the Latter-day Saint Church join our voices happily with the multitudes that declare their faith in God.

One of the most striking expressions of the Savior is, "He went about doing good." With my life's work with youth, I have constantly been reminded that I must be practical. Youth lives in action, in doing. "He went about doing good."

I read also these words from Psalm 27:11: "Teach me thy way, O Lord, and lead me in a plain path." Recently in a small village in Nevada, I was called to dedicate a small, lovely chapel. The story was told by the bishop of how they had a great struggle to raise the money and do their part. He said, "The time came when we had to get the last five thousand dollars to do our part." He went before the people and literally, not figuratively, but literally took off his coat, and said, "I will not put on my coat again, with the Lord's help, until we have raised our part." And he went forward, and his family was with him. And then I saw the joy of the accomplishment. My heart was thrilled. People came from distant states. They rode down the valley from everywhere to be with their friends and neighbors, and when it was all over, a delightful thing happened. Although an appointment called me to hurry away to a neighboring city, as we looked back from the car window, we saw the crowd was still there, shaking hands with neighbors and friends, enjoying the loveliness of the occasion and the spirit of their accomplishment.

May we also "take off our coats," to do our part in this hour of challenge and opportunity. May I suggest one or two simple things, plain things, as David said in the Psalms, which are also the teachings of the Latter-day Saint Church?

Help someone in need: Rushing from one city to another to escape bombing not long ago, people by the thousands were trying to find a way to safety, in one of the cities of China. All at once in the rush the crowd crossing the bridge stopped, for someone was holding up the traffic. It was a boy. He could not cross the bridge. He heard the cry of a child that had fallen. Quickly he went to help—to help someone in need. When the child was made safe, he again hurried on his way.

Did you read the other day that on Baldy Hill fifteen American soldiers were commissioned to go and bring out a number of boys that had been left, unfortunately not able to get away under the fire? They worked and worked; they heard of another buried somewhere out in the debris. They went again very early in the morning before it was light. As they came to a nob of the hill, they heard a voice crying, "Water, water." They quickly dug. They rescued a young man from death and by the grace of God carried him safely down the hill where he received further help. There are many everywhere calling, "Water, water."

Sunday, April 5

Second Day

Stand for the truth and the right with all good men: In this very tabernacle I heard one evening an appeal made by the queen of Holland. She told of the sorrow of her people, many of them giving their lives, but she ended that beautiful appeal of deep sincerity with these words, "Let us all do our best, and leave the rest to God."

President David O. McKay, addressing the graduating class at the University of Utah, said:

Young men and young women: The future awaits you! It's yours! If you would end war and give peace to the world, you have campaigns to organize and conquests to achieve. These will be campaigns planned for the establishment of justice. These are the conquests of the soul: whether it is better to walk along the easy road to selfishness and indulgence than to strive through self-mastery and service in the realm of spirituality, you must decide.

Have courage for prayer. That must be part of the high resolve of this conference. Courage for the right! So much is happening in public places, so many are brought into contact where public opinion is a power. I am proud, and you are proud, when you heard the President of the United States before he gave his inaugural address say, "I want to say a little prayer."

I went one day down to the station with a group of missionaries to say good-bye. A father, my neighbor, was with me. There was a group about us. The stationmaster came out and said, "It will be about twenty minutes before the train leaves. Don't go far away." Then I saw my neighbor walk through the crowd quickly, his son on his arm, through the station, and they were gone for a time. Then I saw him return just before the train pulled out. He kissed the boy good-bye, and the boy was off. I walked over to my friend and said: "I want to ask you a personal question. I have a thought that I want to ask you about your boy." I said, "Where did you go when you took your boy? Now, pardon me, if this is too private, you do not need to answer, but I have an idea." He said, "Oh, I think you have the right idea. I took my boy home. We went to the bedroom alone. I said, 'Son, I am so proud today,' and I finally mustered up courage to do what I should have done probably many times before. 'Sit on the edge of the bed, I want to bless you. I am proud of you. Mother is proud of you. This is a great day.' And I blessed my son."

One other closing story: I heard it in the temple from one of the mission presidents. The children of neighbors and friends often come with their playmates to the auxiliary organizations of the Latter-day Saint Church. One little girl had caught the message on several occasions about family prayer. When she came home one day, she said to her parents, "Have I got any rights in this family?" The father answered, "Why, certainly you have, dear." "Well, I want family prayer." "Well, my dear, you shall have family prayer." But it went on, and when the occasion came again, the child said, "Have I got any rights in this family?" There was a longer pause, more reflection, then, "Yes, dear." And family prayer was said.

May God bless us. May we help someone in need. May we stand for the truth and right. May we have courage for prayer. "Teach me in thy way, O Lord, and lead me in a plain path." (Psalms 27:11.) May we as he did ever go about doing good, I pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Elder LeGrand Richards of the Council of the Twelve will now speak to us, and he will be followed by Elder Bruce McConkie.

ELDER LEGRAND RICHARDS

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

AT THE opening session of this great conference yesterday, President David O. McKay gave us two great objectives: the one, to put our homes in order, and the second, to proclaim the divine mission of the Redeemer of the world. We have listened to some beautiful talks on those subjects, and particularly on the mission of the Redeemer of the world since that opening address, especially appropriate in view of the fact that today is Easter, when all the Christian world is celebrating that event.

I should like to tell you an experience I had while laboring as a missionary in New Bedford, Massachusetts, some years ago. We were approaching the Easter Sunday, and I had a discussion with a minister of the gospel about the mission of the Redeemer of the world. I had him explain to me the God in whom he believed. Naturally, in keeping with the ordinary orthodox Christian view, he explained how God the Father, and God the Son and God the Holy Ghost were one God, and then he went on to indicate their works and said, in substance, that they were so large that they filled the whole universe, and so small that they could dwell in our hearts; that they were the life of the plants and flowers and everything around us. And then I interjected this question, "What are we celebrating this week?" And he said, "The Easter." I said, "What does that really mean?" "Well," he said, "it's the resurrection of Christ." I said, "Just what do you mean by the resurrection of Christ?" Then I led him to explain. I said, "You mean that the stone was actually rolled away and that when the women came to the tomb that the angels proclaimed that he was not there, that he was arisen, that the very body that was taken down from the cross and laid in that tomb had arisen?" And he admitted that that was true.

And I said that in that body he appeared to his disciples and when doubting Thomas questioned the fact that he was actually the Redeemer whom they had known, he asked Thomas to put his hand in the wound in Jesus' side and feel the prints in his hands, and see that "I am the same," for, said he, "A spirit hath not flesh and bones, as ye see me have." (See Luke 24:39.) And to indicate further the fact that he had that same body that was laid away in the tomb, he took fish and honeycomb and ate with them. I said, "Now that was the same body that he laid away in the tomb, wasn't it?" And he agreed that it was.

And then I led him on through the experience of the Savior in ministering among his disciples for forty days until in the presence of five hundred of the brethren he was carried away in the clouds of heaven, and two men dressed in white apparel stood and said, as the brethren gazed into heaven to watch him ascend, "... Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? this same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." (Acts 1:11.) And he agreed that that actually happened.

And then I said, "My friend, where is the body that Jesus took out of the tomb, if he and the Father are one, and an essence everywhere present in the world? Would you say that Jesus died a second death and laid his body down again?" And he thought for a few minutes. He said, "I am afraid I can't answer that. I have never thought of it before in that way."

Sunday, April 5

Second Day

Now, brothers and sisters, I thank God that we have a recommitment to this earth in our day and time that he does have his body, that he does actually exist as the Redeemer of the world, that he did break the bands of death, that the grave might have no victory in that it delivered up his body, as it will do for all of us, of which we have heard such wonderful testimonies here in this conference.

Sometime ago, Brother Clifford Young gave a Church of the Air address. He told me following that of some of the letters he had received commenting on his address. And one was from a minister of the gospel, in which he said something like this: "It pleases me greatly to know that the Mormons believe in the Christ." I have thought a great deal about that statement since, and I have thought of the feeling the world has toward our people. I have compared it to the time when Paul stood at Rome to be judged, and they said unto him, "... we desire to hear of thee what thou thinkest: for as concerning this sect, we know that every where it is spoken against." (Acts 28:22.) Why did they speak against it? Was it not the same when Paul stood there bound in chains, when he delivered that marvelous testimony before Agrippa and Festus, when Agrippa said, "Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian." (Ibid., 26:28.) And Festus said, "... thou art beside thyself; much learning doth make thee mad." (Ibid., 26:24.) To which Paul replied, "I am not mad, most noble Festus; but speak forth the words of truth and soberness." (Ibid., 26:25.) And then he said: "I would to God, that not only thou, but also all that hear me this day, were both almost, and altogether such as I am, except these bonds." (Ibid., 26:29.) Think of Saul just shortly before that, when they laid at his feet the cloaks of those who stoned and put to death Stephen, the prophet of God. And you remember how Stephen gazed into heaven and saw Jesus sitting on the right hand of his Father. And then Saul went from that experience into Damascus with an order to persecute the Christians.

That is just like the world. They don't understand, and so they malign us, and they tell all manner of things that are not true, and they do not have the right conception, just like Paul of old. But when the testimony had come to Paul, he was a different man. The Church hadn't changed; Christ hadn't changed; his truth was the same; but Saul of Tarsus had changed. He was now Paul, the Apostle of the Lord Jesus Christ.

A short time ago I sent one of our Church books to a distant relative on my mother's side, back in Massachusetts. My cousin, Merlin Steed, had been there and had visited him. He wrote Merlin a letter and said he had spent three weeks reading the book. He said, "It is a great eye opener to me. It is the first book I have ever read in favor of the Mormons." And then he added this statement, "I doubt if you have any idea of the fantastic yarns that are current in New England concerning the Mormon Church. Some of them are so wild that I doubt if the persons who tell them really believe what they are saying themselves."

That is what we have to meet in the world. If the Lord would but take that prejudice out of their hearts! I ask this question: Why did they persecute the saints of old? Why did they put to death the Apostles of the Lord Jesus Christ? Why did they crucify our Lord? Only because of the darkness that covered their minds and the efforts of the evil one to destroy the work of God in the earth, and for that same reason, they misunderstand the motives of this great Church today.

I had an experience in Oregon after my first mission. I had spent some time with a prominent businessman. He didn't know I was a Mormon, and he painted the Mormons and the Mormon missionaries so black it almost made my blood run cold. When he was through, I said, "My friend, now don't you feel embarrassed, because," I said, "you are sitting right here at the side of a Mormon missionary." He went red in the face, and I said, "I forgive you," because I had qualified him before. I said, "Have you ever read a Mormon book?" He said, "No." I said, "Have you ever met a Mormon?" And he said, "No." I said, "I forgive you because you are not supposed to know any better. Where did you get your information from?" "Oh," he said, "you hear it on the streets, and you read it in the magazines and in the newspapers; everybody knows what the Mormons are."

Now, brethren and sisters, if there is any Church in this world that really believes that Jesus is the Christ, surely it is the Latter-day Saints. No Church has ever exalted him as has this Church. He is the head of the Church, literally, as the man is the head of the woman; the Church bears his name; and there was no other Church in the world that bore his name when he committed it to this Church and commanded that the Church should be named after him. The whole premise of Mormonism is based upon the fact that the Father and the Son literally appeared to the Prophet Joseph Smith. They couldn't have done that if they were only an essence, everywhere present in the world. With that glorified body that Jesus took out of the tomb, he appeared to Joseph Smith, and if that thing did not actually transpire, we have no right to be assembled here in a conference claiming to be the Church of Jesus Christ. And if it did actually transpire, then all the people of this world will ultimately have to accept of the work that he established through the Prophet that he raised up in this dispensation.

We have had testimony borne here today of how he appeared to the Prophet Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon, and I would like to leave this thought with you. It wasn't only what Jesus taught. You remember that he said to those of old, "If ye believe not my words, believe then my works." Here are the works of the Lord Jesus Christ, the establishment of his great Church.

As I have sat here in this conference, I have thought of the words of Nephi of old who saw our day and the coming forth of the Book of Mormon and the establishment of the kingdom of God upon the earth, and he said he saw the Saints of God scattered upon the face of the whole earth and the power of God resting upon them in great glory. And I testify to you that the power of God is with this Church in great glory today.

I would like to add another thought. Jesus said, "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father, which is in heaven." (Matt 7:21.) In the world today, in the Christian world, there are too many just saying, "Lord, Lord," and they are not doing the will of our Father. Then I remind you that when Jesus stood on the Mount of Olives overlooking Jerusalem and recalled how they had rejected him, he cried out, as it were, in the anguish of his soul,

O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them which are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not! (Ibid., 23:37.)

And then he said,

Behold, your house is left unto you desolate.

For I say unto you, Ye shall not see me henceforth, till ye shall say, Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord. (Ibid., 23:38-39.)

Now I want to tell you that when God the Eternal Father, through his Son Jesus Christ, sends a prophet unto the inhabitants of the earth, when they reject the prophet of God, they reject Christ the Lord. That, he has declared through his own words.

I would like to call your attention to the promise in the Book of Mormon of the prophet that God declared he would send, the promise he made to

Sunday, April 5

Second Day

Joseph who was sold into Egypt that in the latter days out of his seed, he would raise up a choice seer and prophet like unto Moses. And then I remind you that in holy writ we read that there was no prophet in Israel like unto Moses because Moses talked with God face to face, as one man speaks with his friend. According to the scriptures, most of the prophets received the word of God by inspiration, but Moses talked with God, and God declared that in this day he would raise up a prophet like unto Moses. And then he said, "Unto him will I give power to bring forth my word," and there isn't time to recount, but you just think of what the Lord has brought forth through this modern Prophet. Then he said, "And not to the bringing forth my word only—but to the convincing them of my word which shall already have gone forth among them," and that is what the missionaries of this Church are doing all over the world. They are opening the Bible, the stick of Judah, and teaching the people things they have never heard of. I have told people in the mission field plenty of times that I would show them out of that book things they had never read in their lives, I didn't care how many times they had read it. And then the Lord declared that "the thing which the Lord shall bring forth" by this Prophet like unto Moses, "shall bring my people unto salvation."

Brothers and sisters, I leave my testimony with you that the resurrected Christ lives today, that he is directing his Church, that he has raised up a Prophet like unto Moses of old, and that if we will follow his teachings they will lead us unto salvation. May God help each one of us to do this I pray in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

---

The Choir and the congregation sang the hymn, "We Thank Thee, O God, For A Prophet."

President David O. McKay:

Elder LeGrand Richards, of the Council of the Twelve, has just concluded speaking. We shall now hear from Elder Bruce R. McConkie of the First Council of Seventy. He will be followed by Elder Milton R. Hunter.

ELDER BRUCE R. McCONKIE

Of the First Council of the Seventy

THE Holy Ghost

is the gift of God unto all those who diligently seek him, as well in times of old as in the time that he should manifest himself unto the children of men.

For he is the same yesterday, today, and forever; and the way is prepared for all men from the foundation of the world, if it so be that they repent and come unto him.

For he that diligently seeketh shall find; and the mysteries of God shall be unfolded unto them, by the power of the Holy Ghost, as well in these times as in times of old, and as well in times of old as in times to come; wherefore, the course of the Lord is one eternal round. (1 Ne. 10:17-19.)

The Father, a personage of tabernacle having flesh and bones, begat us as spirits in the beginning and ordained the plan whereby we might have power to grow in intelligence and knowledge and become like him.

The Son, his Firstborn in the spirit and Only Begotten in the flesh, under his direction, became the Creator and Redeemer of the earth and all things that are on it. From time to time he has revealed to men the plan of salvation, the gospel of Jesus Christ.

The Holy Ghost, a personage of spirit, is their minister, who has been given the power and assigned the functions of bearing record of the Father and the Son, of revealing the truths of salvation to men on earth, and in due course, of revealing to them, all truth.

Now, when Christ was here in his ministry, he told his Apostles that when he went away, he would send them another Comforter—that is a Comforter other than he, himself, for he was a comfort unto them—and that this Comforter would recall to their minds all things that he had told them, and would guide them into all truth. And when he said they would be guided into all truth, I believe that he meant it literally, and that in due course—not in time, but in eternity—they would obtain a fulness of truth, even as Christ himself, having gone from grace to grace, has received a fulness of truth, and a fulness of the glory of the Father.

But the thing that we are concerned with here in mortality, is to have the Holy Ghost reveal to us the things of God, the knowledge that God is our Father, that Jesus Christ is his Son, literally born of him in the flesh, and that the kingdom of God has been set up on earth again for the last time, that we, with the ancients, might be heirs of the fulness of the Father's kingdom.

We believe that it is life eternal to know God and Jesus Christ, whom he has sent, and that these glorious beings are manifest by the power of the Holy Ghost.

We believe that man is saved no faster than he gains knowledge, meaning knowledge of God and of his laws, as these things are revealed by the Holy Ghost.

We believe that no man can be saved in ignorance, meaning in ignorance of God and his laws, of Jesus Christ, and the truths of the gospel, as these things are made manifest by the power of the Holy Ghost.

You will recall it was Paul who said:

... Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him.

But God hath revealed them unto us by his Spirit: for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God.

For what man knoweth the things of a man, save the spirit of man which is in him? even so the things of God knoweth no man, but the Spirit of God. (I Cor. 2:9-11.)

Now the truths about God and salvation are not gained by the wisdom of men. They are not to be found by the research of the world. They are not found in the creeds of men, for the Lord has said that those creeds are an abomination in his sight. God stands revealed, or he remains forever unknown. Knowledge about God and about the divinity of Jesus Christ and the great atoning sacrifice which he worked out is had in the world today, by us, because God has spoken in this day, and has given these truths again, by the same direct revelation that he gave them in times of old.

The Holy Ghost has been given to righteous men from the beginning so they could certify of the truths about God and salvation. He has been the companion of those who have presided over the Church and the kingdom in every age, and by his power they have received revelation and given guidance to the people of the Church and to all people in the world. And when these brethren speak, these brethren, the First Presidency and the Twelve, who are prophets, and seers, and revelators, it is by the power of the Holy Ghost and what they say is the mind and the will of the Lord.

Last night when President McKay said, speaking of present-day conditions and what is needed in the world now, that the Lord desired that this gospel roll forth and be taken to every nation, kindred, tongue, and people, he was telling what the Lord wants done in this day. And so it is for what other counsel we have received. It should be, and is, as the mouth and the voice of the Lord to the Latter-day Saints.

The Holy Ghost is a revelator. He will reveal to any person who is honest and God-fearing and diligent in seeking truth, the fact that this is the Lord's work; that Joseph Smith is his prophet; that he is the greatest witness of Christ that there has been in the world since the day that Christ himself proclaimed that he was the Son of God. And there is not any reason or any excuse why anyone who is upright and honest should not have this knowledge. Every Latter-day Saint should have it.

Sunday, April 5

Second Day

You will recall that in ancient Israel, after Eldad and Medad had been called of God to a high calling, that his Spirit fell upon them and they prophesied in the camp. Then Joshua came before Moses and said, "... My lord Moses, forbid them." But Moses who himself had this gift of the Holy Ghost, this spirit of revelation and of prophecy—and it was by this power that he had led Israel through the Red Sea—said: "... Enviest thou for my sake? would God that all the Lord's people were prophets, and that the Lord would put his spirit upon them?" (Num. 11:28-29.)

There is no greater gift that a person can earn and enjoy for himself, in mortality, than the gift of the Holy Ghost, which gift is the right to the constant companionship of that member of the Godhead, and which gift is actually enjoyed only on condition of individual righteousness.

In the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

He to whom we have just listened is Elder Bruce R. McConkie, of the First Council of the Seventy. Elder Milton R. Hunter of the same Council will now speak to us.

ELDER MILTON R. HUNTER

Of the First Council of the Seventy

TODAY the hearts of millions of people throughout the world are turned in adoration to the Master of life and salvation. We, the members of the true Church of Jesus Christ, in this great conference assembled, bow our heads in reverence and from the depths of our hearts thank God for the mission of Jesus Christ and the marvelous atonement which he so gloriously brought about. Already in this meeting we have listened to some wonderful testimonies given by the various speakers regarding the resurrection of the Son of God. Especially is that true in the case of the testimony which was so beautifully presented by President J. Reuben Clark. I also want to voice my testimony here on this glorious Easter morning, because I also know that my Redeemer liveth; and my heart is filled with gratitude for that knowledge.

I have never read a statement in any of the holy scriptures dealing with the work of God which is as important as the one found in the Pearl of Great Price. It is as follows:

For behold, this is my work and my glory—to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man. (Moses 1:39.)

That marvelous statement contains two distinctive features. The one is the immortality of man; and the other, the eternal life. Each of these items means something entirely different, distinctively different, from the other. Immortality means the resurrection from the grave. Eternal life means the type of life that will be lived in celestial glory by those who showed their love for God by keeping his commandments while living in mortality.

When the Eternal Father appointed his Only Begotten Son to be the Savior of the world, he gave unto him two major assignments. One of these assignments was to break the bands of death and thereby bring about the resurrection of all of God's sons and daughters. In other words, Jesus was to give immortality universally to the human family. The other assignment was to proclaim a gospel plan of salvation to the inhabitants of the earth, granting all men their free agency and promising that all those who would obey that gospel plan, which contained the words of eternal life, eventually would be brought back into the presence of the Father and the Son and receive eternal life.

In the meridian of time, Jesus Christ came into the world; and in three short years' time of public ministry he marked out the pathway which leadeth unto eternal life. In other words, by the life he lived and through the teachings he gave, he proclaimed to the human family the gospel plan of salvation, assuring exaltation to everyone who proved faithful in doing "all things whatsoever the Lord their God shall command them." (Abraham 3:25.) And then, having been rejected by his own, he was crucified, dying as a ransom for the sins of the world.

As was so beautifully explained by President Clark in his address a few moments ago, early on that first Easter morning, Mary Magdalene and others of the women from Galilee who loved Jesus very much went to the tomb for the purpose of giving the Master's body a more proper burial. As has been pointed out, upon finding the tomb empty, all the women returned to Jerusalem except Mary Magdalene. She lingered near the doorway of the tomb weeping, and then she looked inside. There she saw two angels dressed in white and heard one of them declare:

... I know that ye seek Jesus, which was crucified.

He is not here: for he is risen, ... (Matt. 28:5-6.)

Thus, as had been predicted by the holy prophets even from the very beginning, Jesus Christ, the Savior of the world, had broken the bands of death. He had now overcome the tomb and the grave and thereby had given assurance to the human family that as he had risen from the grave, each of us also shall rise from the grave and take upon ourselves immortality.

The holy prophets had proclaimed that Jesus Christ was the Lamb of God slain from the foundation of the world; that he would die and rise again; and that every man, woman, and child—bond and free, rich and poor, righteous and wicked—would receive immortality as a result of his atoning sacrifice.

Regarding this vital subject, the Lord revealed the fact to the Prophet Joseph Smith that through the redemption of the Only Begotten Son the human family would be raised from death

... in immortality unto eternal life, even as many as would believe;

And they that believe not unto eternal damnation; ... (D. & C. 29:43-44.)

Amulek declared that resurrection or immortality would come to

... all, both old and young, both bond and free, both male and female, both the wicked and the righteous. ...

[And at the resurrection or the receiving of immortality]

... the wicked remain as though there had been no redemption made, except it be the loosing of the bands of death. (Alma 11:44, 41.)

The other part of that great scripture, previously quoted, is:

For behold, this is my work and my glory—to bring to pass ... the eternal life of man. (Moses 1:39.)

Eternal life is very, very important. A careful study of the scriptures reveals the fact that it is the most desirable and important thing of all that exists.

In modern revelation we read: "Behold, he that hath eternal life is rich." (D. & C. 6:7; 11:7.) The Doctrine and Covenants also states that "... eternal life ... is the greatest of all the gifts of God." (Ibid., 14:7.) Therefore, eternal life is the blessing that comes to the individual who keeps the commandments in their fulness.

Since eternal life is the greatest of all of God's gifts to man, it should be of more importance and much more worth while to you and me to put forth every effort to attain eternal life than it would be to accumulate a million dollars, or even a million, million dollars, or to rise to any position of leadership in this world, or to gratify any or all of our mortal desires.

Sunday, April 5

Second Day

A careful study of the statements on this subject found in the scriptures, especially those found in the Doctrine and Covenants, reveals the fact that eternal life is the gift received by husband and wife who are married for eternity, and has reference to their power of eternal increase or a continuation of the seeds forever and ever. Also, exaltation may include less than a continuation of the seeds and Godhood may convey a slightly different shade of meaning. In many of the quotations in the scriptures, "eternal life" and "life eternal" are also used with meanings closely akin with those other words or phrases. Therefore, all of those terms, although possessing slightly different shades in meaning, seem to lead to a similar final goal. In order to come to a more thorough understanding regarding the meaning of those terms, we shall refer directly to latter day revelation. In Section 131 of the Doctrine and Covenants, it is written:

In the celestial glory there are three heavens or degrees;

And in order to obtain the highest, a man must enter into this order of the priesthood [meaning the new and everlasting covenant of marriage];

And if he does not, he cannot obtain it. He may enter into the other, but that is the end of his kingdom; he cannot have an increase. (Ibid., 131:1-4.)

Section 132, that marvelous revelation on celestial marriage, explains and clarifies the quotation I have just given, and also tells definitely what is meant by eternal life, exaltation, etc. In that revelation the Lord has informed us that if a man and a woman, members of the Church of Jesus Christ, refuse to enter into God's holy order of marriage, but accept instead a man-made order, and if this man and woman live all of the other principles of the gospel sufficiently well to go to the celestial glory, they will not attain exaltation. To quote the words of the Lord as received by the Prophet Joseph Smith:

... they ... are appointed angels in heaven; which angels are ministering servants, to minister for those who are worthy of a far more, and an exceeding, and an eternal weight of glory.

For these angels did not abide my law; therefore, they cannot be enlarged, but remain separately and singly, without exaltation, in their saved condition, to all eternity; and from henceforth are not gods, but are angels of God forever and ever. (Ibid., 132:16-17.)

We also read in the same revelation that if a man and a woman enter into the holy covenant of marriage, according to God's law, and are sealed by the Holy Spirit of promise, living in accordance with the covenants made therein, rendering obedience to all of his commandments and enduring faithful to the end, they shall rise in the resurrection and be assigned to dwell with the Lord in the celestial glory. And then the revelation states:

... they shall pass by the angels, and the gods, which are set there, to their exaltation and glory in all things, as hath been sealed upon their heads, which glory shall be a fulness and a continuation of the seeds forever and ever. (Ibid., 132:19.)

The Prophet Joseph Smith points out that this "continuation of seeds forever and ever," means to have children in the celestial glory.

To continue the revelation:

Then shall they be gods, because they have no end; ...

Verily, verily, I say unto you, except ye abide my law ye cannot attain to this glory.

For strait is the gate, and narrow the way that leadeth unto the exaltation and continuation of the lives, and few there be that find it, because ye receive me not in the world neither do ye know me. (Ibid., 132:20-22.)

And then the Lord explained the meaning of eternal lives. He said:

This is eternal lives—to know the only wise and true God, and Jesus Christ, whom he hath sent. ... (Ibid., 132:24.)

Now how can we come to know God fully and completely? Such a knowledge or status cannot be obtained completely in this world. A full knowledge of God can be attained only in the celestial degree of glory by those who ultimately become as he is. When one thinks as he thinks, acts as he acts, attains power comparable to that enjoyed by him, then that individual has attained exaltation or eternal life. To such a person, Jesus has promised: "... all that my Father hath shall be given unto him." (Ibid., 84:38.)

The question of importance which lies deeply imbedded in the hearts of each of us is: How may we gain eternal life?

Jesus Christ, our Lord and Master, came to the earth and pointed out the path which leadeth to eternal life; and he commanded us, saying:

And I now give unto you a commandment to beware concerning yourselves, to give diligent heed to the words of eternal life.

For you shall live by every word that proceedeth forth from the mouth of God. (Ibid., 84:43-44.)

A summary of Jesus of Nazareth's teachings regarding the pathway that leadeth to eternal life is as follows:

First, we must have faith, faith in Jesus Christ and in the gospel plan which he promulgated;

Second, we must repent of all our sins;

Third, we must be baptized by one having proper authority;

Fourth, we must be confirmed members of the Church of Jesus Christ and receive the Holy Ghost;

(Then, according to Nephi, we have entered through the gateway into the kingdom of God and are now on the "... straight and narrow path which leads to eternal life." [2 Nephi 31:17-18].)

Fifth, we must receive the Holy Melchizedek Priesthood and honor and magnify that priesthood;

Sixth, we must enter into the law of celestial marriage and keep all of the covenants made therein;

Seventh, we must demonstrate to the Lord through the lives we live and by rendering obedience to his commandments that we are willing to consecrate all we possess—our talents, our time, our means, and our very lives if need be—to the upbuilding of the Church and kingdom of God here upon the earth and also to the salvation of his sons and daughters;

Eighth, we must continue to press forward with unshaken faith in the words of Jesus Christ, whether spoken by himself or through the mouths of his prophets, proving faithful in keeping all of the commandments, pressing "forward with a steadfastness in Christ, having a perfect brightness of hope, and a love of God and of all men," and enduring faithful to the end, then, according to the promise of the Eternal Father, we "... shall have eternal life." (Ibid., 31:20.)

Thus, if we prove faithful in walking along the pathway enumerated in those eight points, "... feasting upon the word of Christ, ... [for] there is none other way nor name given under heaven whereby man can be saved in the kingdom of God," (Ibid., 31:20-21) then our election shall be made sure, with the glory of eternal lives as our reward; and then, as the revelation previously quoted states, those faithful ones "... shall pass by the angels, and the gods, which are set there, to their exaltation and glory in all things, as hath been sealed upon their heads." (D. & C. 132:19.)

I would like to bear my testimony, which testimony has been given to me through the power of the Holy Ghost. I know that Jesus is the Christ, the Only Begotten Son of God. I know as I know that I live that he died for you and me, and on the third day he was resurrected, thereby breaking the bands of death and giving immortality to the human family. I have a strong conviction that some of God's children will rise through immortality to eternal life and others will rise through immortality to eternal condemnation. It is also my testimony that through the blood that Jesus shed and the sacrifice that he made, he atoned for the sins of those who receive him and keep his commandments; but, on the other hand, as Jesus of Nazareth declared, those who will not receive him and repent and keep his commandments will be required to suffer even as he, the greatest of all, suffered; and his suffering was so intense that it caused him "... to tremble because of pain, and to bleed at every pore, and to suffer both body and spirit." (D. & C. 19:17-18; Mosiah 3:7; Luke 22:44.)

Sunday, April 5

Second Day

I know also that if we will render obedience to all the commandments given us by our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ, and also those given through his holy prophets, someday we will come back into the presence of God and hear the voice of the Lamb, saying: "Well done, my beloved servants, enter ye into your exaltation"; and as King Benjamin has said, through the covenants we have made and by taking upon ourselves his name, we become sons and daughters of Jesus Christ and shall dwell with him eternally in the celestial degree of glory. (Mosiah 5:6-10.) This blessing and glory will be ours if we press forward "with an eye single to the glory of God" and endure faithful to the end. (D. & C. 4:5; 82:19.)

May our Eternal Father bless us as Latter-day Saints, who are now on the pathway which leadeth to eternal life, that we will be diligent and faithful in all things and eventually receive that great blessing which is "the greatest of all the gifts of God," namely, eternal life, I humbly pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

As we stated at the opening of this session, many thousands have participated in worship on this calm Easter morning. Sitting in seats reserved for them here in the Tabernacle are presidencies of stakes, bishoprics of wards, heads of priesthood quorums, and of Auxiliary organizations, and among them we note representatives from our State departments, and our educational institutions. We are pleased to note in addition the President and deans of our Brigham Young University. We have the President of the University of Utah, of the Agricultural College, of Rick's College, of the Weber College, Branch Agricultural College at Cedar, and representatives and heads of our State educational system. To all we extend hearty welcome and express satisfaction and pleasure in your presence and your cooperative spirit in this session.

To our visitors who have come here this morning from afar, we bid a hearty welcome.

The closing song by the Tabernacle Choir will be, "Out of the Silence." This was composed and written by Brother Cyril Jenkins, a member of the Church from Australia, who is present here today, being in Salt Lake City on a special mission pertaining to the Choir and the possible rendering of some of its choicest selections in Great Britain over the British Broadcasting System. We are glad Brother Jenkins is here; and we shall listen with interest to his composition, "Out of the Silence," as now sung by the Tabernacle Choir, under the direction of Elder J. Spencer Cornwall.

The closing prayer will be offered by Elder D. Edward Judd, President of the Ensign Stake, following which this conference will stand adjourned until two o'clock this afternoon.

For this profusion of beautiful callilies we are indebted to the members of the Berkeley Stake in California. The Choir singing this morning has been furnished by the congregation and the Tabernacle Choir, with Brother Cornwall conducting, and Elder Frank W. Asper at the organ.

After the benediction by President D. Edward Judd this Conference will stand adjourned until two o'clock this afternoon.

Singing by the Choir, "Out Of The Silence," (by Cyril Jenkins).

The closing prayer was offered by President D. Edward Judd of the Ensign Stake.

Conference adjourned until 2:00 p.m.

SECOND DAY

AFTERNOON MEETING

Conference reconvened Sunday afternoon, April 5, at 2:00.

The Tabernacle Choir furnished the choral numbers for this session.

President McKay called the meeting to order promptly at the scheduled time by making the following brief statement:

President David O. McKay:

Members of the Church are convened in the Tabernacle on Temple Square in Salt Lake City, Utah in the fifth session of the 123rd Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. These services are being broadcast in the Assembly Hall and in Barratt Hall over a loud-speaking system and by television. The proceedings will be broadcast also over Station KSL, Salt Lake City, and over the stations named in the first session of this Conference, and named this morning, stations in California and Nevada.

The music for this session will be rendered by the Tabernacle Choir, under the direction of J. Spencer Cornwall, with Alexander Schreiner at the organ.

We shall begin this service by the Tabernacle Choir singing, "Sing Unto God."

The opening prayer will be offered by Elder Martin E. Christensen, President of the Mill Creek Stake.

The Tabernacle Choir sang a selection: "Sing Unto God."

The opening prayer was offered by Elder Martin E. Christensen, President of the Mill Creek Stake.

An anthem, "The Twenty-Third Psalm," was sung by the Tabernacle Choir.

President David O. McKay:

Elder Mark E. Petersen of the Council of the Twelve will be our first speaker this afternoon. He will be followed by Elder Alma Sonne.

ELDER MARK E. PETERSEN

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

MAY I read again the beautiful words which have just been sung to you by our wonderful choir.

The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want.

He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: he leadeth me beside the still waters.

He restoreth my soul: he leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for his name's sake.

Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me.

Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies: thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.

Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever. (Psalm 23.)

That is a great testimony. I am grateful that the choir sang this number, giving this testimony of the psalmist because this has been a conference of testimonies—testimony after testimony to the divinity of the Lord Jesus Christ, testimony after testimony to the goodness of the Lord our Father to all men who will follow him and really make him their shepherd. People who thus follow him, testify anew day by day indeed that the Lord is their shepherd; they shall not want and say, "Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever."

Sunday, April 5

Second Day

I remember also that this choir has sung words from Isaiah, "All we like sheep have gone astray." (Isa. 53:6.) And then I remember this beautiful story of the Savior:

How think ye? if a man have an hundred sheep, and one of them be gone astray, doth he not leave the ninety and nine, and goeth into the mountains, and seeketh that which is gone astray?

And if so be that he find it, verily I say unto you, he rejoiceth more of that sheep, than of the ninety and nine which went not astray.

Even so it is not the will of your Father which is in heaven, that one of these little ones should perish. (Matt. 18:12-14.)

The work of the Church is a work of conversion. This has been well demonstrated by the testimonies and the wonderful addresses which have been given here, and by the appeals which have been made for further conversions. We seek for conversion of ourselves, of our children, and of all mankind who will listen to us—conversion to the point where we and they will be willing to accept the teachings and commandments of the Lord our Savior and by following them work out our salvation. As the Lord says here, "... it is not the will of your Father which is in heaven, that one of these little ones should perish." (Ibid., 18:14.)

But in spite of all the work that is done in the Church in the way of conversion and teaching, and so much wonderful work is done, there are some instances where people go in reverse and fall away. Sometimes they accept the teachings of false leaders and false teachers who lead them astray.

Often I have asked myself why it is that some people apostatize from the truth. I have never believed that a person falls away suddenly, all at once, any more than a person who has been righteous and honest all his life would go out and suddenly rob a bank. There is some preparatory work done in advance. There is some "softening-up" process which leads to the apostate condition. Big sins generally are preceded by little ones, and I believe that this is true with respect to people who fall away from the truth.

Seeds are sown, seeds of doubt, disbelief, distrust, disrespect. These seeds are watered; they are nurtured, and finally they become fully developed until they produce their evil fruit.

Who sows these seeds of doubt and distrust? They are sown in many ways. I might mention a few.

I have heard of a man who claims to be a very good Latter-day Saint. He claims that he loves the Church, but he also loves the world, and he lives as close as he possibly can to the line of disobedience without actually violating the letter of the law. He does not realize that he must avoid even the very appearance of evil. He does not realize, possibly, that by living as close to the line of disobedience as he can, he sows seeds of doubt and distrust in the minds of others.

There are those who live in open rebellion against the word of God and violate the commandments continuously and intentionally, and of course they always leave doubt in the minds of others, with some disrespect for themselves.

And then there are the seeds that are sown by some of our teachers and preachers within our own organization, who like to advance some new doctrine, or some new interpretation, or some speculative theory, or advance something that is sensational, because to advance the sensational seems to feed their ego inasmuch as they become the center of a discussion.

Most of our teachers and preachers are wonderful. They teach the truth; they bring about conversions in the minds and hearts of those who listen to them. But there are these few teachers who sow seeds of doubt by speculative and unsound doctrines, and as they do so they "soften up," to use the army expression, some of their hearers who might later be taken over by the apostate teachers who come among them.

It is my full belief that whenever any of us accepts a position of any description in the Church, we accept along with it the responsibility of that office, whatsoever it may be. I believe that if a person accepts a position as a teacher in one of our organizations, or if he accepts the responsibility of preaching from the pulpit, such person accepts the responsibility which goes with that call. He becomes a representative of the Church in that position. Every teacher and every preacher therefore is duty-bound, upon accepting such a call, to represent the official views and doctrines of the Church, and to teach those official doctrines in his class or from the pulpit, with the one thought in mind that conversion is to come about in the hearts of those who listen to him. I do not believe that conversion to the truth comes through the teaching of half-truths or untruths.

Our classrooms and our assembly rooms have been built at great expense with only one thought in mind, and that is that in them we may teach the truth so that we may convert those who come there, so that they in turn will live the gospel and work out their salvation in the earth.

I do not believe that the classrooms or the pulpits of our Church are for laboratory purposes in which to experiment with new doctrines and speculative notions. They are exclusively for the use of those who are willing to convert men and women and boys and girls to the truth.

There is only one man in all the world who has the right to introduce a new doctrine to this Church, and that man is the President of the Church. So teachers, until you become the President of the Church, will you be willing to content yourselves with the present officially accepted doctrines of the Church?

I do not believe that we can escape the responsibility of starting someone off on the wrong way if we teach wrong principles. I do not believe that any of us can afford to take that responsibility.

I do not believe, therefore, that we can bring into our classes or our sermons views and doctrines which are not accepted and officially advocated by the Church.

I do not believe that any teacher in any organization has the right to discard the prescribed lesson course and substitute in its place magazine articles, philosophical discussions, lectures, or any other extraneous matter.

I do not believe that we can bring into our classrooms or sermons the philosophies and doctrines of uninspired men of the world, no matter how well educated they may be, and present them as accepted truth.

I do not believe we should accept every theory advanced by men of science as though it were true. These men change their minds much too often for that.

I do not believe we should bring into our classes and sermons the doctrines of other churches and teach them as accepted truth.

I do not believe we should teach the doctrines of the British-Israel or similar organizations, sensational though they may be, presenting them to our people as though they were true.

I do not believe we should give time in our classes to discussions of the alleged interpretations of the measurements of the Great Pyramid of Egypt, fantastic and unreliable as they so often are.

I do not believe we should accept the current views that the lost ten tribes have been found in the northern nations of Europe, or that they have been named, indexed, and classified.

I do not believe that we can accept the peculiar notion that the mythical Odin of the North was in reality the Savior of the world performing his work among the northern nations of Europe or the ten tribes.

I do not believe we should give credence to the highly speculative theories about Book of Mormon geography.

I do not believe that there were two Hill Cumorahs, one in Central America and the other one up in New York, for

Sunday, April 5

Second Day

the convenience of the Prophet Joseph Smith, so that the poor boy would not have to walk clear to Central America to get the gold plates.

I do not believe we can be good Latter-day Saints and question the integrity of Joseph Smith.

I do not believe we can be good Latter-day Saints and question the testimony of the eleven witnesses of the Book of Mormon.

I do not believe you have a testimony of the truth if you question the accuracy of the translation of the Book of Mormon.

I do not believe you have the facts or are being honest with yourself if you question the Manifesto as it appears in the Doctrine and Covenants.

I do not believe we should try to establish our personal fads as Church doctrine. I do not believe my eternal salvation will be affected in any way if I eat white bread or white sugar. I do not believe the doctrines of the Church are in any way involved in whether my whole wheat is stone-ground or steel-cut.

I do not believe we can be good Christians, regardless of the denomination, if we refuse to believe that Jesus Christ died on the cross. I do not believe anyone can be a good Christian, regardless of denomination, if he questions the reality of the literal, physical resurrection of Jesus Christ on the third day after his crucifixion.

I do not believe we can be good Christians of any denomination and reject the Old Testament. I do not believe we can be good Christians of any denomination and reject the epistles of the New Testament.

I do not believe we can be good Latter-day Saints, or that we are loyal to this Church, if we accept alleged revelations of men and women who claim to have received them for the membership of the Church when we know that the Lord designates the President of the Church as the only one on earth to whom he will reveal his mind for the Church at large.

I do not believe that we can be good Latter-day Saints or good Christians of any denomination and accept the teachings of some that death was a mistake, that it can be avoided, and that we can achieve immortality without passing through death, just by following the teachings of some false prophet.

I do not believe that we can ignore the teachings of the Savior when he said,

... there shall be no disputations among you, as there have hitherto been; neither shall there be disputations among you concerning the points of my doctrine, as there have hitherto been.

For verily, verily I say unto you, he that hath the spirit of contention is not of me, but is of the devil, who is the father of contention, and he stirreth up the hearts of men to contend with anger, one with another. (3 Nephi 11:28-29.)

On the other hand, I do believe most positively that if we bring false teachings into our classes or sermons we do our people a great disservice, for we confuse their minds, we make them doubt the truth when it is given to them, and we "soften them up" for the attacks of apostate teachers who come among them.

I do believe positively that whenever we teach any speculative notion or try to unravel any mystery, or advance any doctrine not accepted by the Church, we contribute to the spiritual delinquency of those whom we influence.

I do believe that whenever we by our acts or our teachings reflect discredit upon the Church or its doctrines, we contribute to the spiritual delinquency of those about us.

I do believe that God will hold us accountable for every act and word by which we contribute to the spiritual delinquency of other people.

I do believe that the President of the Church is in very deed the mouthpiece of God on earth, the prophet, seer, and revelator of the Lord, and that he and he alone has the right and power to give to the Church any new doctrines or new interpretations of existing doctrines.

I do believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of the Eternal God, Creator of heaven and earth, that he died on the cross and was resurrected the third day, literally and physically.

I do believe positively that as we all die, even so, through the power of Jesus the resurrected Christ, we, too, will literally and physically be resurrected.

I do believe that the revealed doctrines and teachings of the Christ will save us without any additions by unauthorized persons.

I do believe that the Lord has given to the Latter-day Saints a fair amount of intelligence. I do believe that he expects us to use that intelligence in studying his revealed word and following his prophets here on earth, so that we will not be tossed about by every wind of doctrine.

I do believe that he expects our teachers and preachers to use the common sense he has given them to teach the simple truth which saves, rather than the speculations and theories of men, which only confuse the mind and lead some of our people right out of the Church.

I do believe that by proper teaching of the revealed truth we can convert ourselves and our children and all others who are willing to listen to us.

I do believe that people are converted to the truth only by the truth and not through the teaching of half-truths and untruths.

I do believe that only in loyalty teaching and living the true principles of the gospel can we fulfil the responsibility which God has given us, and this is my testimony in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Elder Mark E. Petersen of the Council of the Twelve has just concluded speaking. Elder Alma Sonne, Assistant to the Twelve, will now address us, and Elder Sonne will be followed by Elder S. Dilworth Young.

ELDER ALMA SONNE

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles

MY BRETHREN AND SISTERS, I hope all the teachers in the Church will have available to them, the splendid discourse delivered by Elder Mark E. Petersen. I believe the spirit of the anti-Christ is rampant in the world and is asserting itself as never before. That places upon the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints a great responsibility because it is our mission to preach Jesus Christ and him crucified.

In this great conference of the Church at this season we are celebrating two great events, as I see it. The Easter time, commemorating the resurrection of the Lord Jesus, and the organization of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints on the 6th day of April, 1830. I have before me the statement made by Joseph Smith, the Prophet, relative to that first organization meeting, where six humble men met together and initiated the great movement which is going forward so rapidly today. The Prophet writes:

Having opened the meeting by solemn prayer to Our Heavenly Father, we proceeded, according to previous commandment, to call on our brethren to know whether they accepted us as their teachers in the things of the Kingdom of God, and whether they were satisfied that we should proceed and be organized as a Church according to said commandment which we had received. To these several propositions they consented by a unanimous vote. I then laid my hands upon Oliver Cowdery, and ordained him an Elder of the "Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints," after which, he ordained me also to the office of an Elder of said Church. We then took bread, blessed it, and brake it with them; also wine, blessed it, and drank it with them. We then laid our hands on each individual member of the Church present, that they might receive the gift of the Holy Ghost, and be confirmed members of the Church of Christ. The Holy Ghost was poured out upon us to a very great degree—some prophesied, whilst we all praised the Lord, and rejoiced exceedingly. (D.H.C. 1:77-78.)

Sunday, April 5

Second Day

I need not tell you, my brethren and sisters, that the Church, commenced with such a humble beginning, grew and prospered. The organization was completed with Apostles, prophets, high priests, seventies, elders, priests, teachers, deacons, patriarchs, and bishops. It was the only Church on the earth thus organized, even though these callings in the priesthood existed in the Primitive Church.

I observed that in the account given of this meeting, three important procedures were introduced: first, the principle of common consent that no man can preside in the Church without the consent of the membership; second, the introduction of the sacrament of the Lord's supper which was very appropriate because the first principle of the restored gospel is faith in the Lord Jesus Christ; and third, the ordinance of laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost when a person is confirmed a member of the Church, or, when he is ordained, or set apart, for any responsibility in the Church.

The Church, organized in this manner, has from its very beginning felt a strong urge—an impelling motive, to preach the gospel in all the world, and to build up God's kingdom upon the earth.

Not long ago, in Gordon B. Hinckley's book, What of the Mormons?, I read the dramatic account of Samuel H. Smith's missionary journey in the region near his home. It was probably the first missionary undertaking in this dispensation. Samuel was nineteen years old and a brother of the Prophet Joseph Smith. He carried with him copies of the Book of Mormon in a knapsack thrown over his shoulders. After walking twenty-five miles the first day he was refused lodging by the innkeeper. Continuing his journey the next day he called on Reverend John P. Greene, a Methodist minister. Reverend Greene accepted a book but refused to buy it.

During his absence while visiting his circuit, however, his wife read the book, and like many others, was deeply impressed. Mrs. Greene urged her husband to read the book. This he did, and as a result both joined the Church.

Samuel H. Smith returned from his mission, somewhat discouraged, feeling that he had failed. But, unknown to him, the book had fallen into the hands of Brigham Young. He read it and began to investigate Mormonism. He did so for two years, and then he, too, joined the Church. Samuel H. Smith's mission had not been a failure. The book distributed by him and others, also fell into the hands of Dr. Willard Richards of Boston, Massachusetts, who, when he had read the first page, remarked; "Either God or the devil wrote that book." When he finished the book, he concluded it had come from God, and he, also, joined the Church.

Later, the volume was read by Parley P. Pratt, a minister in the Campbellite Church. He was similarly impressed and joined the Church to become one of its outstanding missionaries. I read his testimony: "As I read, the Spirit of the Lord was upon me, and I knew and comprehended that the book was true as plainly and manifestly as a man knows and comprehends that he exists. My joy was now full, as it were, and I rejoiced sufficiently to more than pay me for all the sorrows, sacrifices, and toils of my life."

Parley P. Pratt took the book to his brother, Orson Pratt, then a young man nineteen years of age. He, like the others, read the book and became a convert and a great power in the Church.

One of the mission presidents stated yesterday that twenty-five percent of the converts in his mission were brought into the Church through reading the Book of Mormon. Surely, it is a powerful book. It is a great converter. It should be read and studied by all Latter-day Saints, for it will strengthen their faith and give them courage and hope to go forward in the great work of the Lord.

The Church from its very beginning in this dispensation has put forth every effort, it seems to me, to tell the world about the restoration of the gospel and the mission of Joseph Smith, the Prophet. This impression came to me with great force as I read an epistle to the members of the Church under date of April 7, 1851. This was less than four years after the pioneers entered the Salt Lake Valley. The epistle was signed by Brigham Young, Heber C. Kimball, and Willard Richards, and was addressed to the "Saints scattered throughout the earth."

I learned from that epistle that all of the Twelve Apostles were then abroad except Wilford Woodruff and Ezra T. Benson. Their President, Orson Hyde was in Kanesville, Iowa; Parley P. Pratt was on his way to Chile, his mission was to all the lands bordering the Pacific Ocean; Orson Pratt was somewhere in the States on his way to the valley to become associated with the University of Deseret; John Taylor was in Boulogne, France, "preaching, publishing, and translating"; Lorenzo Snow was in Italy, visiting the Italian states; Erastus Snow was in Copenhagen, Denmark, where he was translating the Book of Mormon; Franklin D. Richards was presiding over the British Mission with headquarters in Liverpool, England; Amasa Lyman and Charles C. Rich were on their way to the Cajon Pass; and George A. Smith was presiding in Iron County. All of them were preaching the gospel "to every nation, kindred, tongue and people." What better evidence could they give of their sincerity and integrity? The best leadership of the Church was surely needed here in the valley, where the foundations of a great commonwealth were being laid; cities, towns, and villages were being laid out and settled; churches and schools were being erected; and roads and bridges were under construction. But the paramount obligation resting upon the Church then as now was to preach the gospel and to proclaim the divine mission of the Prophet Joseph Smith. In this tremendous responsibility the leaders of the Church have been diligent and determined. May we be given the faith and the understanding to continue in this great enterprise and thus discharge the solemn obligation resting upon all of us, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER S. DILWORTH YOUNG

Of the First Council of the Seventy

BY THE Spirit of the Holy Ghost, about whom my fellow council member spoke so movingly this morning, I can bridge the nineteen hundred odd years between our day and the time of our beloved Lord. By that Spirit I can go with him as he walked the hills of Judea; I can follow him to the cross; I can hear the discussion at Emmaus and can enjoy the perfect love for him which his disciples felt after his resurrection. That event we celebrate today. While the distance in time through the years has been long, it seems but a short time because of this Spirit. I am grateful to have a testimony which speaks to my heart that he was indeed resurrected. Because of that resurrection, I may have hope, hope for eternal life.

So also may I enjoy the feeling and knowledge of how my brethren felt when they heard that on that immortal day 133 years ago, a new prophet was in the earth, and that he indeed had seen his Redeemer and had been told that through him, he being faithful, would come the restoration of the everlasting gospel. By the Spirit the vision of that day becomes very real.

We sit here today, comfortable, because of those events and because of our belief and acceptance of them. And on this day, which is Easter, I wonder now, what of the future. We can think of the past; we can enjoy it; but our future depends upon us, and that future is bound up in what we intend to do about preaching this gospel to the nations of the earth.

Sunday, April 5

Second Day

Did you hear, as I heard yesterday, the statement made that we had a number slightly over two thousand missionaries? As I recall it, a year or so ago there were over six thousand. That gap should be filled. And personally, I can see no reason why it should not be filled. The men with the power to catch up the number sit in this Tabernacle under the direction of the Presidency of the Church. The bishop of the ward shall call upon people who he thinks might be able to go on missions; the stake president will interview them and then pass their applications on to the General Authorities.

It should not be a hard thing, from fifteen hundred wards, to find four thousand people. It is only three for each ward on the average. In the days of our poverty, can you see two missionaries, who had less apparent reason to have faith than we have, starting out on a mission which they had been told to fill in England? They go off in a wagon, hardly able to stand. On the way they meet a brother who is felling trees, barefooted. I suppose he does not want to do it barefooted, but he does not have any shoes. He says, "I have nothing to give you, but here is a purse." You and I, in our modern way of looking at things, might say, "Well, what is the good of a purse?" But they take it and thank him and go on. A little farther along the road, they meet another one, equally poverty-stricken, equally poor. He says, "I have nothing much to give you; what do you have?" And one of them speaks up and says, "Well, we have a purse." "Good, I have a dollar to put in that purse." And so he gives them his only dollar. One of those men said later, "From that moment on, that purse was never empty. As I needed, I could take from it that which was necessary."

It befalls my lot to interview, occasionally, missionaries, in the days of our prosperity. A few weeks ago I had a young man come into the office to be interviewed. I said to him in the course of the conversation, "Who is going to support you on this mission?"

And he said, "My mother."

I said, "Is your father alive?"

"No, sir, he is dead."

"Can your mother do it?"

He said, "She cannot, but she will."

There is no doubt in my mind that she will.

Many of the boys who go out, go out that way, because somebody has enough faith to know that in the Lord's work the way opens.

I think I shall recount to you, so that you will not overlook others besides widows' sons, an experience had by one of our co-laborers, which was related to me a few days ago. I hope he will forgive me for mentioning it. President Grant, from this pulpit one time, invited men to become missionaries, and said, in effect, too, that that did not exclude stake presidents and bishops. And one of these brethren, a bishop, went home and said to himself, "Well, I guess that must mean me. I am a bishop, and the President of the Church said bishops were not excluded." He had a family of several children, a prosperous growing business, but he laid it aside and accepted a mission and was gone several months, preaching the gospel, because he thought the prophet of the Lord meant him, personally.

Now, he took that to himself. The prophet did not point his finger at him, but hearing the word he applied it to himself. I think we must apply it to ourselves, now. If we can not obtain twenty-year-old boys, can't we have some thirty-year-old men? If we have eighteen thousand or so seventies, could we not find four thousand of them? They are minute men. I believe we can.

And, of course, the Presidency have pointed out several times, in my hearing, that we do have in the foreign mission fields able people who can already speaking the languages, ready and willing to serve. They can do that one thing which we can't do; that is, interpret to the people our beliefs in terms of that language. They are unable to go because they have not the way to finance themselves.

I know they can be financed. President McKay suggested last night that they should be partially financed, because they ought to make some contribution themselves or their folks ought to help them, too. But we can take care of the difference easily.

It occurred to me one time that in every stake there are between eight hundred and twelve hundred families. I said to the members of one stake, in a quarterly conference, "Why, if you went to only one movie a week, you would be able to save the difference, from the two movies you usually attend." One little boy on the front row piped up and said, "I go to three."

Staying away from a movie a week, would make it possible for every stake in this Church to supply anywhere from eight to twelve of those foreign-speaking members of ours, and no harm would be done.

I used to work in an organization which builds character in boys. Its main object is to have them do things, many times repeated, in order to learn. We had a motto which we tried to instill into those boys. It reads, "Do a good turn daily," the idea being that if a boy does it every day he will soon have the habit of doing it.

The actual builders of the characters of your children are not the organizations, but you parents: you can build into your children whatever you want to. Do you want your children to become missionary-minded? Do you want them to believe they ought to be missionaries when they grow up? Then have them do things now which will bring to their minds the work of our missionary system.

May I suggest something? You farmers—why do not your boys this year have one row of potatoes which, when harvested next fall, will be given to the missionary fund of the Church? No harm is done; nobody is hurt. You beet farmers, why not one row of beets your boys and your girls can harvest, and let that portion apply? You men who raise hay, why not a quarter or half an acre dedicated to the Finnish Mission? You sheep men, have your child raise a lamb, dedicated, when it is fattened and killed, to one of the German missions.

You folk in California—one nut tree, one orange tree, your children dedicating it and talking about it and picking the fruit, saying all the while, "This is for the missionary system." Nobody is harmed; your income has not shrunk; and the fund is increased to where we can actually do the business.

Yes, and you folk in the cities—the car can last another year; the suit of clothes can go another year; desserts served less often; a bottle on the pantry shelf labeled "missionary fund" and the trick is done, and the children are conscious of it. We then have back again our six thousand missionaries, and more, too. In the time of our poverty we could do it. Why cannot we do it in the time of our prosperity? There is so little poverty in the Church. There is so much prosperity.

May the Spirit of the Lord dictate to each of us our place, our duty, and our responsibility, I humbly ask, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

The Tabernacle Choir and the congregation will now sing, "The Spirit of God Like a Fire is Burning."

After the singing we shall hear from Bishop Thorpe B. Isaacson.

---

The congregation and the Choir joined in singing the hymn, "The Spirit of God Like A Fire Is Burning."

BISHOP THORPE B. ISAACSON

First Counselor in the Presiding Bishopric

PRESIDENT MCKAY, President Richards, who is following the conference on television, whom we miss very much, President Clark, and my dear brothers and sisters: I enjoy very much listening to the sermons of the Brethren. They are comforting to me. They build me up in my faith and in my testimony. I love these Brethren, every one of them. I pray for them daily, as I beg of them and beg of you to pray for me, one of the most humble, I believe, among you. I know these men are true servants of the Lord. I bear testimony to you that many times I have felt and witnessed the inspiration from on high come to them when I little expected it. I came from the business world to meet with these brethren, practically strangers, and I didn't know it was possible to love men as I have learned to love them, and as I know they love one another. I pray that I might have the right attitude and the right spirit while I occupy this position, so that I can receive the favor of the Lord and his sustaining influence and power. I shall be grateful to you if I can have an interest in your faith and prayers because I know I need the blessings of the Lord, and I will be grateful to you for your kindness, your co-operation, and your love.

This is a frightening experience, especially for me. The spirit here today has been beautiful. It has been uplifting, the spirit of brotherhood, and the spirit of love. I am sure that all of our young children today, on this particular day of Easter, have enjoyed what it means. My own little grandson came at noon just as I was leaving, only five years of age, but he had some Easter things, and I said, "What are those things, Bodie?" And he said, "O, it's Easter for my Jesus." How grateful we should be for that kind of lesson that is taught to the youth of this Church.

There are problems in life that come to all of us. The day and age in which we live has brought forth some new theories, new standards, and there is a feeling that we should perhaps be more concerned about the word security than about other things in life. Now the true feeling of security is a wonderful feeling, but there is a great deal more to security than just the longing for it. We make our own security in a large degree, at least we should, both spiritually and temporally.

Sometimes incidents happen in the lives of men that disturb them, and they may become irritated, and then they may start finding fault, and then they become critical, and before long they may become bitter, and at that time we lose the finest things in life. True, the world is not at ease. We have been at high tension for a number of years. We have seen great changes. We have just finished a very bitter political campaign. There has been prejudice develop, misunderstandings develop, but it is best that we forget them entirely.

Real security to the members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints will come to us as individuals through the living of the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ. In the gospel are found the laws of truth, the laws of mankind, and if we live the principles of the gospel, the security that men seek and the security that men desire will come to each one of us. If we are not careful, however, living under these particular times and under this atmosphere, we may lose track of some of the finer things of life, and allow someone to mislead us. We may develop prejudices. We may be led off the true course. None of this is the Spirit of the Lord. None of this is the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ. It is the spirit of the adversary, working upon the minds and hearts and souls of men to discourage them, to cause confusion, to create antagonism and misunderstandings one toward the other.

In the gospel of Jesus Christ is found the complete law of happiness—the laws that govern our daily lives, the laws that we can follow without any hesitation or without any misgivings. As members of the Church, we need no security other than the gospel. If we live it, there will come to all of us everything that we may need and everything that we may desire, for the Lord has said,

He that receiveth my Father receiveth my Father's kingdom: therefore all that my Father hath shall be given unto him. (D. & C. 84:38.)

The security in the gospel to the brethren of the Church is the kind of security that cannot be found anywhere else in the world. It is the kind of security that the world does not understand. This security is given to the brethren of the Church who hold the Holy Priesthood of God, the power delegated to man to act in the name and in the place of our Father in heaven here upon the earth in the building up of his kingdom. The power of the priesthood is the greatest power and the greatest force on the face of the earth. Talk about real security! That will be with us if we keep the commandments of the Lord, and if we keep the covenants that we have made with the Lord.

There is a security that comes to all members of the Church who have received the great Comforter spoken of by Elder Bruce R. McConkie this morning, the power and the gift of the Holy Ghost. And the Lord said regarding that great Comforter,

And I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you for ever:

Even the Spirit of truth; whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth him not, neither knoweth him; but ye know him; for he dwelleth with you, and shall be in you. (John 14:16-17.)

As members of the Church this type of security is the type of security that will be enduring and everlasting.

We must not expect perfection in the other fellow because we ourselves do not give perfection. We might be more tolerant with one another. Yes, we may have our differences, but we should have faith in our fellow men; faith in ourselves; faith in our friends and associates; and above all, faith in God our Eternal Father and in his Son, Jesus Christ; faith in the mission of the Savior who was crucified on Calvary.

When we talk of that, I wonder whether we stop to think of the great suffering that He was willing to go through for us. We should have faith in the mission of the Redeemer of mankind, the Savior of the world; faith in the mission of the Prophet Joseph Smith, truly an instrument in the hands of God in bringing forth the restored gospel that should make our lives sweeter, more tolerant, and more considerate. There isn't any teaching in the gospel that teaches us bitterness; in fact we are taught to be tolerant and forgiving and understanding. The Spirit of the Lord can be found in our own hearts. If we are out of harmony with the Lord, our spiritual well-being is not in accordance with the wishes of the Lord.

Yes, men may have their differences and often do, but these differences can all be settled if men will go about settling those differences as the gospel has prescribed the brethren of the Church to do. The Lord said,

But I say unto you, that whosoever is angry with his brother shall be in danger of his judgment. And whosoever shall say to his brother, Raca, [meaning the calling of angry names] shall be in danger of the council; and whosoever shall say, Thou fool, shall be in danger of hell fire.

Therefore, if ye shall come unto me, or shall desire to come unto me, and rememberest that thy brother hath aught against thee—

Go thy way unto thy brother, and first be reconciled to thy brother, and then come unto me with full purpose of heart, and I will receive you. (3 Nephi 12:22-24.)

Oh, brethren, if we can only follow that principle when we have our differences, they would fade away as the snow in the sunshine.

Sunday, April 5

Second Day

The doctrines taught in early times are real truths and principles. Time has worn well with them, and their victory stands firmly before the world. The security that men sought for in early years was that afforded by the blessing of opportunity.

The liberty of man may be circumscribed, his hands and his legs may be chained, and his body may be tortured, but as long as his soul is free to commune with God, he will never really become enslaved by any destructive force.

Men in the Kremlin who have had their satellites in Europe and Asia have been unable to date to permanently purge religion from their borders, and they will never purge the belief in God from the souls of men.

May we have the true Spirit of the Christ. May we remain faithful. We should never permit uneasiness or antagonism or bitterness to come into our souls. We must not judge too harshly unless we ourselves bear the mark of perfection.

Talking to the young people about that word security that we read so much about, an educator recently informed me of a survey that he had completed of a group of seniors to see exactly what was foremost in their minds, and he asked them about twenty practical questions as to what was really their greatest concern. He asked them whether they wanted to start in business and work their way up, or whether they wanted to go into the government service, or whether they wanted to render social service, or missionary service, what they thought of their fellow men, what they thought of opportunities and security, and to his surprise, a large group of those young men interviewed listed the thing that was uppermost in their minds was that of security. They were not concerned too much about opportunity, and yet in this land, men have prayed that we would have opportunity, and we have been blessed abundantly with opportunities. Our grandparents never thought of that word temporal security. They were willing to make their own. All they desired and prayed for was the opportunity to do so.

My association and some of my assignments have brought me in contact with fine men who for some reason or other have become inactive in the Church, and I want to bear you my testimony that I have seen these men literally changed. I want to tell you that when the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ touches the souls of men, they are transformed into real, humble servants in his work. No man when he is humble and prayerful can resist the Spirit of the Lord if he will put himself in tune with communication with the Spirit of the Lord. And as the poem states from Boubar

Great Master, touch us with thy skilful hand.

Let not the music that is within us die.
Great sculptor, hew and polish us,
Nor let hidden and lost thy form within us lie.

Spare not the stroke, Do with us as thou wilt,

Let there be not unfinished or marred.

Complete thy purpose that we may become thy perfect image,

For thou art God, our Lord.

I know that Joseph Smith is a prophet of God. I am grateful for the mission of his brother, Hyrum. Oh, what a brother! An elder brother to the Prophet. What a lesson he could preach to all the brethren of the Church, brothers, I mean, in families. He stayed with the Prophet until his death. I know that Joseph Smith and Brigham Young were true prophets of God. I know it by the dictates of the Holy Spirit and by the gift and the power of the Holy Ghost. I know that all the Presidencies and Apostles from that time to this have been called of God, and divinely called, and that they are inspired each day of their lives. I know that President David O. McKay is a true, living prophet of God, and that he does receive inspiration and revelation from on high, and that the Lord reveals his will to him and that the Lord has protected him as though in the hollow of his hand.

May we keep the covenants that we have made with the Lord. It is my testimony that there is no enduring security other than the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ. This security will comfort our hearts; this security will sustain our souls. God grant that we may remain faithful, that we may keep the lines of communication open so that not alone in time of need, but every day of our lives we can humble ourselves, as Brother Christiansen talked about yesterday, that we can go to the Lord, that we will not have to face the problems of life alone. Our big problem is to keep ourselves in tune with the Spirit of the Lord so that we can hear the dictates which prompt us through the power and the gift of the Holy Ghost; this I humbly pray for in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Bishop Thorpe B. Isaacson of the Presiding Bishopric has just spoken to us. Elder Matthew Cowley of the Council of the Twelve will be our next speaker. And Elder Cowley will be followed by Bishop Wirthlin.

ELDER MATTHEW COWLEY

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

I WOULD like very much to welcome my friends who have come from far-off Hawaii, to this conference, Aloha mai, aloha nui loa.

Yesterday morning, had I been called upon to speak, I would have attempted to speak about the integrity of the home. Had I been called upon yesterday afternoon, I would have talked about this nation under God. Had I been called upon last night in priesthood meeting, I would have urged the brethren to keep in training with respect to the priesthood which they hold. Had I been called upon this morning, I would have talked about John the Baptist who was the forerunner of Christ, whose resurrection we commemorate this day. But I was told this morning that an inquiry had been made about when I was going to speak so that a little friend of mine could listen in, and so I am going to talk about my little friend, my little friend, Joe, who is in the polio ward of the county hospital.

A few weeks ago I went with a young bishop to visit Joe. I did not know how old he was, I could not see how large he was, all I could see was his head protruding from an iron lung. He was unconscious. He was afflicted with polio and double pneumonia. When we went in, the nurse placed robes on us, and we had to put masks over our faces. We prayed over little Joe. Two weeks later we called again at the hospital and asked if we could see the little lad. The nurse said, "yes," and when she called him, he came running up the hall to meet us.

I said, "Do you know who I am?" He replied, "Are you Brother Cowley?" I said, "Yes." He then said, "I was unconscious when you came before, wasn't I?" "You certainly were," I said, and then he replied, "No wonder I don't recognize you."

He took us into his room, and lying in an adjoining bed to his was another young chap, twice the age of Joe. And after visiting for awhile, we were about to go when little Joe said, "Wait a minute, don't forget my partner." I said, "What do you mean?" And he said, "You pray over my partner, and then he can thank you for a prayer the same as I did."

And so we turned to his companion, a young lad sixteen years of age, stricken with polio, and he said, "I would like a blessing. I am a teacher in the Aaronic Priesthood in my ward." And so we blessed Joe's partner. Two weeks later we called back again. On this visit little Joe was rather sad, and we asked him what was the matter. He said, "I am lonely. Maybe I shouldn't have asked you to bless my partner. He got well too soon and has gone home."

Sunday, April 5

Second Day

Well, little Joe is probably listening in, and maybe he can see me on television as I speak, so I want to say to you, little Joe, we are thinking about you. We are praying for you. We have been told here by the great leaders of this Church that we should have a simple faith. Christ himself says that we should have faith like yours, the faith of a little child, and unless we have your faith, we cannot enter the kingdom of heaven. Joe, you are of the kingdom of heaven because yours is a faith which has not been tarnished by learning, by the wisdom of men. It is simple. And there are many of your companions down there with you. We are thinking of them. There are the little Joes and the little Janes who are there, some in iron lungs and some on rocking beds, some being fed with a spoon. We are thinking about them, and I know, my little friend, that your faith can do much to make them whole. And over in the other ward there are others, adults, those who are old enough to be your parents, who are reaching out for help because they feel that medical science may fail. And with your faith they can know that when medical science has to lay the burden down, the power and priesthood of God can pick that burden up and restore them to health and strength.

Up there in another ward of that hospital there is another sweet friend of mine. She is almost ninety-three years of age, still clear in her mind. I visited her on one of her birthdays, and at the side of her bed was a little vase of flowers. I read the card, "Many happy returns of the day from the Moose Lodge." She did not know anything about the Moose Lodge. All she knew about was the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. All she knew about was the years that she had spent in the temple of God, saying as the Master said to that thief upon the cross, "Today shalt thou be with me," (Luke 23:43) as she worked for the dead.

Joe remind me that I must not forget her birthday this coming July. There must not only be flowers from the Moose Lodge, but there must also be flowers from the ward to which she belongs.

I also have another friend about whom I am thinking. She is not in the hospital. She is at a home. Her limbs are rigid. She cannot use her hands. She cannot walk. Her eyeballs appear to be frozen in their sockets. She has been that way for twenty-five years, and yet when I call on her, she laughs, or tries to; she tires to joke; she asks me to take her to a dance.

And so, Joe I am talking to you. I hope you are listening. There are many others like you, and we remember them, too. We may not have the time to call often. I know others who must not be forgotten. Oh, I am thinking of the sisters who live on the top floor of the Constitution Building, over here on Main Street. Some of them near unto ninety, who cannot get out, but who love the Church, who appreciate the blessings of the priesthood, and who are praying for you and for me, and for the brethren of this Church.

God bless the eight-year-olds of this Church, those who have been baptized. When you were baptized, Joe, you were not sprinkled; water was not poured upon you; but you, like the Master, to commence to fulfil all righteousness, were taken down into the water; and you were immersed; and now yours is the opportunity to follow in the footsteps of your Savior and be like unto him.

God bless you, my young friend, with the power of the priesthood of heaven. God grant that his Spirit may be and abide with you and with your partners down there in that polio ward. Thank your doctors and your nurses for me, they who are so kind and so gentle and so concerned about the restoration of health to you and your companions.

But, Joe, continue to rely upon your God. Whatever the results may be, you are of the kingdom of heaven. God grant that we may all have your faith, I pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

BISHOP JOSEPH L. WIRTHLIN

Presiding Bishop of the Church

I SINCERELY trust, my brethren and sisters, that I might enjoy the inspiration of the fine, sweet spirit that has inspired the previous speakers. It is a glorious honor and distinction to hold membership in the Church of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Through the restoration of the Church and its establishment upon the earth, a part of the kingdom of heaven is upon the earth to prepare men for the second coming—of the Prince of Peace, and hence, this great organization is one of divine government.

Brigham Young declared that the priesthood of the Son of God which we have in our midst is a perfect order and system of government, and this alone can deliver the human family from all the evils which now afflict its members and insure them of happiness hereafter.

One of the grand and glorious blessings of this great priesthood government is the fact that every man and young man who holds the priesthood of God, if he will fill his assignments rendering the service that is required of him, becomes an officer in the priesthood government of the Lord Jesus Christ.

The priesthood government of the Lord Jesus Christ is comparable in many respects to civil government. It has various departments. There is a department of education, a department of health, a department of recreation and culture, a welfare department, a judiciary department, and a finance department.

So, without going into detail with reference to all of these departments and their various functions, I should like to talk to you for a moment about the finance department of the priesthood government of the Lord Jesus Christ.

There stands at its head the prophet, revelator, and seer of the Lord Jesus Christ. He directs the great finance department of this government. The Presiding Bishopric are fiscal agents of the First Presidency, and the many bishops and presidencies of independent branches who receive the finances of the finance department are agents, too, and, under the direction of the First Presidency and various committees, disburse the same as the needs of the Church demand.

The sources of income for the finance department are four:

The first is tithing in cash; the second is tithes in kind; the third is fast offerings; and the fourth, commercial income of the Church.

I should like to discuss for a moment the commercial income of the Church. There are many people who are curious about it. Certain groups speculate as to what the wealth of the Church is, what its investments are, as to what the amount of the commercial income might be.

The commercial income of the Church provides funds to carry on the operation of the Church for approximately fifteen days out of the year, so you can readily see that it is an infinitesimal part of the funds that are needed to finance the program of the Church, particularly in view of that fact, as was stated yesterday morning, in the financial statement of the Church, some twenty-three millions were expended from tithing funds for various purposes.

Out of the question of commercial income, the question arises, "Why is the Church in business?"

We are in business to some extent because in the early days of the Church

Sunday, April 5

Second Day

it was necessary for this organization to help establish industry; for example, in the days of President Brigham Young, most of the retailing of merchandise was controlled by those not of our faithful. Exorbitant prices were charged. To solve the problem, a great mercantile institution was established for the sole purpose of selling merchandise to our people at a fair and equitable price.

At the same time, there was established what was known as mercantile co-ops. There was the Eleventh Ward Co-op established on the corner of First South and Seventh East; the Tenth Ward Co-op established on Eighth East and Fourth South; the Twentieth Ward Co-op on the corner of Fifth East and South Temple. These co-ops were also established throughout the settlements of the state for the sole purpose of providing merchandise for our people at the right price.

The Church, to some extent, is still interested in these pioneer enterprises. In the great mercantile institution established by Brigham Young and his associates, the Church still has a minority interest. There are literally hundreds of others holding shares in this great institution.

We are asked the question: "Why are we in the sugar business?" We are in the sugar business because of the fact that in the days of Wilford Woodruff, those who were engaged in the field of agriculture had difficulty in disposing of the kind of crops produced. Hay, grain, and livestock were not marketable. So, in order to solve the problem, the President of the Church and his associates gave consideration to several solutions.

Finally it was decided that sugar beets would grow in this area. The climate was right, and out of it there were established sugar factories that our farmers might have channels through which their products could be sold, and where, in return, they might receive cash income.

With reference to the establishment of the sugar industry, there was inspiration in it. President Woodruff made it a matter of prayer, and when he had a positive attitude toward the establishing of the sugar industry, there came to him light. When his attitude was negative, all was dark. There is no question but what the prophet of the Lord was inspired and directed in establishing the sugar industry to the end that our farmers might produce a crop which would bring to them a cash return.

The Church never was and is not the sole owner of the sugar industry, today, as there are hundreds of other shareholders.

The question is asked: "Why are we in the radio and television business?" Solely for the purpose that the voice of the Church might be heard over the air. I am sure our interest in the radio business has more than paid us many dividends in the opportunity provided by the Sunday morning broadcasts of our great choir, and the fine sermons of Elder Richard L. Evans, which are heard by millions of people, and in addition, the broadcasting of general conference.

I have met many people not of our faith who have declared: "My church is the Sunday morning broadcast of the great Tabernacle Choir and the sermon of Richard L. Evans."

It is true that the Church is interested in some real estate, most of which surrounds this block, purchased for the sole purpose of protecting the temple block from business that would be derogatory to the atmosphere and the spirit of the house of the Lord.

The Church has some interests in ranching projects which have grown largely out of colonization projects, particularly in Canada and Mexico.

A large ranch was purchased in Canada; parts of it were sold to our people who settled there; and out of it there was left a large tract which was open domain whereon people ran their cattle for years; later it was fenced. Sheep and cattle were placed upon this ranch, and out of its earnings, the ranch operation has been expanded, and the dividends returned from this operation have been spent in the erection of chapels in Canada, and paying some of the maintenance expense of the Church in that part of the Lord's vineyard.

So the matter of our commercial income should not be one of great curiosity nor speculation, for as I have indicated, it is but an infinitesimal part of the funds needed to finance the priesthood government of the Lord Jesus Christ.

The bulk of Church income is derived from tithing, based upon the faith and the testimony of the membership of the true Church. It thrills me as I travel over the Church and see the lovely meetinghouses that have been erected, the cost of which is paid partly from the tithes, and the other part from the contributions of the people.

I do not believe that I would be contradicted if I were to make the statement today that of all the religious organizations in the world, this Church at the moment is erecting more places in which to worship God than any other religious organization.

The tithes in kind amount to little. There are a few cases where individuals pay their tithing in crops or livestock, and these are immediately converted into cash, and forwarded to the office of the Presiding Bishopric.

Tithing is a just and an equitable law. The amount that we are asked to pay as a tithe was fixed by the Lord through revelation and direction to his servants. Tithing is a principle that is as old as the Lord's work itself.

We read of Abraham who went to the high priest, Melchizedek, to render unto the Lord a tithe or one-tenth of his crops and herds. Isaac and Jacob paid tithes. As you follow through the history of the ancient prophets, it was the financial law by which the Lord financed his work upon the earth.

In the days of the Savior, tithing was used to finance the work of the Lord.

But, if you compare tithing with the tax laws of the land, you find tithing is a fixed amount of one's income—ten percent, no more or no less.

In civil government, the tax laws are flexible, and usually flexible upward. The average income tax and taxes paid by the ordinary citizen of this country run between thirty and thirty-five percent of his total income, and there are some cases in which an individual could pay as much as ninety percent of his income to finance the government.

However, in the priesthood government of the Lord Jesus Christ, the maximum requirement is ten percent, whether it be from the widow's mite or from the rich man's income.

Brigham Young said:

Everybody should pay their tenth. A poor woman ought to pay her tenth chicken, if she has to draw out ten times its value for her support. . . . (Discourses of Brigham Young, 1943 edition, 178.)

In civil government if the tax laws are not adhered to, there are certain penalties that are inflicted, fines and imprisonment. But in the priesthood government of the Lord Jesus Christ the matter of tithing comes as a voluntary contribution. If there are any penalties involved, and there are, they are self-inflicted because if we refuse to obey the commandments of the Lord we deny ourselves the blessings of heaven. The Lord made it perfectly clear in the 119th section of the Doctrine and Covenants, the 6th verse, wherein he said,

And I say unto you, if my people observe not this law, to keep it holy, and by this law sanctify the land of Zion unto me, that my statutes and my judgments may be kept thereon, that it may be most holy, behold, verily I say unto you, it shall not be a land of Zion unto you.

The land of Zion is where the Spirit of God can be found in rich abundance. It is a place where we may enjoy peace, brotherly love, and the temporal blessings needed to sustain life.

I think of the time when the great pioneer prophet Brigham Young on coming into the valley declared we blessed

Sunday, April 5

Second Day

the land and dedicated it to the end that it would be productive enough to take care of all who come into the valley. Said he, "All of these blessings are contingent upon our obedience." Since the days of Brigham Young after he dedicated the land that it would be fruitful, literally hundreds of thousands of people have come into what Brigham Young saw as a desert, a barren wilderness, and now it blooms as the rose; and hundreds of thousands of people are provided for and taken care of as far as their temporal needs are concerned.

The Lord revealed in the Doctrine and Covenants, section 85, verse 3,

It is contrary to the will and commandment of God that those who receive not their inheritance by consecration, agreeable to his law, which he has given, that he may tithe his people, to prepare them against the day of vengeance and burning, should have their names enrolled with the people of God.

And in these days of difficulty, bloodshed, and war a tithed people according to this promise should have their names enrolled with the people of God and enjoy the promised protection that will come through obedience.

How many times the question is asked, "What is a tithe?" The very word itself denotes one-tenth. A tithe is one-tenth of the wage earner's full income. A tithe is one-tenth of the professional man's net income. A tithe is one-tenth of the businessman's net income. A tithe is one-tenth of the farmer's net income, and also one-tenth of the produce used by the farmer to sustain his family which is a just and equitable requirement, as others purchase out of their income such food as is needed to provide for their families. A tithe is one-tenth of the dividends derived from investments. A tithe is one-tenth of net insurance income less premiums if tithing has been paid on the premiums. May we follow the admonition of Brigham Young:

We do not ask anyone to pay tithing unless they are disposed to do so, but if you pretend to pay tithing, pay it like an honest man. (Discourses of Brigham Young, 1943 edition, 177.)

May we meet our tithing obligations fully and therefrom derive the promised blessings both spiritual and temporal.

As to the handling of tithing, according to the revelations, the following officers of the priesthood government of the Lord are responsible: the President of the Church who is trustee-in-trust; the Presiding Bishopric, and all of the bishoprics who preside in the wards, and branch presidencies who preside over the branches. Once a month all the tithes received by the ward bishoprics and the branch presidencies are forwarded to the office of the Presiding Bishopric in full; the bishoprics and the branch presidencies do not retain any of the tithing. The tithing is accompanied by duplicate receipts of the receipts issued to the donors. In the office of the Presiding Bishopric a personal tithing account has been set up for each donor. At the end of each three months of the year there is returned to the bishoprics of the Church a tithing statement drawn up in the office of the Presiding Bishopric listing all who have paid tithing during that period and the amount. By this arrangement, the bishoprics of the ward have a record of what each tithepayer has paid for any three months of the year or for the whole year, which makes it possible at tithing settlement time for each tithepayer to receive from the bishop a personal record of tithes paid.

All tithing received by the Presiding Bishopric is transferred in full to the First Presidency.

The shining example of integrity on the part of the brethren who handle the tithes in the wards and the branches of the Church is without parallel. I doubt if in civil government you will ever find a record of integrity comparable to that which we find in the priesthood government of the Lord Jesus Christ.

The question is often asked, "How is the tithing disbursed?" The plan for disbursement is found in the 120th section of the Doctrine and Covenants and is as follows:

Verily, thus saith the Lord, the time is now come, that it [speaking of the tithing] shall be disposed of by a council, composed of the First Presidency of my Church, and of the bishop and his council, and by my high council; and by mine own voice unto them, saith the Lord. . . .

And so in compliance with this revelation, a council called "The Council for the Disbursement of Tithing," composed of the First Presidency, the Council of the Twelve, and the Presiding Bishopric has been organized, and under the direction of this council for the disbursement of tithing there has been organized a budget committee composed of two members of the Council of the Twelve and a member of the Presiding Bishopric. Each year the budget committee analyzes the financial needs of the various departments of the Church from the point of view of eliminating unnecessary expenditures. The budget, when compiled, is presented to the council for the disbursement of tithing, where again the First Presidency and the members of the council analyze the budget very carefully to assure themselves of no extravagant spending, and under the direction of this council for the disbursement of tithing there is another committee called "The Expenditure Committee" of the Church who are authorized to approve expenditures as they are required by the departments of the Church. This committee meets once a week. It is composed of the First Presidency, three members of the Twelve, and the Presiding Bishopric. And over the fifteen years that I have had the privilege of being a member of this committee, I have been inspired and thrilled by the careful appropriating of Church funds. Civil government could well afford to follow the example of the expenditure committee of the priesthood government of the Lord Jesus Christ.

What are the tithes used for? By revelation they are used to assist the poor, to erect temples and meeting-houses, for the maintenance of temples and missions, for the erection of school buildings, seminaries, and institute buildings, and for the other operating expenses that are necessary. Tithing may be used for the purchase of land. In the 42nd section and 35th verse of the Doctrine and Covenants, it is indicated surpluses might be used to purchase land for the public good of the people.

The Prophet Malachi declared:

Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it. (Malachi 3:10.)

I am not going to say to you, because you pay your tithing that tomorrow morning there may be a Cadillac in your garage or that you may all be blessed with a mansion in which to live. That promise I cannot make.

The Lord promised us that he would bless the obedient with the necessities of life. He will bless us with the inspiration to wisely handle our income and use it in a thrifty way to the end that we will be able to meet our obligations.

In many wards of the Church where chapels are in the course of construction, members are paying and have paid more tithing than they had previously, which is an evidence that the Lord directly, and through the inspiration of his Holy Spirit, blesses us in our temporal affairs when we obey the commandment of tithing.

At the time President Lorenzo Snow took over the administration of the priesthood government of the Lord Jesus Christ, it was at the end of a terrible period in its history. The Church had been prosecuted and persecuted with reference to the question of plural marriage. Its properties had been confiscated; money was borrowed at the rate of twelve percent interest; and the total income of the Church at the time

Sunday, April 5

Second Day

President Snow came in was required to pay the interest on these loans.

The Prophet supplicated God mightily for divine direction and received a revelation indicating to him that if the people of the Church would obey the law of tithing their lands would be productive, the rains would come, and the financial problem of the Church would be solved. The promise of the Lord was kept through the obedience of the people; the credit of the Church was saved; and today it rests upon a strong financial foundation.

There are spiritual blessings—the blessing of faith, the blessing of testimony, the divine power that motivates you and me to meet this divine commandment and out of which comes spiritual understanding, and that greatly needed virtue to be honest with our Father in heaven, honest with ourselves, and honest with our fellow men.

Happiness comes, and full fellowship in that we enjoy the association of our Heavenly Father's Holy Spirit. These are rewards of which Malachi spoke.

Brigham Young declared:

If we live our religion we will be willing to pay tithing. We are not our own, we are bought with a price, we are the Lord's; our time, our talents, our gold and silver, our wheat and fine flour, our wine and our oil, our cattle, and all there is on this earth that we have in our possession is the Lord's, and he requires one-tenth of this for the building up of His Kingdom. Whether we have much or little, one-tenth should be paid in for tithing. (Discourses of Brigham Young, 1943 edition, 176.)

In conclusion, my brethren and sisters, if there is any question in your minds about this divine law, I ask you to follow the admonition of the resurrected Savior wherein he counseled as follows:

My doctrine is not mine, but his that sent me. If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself. (John 7:16-17.)

I promise you as God lives, through the spirit of the Holy Ghost, that testimony will come into your hearts that the law of tithing is a divine law, and it is necessary to carry on the functions of the priesthood government of the Lord Jesus Christ.

May God give us the strength to obey all of his commandments, that we might enjoy salvation and a place in the celestial kingdom, I humbly ask in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

The speaker who has just concluded is Bishop Joseph L. Wirthlin.

The Deseret Union Sunday School Conference will convene in this building at 7 o'clock tonight. All Sunday School workers should be in attendance. Others are cordially invited.

I am sure I express your feelings when I say we are grateful for the Choir, the Tabernacle Choir. Every week, every month, for years, they have devoted their time and their means to make a success of this organization; to the officers, the conductors, the organists, members, we extend our sincere gratitude and blessing. Their influence is felt throughout the world.

We are not unmindful of your service. We give you our blessing.

We are grateful to the ushers for the service they have rendered; also to the officers of the Salt Lake City Safety Department, who are rendering service on the grounds, on the streets, and we ask you to cooperate with them. Huge crowds are here in the city, the highways will be crowded. This morning I received a special delivery letter from the mayor of one of our cities, who calls attention to fast driving through the town. He writes, "Friday afternoon, Saturday morning, our road patrol officers had occasion to stop 20 motorists who were exceeding the speed limit. 17 of those were going to Conference."

Fast drivers should keep in mind the question that a driver gave to some women who were urging him to hurry so they would not be late to their meeting: He said, "Would you prefer to be late for your meeting, or early for eternity?" The answer is obvious.

Let us be careful, particularly around this block and the city streets, and on the highways too when you return to your homes tonight or tomorrow and come back to Conference.

The Tabernacle Choir will now favor us with the anthem, "Worthy is the Lamb."

The closing prayer will be offered by Elder J. Raymond Dewey, President of the Weiser Stake, after which this Conference will stand adjourned until ten o'clock tomorrow morning.

---

Singing by the Choir, "Worthy Is The Lamb."

Elder J. Raymond Dewey, President of the Weiser Stake, offered the closing prayer.

Conference adjourned until Monday morning, April 6 at 10:00.

THIRD DAY MORNING MEETING

Conference reconvened Monday morning, April 6 at 10 o'clock.

The choral music for this session of the Conference was furnished by the Brigham Young University Combined Choruses.

President McKay opened the meeting with the following introductory remarks:

President David O. McKay:

We are assembled in the great Tabernacle on Temple Square, in Salt Lake City, in the sixth session of the 123rd Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. These services will be broadcast in the Assembly Hall and Barratt Hall over a loudspeaking system and by television.

The Tabernacle is crowded to overflowing, and it is necessary to open these other buildings for the overflow.

The proceedings of this session will also be broadcast over station KSL and over the stations named in the first session of the conference, and also the stations named Sunday morning, in California, in appreciation of which, I am pleased to read the following telegram just received, dated yesterday:

"Dear President: Thousands of Latter-day Saints Southlanders thrill to direct wire conference broadcast here in Southern California. We are looking today. We can hear in its entirety. With regards, Committee for Southern California Broadcasts, by Benjamin G. Carlyle."

Appreciation is a virtue.

This session will be televised over KSL television station, channel five.

The singing for this session will be furnished by the Brigham Young University Combined Choruses, with Brother Newel Waite, conducting, and Frank W. Asper at the organ.

We shall begin by the Brigham Young University Combined Choruses singing, "Blessed be the Lord," Brother Ray Leonard is soloist. This is written by Brother Gerrit deJong, Jr., conducted by Brother Newel Waite.

The opening prayer will be offered by President J. Quayle Ward, President of the University Stake.

---

The Combined Choruses sang: "Blessed Be The Lord."

President J. Quayle Ward of the University Stake offered the opening prayer.

The Combined Choruses sang the hymn, "High On The Mountain Top."

President David O. McKay:

President J. Reuben Clark, Jr., of the First Presidency, will now present the General Authorities, General Officers, and General Auxiliary Officers of the Church for the sustaining vote of the General Conference.

Monday, April 6Third Day

President J. Reuben Clark, Jr., Second Counselor in the First Presidency, presented for the vote of the people the General Authorities, General Officers, and General Auxiliary Officers of the Church, and they were unanimously sustained by those present. The list as presented and sustained is as follows:

GENERAL AUTHORITIES OF THE CHURCH

THE FIRST PRESIDENCY

David O. McKay, Prophet, Seer and Revelator, and President of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Stephen L. Richards, First Counselor in the First Presidency.

J. Reuben Clark, Jr., Second Counselor in the First Presidency.

PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL OF THE TWELVE APOSTLES

Joseph Fielding Smith

QUORUM OF THE TWELVE APOSTLES

Joseph Fielding Smith

Albert E. Bowen

Harold B. Lee

Spencer W. Kimball

Ezra Taft Benson

Mark E. Petersen

Matthew Cowley

Henry D. Moyle

Delbert Leon Stapley

Marion G. Romney

LeGrand Richards

Adam S. Bennion

PATRIARCH TO THE CHURCH

Eldred G. Smith

The counselors in The First Presidency, the Twelve Apostles, and the Patriarch to the Church as Prophets, Seers and Revelators.

ASSISTANTS TO THE TWELVE

Thomas E. McKay

Clifford E. Young

Alma Sonne

George Q. Morris

Stayner Richards

El Ray L. Christiansen

John Longden

TRUSTEE-IN-TRUST

David O. McKay

As Trustee-in-Trust for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

THE FIRST COUNCIL OF THE SEVENTY

Levi Edgar Young

Antoine R. Ivins

Richard L. Evans

Oscar A. Kirkham

Seymour Dilworth Young

Milton R. Hunter

Bruce R. McConkie

PRESIDING BISHOPRIC

Joseph L. Wirthlin, Presiding Bishop
 Thorpe B. Isaacson, First Counselor
 Carl W. Buehner, Second Counselor

CHURCH HISTORIAN AND RECORDER

Joseph Fielding Smith, with A. William Lund as Assistant

CHURCH BOARD OF EDUCATION

David O. McKay	Mark E. Petersen
Stephen L. Richards	Matthew Cowley
J. Reuben Clark, Jr.	Henry D. Moyle
Joseph Fielding Smith	Delbert Leon Stapley
Albert E. Bowen	Marion G. Romney
Harold B. Lee	LeGrand Richards
Spencer W. Kimball	Adam S. Bennion
Ezra Taft Benson	Franklin L. West

COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

Franklin L. West

SEMINARY SUPERVISORS

J. Karl Wood
 Joy F. Dunyon

AUDITING COMMITTEE

Orval W. Adams	George S. Spencer
Albert E. Bowen	Harold H. Bennett

TABERNACLE CHOIR

Lester F. Hewlett, President
 J. Spencer Cornwall, Conductor
 Richard P. Condie, Assistant Conductor

ORGANISTS

Alexander Schreiner	Frank W. Asper
Roy M. Darley, Assistant

CHURCH WELFARE COMMITTEE

ADVISERS

Albert E. Bowen	Alma Sonne
Harold B. Lee	ElRay L. Christiansen
Henry D. Moyle	John Longden
Matthew Cowley	Antoine R. Ivins
Delbert L. Stapley	Oscar A. Kirkham
Marion G. Romney	Joseph L. Wirthlin
LeGrand Richards	Thorpe B. Isaacson
Thomas E. McKay	Carl W. Buehner
Clifford E. Young

General Presidency of Relief Society

GENERAL COMMITTEE

Henry D. Moyle, Chairman
Harold B. Lee, Managing Director
Marion G. Romney, Assistant Managing Director
Paul C. Child	Lorenzo H. Hatch
T. C. Stayner	Walter Dansie
Mark B. Garff	LeRoy A. Wirthlin
Leonard E. Adams	Henry C. Jorgensen
J. Leonard Love	Walter Stover
W. T. Lawrence

GENERAL AUXILIARY OFFICERS OF THE CHURCH

RELIEF SOCIETY

Belle Smith Spafford, President
 Marianne Clark Sharp, First Counselor
 Velma N. Simonsen, Second Counselor
 with all members of the Board as at present constituted

DESERET SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION

George R. Hill, General Superintendent
 David Lawrence McKay, First Assistant Superintendent
 Lynn S. Richards, Second Assistant Superintendent
 with all members of the Board as at present constituted

YOUNG MEN'S MUTUAL IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION

Elbert R. Curtis, General Superintendent
 A. Walter Stevenson, First Assistant Superintendent
 David S. King, Second Assistant Superintendent
 with all members of the Board as at present constituted

YOUNG WOMEN'S MUTUAL IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION

Bertha S. Reeder, President
 Emily H. Bennett, First Counselor
 LaRue C. Longden, Second Counselor
 with all members of the Board as at present constituted

PRIMARY ASSOCIATION

LaVern W. Parmley, President
 Arta M. Hale, First Counselor
 Florence H. Richards, Second Counselor
 with all members of the Board as at present constituted

---

President J. Reuben Clark, Jr.:

President McKay, as far as I have been able to observe, all votes were unanimous in the affirmative.

President David O. McKay:

President J. Reuben Clark, Jr., of the First Presidency, has just presented the General Authorities, the General Officers and the General Auxiliary Officers of the Church, for the sustaining vote of the Conference, and you have just heard that the voting has been unanimous in the affirmative.

Will Brother Adam S. Bennion please come forward and take his place on the rostrum. We welcome Elder Bennion to his position in the Council of the Twelve.

Our first speaker this morning will be Elder Spencer W. Kimball of the Council of the Twelve. He will be followed by Elder George Q. Morris, Assistant to the Twelve.

ELDER SPENCER W. KIMBALL

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

MY BELOVED brothers and sisters: I pray for the blessings of the Lord, as have those who have spoken before me, and I enlist an interest in your faith and prayers. This morning I am missing from our number Elder John A. Widtsoe, our beloved brother, and I pay tribute again to him. I am grateful for his rich life of devotion to the Church and the delightful association we have had with him.

It shall be my great pleasure to sustain and to receive into my heart and into our Council, Brother Adam S. Bennion, whose life of rich and varied experience, his wealth of training, and his stalwart faith will bring to the people of the Church great blessings, and I am sure that you will love him.

Much has been said in this conference about missionary work. Nearly every speaker has referred to it. I am tremendously interested in the missionary work of the Church, both foreign and stake. I wish to direct my remarks this morning more toward the stake missionary service and of that work, the minority program, and of the minority program, particularly the Lamanite phase.

The Lamanite is the forgotten man, and though there has been much progress and though there have been friends raised up to him, he still is the forgotten man and is in need of assistance. It seems to me that if the Lord Jesus Christ were here with us in person, he would emphasize the work among these people. I remember that as early as July 1828, the Lord said:

And again, verily I say unto you, O inhabitants of the earth: I the Lord am willing to make these things known unto all flesh. (D. & C. 1:34.)

Nevertheless, my work shall go forth, for inasmuch as the knowledge of a Savior has come unto the world, through the testimony of the Jews, even so shall the knowledge of a Savior come unto my people—

And to the Nephites, and the Jacobites, and the Josephites, and the Zoramites, through the testimony of their fathers—

And this testimony shall come to the knowledge of the Lamanites, and the Lemuelites, and the Ishmaelites, who dwinded in unbelief because of the iniquity of their fathers, whom the Lord has suffered to destroy their brethren the Nephites, because of their iniquities and their abominations.

And for this very purpose are these plates preserved, which contain these records—that the promises of the Lord might be fulfilled, which he made to his people;

And that the Lamanites might come to the knowledge of their fathers, and that they might know the promises of the Lord, and that they may believe the gospel and rely upon the merits of Jesus Christ, and be glorified through faith in his name, and that through their repentance they might be saved. Amen. (Ibid., 3:16-20.)

A little later in the same year, 1828, the Lord seemed to have this on his mind, as he dictated:

And I said unto them, [the holy prophets of the Book of Mormon] that it should be granted unto them according to their faith in their prayers;

. . . that my gospel . . . might come unto their brethren the Lamanites, and

Monday, April 6

Third Day

also all that had become Lamanites because of their dissensions. (Ibid., 10:47-48.)

In September 1830, the Lord said:

And now, behold, I say unto you that you shall go unto the Lamanites and preach my gospel unto them; and inasmuch as they receive thy teachings thou shalt cause my church to be established among them. . . . (Ibid., 28:8.)

That same month, through the Prophet Joseph, the Lord said to the Whitmers to go with Oliver Cowdery,

. . . for I have given unto him power to build up my church among the Lamanites. (Ibid., 30:6.)

And again in October of that year, he revealed, "And Ziba Peterson also shall go with them," that is, with Oliver Cowdery, Peter Whitmer, and Parley P. Pratt, "and I myself will go with them and be in their midst; and I am their advocate with the Father, and nothing shall prevail against them." (Ibid., 32:3.)

Then in March 1831, through the Prophet there came a revelation to Sidney Rigdon, Parley P. Pratt, and Leman Copley—

But before the great day of the Lord shall come, Jacob shall flourish in the wilderness, and the Lamanites shall blossom as the rose. (Ibid., 49:24.)

And then I am remembering the prayer of the Prophet Joseph in the Kirtland Temple in 1836 and his reference to these people again, and he supplicates the Father,

And cause that the remnants of Jacob, who have been cursed and smitten because of their transgression, be converted from their wild and savage condition to the fullness of the everlasting gospel. (Ibid., 109:65.)

The Prophet Joseph Smith in 1841 was receiving a great many Indian chiefs and their groups in Nauvoo. They came over on the ferryboat and two flatboats to see the Prophet Joseph. And he says:

I accordingly went down, and met Keokuk, Kis-ku-kosh, Appenoose, and about one hundred chiefs and braves of those tribes, with their families. * * * I conducted them to the meeting grounds in the grove, and instructed them in many things which the Lord had revealed unto me concerning their fathers, and the promises that were made concerning them in the Book of Mormon. I advised them to cease killing each other. * * *

Keokuk replied that he had a Book of Mormon at his wigwam which I had given him some years before. "I believe," said he, "you are a great and good man; I look rough, but I also am a son of the Great Spirit. I have heard your advice—we intend to quit fighting, and follow the good talk you have given us." (D.H.C. 4:401-402.)

Now, all through the Doctrine and Covenants, all through those early years, it would seem that the Lord intended that the work among these great people should not be hampered or delayed but should go forward without any delay.

President John Taylor said, and I have quoted this before,

The work among the Lamanites must not be postponed, if we desire to retain the approval of God. Thus far we have been content simply to baptize them, let them run wild again, but this must continue no longer. The same devoted effort, the same care and instruction, the same organization and priesthood must be introduced and maintained among the house of Lehi as amongst those of Israel gathered from Gentile nations. As yet God has been doing all and we comparatively nothing. He has led many of them to us and they have been baptized, and now we must instruct them further, organize them into churches with proper presidencies, attach them to our stakes, organizations, etc., in one word, treat them exactly in these respects, as we would and do treat our white brethren. (The Gospel Kingdom, John Taylor, 247.)

Many changes have come since those days. Nations have been annihilated; lands and forests and streams have been appropriated; royalty has been humbled; and great peoples have been subdued and brought to extremes in want, poverty, ignorance, superstition, and deprivation. They have been scattered and driven according to prophecy. They have been hissed and spurned, and the full weight of a big nation has pressed down upon them.

But a new day is dawning. The Lamanites are putting on their beautiful garments; they have made much progress with our limited assistance and much on their own. We have the priesthood among them. Many hundreds are occupied now in positions of responsibility. The Church has been established among them, to a limited degree, and we hope that it will continue. There are Lamanite wards and branches in many parts of the Church. In the islands of the sea, of course, this is a program extending over a century. But here among the Lamanites, as Brother Cowley said so beautifully last night in our Sunday School conference, it is rather a new thing. We have baptized this year 2500 Lamanites in the Church, and we have now approximately 45,000 of them on the records of the Church. We have in the El Paso Third Ward a Lamanite bishop, a high priest in the Church, and you should have seen the tears of joy of his people as he was installed in this high and important place.

We have a Pima Indian bishop in the Papago Ward in the Maricopa Stake, a forty-five-year-old man who runs a grade A dairy and operates a 1200 acre farm. He has been on the tribal council, and is a man of power and influence.

In the Mexican Mission we have the advisory council, twelve strong, faithful men. We have district presidencies and branch presidencies, and it was the privilege of Brother McConkie and myself in November to meet with many of these groups of branch presidencies, and in their very humble circumstances they sat and with their books and pencils were taking notes of suggestions which we gave them as to the conduct of branches and districts in the organization and teaching of their people. These branch presidencies and these Lamanite bishops are interviewing people as to their worthiness and they have the power to withhold or to give temple blessings and other Church privileges to their members.

All through the Lamanite world we have leaders, and they are emerging now with greater strength and power. We have in the Mexican Mission forty-five young people who are filling full-term missions in addition to the fifty white boys and girls from other areas. There soon will be a preponderance of Spanish-speaking missionaries in that field. They are being supported by the special missionary fund of the Presidency of the Church and by individual donors who are helping them.

Down in the Navajo area, we have branch presidencies now who are conducting sacrament meetings, who are leading, who are speaking, who are praying, and we have "singing mothers" groups among them. It is glorious to see them growing and expanding and coming into their own. The work is developing among them. A great need is missionaries. In Mexican cities we met in groups where we had as many as two or three hundred people, hungering and thirsting for the word of the Lord, and three-fourths of them were not members of the Church.

We have branches down in Navajo land and Hopi land, with 105, 140, 160 members of the Church carrying on in normal fashion. This coming from what were termed the primitive Indians yesterday is a great advance, and we are grateful for it.

Temple work is going forward. Through the work of Sister Ivy Huish Jones, wife of the mission president in the Spanish-American Mission, 10,000 sheets of family groups have been prepared, and all through the Spanish-speaking missions the work is going forward.

It would do your heart good to see numbers of Lamanite brothers and sisters sealed in the temple. Seventeen couples in San Antonio alone have been sealed in the temple; fifty-three in this small El Paso Ward have been to the temple and had their endowments; 281 people in the Mexican Mission, coming as far as a thousand miles, have had their endowments in the holy temple. It is a great joy to see the Hawaiian Temple as I saw it one day, filled with Japanese members doing their work, and all of the workers in the temple were Lamanites—Samoans and Hawaiians.

Monday, April 6Third Day

The question is asked me nearly every day when the Indian program is mentioned: Will they stay with the Church? Will they retain their faith? Or, will they go back "to the blanket?" And I want to tell you that few will return to the blanket when they have had their opportunities in education and the gospel.

President Golden Buchanan of the Southwest Indian Mission wrote me this: "We have had no excommunications, and with the exception of two or three, none have apostatized nor joined other churches, nor gone back to their own church. . . . It is my opinion that our loss through apostasy is probably smaller than any other mission or group of people."

Their superstitions are giving way. The medicine man is being replaced by the administering elders, and also the M.D.'s. They are taking inoculations and vaccinations; they are going to hospitals for their babies. Twenty-three hundred Navajo boys and girls are up at the Intermountain Indian school at Brigham City. They are all taken care of with chest X-rays and complete physical examinations. They are learning that there are germs in the world, and by avoiding them they are increasing their health.

Superstitions held them down but they are giving way and twins are now permitted to live. That was not possible yesterday. Twins were a bad omen, and they were not allowed to live but were starved or otherwise permitted to die. But today twins are living. Down in Arizona the other day two boys whose names were Franklin Roosevelt and Wendell Willkie Gallerito were dancing for tourists, and you can guess their ages by their names.

Marriage has come to have a different significance. The first formal modern wedding was performed in Yakima recently. One of our young couples was married by one of our elders. The Yakima paper stated it was "the first formal wedding in the history of the Yakima Indian tribes."

Their burials have changed, that is, they are changing. It is a gradual process. Instead of cremation, they are being buried. A few years ago with President Flake, I visited Chief Baha Alchesay, the last hereditary chief of the 3800 Apaches in Arizona. He set a pattern for his Apache people when he asked for Christian burial. He had a great funeral; the governor of the state of Arizona was the speaker, and it was conducted by a Protestant minister of the church to which he belonged.

The Indians wept as they followed him to his grave. They shot no favorite horse; the widow did not clip her hair; no food or water was left in the casket or near it. He was buried in a blue serge suit with a white shirt and with a four-in-hand tie. He was the last of the hereditary chiefs. He did not put the mantle of his chiefship upon his son, as had his father upon him. The work now is carried on in a democratic way by the tribal council groups who are elected by their members.

The Apaches are quite well-to-do, and the Navajos have come into some money, and the Utes out here have received some money; and it is the privilege now of the missionaries and all of us to help teach them to use their money in beneficial ways for themselves instead of squandering it.

The Indian now has the franchise. Theoretically he has had it ever since World War I, but until last year it was not a reality in Arizona, where the greatest number of the Indians reside. Now they may vote. In the Shonto precinct last fall there were twenty-six voters and of them, twenty-two were Navajo votes. Of the election board, five out of six were Navajos, three men and two women. It was their first chance to vote for the President of the United States. There were 768 Navajos registered last year. About a quarter of the Apaches were registered for the election.

I should like to say that Dr. George A. Boyce is doing a good work with the 2300 Indian boys and girls at Brigham City. One hundred and seven of them are Latter-day Saints, and you saw ten or fifteen of them here last night at the Sunday School presentation. One little boy wrote at election time:

The President promised to protect and defend the government of the United States. He said he would try to stop war and live in freedom. This is what he said. I hope he will.

Living advantages have increased. There are refrigerators in many homes, and there are also electric lights. Fourteen communities now are being considered for gas in the Navajo reservation—gas and electric lights in a Navajo hogan! It is coming. About one out of every four hogans is said to have a radio in it now.

In Gallup they have a radio station, and they give an hour a week in the Navajo language to send their messages to the people out in the hinterlands, and every day fifteen-minute-broadcasts are heard.

This, of course, is old for many of the Lamanites in other areas, but it is new here.

Employment is increasing. Thousands have found in their service in the war that it was good to sleep between sheets, and to have three good, varied meals a day and to have good clothes and money in their pockets, and to have all the advantages that white people have, and they have come back to the reservations dissatisfied and now thousands of them are working on railroads, in the mines, on the farms; and this brings to us another great opportunity to teach them the gospel as they come among us, instead of shunning them as many do.

The Indian converts are firm and steadfast. One Lamanite sister was in a group of women sitting together, and something came up about what the bishop was going to require of them, and a white sister said, "Well, we just are not going to do it, are we, Sister Poogy?" And Sister Poogy said, "Whatever the authorities ask us to do, that I am going to do."

They attend their meetings faithfully. Brother McConkie met 1144 on the Navajo reservation down there a few months ago when he was visiting the mission. They preach; they teach all phases of the gospel; they teach the Word of Wisdom; they teach chastity; they teach the restoration; they call the people to repentance; and they are living the commandments well.

And I could tell you many stories about their honesty and their integrity, about their cleanliness of living, about their love for the program of the Church.

Brothers and sisters, there is much I should like to say to you this morning about this great program, but time will not permit, but I would like to close with one or two further thoughts, and then I am through.

Here is a letter from a good brother who had been in the Church only months. Here is real devotion to the Church. He wrote:

Dear Friend: I am going to write to you for about Miss Mary ..... She is in school at ..... place, and she is write me a letter and she finds that they don't let her go to Mormon Church. Do you know why they don't let her go to our Church, and what can I do for her for she can go to Mormon Church, because I ask her and she my girl? You know we belong Mormon Church. Will you please write to me and let me know and maybe you know what I do for it? I am sure like it for her to go to Mormon Church. She said they let her go to another kind of Church. You know her. She was down with last month ago when is baptized. I just want to let you know about

Monday, April 6

Third Day

why they don't let her go to Mormon Church. Answer soon. Please.

The Lord bless the Lamanite people. They are a great people. They are intelligent, and I repeat my theme song: The difference between them and us is opportunity. It is your privilege and mine through education, through employment and every other means, and particularly through bringing the gospel of Jesus Christ in all kindness and brotherliness to them, to give them that opportunity which will make of them enlightened, faithful sons and daughters of God with all of the blessings which are promised to them.

I pray with one of our Lamanite sisters, who pleaded, "Heavenly Father, please bless the missionaries, that they won't get discouraged with us Indians, and please bless the Indians that they will always listen." This is my prayer, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER GEORGE Q. MORRIS

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles

MY DEAR BRETHREN AND SISTERS: I rejoice in being with you here this morning. I have been very much interested in Brother Kimball's references to the Lamanite people, and I recall a beautiful scene up on the borders of the Dominion of Canada, a winding river with a background of forest and soft, green sloping banks, where a Mohawk Indian, dressed in white, baptized his family into the Church of Jesus Christ.

I sincerely pray that the Lord may direct me to say that which he would have me say. I rejoice in the gospel of Jesus Christ. It is the power of God unto salvation, and what it is doing for the Lamanites, it is doing for all people who will accept it.

There is a statement in the scriptures made by the Apostle Paul, at least so translated,

Therefore leaving the principles of the doctrine of Christ, let us go on unto perfection. (Hebrews 6:1.)

I haven't time to deal with the various versions of this passage except to say, of course, it doesn't mean that we can discard any of the principles of the gospel of Jesus Christ, we cannot, after joining the Church, leave behind and discard the principles and ordinances that we call the first principles in the articles of our faith. The rendering of this passage by the Prophet Joseph

Smith in the inspired version is, "Therefore not leaving the principles of the doctrine of Christ, let us go on to perfection." I believe we should be more cognizant of the fact that we need the first principles of the gospel every day of our lives. It is by these principles that we live.

They are: faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, repentance, baptism by immersion for the remission of sins, and laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost. By these two principles and the principles involved in these two ordinances we come into the Church, and it is my opinion that it is by the operation of these principles that we stay in the Church, and that we grow in the Church. Without them we could not remain faithful, and with them, we may advance to salvation and perfection through the power of the Lord.

It is sometimes said it is humanly impossible to keep all the commandments of God. The Apostle said we should go on to perfection, and the Lord said in his Sermon on the Mount,

Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect. (Matt. 5:48.)

It is not humanly possible for us to become perfect and to keep all the commandments of God, but we are not talking about a human institution. We are talking about what the Apostle Paul said "is the power of God unto salvation" (Romans 1:16), and it is by the power of God that these things are done, as we place ourselves in a position for these principles to operate upon us.

It is the purpose of the Lord to bring us all back into his presence, if we will keep his commandments and enter into covenant with him and walk uprightly before him and serve him and keep his commandments all the days of our lives. Now, I am sure everyone here every day needs some repentance, and we need to have a remission of our sins, which comes by virtue of the fact that we repent and that we have been baptized into the Church. And above all, we need the Spirit and power of God. The older I grow, the more I am convinced that the chief thing that we do need, and the highest achievement in the world to which we can attain, is to be guided by the Spirit of God. We can do that by keeping his commandments and in no other way that I know of. The Lord has outlined that most wonderfully in the ninety-third section of the Doctrine and Covenants, referring to the operation of that principle and these principles of the gospel that have been given to us. He speaks of the reference in John, to the Lord Jesus Christ as having become perfect by receiving grace upon grace and advancing from grace to grace until he had a fulness. That is set forth as the method, the progress toward salvation and exaltation in the presence of God, and it is held up as the method by which we may progress.

We will obtain the advantage of these principles by having faith. In our first principle, it is not the abstract principle of faith that we hold to as the first principle of the gospel, but faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. And the only true faith in him is a faith in him as the Son of God, the Redeemer of the world, who atoned for our sins, who opened the tomb and instituted the resurrection from the dead. He is the light and the life of the world, the Lord omnipotent. When we have true faith in him, all necessary things are possible, and it is by the power of God, through this faith, that we are to be perfected and made fit to come back into the presence of our God. We need that faith every day in our personal conduct, in overcoming our shortcomings, in keeping the commandments, in being forgiven for our transgressions, in having an increase of the Holy Spirit with us to guide us and direct us.

Every principle requires faith. I was very much edified by Bishop Wirthlin's reference to the law of tithing and the appeal that we should pay tithing. I think that is a good illustration of this principle of faith. I think when people say they haven't money enough to pay tithing, they should say they haven't faith enough to pay tithing. It is my conviction that we pay tithing with faith and not with money, because when a man has so much money that he has a large tithing, he can't pay tithing. He has too much money and too little faith to pay tithing, and just feels he can't afford it. I know a man who must have earned twenty-five thousand dollars or fifty thousand dollars a year, and he sent in a little pittance of three hundred dollars so that he would be on the tithing list. That wasn't tithing. I won't say what it was. I knew another man who was in financial distress, losing his home, harassed, but his tithing always came through. He didn't have money to spare for tithing in one sense. He didn't have money enough to pay his debts, his pressing obligations, but he had faith, and by faith he paid his tithing and remained straight with the Lord. I urge with all my heart that all the members of this Church who should pay tithing, pay an honest tithing—and don't scrape the measure off too level. Put a little offering of gratitude there, to heap it up just a little. The Lord heaps things up until they are running over with the blessings we receive from him. Let's be true and faithful. It is an interesting thing in this matter of tithing, which the Lord has set it up as his means of carrying on his work. It is through his blessings that all our money comes to us, and our means. It is a gift from him. The singular thing is that he has arranged that he must give $10,000 to get $1,000 back for his work. That may seem a very odd way of doing it, but that is his generous method; and the only way the Lord can get $1,000 contributed to the carrying on of his work under the tithing system is to give $10,000. I will leave it for you to figure out to whom he is going to give $10,000, whether it will be to those who keep it all, or whether it will be to those who turn back the $1,000 that he requires for his work. If we will pay our honest tithing to God, he will bless us and prosper us and increase our faith, and I believe the Lord has a lot of things to do that he can only do through people who have faith to pay their honest tithing.

Monday, April 6

Third Day

I speak of that only as an illustration. I think the same principle applies in all our conduct, as far as our characters are concerned. Through faith in the Lord Jesus Christ we may correct ourselves and have our sins remitted and have an increased portion of the Spirit of the Lord.

Now what is the process. The Lord outlines that most wonderfully in the ninety-third section of the Doctrine and Covenants, as I have said referring to the Savior, advancing from grace to grace, he applies the same principle to us: "For if you keep my commandments you shall receive of his fulness, and be glorified in me as I am in the Father." (D. & C. 93:20.) That is the direct, clear word of the Lord Jesus Christ to every man in this world, if he will accept the gospel, and to us who have the gospel. We are promised that we shall be glorified in him, as he is in the Father. Again.

The Spirit of truth is of God. I am the Spirit of truth, and John bore record of me, saying: He received a fulness of truth, yea, even of all truth;

And no man receiveth a fulness unless he keepeth his commandments.

He that keepeth his commandments receiveth truth and light, until he is glorified in truth and knoweth all things. (Ibid., 93:26-28.)

That is spoken to us as members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and applies to all people of the world. The process is the same with us as with the Lord. From grace to grace we advance until we are glorified in truth and know all things. The Lord in this section (verse 36) says that "the glory of God is intelligence," and that is what the Lord is speaking of in this I have just read when he said we were to receive truth and light because he defines intelligence, which is the glory of God, as light and truth. I thank the Lord for that definition of intelligence because one may become greatly confused as between intelligence and mental brilliance and other unusual qualities that men have. Satan was the Son of the Morning, evidently a powerful spirit in the councils of God, called "Lucifer, the Son of the Morning," but he was without intelligence. The Lord said "he was a murderer from the beginning," the father of lies. Those are the words of the Lord Jesus Christ who knew him, for he it was whom Satan tried to dethrone.

So that is the course of advancement. It is within our reach, not by our power alone, but through the power of God.

Now what is the opposite of that? It is set forth in this same section,

And that wicked one cometh and taketh away light and truth through disobedience, from the children of men. (Italics Author's.) (Ibid., 93:39.)

Here is set up the controlling principle of all advancement in the kingdom, that of obedience. Anything we hope for, anything we desire, anything we should have will come to us through the principle of obedience and by the same token all may be lost by disobedience. How simple the gospel is! The requirement is an obedient heart, an obedient heart.

In another place the Lord said,

If you keep not my commandments, the love of the Father shall not continue with you, therefore you shall walk in darkness. (Ibid., 95:12.)

May the Lord give us power, humility, and meekness, that with determination and in gratitude and thanksgiving to him, we may be intelligent enough to keep his commandments and glorify his holy name, I humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER ADAM S. BENNION

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

NO MAN who has not been through this experience can appreciate what it means. I am honored but humbled. For years I have been going up and down the land preaching, but in the hour of this greatest call I have no preaching. With your faith and prayers and with the sustaining influence of our Father in heaven, I should like to give you in a few brief minutes my personal witness.

President McKay has been an ideal to me all my life, and I love him. Thirty-eight years ago I was called to the membership of the general board of Sunday Schools at the instance of President McKay and President Stephen L. Richards. During those years I have sat at their feet to admire them, to marvel at their strength, to glory in their service. President Clark I have always regarded as one of the strong men of America. These men who constitute the General Authorities of the Church I have known and have worked with, and I honor and sustain them all. The members of the Twelve, and the Assistants, and the Presiding Bishopric, and all others called to these high positions—I love them. I can only hope in my heart that they will find it in theirs to sustain me as I sustain them.

I love this Church and its people. In the fall of 1847 my grandfather

The Combined Choruses of the Brigham Young University and the congregation sang the hymn, "Praise To The Man Who Communed With Jehovah."

President David O. McKay:

Elder Adam S. Bennion, whom you have just this morning sustained as a member of the Council of the Twelve will now address us. He will be followed by Bishop Carl W. Buehner.

came across the plains and lived in a log cabin such as is in the southeast corner of this block. For a quarter of a century now it has been my privilege to bring men from all parts of the country to this block, and in tribute to our pioneers I always take them to one spot. If you haven't seen it, I commend it to you. If you'll go yonder to the southeast corner and stand with one eye on their early abode, the log cabin, and the other eye turned a little to the northwest, you will realize that while they lived in the log cabin they dreamed dreams of a temple. A hundred years ago this year they laid the foundation. The men who come from New York marvel as they turn from the log cabin and its hint of poverty to the temple that took forty years to build and required four million dollars that they did not have. They were real people.

I love this country. I love its inspired Constitution and its great free institutions. If I have had a text for the last twenty years, it has been the preservation of all that we cherish in the name of freedom. It is my hope that the things that are our benediction may be passed on to our children. This country has been wonderful to me as has this Church.

I think that perhaps nobody in this

Monday, April 6

Third Day

congregation came from humbler circumstances than I, and for that I am grateful. I do not recall my father at all because he died when I was a year and a half old, but like you I had a wonderful mother. As a matter of fact, my life has been enriched by three wonderful women: the mother who bore me and nurtured me through the privations of those days when with five little ones she made ends meet somehow; the companion of my life who for forty-one years has sustained me with an unflinching devotion; and a mother-in-law who has none of the attributes that we so familiarly attach to the name, Sister Richard W. Young, with her ninety years of benediction.

I have said I love this Church and its people. I love the Lord. My life is anchored to the testimony that I have that God lives and that Jesus is the Christ. I glory in my membership in a Church which was instituted through revelation, and I testify to you today that the Prophet Joseph Smith and all of his successors, men of God, have been inspired to build this great institution.

President McKay, in the love I bear you, I give you my life and my service, and with your sustaining benediction and the blessings of heaven, I'll go where you want me to go; I'll give my best in an attempt to do what you and He would have me to do.

God bless you all. If my assignment may in some part be with these grand young people such as are here from Brigham Young University today, it will be a glorious privilege to bear witness to a new generation of the glories of the gospel as they have blessed me at every turn of my life. I pray the blessings of God upon us all, and I dedicate myself to this service, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

BISHOP CARL W. BUEHNER

Second Counselor in the Presiding Bishopric

THIS is a great and an inspiring conference, and I am most happy that I can be here this morning and raise my hand to sustain those who have been called to preside over us in this great Church.

I would like Brother Bennion to know (I have known him for many years) that he has been an inspiration in my life, and that I am sure he will find great joy and happiness in the new assignment that has come to him.

I should publicly like to thank the First Presidency of the Church for the great experience that came to me immediately following the last general conference, of going into the islands of the Pacific and meeting there a very wonderful people. I had the opportunity of visiting New Zealand, Samoa, Tonga, the island of Niue, and the Hawaiian Islands, and I found there a people of great faith, who have an admiration for the leadership of this Church. I am sure this morning their eyes are focused on this great conference, from which the law goes forth.

I should like to relate one brief experience, and that is because I have observed the great number of people who have tried to get into the Tabernacle to hear the conference. I participated in the dedication of a little chapel at Pago Pago in the Tutuilla District, and I observed something there that I would like to recommend to the Church. I would like to see it tried here. This little chapel, which normally, I imagine, would seat about two hundred people if it were equipped like our chapels are, had no benches in it. The people all sat on the floor with crossed legs. We had 508 in a little chapel that normally would hold two hundred. I am not recommending that we take the benches out of the Tabernacle, but we may use some new chapel as a guinea pig to try the new method, and possibly we could reduce the size of our buildings so that we could build more chapels, be just as happy and just as comfortable as these fine people in the isles of the Pacific. It was a great experience.

My note here says that I was to say something about this beautiful springtime and how nature has put on its new garments. Looking out of the windows, you can tell I didn't write this speech this morning.

When I was in the Hawaiian Islands, I had a little story related to me by President Edward L. Clissold of the Oahu Stake which impressed me very much. He told me of a Filipino man who was very earnestly studying the gospel, who was a very studious sort of person, a man who was very shy and backward, who became acquainted with the missionaries and also with President Clissold, and after becoming intensely interested and studying the gospel for some time, became a convert to the Church. President Clissold said shortly after this time they were holding a quarterly conference in the stake, and he kept having the impression that he should like to have some person, who recently had come into the Church, bear his testimony, and the name of this Filipino who had recently become a convert kept crossing his mind, but he said, "I knew if I called on him it would frighten him to death, knowing the nature of the person; but that idea so persisted that I finally called him up out of the audience, and he came to the stand. When he spoke, he said, 'I am forty-two years of age. For forty-one years I do not know where I am or where I am going; but for one year, I know where I am and where I am going.'" I thought, there is a thought-provoking subject on which sermons could be preached. Something came into that man's life that changed his whole perspective, and in a few short months, after becoming acquainted with those who have authority to preach the true gospel, he could also say he knew where he was now, and where he was going. I tell you, brethren and sisters, that probably the great difference between the true Church of Jesus Christ and all these other denominations is in that very statement—that those who have accepted the truth know where they are and know where they are going, and I doubt that the rest of the Christian world can say that thing.

I have had some great experiences in the stakes of the Church. My work in the Presiding Bishopric has largely been with an army of men who have become a little wayward, a little backward, who have acquired a few bad habits, and because of this, have not identified themselves too regularly with the organizations of the Church. We have made a great effort to reclaim some of these brethren. My heart goes out to bishops, bishops' counselors, ward teachers, advisers, and others, who put their arms around these men and point out to them the thing they have missed in life and bring them back.

I heard one recently down in the Uvada Stake. He was invited to say a few words at quarterly conference. It was a great effort for this man, and when he had finished his little talk, he said, "I would like you folks to know that when the bishop asked me to give this little talk, the devil also assigned someone to tell me not to give this talk," and then he began to point out eight different occasions where the devil and he had a contest over whether or not he was going to give this talk. You know, that influence is rampant in the earth, and I am sure many of us are being influenced by it. I am sure we are locked with him many times. Someone said in these few words: "I have heard much about the devil. I have read a great deal about the devil. I have even done business with the devil, but it didn't pay."

I would like to tell you today that I hope we starve the devil to death, that we give him no business, and that we devote all our time and all our energies to doing the work of the Lord. I think that is one way we are going to bind Satan, by not letting him have influence concerning us.

Monday, April 6

Third Day

I was in the North Weber Stake just last week, and I heard another of these young men stand up, and as he did so, he said, "I'll never get over thanking the bishop who put his arm around me four months ago and invited me to do a little something in the Church." Then he bore his testimony indicating how happy he was, and he said, "For twenty-one years I have been inactive in this Church and have missed a great opportunity." When that meeting was over, the first person to rush up and embrace him was his wife, and standing next to his wife was his mother, her eyes filled with tears. She said to me, "This is one of the greatest days of my life, to have my son stand there, bear his testimony, and express his gratitude that he is now active again in the Church."

I heard a good sister not so long ago in one of the stakes up in the east here, who was responding to a little talk about what the activity of her husband meant to her. She said she had prayed and worked in the Church for twenty-two years and hoped that the day would come when something would influence her husband to turn him away from some of the habits he had so that eventually they could enjoy some of the great blessings that come to the faithful in the Church. She said that early in his life he had been a sheep man. He went out in the sheep camp and acquired some bad habits. Later on his brother became very ill, and unknown to anyone else, he went to the elders and had them administer to him. His brother was seriously ill, and he even despaired as to whether he might recover or not. The Lord heard the prayers of the elders, and this man's health was restored to him. Later on this man became seriously ill himself, and he asked for the elders to administer to him, and he had a recovery. About that time his wife said, "My husband felt that he ought in some way to repay the Lord for the goodness that had come to him, and so he began to go to meetings and participate in some of the activities. He began to lay aside some of his bad habits. The bishop recognizing this, made him a member of the building committee of the ward. He was a man with a fine personality, a fine looking man, and he did a great job." She said, "One morning we were having breakfast, and our small daughter (I suppose noticing that the father poured himself a cup of coffee) said, 'Dad, you are getting along fine. When are you going to quit drinking coffee?' The man said, 'I guess I might as well quit right now,'" and she said, "He poured the coffee back in the coffee pot, and that was the last coffee that he drank." His activity increased, and the happiness in the home began to increase also. Then she said the bishop finally gave him another job in the Church. A few months later someone came to him and said, "Your name has been recommended to have you interviewed to be ordained an elder in the Church," and that so thrilled the man that from then on he didn't miss any more meetings of any kind. He became very faithful and very active. Then she said, as her eyes filled with tears, "Finally, the great day came when the bishop came to us and said, 'I have noticed the activity of your husband and the members of your family. I am sure you are ready to go into the temple to be sealed for time and all eternity.'" Then she said, "That great day came when we were in the Salt Lake Temple, my husband and I and our children being sealed together for time and all eternity. I waited twenty-two years, but it was worth every minute of it."

I heard a number of these men, and I have been impressed by the great work we can do, brethren, if we will reach out our arms and invite them back into activity. Most of them just need a little job, need a little encouragement, need someone who has a little interest in them, and we can accomplish a great good with these fine people.

I am sure my time is gone. I would like to mention one other little story that a father told me about his little son. Someone mentioned a little boy yesterday in his talk. This little boy was not quite six years of age, and his father said that last Father's Day he wanted to make an impression on his youngster. He had been playing out on the street. They brought him in and washed him up, and at the dinner table he wanted to impress this youngster with the value of Father's Day and what a great man the father was. He said as he was getting along with his little talk, his little boy said, "Daddy, do you know that God is the Daddy of all of the daddies and that Jesus is the Oldest Brother of all of the brothers?" That father said, "I all but got off my chair and knelt at the feet of my little son." I want to tell you, in the words of a child, that was a great truth, and I wish people of the world could understand just that, that God is the Daddy of all of the daddies and that Jesus is the Oldest Brother of all of the brothers.

Then in conclusion someone else said, "Be careful. You may be the only standard works that some people may read." Now think that over. I think there is a lot of truth in that.

May the Lord help us to live our lives worthy of membership in this Church, and may we be anxious and willing to do our part to help move forward this great work, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

He who has just spoken to us is Bishop Carl W. Buehner, a member of the Presiding Bishopric of the Church. We shall now hear from Elder Delbert L. Stapley of the Council of the Twelve, who will be followed by Elder Marion G. Romney. Elder Stapley—

ELDER DELBERT L. STAPLEY

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

MY BROTHERS AND SISTERS, I should like to pay tribute to our late beloved departed associate, Elder John A. Widtsoe, a man who has contributed much to this Church and its people. He left many books, manuscripts, and leaflets that we can all use and profit by. I, too, want to welcome Elder Adam S. Bennion into the Quorum of the Twelve and assure him that he has my love, my prayers, my blessing, my help. I know he will contribute a great deal to the work. He is filling the shoes of a very important individual, but I know he will rise to the great responsibilities of this call.

I would like for you to keep in mind, my brothers and sisters, as I speak to you, the talks of President David O. McKay on the home, of Bishop Thorpe B. Isaacson on security in the gospel of Jesus Christ, and the talk of President Bruce R. McConkie on the Holy Ghost, its powers and functions.

Toward the close of his ministry, Christ taught his disciples that he must suffer many things and be crucified and would rise again the third day. Peter rebuked the Savior saying, "Be it far from thee, Lord: this shall not be unto thee." Jesus turned to Peter and said, "Get thee behind me, Satan: thou art an offence unto me: for thou savourest not the things that be of God, but those that be of men." (Matt. 16:22-23.) If the Lord walked among us today, would we be an offense unto him and subject to chastisement for savoring the things of men more than the things of God?

Our modern scientific material world with its great achievements, conveniences, comforts, and tempting prosperity has diverted many a good man from his avowed plan to serve God faithfully. Opportunities for riches, and the power that goes with them, often impels men to pursue increased possessions, money, and the honors of men more than the love and favor of God. The faith of many such men often is destroyed and their spiritual opportunities and blessings sacrificed. They become cold and indifferent to religion and pierce themselves and families through with many sorrows.

Monday, April 6

Third Day

... it is the will of God that man should repent and serve Him in health, and in the strength and power of his mind, in order to secure his blessing, and not wait until he is called to die. (Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith, 197.)

We have the responsibility as parents of providing for our own, and in our best endeavors to do so there are normally accumulations of material possessions. There is nothing against a person earning and enjoying material possessions provided he is not spiritually hurt in the process and fulfils completely his heavenly covenants and sacred obligations to his God. "For a man's life," says the Savior, "does not consist in the abundance of the things which he possesses."

The Lord has given us the good things of the earth that we might better serve him. Somehow people get mixed up in values and fail to recognize the important purposes of earth life that a kind and loving Heavenly Father has so graciously provided for them.

Our most important possession is the gospel. It has no counterpart. It encompasses all truth. It is the only plan for life and salvation that is eternal and applies to all mankind. Obedience to its principles, doctrines, and ordinances is our only hope for protection and peace in a disturbed world. The Lord has counseled us "to seek first the kingdom of heaven and its righteousness, and all else will be added." The Nephites, following Christ's ministry among them, for two hundred years realized the full benefits of following this counsel. There was an unprecedented era of righteousness and faith among these people. They had all things common among them. There were not rich and poor, bond and free, and there were no contentions or disputations among them. They dealt justly with each other; the Lord prospered them exceedingly; and they builded large cities. In Fourth Nephi we read,

And it came to pass that there was no contention in the land, because of the love of God which did dwell in the hearts of the people.

And there were no envyings, nor strifes, nor tumults, nor whoredoms, nor lyings, nor murders, nor any manner of lasciviousness; and surely there could not be a happier people among all the people who had been created by the hand of God. (4 Nephi 15-16.)

God did bless them in all their doings, but later, however, wealth, pride, and the desire for influence and power led to their complete destruction as a people and a nation. Moral decay has ever been the downfall of peoples and nations.

Faith in God and in his son Jesus Christ must find lodgment and full and continued expression in every heart or man will be destroyed by his own ignorance and materialism. Today, man's world with the Christ and his teachings is on the brink of disaster. As I think about it, I wonder what condition the world would be in if it did not have a Christ and did not have his teachings with the great plan of salvation as we know and understand it. No doubt the people of the world would have been destroyed long ago.

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints has gained influence and prestige among men. Its opportunities to do good are unlimited. If the Church is to be as a light upon a hill and a beacon to all people, I am firmly convinced that our most important duty is to be true, faithful, and devoted disciples of Christ, and not as people of the world, for the Lord has called us out of the world, a people peculiar unto him. In I John we read,

Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him;

For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world.

And the world passeth away, and the lust thereof; but he that doeth the will of God abideth for ever. (1 John 2:15-17.)

This does not mean the Lord will deny to his people the good things that modern science and invention have provided for the better enjoyment of life, but we are counseled to forego worldly pursuits and pleasures in favor of heavenly and spiritual things.

The Prophet Joseph Smith has said, "As a Church and a people it behooves us to be wise and to seek to know the will of God and then be willing to do it, for blessed is he that heareth the word of the Lord and keepeth it." To accomplish the purposes of the Lord's latter-day kingdom, his people must show vision and understanding by right choices and judgments in personal affairs as they are influenced by the Holy Ghost, the heavenly gift and power given to guide his faithful Saints. This sets an example and pattern of business conduct that all men can follow with profit and confidence. Under present doubtful economic conditions we, as Latter-day Saints, should not over-extend our resources by taking unwise and hazardous chances. To do so would make us vulnerable to reverses and losses, thus seriously and adversely affecting our lives and the Lord's work. To keep ourselves financially strong and secure in whatever we possess is most important to each of us. I believe it wise to have available unused borrowing capacity even under less than normal conditions and also satisfactory bank accounts or savings (which could be cheap dollars) to tide us through difficult situations or conditions. Any reverses without available funds or borrowing privileges could jeopardize entire holdings. This is not a time to have our credit stretched to the limit and no cash reserves on hand.

In this great land of ours we have enjoyed twelve prosperous years. No previous time begins to compare with it either for volume or duration. It would now seem prudent, wise, and timely to stabilize our financial positions, making safe our holdings and possessions to assure security, proper living standards, cultural and economic advantages for ourselves and families, and also make possible our most sacred duty in building up the Lord's kingdom in the earth.

The Lord has counseled his people to pray over their flocks and herds, which applies to every man's interests. If we faithfully live the gospel and honor the Holy Priesthood of God, we have a right and claim upon him for his blessings and the inspiration to guide us in making proper decisions for the conduct of our businesses in this period of economic uncertainty. There are serious rough spots ahead, flashing warning lights of caution that Latter-day Saints cannot ignore. This past week the stock market ran for shelter on indication of possible peace in Korea. Business and markets are sensitive to any change in world conditions. We must recognize the signs of the times as indicated by prophecy and have vision and wise understanding of national and world trends to safeguard our interests and thus strengthen the cause of Zion, even as Joseph of old so wisely planned and prepared against the days of famine and adversity, and thus became a great benefactor to the Egyptians and his father's family. We need all the help that faith, prayer, and inspiration can give.

The Latter-day Saints by getting out of debt and thus securing their holdings could set a good example for all people. We were advised recently from this pulpit by President Stephen L. Richards to get out of debt, and that counsel now under present economic conditions, and particularly in the light of the past week's happenings, is most timely and wise. With such admonition there should be no cause for us to err in our judgments as to the course we should follow.

Monday, April 6

We are acquainted with recent government economy moves which, I hope, we all approve and commend our national leaders for, but it does indicate a cautious trend in our national life and is bound to spread to other fields. We have also witnessed an adjustment in farm commodity and livestock prices. In spite of heavy government military orders, consumer merchandise is becoming more plentiful and shortages progressively fewer in number. Prices in some lines are softening, and the cost of living index is lowering. The long sustained inflationary boom period made possible by war scare, high taxes, a staggering government debt, also increasing serious world problems with peace in the balance, are danger signals that call for caution and wise decisions. The economic adjustments now taking place should over the long pull be helpful to our national economy, but some segments of our economic life cannot help being hurt by lower prices caused by such adjustments. Some of our people have already experienced serious and costly losses.

It is generally conceded that 1953 will be a good business year, the first half favorable, the last half perhaps doubtful, and 1954 rather clouded. The Latter-day Saints should take advantage of whatever remaining good times that are ahead to get out of debt, make secure present holdings, and not take chances with odds against them for a high rate of prosperity continuing. No one can ever be criticized for consolidating his position and holdings to assure security and opportunities for himself and family. We must remember that we pay obligations and meet our commitments out of what is left after taxes. Taxation is a heavy taskmaster and a hard teacher. I wonder whether heavier tax burdens leaving us less to show for our labors and thrifty habits are necessary before we realize what the true values of life are.

Third Day

The Prophet Joseph Smith has issued this warning,

I will prophesy that the signs of the coming of the Son of Man are already commenced. One pestilence will desolate after another. . . . Some may have cried peace, but the Saints in the world will have little peace from henceforth. . . . Wars are at hand. . . . We ought to have the building up of Zion as our greatest object. (Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith, 160.)

I call your attention to the statement by President Joseph Fielding Smith in last Saturday's conference session when he said peace would not come to the earth until the Savior brings it at his second coming.

Now in this talk, my brothers and sisters, I am not intending to cause panic or fear in the hearts of the Latter-day Saint people. Again, 1953 is conceded a fair year, however, an orderly and planned program of debt liquidation with protection of interests, eliminating all risk hazards should be very helpful and not harmful to the national economy, and as I interpret present conditions, it appears to me the wise course to follow. I know it will bring peace and comfort of mind and a glorious sense of security and well-being for those we love and who depend upon us with full trust and confidence for life's necessities and opportunities.

My soul is full with the spirit of this latter-day work. It is most important. It must not fail. God has called us to holy callings and depends on us to keep free of entanglements and financial involvements to serve him freely and effectively and to promote his glorious kingdom on earth. May we ever keep in mind these suggestions and be faithful and true in our Church obligations, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Elder Delbert L. Stapley, of the Council of the Twelve, has just spoken to us.

Among our educators who have been in attendance at the Conference sessions, or heads of departments of leading schools, is President John L. Clarke, President of Ricks College. Brother Clarke, will you please call Operator 103 at Rexburg. It is an emergency.

The closing song by the Brigham Young University Combined Choruses, will be "Omnipotence," conducted by Brother Newel Weight, the Soloist is Sister Lula Reeter Matis.

The closing prayer will be offered by Elder A. Sherman Gowans, formerly President of the Norwegian Mission, following which this Conference will stand adjourned until two o'clock this afternoon. The proceedings of this afternoon's session will be broadcast over all the stations heretofore announced, and over television.

The Combined Choruses sang an anthem, "Omnipotence," conducted by Don L. Earl.

President David O. McKay:

The Combined Choruses will be with us again this afternoon. We appreciate this large attendance from the Brigham Young University, and are grateful for the service they have rendered this morning. President Gowans, formerly President of the Norwegian Mission will now offer the benediction.

---

Elder A. Sherman Gowans, formerly President of the Norwegian Mission, offered the closing prayer.

Conference adjourned until 2:00 p.m.

THIRD DAY AFTERNOON MEETING

The concluding session of the Conference was called to order promptly at 2:00 p.m., Monday afternoon, with President David O. McKay presiding and conducting the services.

The Brigham Young University Combined Choruses were again in attendance and furnished the choral music for this session.

President David O. McKay:

This is the concluding and seventh session of the 123rd Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. We are convened in the Tabernacle in Salt Lake City. For those who are unable to enter the building, we announce that the services are being broadcast in the Assembly Hall and in Barratt Hall over a loud speaking system, also by television.

The proceedings will be broadcast over station KSL in Salt Lake City, and by arrangements through KSL over the stations named in the first session of this Conference. We shall not take the time to read them, but we thank these radio stations and networks for their cooperation and for the excellent service they have rendered throughout this Conference.

The music for this session will be rendered by the Brigham Young University Combined Choruses, under the direction of Elder John R. Halliday, with Frank Asper at the organ. The students are here in large numbers, occupying all the choir seats, and rendering excellent service. We do appreciate their coming.

We shall begin the service by the Brigham Young University Choruses singing, "Glory to God," with Elder Halliday conducting. The opening prayer will be offered by Elder John C. Dalton, President of the East Long Beach Stake.

---

The Combined Choruses sang as an opening number, "Glory To God," John R. Halliday conducting.

Monday, April 6

Third Day

Elder John C. Dalton, President of the East Long Beach Stake offered the invocation.

Singing by the Combined Choruses, "Christ, the Lord, Is Risen Today."

President David O. McKay:

Our first speaker this afternoon is Elder Marion G. Romney of the Council of the Twelve. He will be followed by Elder Henry D. Moyle.

ELDER MARION G. ROMNEY

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

SOMEHOW I don't feel like giving the talk which I had prepared for the conference. I would, however, like to discuss with you a few things that are in my mind, without attempting to make a speech or deliver a discourse.

In the first place, I extend my welcome to Brother Bennion, who has today been called into the Council of the Twelve. He has great talents and the ability to do great service in the Church. He touched my life for good more than thirty years ago when he gave me encouragement in a trying time.

I express my regrets, too, at the passing of Brother Widtsoe, a great man who for many, many years was one of the outstanding leaders of the Church. I am sure our hearts go out to Sister Widtsoe and to her family. Just a year ago Brother Widtsoe gave his last conference talk. He had recently returned, you will remember, from a very important assignment in Canada. He talked about preserving water and making it available to the land. He told how putting water on land turns barren soil into fertile, productive soil. From this he drew the following gospel lesson:

The weavers of the midlands in England, the coal miners of Wales, the fishermen in Norway, the trudging farmers of Denmark, very common, ordinary people, who accept the gospel from the lips of some humble Mormon missionary become so changed by those enlightening truths of the gospel that they are not the same people any longer. They have been fertilized, so to speak, by the Spirit of God that flows from eternal truth, just as in irrigation the barren, dry soil is fertilized by diverting the stream of water from the irrigation ditch onto the thirsty land. (Conference Report, April, 1952, p. 34.)

I am sure we shall long remember the labors of Brother Widtsoe.

I would like to say a word to you, Brother Bowen, if you are listening. Our hearts go out to you; we love you; we recognize the strength of your great character and your unusual intellect. I would like to put in the record a statement from the address you delivered here a year ago. You were explaining how the adoption of the precepts of men had changed the doctrines of the Christian Church. You were, of course, speaking of churches generally, not of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Then you concluded—and I remember these words as you spoke them:

In my view there is only one safety; there is only one cure; and that is to take the pure and unadulterated word of God and set that up as our standard of measurement, and measure every creed and doctrine and dogma by that yardstick. That which will not square with the declarations of Almighty God we can lay aside as unsuited for the need of man. (Ibid., p. 66.)

I know, Brother Bowen, you would love to be here today. We would love to have you, and we give you our faith and our prayers.

Now may I call your attention to President Richards' conference address given six months ago. You will recall that he extended an invitation to the peoples of the world. It began with these words:

I desire to use this opportunity to extend an invitation. . . . To the people of the Church, there is nothing novel in this invitation. Although it has gone out to the people of the world for more than a century, there are still few of the world who fully understand its import. This is the invitation, addressed: To All Men, Women, and Children. Dear Friends: You are cordially and earnestly invited to participate in building the kingdom of God in the earth. Place—Everywhere. Time—Now. (Ibid., October, 1952, pp. 97-98.)

President Richards, we remember that great talk. We have re-read it. We pray God, our Eternal Father, to bring you back that you may give many more such talks.

President McKay, in the opening address of this conference, said there were two things that we should do. One of them was to put our homes in order; the other was to bear witness of the Redeemer. He was thus quoted in the press:

President McKay, in his opening message to the Church membership, emphasized what he termed two great duties of Latter-day Saints: (1) to put their homes in order, and (2) to proclaim the divinity of the mission of Jesus Christ.

I would like to say just a word about my testimony of the mission of Jesus Christ. I want to go a little farther back for a moment, if I can be given guidance by the Spirit of the Lord to speak the truth accurately, and mention the great condition precedent to the efficacy of the mission of Jesus Christ. That condition precedent is the mission of Father Adam, because without the mission of Adam there would have been no need for the mission—the atonement—of Jesus Christ.

I have an assignment from the First Presidency to serve on the Church publications committee. This committee is expected to read and pass upon the literature proposed for use in the study courses of our auxiliary organizations.

It would please me immensely if, in the preparation of this literature, we could get away from using the language of those who do not believe in the mission of Adam. I have reference to words and phrases such as "primitive man," "prehistoric man," "before men learned to write," and the like. We sometimes use these terms in a way that offends my feelings; in a way which indicates to me that we get mixed up in our understanding of the mission of Adam. The connotation of these terms, as used by unbelievers, is out of harmony with our understanding of the mission of Adam.

"Adam fell that man might be." (2 Nephi 2:25.) There were no pre-Adamic men in the line of Adam. The Lord said that Adam was the first man. (Moses 1:34, 3:7; D. & C. 84:16.) It is hard for me to get the idea of a man ahead of Adam, before the first man. The Lord also said that Adam was the first flesh (Moses 3:7) which, as I understand it, means the first mortal on the earth. I understand from a statement in the book of Moses, which was made by Enoch, that there was no death in the world before Adam. (Moses 6:48; see also 2 Nephi 2:22.) Enoch said:

. . . death hath come upon our fathers; nevertheless we know them, and cannot deny, and even the first of all we know, even Adam.

For a book of remembrance we have written among us, according to the pattern given by the finger of God; and it is given in our own language. (Moses 6:45-46.)

I understand from this that Enoch could read about Adam in a book which had been written under the tutelage of Almighty God. Thus there were no prehistoric men who could not write because men living in the days of Adam, who was the first man, wrote.

I am not a scientist. I do not profess to know anything but Jesus Christ, and him crucified, and the principles of his gospel. If, however, there are some things in the strata of the earth indicating there were men before Adam, they were not the ancestors of Adam.

Monday, April 5

Third Day

Adam was the son of God. He was our elder brother, not older than Jesus, but he was our brother in the same sense that Jesus was our brother, and he "fell" to earth life. He did not come up through an unbroken line of organic evolution. There had to be a fall. "Adam fell that men might be." (2 Nephi 2:25.)

I will go on now and read this scripture before I forget it:

For a book of remembrance we have written among us, according to the pattern given by the finger of God; and it is given in our own language.

And as Enoch spake forth the words of God, the people trembled, and could not stand in his presence. (Moses 6:46-47.)

Some men speak of the ancients as being savages, as if they had no intelligence. I tell you this man Enoch had intelligence, and Adam had intelligence, as much as any man that ever lived since or that lives now. They were mighty sons of God.

And he said unto them: Because that Adam fell, we are; and by his fall came death; and we are made partakers of misery and woe. (Moses 6:48.)

If Adam and Eve had not partaken of the forbidden fruit, they would have had no children, and we would not have been. (2 Nephi 2:23-25; Moses 5:11.)

I do not look upon Adam's action as a sin. I think it was a deliberate act of free agency. He chose to do that which had to be done to further the purposes of God. The consequences of his act made necessary the atonement of the Redeemer.

I must not go into a longer discussion, but I say again that I would be very pleased if, in our teaching of the gospel, we could keep revealed truth straight in our minds and not get it confused with the ideas and theories of men, who do not believe what the Lord has revealed with respect to the fall of Adam.

Now, I believe with Enoch, "... Because that Adam fell, we are; and by his fall came death;" (Moses 6:48) that every man must die, as Brother Petersen said yesterday. I believe that to meet the demands of justice, it took the atonement of Jesus Christ to redeem men from that death, that they may be raised again and have their spirits and their bodies, which are separated through death, reunited. I believe that through the atonement of Jesus Christ whatever "transgression" Adam committed was paid for, and that as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive, every living creature. (I Cor. 15:22; D. & C. 29:24, 77:2.) I believe, too, that through the atonement of Jesus Christ my individual sins, your individual sins, and the individual sins of every human being that ever lived or ever will live upon the earth were atoned for, upon condition that we accept the gospel and live it to the end of our lives.

I know that my Redeemer lives. I shall not know it better when I stand before the bar of God to be judged. I know that Jesus is the Redeemer. I bear that witness to you, not from what people have told me; I bear it out of a knowledge revealed to me by the Holy Spirit. As to this knowledge, the Lord, after commanding the early Apostles of this dispensation to testify that the words he had spoken to them were of him, said:

For it is my voice which speaketh them unto you; for they are given by my Spirit unto you, and by my power you can read them one to another; and save it were by my power you could not have them;

Wherefore, you can testify that you have heard my voice, and know my words. (D. & C. 18:35-36.)

I am willing to bear this witness to all the Saints and to all men and women everywhere, saints and sinners, in all the world, for it is the eternal truth.

I know that the Prophet Joseph Smith was a prophet of God. I know he saw God, the Eternal Father, and his Son, Jesus Christ, as he says he did. I was not there, but I have read his account many, many, many times. From his account I get in my mind a mental picture, but I did not get my knowledge that he had the vision from that source. I received it from the whisperings of the Holy Spirit, and I have had those whisperings in my mind the same as Enos had when he said, "... the voice of the Lord came into my mind." (Enos 10.)

I know that God revealed every principle of salvation necessary to the salvation of men to the Prophet Joseph Smith. I know that his successor who sits here today, David O. McKay, holds every power and every authority and all the priesthood that the Prophet Joseph had—unless it be the keys of this last dispensation—but every power that is necessary to the salvation of men, he holds. Nobody has a testimony of the gospel that will save him unless he knows it, too.

It is an easy thing to believe in the dead prophets, but it is a greater thing to believe in the living prophets. I will give you an illustration.

One day when President Grant was living, I sat in my office across the street following a general conference. A man came over to see me, an elderly man. He was very upset about what had been said in this conference by some of the Brethren, including myself. I could tell from his speech that he came from a foreign land. After I had quieted him enough so he would listen, I said, "Why did you come to America?"

"I came here because a prophet of God told me to come."

"Who was the prophet?" I continued.

"Wilford Woodruff."

"Do you believe Wilford Woodruff was a prophet of God?"

"Yes," said he.

"Do you believe that his successor, President Lorenzo Snow, was a prophet of God?"

"Yes, I do."

"Do you believe that President Joseph F. Smith was a prophet of God?"

"Yes, sir."

Then came the "sixty-four dollar question." "Do you believe that Heber J. Grant is a prophet of God?"

His answer: "I think he ought to keep his mouth shut about old age assistance."

Now I tell you that a man in his position is on the way to apostasy. He is forfeiting his chances for eternal life. So is everyone who cannot follow the living prophet of God.

I want to say one more thing before I sit down. Today being the twentieth anniversary of Brother Clark's call to the First Presidency, I want to pay him a tribute. I love him. Although the Lord had to go all the way to Mexico City to find him, I am grateful that he brought him back to give us this twenty years of service. I want to read a statement from the message he gave twenty years ago. In it he spoke of his great humility and of the apprehension he felt as to whether he could meet the requirements of his new position. In telling of the joys he anticipated, he said:

We shall have the joy of work, too, for man also is that he might work, he went forth from the innocence of Eden to the God-like knowledge of good and evil, with the Divine blessing—not curse—as it seems to me: "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread." And save in extremity, no man may rightfully violate that law by living by the sweat from the brow of his brother. It is the eternal, inescapable law that growth comes only from work and preparation, whether the growth be material, mental, or spiritual. Work has no substitute. Idleness brings neither profit, nor advantage, nor good—only a withering decay and death. The world is near to forgetting all this; I hope that we as a people shall keep it ever in remembrance, for in proportion as it is forgotten, evil will rule. (Conference Report, April, 1933, p. 103.)

I have watched him work through these years, as have the other brethren. We greatly appreciate the example he has set for us.

In conclusion, let me say this by way of general statement. Work, brothers and sisters, work in the kingdom. Get the testimony of the gospel. I think it is a disgrace for men and women to stand on the same ground day after day in their testimony, their knowledge of the gospel, and their work in the Church. We should go forward. We ought to be on our mettle all the time, reaching, perfecting our lives, doing more work, going forward preparing to meet the Redeemer. We live in the day just before his coming. We must speed the day, speed the work in preparation for that great day, that we may rest our souls in the kingdom of God, which I hope we may all do, and so pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

Monday, April 6

Third Day

President David O. McKay:

Elder Marion G. Romney of the Council of the Twelve has just concluded speaking.

We shall now hear from Elder Henry D. Moyle, of the Council of the Twelve. He will be followed by Elder Stayner Richards.

ELDER HENRY D. MOYLE

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

WE HAVE all been thrilled with the marvelous, inspired, testimony of Elder Marion G. Romney. Every word that he uttered found a responsive chord in my being. And I should like to say amen to all that he said.

I have a feeling akin to the last statement which he made, concerning the necessity for us to show in our lives by our works, the faith that we have in the gospel of Jesus Christ.

If we believe, as we profess, we should constitute the greatest body of friends the earth has ever known. I have been reading recently the statement of a great writer who must have had a deep insight into the subject of friendship, though his attitude toward the same may have been somewhat cynical. He said, and I am quoting from Emerson:

The higher the style we demand of friendship, of course, the less easy to establish it with flesh and blood. We walk alone in the world. Friends such as we desire are dreams and fables. But a sublime hope cheers even the faithful heart, that elsewhere, in other regions of the universal power, souls are now acting, enduring, and daring, which can love us and which we can love. We may congratulate ourselves that the period of nonage, of follies, of blunder, and of shame, is passed in solitude, and when we are finished men, we shall grasp heroic hands in heroic hands. Only be admonished by what you already see, not to strike leagues of friendship with cheap persons where no friendship can be.

Our impatience betrays us into rash and foolish alliances which no god attends. By persisting in your path, though you forfeit the little, you gain the greater.

I am conscious today that had there come into Emerson's life that which has come into yours and mine, the power of the priesthood of God, he would have had a different idea, a different conception of friendship. We have spoken frequently during this conference of our testimony of the divinity of the work in which we are engaged. We know that God lives, that Jesus is the Christ. We know that the Savior of mankind is the only Begotten Son of the Father. I bear witness to these facts in all solemnity, and I likewise want to bear witness to the fact that there is a brotherhood of man, that just as Jesus is our elder brother, so are we brethren ourselves. We belong to a society in which there can be a perfect friendship. It requires of us but one thing, and that is that we keep the commandments of God. It is this fellowship, this brotherhood that makes it possible for us to magnify the priesthood of God which has been conferred upon us as men of Israel in these latter days.

I want to bear witness to you today, my brethren, that none of us can magnify our callings in the priesthood, none of us can exercise the power of the priesthood efficaciously, and none of us can have that witness come into our hearts that gives us that knowledge supreme of the existence of God and his Son Jesus Christ, unless we are true brothers, unless we belong to a society of men who love one another, and who are devoted to one another, who have confidence in one another, and who are much more apt to forgive the mistakes of one another than to criticize that which we may see amiss in our neighbor.

Emerson goes on to say in that beautiful essay of his on friendship, I love to read it, that it is difficult if not impossible for true friendship to exist between more than two people. He writes further:

Friendship demands a religious treatment. We talk of choosing our friends, but friends are self-elected. Let me be alone to the end of the world rather than my friend should overstep by word or look his real sympathy. I am equally balked by antagonism and by compliance. Let him not cease an instant to be himself. I hate when I looked for a manly furtherance or at least a manly resistance to find a mush of concession.

Oh, how I wish that he had felt that brotherhood of God which exists in the lives and in the hearts and in the spirit of the men of Israel today, who are magnifying their callings in the priesthood.

As President McKay, at the opening of this great conference, spoke of the home, I could not help feeling that the degree of brotherhood, that degree of friendship which you and I exhibit in our lives may well demonstrate the contacts, the experiences, the influences of the homes in which we are raised. I know as I live that if I reflect in my life the love and the affection, the devotion that my father had for my mother, then I must constantly pray to my Heavenly Father for the strength and the courage to do his will and to keep his commandments. I am sure that there is nothing that we can do, brethren who hold the priesthood, more important in our lives than to bring into our homes that greatest power of all, love. We should bestow love, affection, and devotion upon our wives and let that radiate from us into the lives of our children. May we all go from our homes and throughout our lives in our contacts with our fellow men radiating that love, that affection for mankind which will give to mankind a confidence, a respect, even an obedience to that which we profess.

I was impressed this morning when Elder Harold B. Lee was talking to the missionary meeting in the Assembly Hall as to the qualifications of missionaries. I tell you, brethren, there is no power on earth by which we can penetrate the souls of men, the equal of that radiation of love and affection which will naturally pass from us to those to whom we bring truth and light and knowledge and understanding.

We owe this sort of friendship in the family, this love and affection, for our own brothers and our own sisters in the home, that that might reflect itself in our lives, in our contacts with the world. What we are will bear witness to our friends more eloquently than any words or any testimony that we can speak.

Elder Romney's testimony this afternoon would not have had the effect upon me that it had if I had not known that in his heart he has a love for his fellow men, willing to devote himself, his life, all that he has and is, all that he ever hopes to be to bring to them the satisfaction that the testimony of his has brought to him.

I am grateful for the opportunity I have of associating with men who know what it is to belong to an association of true friends, bound together as we are by the bonds of the Holy Priesthood. I bear witness to you today that as we create these friendships and affections that we have for one another, we can continue them eternally through our obedience to the principles of truth and right. When you brethren come up to me and shake my hand as your brother and pay respect to the office to which I have been called, there comes into my being a consciousness that that friendship is of no limited duration, but it is just as eternal in its nature as the priesthood which we possess and which causes us to assure one another by that handshake that we truly love one another as sons of our Heavenly Father.

Monday, April 6

Third Day

I pray that we may go away from this meeting, from this great conference, with our testimonies renewed, and with our desires to serve the Lord and keep his commandments increased. Maybe, after all, there are only two great commandments. We have spoken a great deal about them both. I love the Lord with all my heart, and with all my soul, and I have no other desire in life than to serve him. I hope that I may go on in life to the end of my journey, retaining that love which I have in my heart for him. I have no greater desire than to have that same love for all my fellow men. I hope I may be bound closely to my brothers and my sisters in the kingdom of God, and that that relationship may be eternal and be righteous, I pray, humbly, in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER STAYNER RICHARDS

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles

AFTER almost a lifetime of acquaintance with Adam S. Bennion, I want to assure him and assure you that I can support him in his new position one hundred percent. I am sure with his intellectual talents, the faith that he has in God, that he will add greatly to the strength of the Church.

In listening to the reports of the twenty-five or more mission presidents, I noted that each one paid a glowing tribute to his wife. Certainly these sisters and the others of the Church are doing a wonderful work and, incidentally, are equal to any occasion, and possibly I may be pardoned if I tell a little experience that would prove this to the brethren.

On one occasion a small boy returned from Sunday School where apparently they had been talking about the Darwinian theory, and as he entered the home, he said, "Mother, am I descended from a monkey?" She said, "I don't know, Jimmy, I didn't know your father's folks very well."

If I may enjoy an interest in your feelings and the Spirit of the Lord for a few minutes, I would like to speak upon a subject that I have chosen to call "Monuments to Spirituality." First I would like to make mention of the new temple under construction in Los Angeles. It was my privilege just a week ago this morning, after attending a conference in the Los Angeles Stake, to be shown through the construction work there by Elder Soren Jacobsen, directly in charge of building operations. And I think that he must have had in mind the spirit of the ancient prophet who said, "Except the Lord build the house, they labour in vain that build it," (Psalms 127:1) for you will be interested to know that every morning before they start work, he calls the workmen together and there have a word of prayer. I'm sure that that practice is going to pay dividends in finer construction and certainly a greater interest in the work. And I was happy to notice that during the hour and a half I spent going through those workings I never saw one man loafing, nor anyone using tobacco, and I never heard one man profaning. Now, that may not always be the case, but at least we hope that it might be.

As I have traveled through a number of the stakes of Zion, I have been thrilled and impressed with the wonderful new buildings that have been erected in the wards and stakes. Indeed they constitute a source of pride to every Latter-day Saint, and they are a credit to the community, and a still greater credit to the Church. They all have a spire pointing heavenward, indicating that they are houses of the Lord. They are well designed and built of fine materials. After the landscaping of the grounds around them, they are an inspiration and incentive for all the members of our Church living in those communities to beautify their own places.

As you enter these buildings, you are thrilled with the wonderful facilities for worship, classwork, and recreation provided for the old and young alike. The chapel, recreation hall, and all other rooms are so artistically decorated, with the colors of the walls, drapes, and floor coverings blending into such an attractive picture, that you know expert attention has been given to these items.

The building of these lovely edifices has afforded the opportunity of bringing into activity many of the inactive members of the Church. I think it is safe to say that because of the construction since the war of these nine hundred or more buildings that have been dedicated or are ready for dedication or are now under construction, that in each case there have been at least ten or twelve inactive men brought into the Church, and that would mean at least 10,000 families, formerly inactive in the Church, now active and enjoying the great blessings of the gospel.

This building program hasn't been confined to the stakes and wards but has spread out into the mission fields, in all parts of the foreign lands, except behind the "iron curtain," and the isles of the sea. I know that every mission president present here today and those still out in the foreign fields can testify that these new places, and those that have been purchased, providing lovely places in which to meet, have been a great help to them in the proselyting work. You have no idea how wonderful it is for a missionary after working with certain investigators to be able to invite them into a suitable place in which to worship.

I was asked by the president of the Western Canadian Mission as I met him the other day to please tell my brother that the prophecy which he made at the time he dedicated the beautiful chapel up in Edmonton, Alberta, Canada, in which he stated, "This building will be a missionary of the Church," has been literally fulfilled, and that many prominent people of that rapidly growing city are becoming interested in the Church.

Over in the British Mission a number of years ago, I understand that consideration was given to the closing of the Scottish District because there were only a very few converts being made there. During the last three years there has been an average of seventy-five to a hundred baptisms, and I think to a great extent it is because of the fine, suitable places of worship owned by the Church now in the cities of Glasgow, Edinburgh, Dundee, and Aberdeen. Just a short time ago I had the privilege of interviewing a returned missionary from France, and he told me that he attended the last baptismal service held in that mission and that a number of those that were baptized first got their interest in the Church because of the fine building that the Church now owns in Paris.

It has been stated that each fine building is equal to ten missionaries. If this is the case, then there have been added 9,000 or more silent but effective "preachers of righteousness" to the force.

These buildings, my brethren and sisters, are all made possible by the payment of tithes and contributions of cash and labor by the membership of the Church, and I say unto you, God bless you, my brethren and sisters, for your faith and for your generosity. Also I am sure that we're all grateful and often go to our knees in prayer in appreciation to the Lord for the First Presidency of our Church, for their foresight and their wisdom in inaugurating this great building program of the Church. We have been growing rapidly, spiritually, and it became necessary to grow in a physical way to take care of the membership of the Church.

Monday, April 6

Third Day

Possibly it may not be considered inappropriate to say a word about the building department of the Church under the direction of Elder Howard J. McKean and his associates. They have caused these monuments to spirituality and faith to be erected with good designs, excellent materials, and fine workmanship. Because they are practical builders, they have been able to effect substantial savings to the Church and to the wards and stakes. Great faith has been manifested by the bishops, stake presidents, and local building committees in undertaking the construction of these lovely buildings. A faith-promoting volume could be written about the rich experiences that have come to them. The blessings of the Lord have known no bounds. It would seem that the spirit of the pioneer builders had returned, for they built by faith. As an outstanding example, may I mention about this Tabernacle in which we are now worshiping. It is 150 feet wide by 250 feet long and 70 feet high. It was built between 1863 and 1867 when no finished materials or bolts or steel nails or modern tools were available. They had only the timbers of the nearby canyons and very crude tools and machinery. Under these conditions, it took strong faith to undertake the erection of this unusual elliptical roof. The lattice trusses fitted together with wooden pegs and cowhide must span 150 feet. The least spreading of the trusses would kick out the stone piers below. A prominent engineer of the east, after examining this roof on the inside, stated that it constituted the greatest demonstration of faith that he had seen in any construction.

Now, my brethren and sisters, and especially you bishops and stake and mission presidents, we now rejoice in and are grateful for these beautiful buildings. May I make just a few suggestions to you? In the first place, let us keep them all clean and in order and maintain them in good condition. Then let's encourage all of our people to show respect and reverence to them as houses of the Lord. Above everything else, let us follow the advice just given by Elder Moyle: Let us serve as leaders in the wards, and stakes, and missions in these buildings, in the spirit of love and kindness. Let us carry on our work as the Master says, "Serve each other in love," in such a way that no offenses can be taken by anyone. Finally, though it may not be possible to have neon signs at the top of all of these spires as I would like to see, with these words: "Jesus is the Christ," let us hope that the testimonies of the leaders and members alike bear witness of this great truth and this work is of God, and that the gospel as established in the last days is for the salvation of all honest people throughout the world. And then again, let us invite all visitors to come to these places and assure them that they will never be embarrassed by having a collection plate passed before them. Freely we have received, and freely we give unto the world. God bless you all, my brethren and sisters, I humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

President Richard L. Evans of the First Council of the Seventy will be our next speaker.

ELDER RICHARD L. EVANS

Of the First Council of the Seventy

FIRST OF ALL, I should like to thank Brother Marion G. Romney for his thoughtfulness for some great men, for whom I have deep affection, some present here, and some absent. At the risk of some seeming repetition, I do not feel that I can proceed without acknowledging how much I miss Dr.

John A. Widtsoe, scientist, educator, author, public-servant, personal counselor, friend, and man of God. May his memory be blessed, his family be blessed and comforted, and the purposes and principles for which he gave his life be prospered.

And to President Richards, and to Brother Bowen likewise, my sincere affection and appreciation and blessing. Likewise to President McKay, and President Clark, and President Smith, and these other brethren with whom we have the privilege of associating among the General Authorities. It is a choice and rich friendship and fellowship.

And to Dr. Adam S. Bennion, a word of welcome from me: presumptuous though it may be, I feel that I must speak it. I have been privileged to have many satisfying associations with him. I recall when he was Church commissioner of education, and I was a student in high school: How wise and mature and old he looked to me when I was sixteen, and how able and mature and young he appears to me now that I am somewhat past sixteen. I am sure that I have changed much more than he has.

I am convinced that thoughts are contagious. The evidence of it is that many if not most of those subjects that any of us might have spoken on at this conference have already been so wonderfully well covered, and we have been the beneficiaries of a marvelous outpouring of the Spirit of our Father in heaven. But I could not help thinking as I heard the opening report and message of President McKay, and the statistical data concerning the progress of the Church at the same session, of some of the experiences and hardships and contrasts of the Prophet Joseph Smith and his associates. I went to the office following that session and sought out some things that I had read some time ago, including two comments concerning the Prophet and the dire circumstances in which he found himself during the difficult Kirtland days. One is from April 17, 1834:

I attended a meeting agreeable to appointment, at which time the important subjects of the deliverance of Zion and the building of the Lord's House in Kirtland were discussed by Elder Rigdon. After the lecture, I requested the brethren and sisters to contribute all the money they could for the deliverance of Zion and received twenty-nine dollars and sixty-eight cents. (D.H.C. II:50.)

About a year and a half later, approaching the Christmas season, December 9, 1835, the Prophet Joseph Smith writes again:

At home. Wind south, strong, and chilly. Elder Packard came in this morning, and made me a present of twelve dollars, which he held in a note against me. May God bless him for his liberality. Also, James Aldrich sent me my note by hand of Jesse Hitchcock, on which there was twelve dollars due, and may God bless him for his kindness to me. Also the brethren whose names are written below opened their hearts in great liberality, and paid me at the committee's store, the sums set opposite their respective names. (Ibid., II:326-27.)

There follow twenty names with contributions ranging from fifty cents to $5.25, totaling $40.50, for which the Prophet says,

My heart swells with gratitude inexpressible, when I realize the great condescension of my Heavenly Father, in opening the hearts of these my beloved brethren to administer so liberally to my wants. (Ibid., II:327.)

May God help us to do as well with what we have as they did with what they had.

I think we shall go from here today with an awareness in our hearts that we have been taught well. I hope that we shall go from here with an awareness that we must be doers of the word and not hearers only, that we must not stand by and listen only. I think it was Emerson who said, "'Tis man's perdition to be safe, when for the truth he ought to die." I should like to paraphrase this sentence and say, "'Tis man's perdition to be complacent and inactive, when for the truth he ought to live, when he ought to be doing what he knows he ought to be doing." I return to a favorite theme of mine: As we stand before the Great Judge of all of us, I think it shall not be what we don't know that will get us into trouble or that will cause penalties to come upon us. I think we know enough for our salvation and exaltation in the highest that the Father can give us. I think our difficulties will come rather from what we do know and ignore and fail to live up to; and merciful as our Father may be, kind and indulgent and gracious as he may be, there are some things he cannot give to us, as there are some things we cannot give to our own children, except as they earn them and live them and are deserving of them and make them a part of themselves.

Monday, April 6

Third Day

I recall from the tenth chapter of Mark the request of James and John, the sons of Zebedee, that they be permitted to sit on the right hand and the left hand of the Savior, and how he said unto them, "Ye know not what ye ask: . . . to sit on my right hand and on my left hand is not mine to give. . . ." (Mark 10:38, 40.) No matter how much he may love us, there are some things the Father cannot give us except as we learn them, except as we live as well as we know how to live, except as we keep his commandments, and do what we know we should be doing.

Now, I should like to close with a thought that I take from our new associate, Dr. Adam S. Bennion, whom you have sustained this day. I have never heard a finer baccalaureate address than he delivered at the University of Utah a year or two ago called "The Candle of the Lord," in which he told, in his extemporaneous remarks (and I think perhaps it is not in the printed address as he gave it) how puzzled he was in his youth upon having heard or having read in Sunday School the passage of scripture in II Samuel in which it recounts that "it came to pass in an eveningtide, that David arose from off his bed, and walked upon the roof of the king's house. . . ." (II Samuel 11:2.)

I was much impressed when I heard Dr. Bennion say how that passage puzzled him because all the roofs that he had known in his youth in the area in which he lived were so steeply constructed that the king could not well have walked upon them. And Brother Bennion told how he inquired of his teacher and received no satisfactory answer, but as soon as he later learned that there were places in the world in which there were not only flat roofs but where people also made a practice of living a part of their lives upon them, walking upon them and resting upon them, the question was cleared for him.

I am sure that many of the unanswered questions that confront us will be answered as easily as this one was for him, when he couldn't understand how the king could walk on a roof in the evening because he had only known steep, sharply constructed roofs that were made to shed the snow.

To our young people: Go forth and search for truth, without fear, but with faith. Where you find discrepancies, or seeming discrepancies, reserve judgment. There is time ahead of us, and eternity also. Theories are changing; textbooks are constantly becoming outdated; new discoveries are being made; and when all the pieces are put in place and everything is added up, and the picture is complete, the answers will seem as simple and satisfying as the answer to this lad, who was puzzled by a king walking on the roof.

Keep to a life well-balanced. Keep some of your time and means for the service of the Lord. Study the things of God as well as the other things that you must study to qualify yourselves for certain activities, and go forth with faith, with trust. I think the world is going on for some time. There is great work to be done. Our building program, our temple in Europe, and other things seem to me to be the evidence that this Church believes in the future, and I say to you young people, go forth and live your lives with faith, without fear, reserving judgment where you need to, and trusting to the Lord God to lead you into all truth.

May I leave with you my testimony. I was not one of those who had to decide to leave father and mother and family and friends and other things to become identified with this Church. My grandparents did that for me, and in one instance my great-grandparents. My sons represent the fifth generation in the Church. I congratulate those of you who did face this decision and who did come into the kingdom. But I have faced some other decisions. I have earnestly considered the alternatives, and I should not know where to go to find the answers to the ever ageless questions of life if I could not find them here. I leave you the witness of my conviction of the divinity of the Lord Jesus Christ, of the divine calling of the Prophet Joseph, and after him, of the like calling of all those who have succeeded him. May God bless us, every one, I pray in Jesus' name. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Brother J. Spencer Cornwall will now lead the congregation and combined choruses in singing "How Firm a Foundation." We have just listened to Elder Richard L. Evans of the First Council of the Seventy. After singing we shall hear Elder John Longden, Assistant to the Twelve.

The congregation and the Combined Choruses of the Brigham Young University joined in singing the hymn, "How Firm A Foundation."

ELDER JOHN LONGDEN

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles

How Firm a Foundation, Ye Saints of the Lord."—

I am sure I gained strength from the last verse of that song. I have prayed for each one who has occupied this position during the last three days, and in return I know I shall receive of their faith and prayers in my behalf as I stand here for a few moments this afternoon. This was manifest when my associate, Elder Christiansen, placed his hand on my arm a few moments ago and said, "Hold on, we're with you."

I, too, am happy to sustain Brother Bennion who was chosen here this morning as an Apostle of the Lord Jesus Christ. I recall along with Sister Longden, how about twenty-four years ago he brought into our hearts and our souls the words of the Savior to help comfort us. We were called to undergo a serious tragedy in having our three-year-old daughter, our first-born child, taken beyond the veil. His words at that time have rung true through the years. I know he will contribute much with his talents and his leadership to stir the membership of this Church as he visits throughout the stakes.

As I returned to this building just a while ago with President Ivins and his good wife, it was beginning to rain. I heard the strains from the organ playing "God Moves in a Mysterious Way His Wonders to Perform." The words to one of the verses come to me:

"Ye fearful Saints, fresh courage take;
The clouds ye so much dread are big with mercy
And shall break in blessing on your head."

I realize that we have had great blessings here in the past three days in the sessions of this conference; one in particular—that we have been brought out of the darkness of the world and into the light of the glories of the gospel of Jesus Christ. I cannot help reflecting upon the words of Peter, that great Apostle, when he said in his day to that generation,

Ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people;

Monday, April 6

Third Day

that ye should shew forth the praises of him who hath called you out of darkness into his marvellous light. (1 Peter 2:9.)

Yes, we have been made partakers of the glorious light of the gospel of Jesus Christ. We have had great manifestations of the inspiration of our Heavenly Father in these sessions of the conference. I have been reflecting as I have listened to the speakers that there has been no improvement in the Ten Commandments, and it is reported that they are some thirty-five hundred years old. There has been no greater wisdom given than that which was given by our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ in his great Sermon on the Mount, almost twenty centuries ago. And there has been no greater teaching than that which was given by the Prophet Joseph Smith when he was asked over a hundred years ago what were the tenets of our faith. He gave what we now know as the Articles of Faith. They teach the world that we believe in God and in his son Jesus Christ, and in the Holy Ghost, and they also confirm those principles which were taught by the Savior as to how we might gain exaltation and eternal life. These truths are contained in the gospel which has been restored for us today. Those Articles of Faith state that men should have authority to perform the ordinances which pertain to the salvation and the exaltation of our Heavenly Father's children. Also, we believe in the same organization that existed in the primitive church. I am grateful that in those Articles of Faith it teaches us that we believe the Bible to be the word of God as far as it is translated correctly. I am further grateful that I belong to a Church which enables and encourages me to have a Bible in my home and to peruse it and study it and understand its teachings.

And then the thirteenth article of our faith,

We believe in being honest, true, chaste, benevolent, and in doing good to all men, indeed we may say that we follow the admonition of Paul—We believe all things, we hope all things, we have endured many things, and hope to be able to endure all things. If there is anything virtuous, lovely or of good report or praiseworthy, we seek after these things.

Obedience to the Ten Commandments, the Sermon on the Mount, and our own Articles of Faith revealed in this day will bring the glorious light of the gospel of Jesus Christ into our lives. We have partaken of a real spiritual feast these past three days. We have exercised some of our God-given senses. We have come, and those of the listening audience on radio, and the viewing audience on TV, have also seen and heard. I hope we will take these things into our hearts that they might register deep into our souls, that we might carry these messages back into our wards and our stakes, that there might be truly an upsurge of spirituality.

There has been reference made here to the powers which are manifest in the earth: the power of Jesus Christ on the one hand, and on the other, the power of the adversary. Everything that is contrary to the teachings which we have heard in this conference is promulgated and taught by the evil one, and I testify to you that Satan is real. He is not a myth; he is not a superstition; but he is real, endeavoring to thwart the work of our Heavenly Father. But how thankful I am for the precious light of the gospel which shines upon us and gives us the strength to hold on to the truth. Power will be given us to overcome evil if we live close to the teachings of this conference. We have no greater example than that given by the Savior himself as he had been tempted and tested, if you please, for forty days and forty nights. He was able to subdue Satan in several instances as recorded in the fourth chapter of Luke. You will find there it states that Satan departed for a season, giving evidence to me and to all of us that there is never a time when we won't be subject to the temptations of the adversary as long as we live in the mortal flesh. I call your attention to the other scripture which says that the Savior returned to Galilee in the power of the Spirit.

My brothers and sisters, I'm sure we have been filled with the Spirit of the Lord Jesus Christ by the truths and light which have been given to us in this conference. May we go back to our homes in the power of that Spirit, for I bear witness to you that these things are true, that God lives, that Jesus is the Christ, and that we have a prophet, seer, and revelator, a mouthpiece of our Heavenly Father directing the affairs of this Church in the earth today, and these men whom we have sustained as Apostles are literally the true servants and special witnesses of the Master. This testimony I bear to you in all humility and sincerity and in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

PRESIDENT DAVID O. McKAY

THE HOUR that marks the close of this great conference is here.

As you know, four members of our General Authorities have been disabled recently, and are unable to carry on their regular duties. We are thankful to say, however, that two of them have been with us during the sessions that mark the inspiration and uplift of this gathering.

Elder Thomas E. McKay has been incapacitated for several months. He and the others have had to pay the penalty of overwork, over exertion. When he collapsed several months ago, his heartbeats went down, according to the doctor, to sixteen. We are told that when they get below thirty life is precarious, but from that time, when Thomas E. called his family together to say good-bye, up to the present, he has shown gradual improvement, and now he counts his heartbeats at thirty-six, thirty-eight, occasionally they reach forty. He acknowledges, and we acknowledge, the hand of the Lord in the preservation of his life, and we appreciate, and he appreciates your faith and prayers in his behalf.

Elder Clifford E. Young recently met with an accident, but he, as you know, is sufficiently restored to be enabled to take his part as one of the speakers in this conference, and has given you his message, as has also Elder Thomas E. McKay.

Elder Albert E. Bowen, also stricken, has been confined to the hospital for several months. It is said that one element of true greatness is to choose the right with invincible resolution. That, our Brother Bowen has always done, and expounded the principles of the gospel with a clarity so characteristic of him. Our hearts ache as we note that some of his muscles are not responding. However, we want him to know as we close this great conference, that he still has and will continue to have our faith and prayers for his restoration to health; and we pray that the Lord will give him a desire, and increased faith, to receive the blessings which we hope the Lord will give him. With all our hearts we say God bless you, Brother Bowen.

President Richards, another great leader, has been putting forth too much effort also, and his physical condition requires rest. I am pleased to report to you he is sufficiently recovered to meet occasionally in meetings of the First Presidency. President Clark and I have had three meetings with him during the three days that we have been assembled in this conference, to all the proceedings of which he has been listening over the radio and television.

At the conclusion now he sends this message: "President McKay: I should be very pleased if you would express to the people my deep gratitude for the inspiration of the conference, and also extend to my brethren and sisters my love and my prayers that the united efforts of all the Saints may bring great advancement to the cause we love. Affectionately, Stephen L. Richards."

Monday, April 6

Third Day

Brother Stephen L: Let me assure you that there is but one heart in this great audience today, and it responds in reciprocation of your love and blessing. God bless you!

Now, may we take a few moments to express our gratitude to all who have contributed to the inspiration of the sessions held since last Saturday morning.

First, you who were here yesterday morning listened to an inspiring anthem, entitled "Out of the Silence," written by Elder Cyril Jenkins, one of our members and a holder of the priesthood in Australia, who has rendered great service to the Church in having the excellent selections of the Tabernacle Choir put on the radio stations in that far-off land, and who is now in Great Britain, arranging with the British broadcasting stations to have the people in that land have the privilege of hearing the excellent music rendered by this organization. We thank you, Brother Jenkins, and say God bless you, that you may achieve the noble purposes you have in mind.

We express gratitude and commendation for the responsiveness and attentiveness of the audiences. I wish particularly to commend you for your reverential attitude. This is a sacred building, used for many purposes, it is true, until we get an auditorium that will take care of some secular assemblies of the sessions. It is sacred, and we have noted that you have governed yourselves accordingly. From the moment that the clock marked the beginning of a session, perfect order has prevailed. We ask that this example be followed by all the Saints in their ward chapels and in halls in which you meet to worship.

We express appreciation for the co-operation of city officials. Their ready and efficient service has been noted. The traffic officers have rendered valuable service in handling increased traffic. We have already expressed appreciation to the Berkeley Stake for the calla lilies that have beautified the building.

Our ushers have done excellent service! They volunteered last evening to put up a platform. They had it removed early this morning. They have been ready and willing to look after the people who had need of the emergency hospital, which has been on the grounds, and in every way have rendered service to add to the convenience of the many visitors who are here.

Especially we mention appreciation to the various radio stations: here in our own city, KSL, and others in the state of Utah, in Idaho, in Colorado, Nevada, Arizona, California, Hawaii. Managers of these stations, no one can tell how many people have been blessed by your magnanimity and co-operation. We thank you!

We express appreciation to our singers. I do not know that we have ever had for every session such inspiring music rendered by the combined Scandinavian choirs Saturday, the Men's Chorus of the Tabernacle Choir Saturday night, by our own Tabernacle Choir Sunday, and by the combined choruses of Brigham Young University today. I can scarcely refrain from commenting on the inspiration that the presence of these young men and young women gives to us.

"How beautiful is youth! how bright it gleams

With its illusions, aspirations, dreams!
Book of Beginnings, story without end,
Every maid a heroine, and each man a friend!"

How glorious is youth, and here are several hundred of them in our presence, contributing their talents to the inspiration of our conference. Again, thank you.

To all others who have in any way contributed to the excellency and the inspiration of this, the 123rd conference, we express our gratitude.

Now, may I trespass upon your time a few moments to say a final word to you mission presidents, to you presidencies of stakes, bishoprics of wards, to you officers, stake and local, to you mothers who are doing so much to make these new buildings to which reference has been made, so attractive, and in other ways contributing to the advancement of the work.

Much of what you brethren and sisters do we never hear about, and it seems as though you are working without any visible results, but no good deed, no kind word can be spoken without its effect being felt for good upon all. Sometimes the good may be infinitesimal, but as a rock that is thrown in a pool starts a wave from the center which continues to enlarge until every part of the shore is touched, so your deeds, silent, many of them, unknown, unspoken, unheralded, continue to radiate and touch many hearts.

We are not unappreciative of what you are doing. Nobody can go out to a dedicatory service of one of these meetinghouses, hear incidents, details, illustrations of what seem to be sacrifices of the hours and hours of work, given freely, without being deeply impressed with the integrity and sincerity of the members of this Church.

Thursday morning this building was crowded to capacity by Primary workers, representatives of one organization. That night, the hotel ballroom was crowded with former workers, general board workers of the Primary, present workers, present officers from stakes. I wish the ten thousand people here could have seen the illustration and the examples they gave showing the growth of the Primary during the last seventy-five years.

Friday night this building was crowded to overflowing by the bishoprics of the Church, under the direction of the Presiding Bishopric.

Saturday, seventeen thousand members of the priesthood filled this house, the Assembly Hall, Barratt Hall, Field House at BYU, representing the priesthood of the Church.

We have had a meeting of the patri-archs, another of mission presidents, another of welfare workers, and one of stake missionaries.

Why all these, and all other meetings in the Church? Tell me! They are held for the good of the individual—for your son and my son, your daughter and mine. The Lord has said, "... If it so be that you should labor all your days in crying repentance unto this people, and bring, save it be one soul unto me, how great shall be your joy with him in the kingdom of my Father! And now, if your joy will be great with one soul that you have brought unto me into the kingdom of my Father, how great will be your joy if you should bring many souls unto me!" (D. & C. 18:15-16.)

The whole purpose of the organization of this great Church, so complete, so perfect, is to bless the individual. How that stands out in striking contrast, in opposition, to the claim of the communist who says that the individual is but a spoke in the wheel of the state, that the state is all in all, the individual being but a contributing factor to the perpetuation and strength of the state.

That idea is diametrically opposed to the gospel of Jesus Christ. Jesus sought for a perfect society, "not by agitating the people to revolt against political or social organizations, nor by any reorganization of existing conditions, but by perfecting the individual. He recognized the fallacy in the dream of those who hoped to make a 'perfect society out of imperfect individuals.'" In all these labors and associations, he sought the perfection of the individual.

His goal always set before his followers was the emancipation of men and women from greed, from anger, from jealousy, from hatred, from fear; and in their place he hoped to bring about a complete and normal development of the individual's divine powers through right thinking and unselfish efficient service.

He promised no material rewards, but he did promise perfected, divine

Monday, April 6

Third Day

manhood, as we have heard in this conference. "Be ye perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect." (Matt. 5:48.) And with that divine manhood comes the resultant happiness, true happiness.

FINAL BLESSING

God bless you, my dear fellow workers, you General Authorities, stake presidencies, bishoprics, every officer and teacher throughout the land, every member. May the Spirit of the Lord abide in your hearts, and in your homes, that people partaking of your radiation of honesty, integrity, uprightness, and faith in our Lord Jesus Christ will be led to glorify our Father in heaven.

Many years ago—a Chinese philosopher expressed the thought that I am trying to give you, and the result of individual righteousness as follows:

"If there is righteousness in the heart
there will be beauty in the character.
If there is beauty in the character
there will be harmony in the home.
If there is harmony in the home
there will be order in the nation.
If there is order in the nation
there will be peace in the world."

God help us to bring about that peace in the only way that it can come, and that through obedience to the gospel of Jesus Christ, I pray in his holy name. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

The Brigham Young University Combined Choruses will now sing "Let the Mountains Shout for Joy," conducted by Elder John R. Halliday.

The closing prayer will be offered by President Elvon W. Orme, formerly president of the Australian Mission, after which this conference will be adjourned for six months.

The Combined Chorus sang the anthem, "Let The Mountains Shout For Joy," after which Elder Elvon W. Orme, formerly President of the Australian Mission, offered the benediction.

Conference adjourned sine die.

The congregational singing of the Conference was directed by J. Spencer Cornwall, Conductor, and Richard P. Condie, Assistant Conductor, of the Tabernacle Choir.

The Tabernacle Choir furnished the choral singing for the Sunday morning and afternoon sessions, J. Spencer Cornwall conducting.

The Tabernacle Choir male chorus provided the choral music for the General Priesthood meeting Saturday evening, J. Spencer Cornwall conducting.

The Combined Scandinavian Choirs, R. Hulbert Keddington conductor, furnished musical numbers for the Saturday morning and afternoon sessions.

The Brigham Young University Combined Choruses, with Don L. Earl conducting, furnished the choral numbers for Monday morning session, and the Brigham Young University Combined Choruses (John R. Halliday conducting) presented choral numbers at the Monday afternoon session.

J. Spencer Cornwall directed the Tabernacle Choir and Frank W. Asper was at the organ, in the Tabernacle Choir and Organ broadcast.

Accompaniments and interludes on the great organ were played by Alexander W. Schreiner, Frank W. Asper and Roy A. Darley.

Stenographic notes of the Conference were taken by Frank W. Otterstrom and Joseph Anderson.

JOSEPH ANDERSON

Index

	Page
Anderson, Elder Joseph .....	4
Authorities and Officers Present .....	1
Authorities and Officers Sustained .....	102
Bennion, Elder Adam S. ....	113
Benson, Elder Ezra Taft .....	39
Brigham, Elder Samuel E. ....	44
(General Priesthood Meeting)
Buchner, Bishop Carl W. ....	114
Changes in Church Officers, and Stake, Ward and Branch Organizations .....	4
Choir and Organ Broadcast .....	60
Christensen, Elder George A. ....	46
(General Priesthood Meeting)
Christiansen, Elder ElRay L. ....	34
Church Auditing Committee Report .....	11
Clark, President J. Reuben, Jr. ....	64
Mary Followed 64, Appears to Peter 64, Apostasy Began 65.
Clark, President J. Reuben, Jr. ....	52
(General Priesthood Meeting)
Clark, President J. Reuben, Jr. ....	102
(Presentation of General Authorities and Officers)
Cowley, Elder Matthew .....	93
Evans, Elder Richard L. ....	61
(The Spoken Word)
Evans, Elder Richard L. ....	131
Financial Report .....	9
First Day—Afternoon Meeting .....	24
First Day—Morning Meeting .....	3
General Authorities and Officers Present .....	1
General Authorities, Officers and Auxiliary Officers Sustained .....	102
General Priesthood Meeting .....	43
Hunter, Elder Milton R. ....	76
Isaacson, Bishop Thorpe B. ....	90
Ivins, Elder Antoine R. ....	37
Kimball, Elder Spencer W. ....	105
Kirkham, Elder Oscar A. ....	69
Lee, Elder Harold B. ....	24
Lee, Elder Harold B. ....	51
(General Priesthood Meeting)

	Page
Longden, Elder John .....	133
McConkie, Elder Bruce R. ....	74
McKay, President David O. ....	12
Two Functions 13, Modern View of Salvation 18.
McKay, President David O. ....	58
(General Priesthood Meeting)
McKay, President David O. ....	135
(Closing Address)
McKay, President David O. ....	3, 4, 11, 19, 21, 23, 24, 28, 34, 37, 38, 42, 43, 44, 46, 50, 52, 56, 60, 62, 63, 66, 71, 74, 76, 80, 81, 85, 89, 93, 100, 101, 104, 113, 117, 120, 121, 122, 126, 130, 133, 138
McKay, Elder Thomas E. ....	21
Morris, Elder George Q. ....	110
Moyle, Elder Henry D. ....	126
Obituaries .....	8
Petersen, Elder Mark E. ....	81
Presentation of General Authorities and Officers .....	102
Priesthood Meeting, General .....	43
Richards, Elder LeGrand .....	71
Richards, Elder Stayner .....	128
Robertson, Elder Hilton A. ....	56
(General Priesthood Meeting)
Romney, Elder Marion G. ....	122
Second Day—Afternoon Meeting .....	81
Second Day—Morning Meeting .....	60
Smith, Elder Eldred G. ....	29
Smith, President Joseph Fielding .....	19
Sonne, Elder Alma .....	85
Spoken Word, The .....	61
Stapley, Elder Delbert L. ....	117
Statistical Report .....	8
Sustaining of General Authorities, Officers and Auxiliary Officers .....	102
Tabernacle Choir and Organ Broadcast .....	60
Third Day—Afternoon Meeting .....	121
Third Day—Morning Meeting .....	101
Wirthlin, Bishop Joseph L. ....	95
Young, Elder Clifford E. ....	66
Young, Elder Levi Edgar .....	30
Young, Elder S. Dilworth .....	87

Education Lives As Long As You Read GOOD BOOKS

The Gospel and Man's Relationship to Deity....$1.50

B. H. Roberts

New Witness for Christ in America

Francis W. Kirkham

Volume I .....$2.75

Evidence of Divine Power in the "Coming Forth" of the Book of Mormon

Volume II .....$2.75

Attempts to prove the "Book of Mormon" man-made

Witnesses of the Book of Mormon .....$2.25

Preston Nibley

Doctrine and Covenants Commentary.....$5.00

Joseph Fielding Smith

Autobiography of Parley P. Pratt .....$3.00

Key to Theology .....$1.50

Parley P. Pratt

J. Golden Kimball .....$3.50

Claude Richards

New Witness for God—Vol I, II, III .....$2.50

B. H. Roberts

Each

---

ALL PRICES ARE SUBJECT TO CHANGE WITHOUT NOTICE

---

DESERET BOOK COMPANY

"THE BOOK CENTER OF THE INTERMOUNTAIN WEST"

44 East South Temple Street, Salt Lake City 10, Utah

Some Suggestions for Your Church Library

Books of lasting inspiration by our Church leaders

On the Way to Immortality and Eternal Life.....	$3.50
J. Reuben Clark
Priesthood and Church Government .....	$2.50
John A. Widtsoe
Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith .....	$3.50
Joseph Fielding Smith
Essentials in Church History .....	$4.00
Joseph Fielding Smith
Jesus the Christ—Cloth Edition .....	$3.00
James E. Talmage
Articles of Faith—Missionary Edition.....	$1.50
James E. Talmage
Gospel Standards .....	$2.25
Heber J. Grant
Sharing the Gospel With Others .....	$2.50
George Albert Smith
Word of Wisdom .....	$2.75
John A. Widtsoe
Discourses of Brigham Young .....	$3.00
Compiled by John A. Widtsoe
The Spoken Word .....	$2.00
Richard L. Evans
Unto the Hills .....	$2.00
Richard L. Evans
This Day and Always .....	$2.00
Richard L. Evans
At This Same Hour .....	$2.00
Richard L. Evans
Tonic For Our Times.....	$2.50
Richard L. Evans

---

ALL PRICES ARE SUBJECT TO CHANGE WITHOUT NOTICE

---

DESERET BOOK COMPANY

"THE BOOK CENTER OF THE INTERMOUNTAIN WEST"

44 East South Temple Street, Salt Lake City 10, Utah

One Hundred Twenty-fourth

SEMI-ANNUAL

CONFERENCE

OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST
OF LATTER-DAY SAINTS

Held in the Tabernacle
Salt Lake City, Utah

October 2, 3 and 4,
1953

With Report of Discourses

Published by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints
Salt Lake City, Utah

Printed in the United States of America

Education Lives As Long As You Read

GOOD BOOKS

Life of a Great Leader .....	$2.50
Biography of President Heber J. Grant Bryant S. Hinckley
Presidents of the Church .....	$4.00
Preston Nibley New revised edition including biographical sketch of President David O. McKay
Brigham Young, the Man and His Work.....	$3.00
Preston Nibley
Masterpieces of Latter-day Saint Leaders .....	$2.00
Compiled by N. B. Lundwall
A Marvelous Work and a Wonder .....	$1.75
LeGrand Richards
Sermons and Missionary Services of Melvin J. Ballard .....	$2.75
Bryant S. Hinckley
Prophecy and Modern Times .....	$1.75
W. Cleon Skousen
Ancient America and The Book of Mormon.....	$4.00
Milton R. Hunter and Thomas Stewart Ferguson
Outlines of Ecclesiastical History .....	$2.25
B. H. Roberts

---

ALL PRICES ARE SUBJECT TO CHANGE WITHOUT NOTICE

---

DESERET BOOK COMPANY

"THE BOOK CENTER OF THE INTERMOUNTAIN WEST"

44 East South Temple Street, Salt Lake City 10, Utah

The One Hundred Twenty-fourth Semi-Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints

The One Hundred Twenty-fourth Semi-Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints convened in the Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, Utah, Friday, Saturday and Sunday, October 2, 3 and 4, 1953.

The general sessions of the Conference were held at 10:00 a.m. and 2:00 p.m., Friday, Saturday and Sunday, and the General Priesthood meeting was held in the Tabernacle Saturday evening, October 3, at 7:00.

The proceedings of the general sessions were broadcast and telecast over Station KSL, and by arrangement through KSL over the following stations:

In Utah: KSVC at Richfield, KSUB at Cedar City, KVNU at Logan, KJAM at Vernal.

In Idaho: KRXX at Rexburg, KJRL at Pocatello, KID at Idaho Falls, KGEM at Boise, KBIO at Burley, KEEP at Twin Falls.

In Colorado: KEXO at Grand Junction.

In Nevada: KELY at Ely.

In Arizona: KTYL at Mesa, KVNC at Winslow.

In California: (Sunday Only) KBLA at North Hollywood, KEEN at San Jose, KSBR at San Bruno, KRON at San Francisco, KNOB at Long Beach, KPRO at Riverside, KGO-TV at San Francisco, KNXT-TV at Los Angeles.

In Washington: (Sunday Morning Only) KYAK at Yakima, K'TINT-TV at Tacoma.

In Oregon: (Sunday Morning Only) KPAM at Portland, KWRC at Pendleton, KPTV-TV at Portland.

The proceedings of the general sessions were also televised over KSL television station, Channel 5.

All general sessions of the conference and the General Priesthood meeting were broadcast in the Assembly Hall, on Temple Square, and in Barratt Hall (60 North Main Street), over a loud-speaking system and by television. Thousands, in addition, listened to the services on the Tabernacle grounds by means of amplifying equipment.

The proceedings of the General Priesthood meeting were broadcast by special wire to the Brigham Young University Fieldhouse in Provo, Utah, and to the Church's Institute in Logan, for the accommodation of large groups of brethren holding the priesthood who had assembled in those buildings to listen to the services.

President David O. McKay presided and conducted the services at each of the sessions of the Conference, including the General Priesthood meeting.

A full report of Columbia Broadcasting Company's Tabernacle Choir and Organ broadcast is also included in this record as is also a full account of Columbia Church of the Air program.

GENERAL AUTHORITIES OF THE CHURCH PRESENT

The First Presidency: David O. McKay, Stephen L. Richards, and J. Reuben Clark, Jr.

The Quorum of the Twelve Apostles: Joseph Fielding Smith, Harold B. Lee, Spencer W. Kimball, Ezra Taft Benson, Mark E. Petersen, Matthew Cowley, Henry D. Moyle, Delbert L. Stapley, Marion G. Romney, LeGrand Richards, Adam S. Bennion, and Richard L. Evans.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup>Elder Richard L. Evans was sustained at this Conference (October 4) as a member of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Elder Albert E. Bowen.

Assistants to the Twelve Apostles: Thomas E. McKay, Clifford E. Young, Alma Sonne, George Q. Morris,<sup>2</sup> ElRay L. Christiansen, and John Longden.<sup>3</sup>

The First Council of the Seventy: Levi Edgar Young, Antoine R. Ivins,<sup>4</sup> Oscar A. Kirkham, Seymour Dilworth Young, Milton R. Hunter, Bruce R. McConkie, and Marion Duff Hanks.<sup>5</sup>

Presiding Bishopric: Joseph L. Wirthlin, Thorpe B. Isaacson, and Carl W. Buehner.

<sup>2</sup>Elder Stayner Richards passed away May 28, 1953.

<sup>3</sup>Elder Hugh B. Brown was sustained at this Conference as an Assistant to the Twelve Apostles.

<sup>4</sup>Elder Richard L. Evans was sustained as a member of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles.

<sup>5</sup>Elder Marion Duff Hanks was sustained at this Conference as a member of the First Council of the Seventy.

GENERAL OFFICERS AND OTHER AUTHORITIES PRESENT

Church Historian and Recorder: Joseph Fielding Smith, and A. William Lund, Assistant.

Members of General Welfare Committee, Church Welfare Program.

Members of Church Board of Education and Administrator, Church Board of Education, Directors and Associate Directors of Institutes, and Seminary instructors.

Presidents of Stakes and their Counselors, Presidents of Temples, Patriarchs, High Priests, Seventies, Elders; General Stake and Ward officers of Auxiliary Associations, etc., from all parts of the Church.

FIRST DAY

MORNING MEETING

The opening session of the Conference convened Friday morning, October 2, at 10 o'clock, with President David O. McKay presiding and conducting the services.

The great auditorium and galleries of the Tabernacle were filled with people, large numbers occupied the Assembly Hall to the south of the Tabernacle and also Barratt Hall (40 North Main Street), provision having been made for the overflow crowds to enjoy the services in the Assembly Hall and Barratt Hall by means of television. In addition, many others assembled on the Tabernacle grounds where amplifiers had been provided so that those who were unable to obtain entrance to any of these buildings could hear the services as they were broadcast from the Tabernacle.

The choral singing for this session was furnished by the Relief Society Singing Mothers from Stakes in the Central Utah and Mount Timpanogos regions, with Sister Florence Jepperson Madsen conducting. Alexander Schreiner was at the organ.

President David O. McKay:

This is the opening session of the 124th Semi-Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. We are convened in the Tabernacle on Temple Square in Salt Lake City, Utah. All the General Authorities of the Church are in attendance. Brother Joseph Anderson is Clerk of the Conference.

These services and all general sessions of the Conference will be broadcast in the Assembly Hall and in Barratt Hall over a loud speaking system and by television. The Tabernacle is crowded to capacity. So far as I can see every seat is taken and some are standing in the doorways.

These services will also be televised over KSL-TV, Channel Five, of Salt Lake City, and will be heard over Radio Station KSL, of Salt Lake City, and by arrangement through KSL, over fourteen radio stations in Utah, Idaho, Arizona, Nevada, and Colorado. The names of these stations have already been announced to the radio and television audience. That was done during the pause a few moments ago.

For the first time, Sunday morning's session will be televised outside the Salt Lake viewing area, over television stations in San Francisco, California, Los Angeles, California, Portland, Oregon, and Tacoma, Washington.

To the audience, those who are assembled in person and to thousands listening in over the radio, the First Presidency and General Authorities extend a most hearty welcome, and pray that our souls may be uplifted and inspired by our assembling together in this great Conference of the Church.

I wish to announce, too, that we have greetings from Tokyo, Japan, through President Mauss, and the following cable from some of our boys in Korea; written at Seoul:

"The brethren of the Seventh Division would like you to know our thoughts are with you at this time." Signed by the Group Presidency, Edwin S. Pearson, Jr., Forrest A. Hansen, Henry N. Griffith, and Russell M. Kunzler. There is a pathos in that, and in your behalf we send our love and blessing to the boys in Korea, and thank them for the message.

The singing for this morning's session will be furnished by five hundred Relief Society Singing Mothers from the seventeen stakes in the Central Utah and Mount Timpanogos Regions, with Sister Florence Jepperson Madsen conducting and Brother Alexander Schreiner at the organ.

Friday, October 2

First Day

We shall begin this session by the Relief Society Singing Mothers singing, "Lord, Hear Our Prayer," conducted by Sister Florence Jepperson Madsen.

The Relief Society Singing Mothers sang, "Lord, Hear Our Prayer," after which the opening prayer was offered by Elder Marion Duff Hanks, Assistant Director of the Bureau of Information.

President David O. McKay:

We acknowledge the presence of the following distinguished visitors and others who hold prominent positions in educational circles and in the State. We are not sure that we have been able to observe all who are present, but we mention the following:

Senator Wallace F. Bennett; Mayor Earl J. Glade; Dr. Otto Brinkmann, Superintendent of Schools in West Berlin; Superintendent Lynn Bennion, Superintendent of Salt Lake City Schools; Dr. Aldous H. Dixon, President of the Utah Agricultural College; Dr. Homer Durham, Vice-President of the University of Utah, Dr. Olpin is on a world tour, representing the Government. We acknowledge the presence of Secretary of State, Lamont Toronto; President Ernest Wilkinson, President of the Brigham Young University; and I think, Dr. Miller, President of Weber College. There may be others. We extend to each and all a hearty welcome this morning.

The Singing Mothers will now favor us with, "My Soul is Athirst for God," conducted by Sister Florence Jepperson Madsen. After the singing, Elder Joseph Anderson, Clerk of the Conference, will read the vital statistical data, the changes in ward and stake organizations, and the obituaries of the Church.

Singing by the Relief Society Singing Mothers, "My Soul Is Athirst for God."

Elder Joseph Anderson, Clerk of the Conference, then read the following report:

CHANGES IN CHURCH OFFICERS STAKE, WARD AND BRANCH ORGANIZATIONS SINCE APRIL CONFERENCE, 1953

MISSION CHANGES AND NEW PRESIDENTS APPOINTED

Asael T. Sorensen appointed president of the Brazilian Mission to succeed Rulon S. Howells.

Cornelius Zappey appointed president of the East Central States Mission to succeed John B. Matheson.

Harold L. Gregory appointed president of the East German Mission to succeed Arthur Glaus.

Harold Willey Lee appointed president of the French Mission to succeed Golden L. Woolf.

Lorin L. Richards appointed president of the Great Lakes Mission to succeed Carl C. Burton.

Hilton A. Robertson appointed president of the Japanese Mission and the Chinese Mission succeeding Vinal G. Mauss as President of the Japanese Mission.

Claudious Bowman appointed president of the Mexican Mission to succeed Lucian M. Mechem.

Harold I. Bowman appointed president of the Spanish American Mission to succeed Lorin F. Jones.

Kenneth B. Dyer appointed president of the West German Mission to succeed Edwin Q. Cannon, Sr.

TEMPLE PRESIDENT APPOINTED

Arwell Lee Pierce, appointed president of the Arizona Temple to succeed Harry L. Payne, deceased.

NEW STAKES ORGANIZED

Butte Stake organized June 28, 1953.
North Pocatello Stake organized June 21, 1953.

STAKE PRESIDENTS CHOSEN

Edgar T. Henderson, president of Butte Stake.

Irvin Burrell Romney, president of Juarez Stake to succeed Claudious Bowman.

Jared O. Anderson, president of North Pocatello Stake.

William Roscoe Cahoon, president of Pocatello Stake to succeed William P. Whitaker.

Arthur J. Barlocher, president of Uvada Stake to succeed Daniel J. Ronnow.

Leo Reeve, president of Zion Park Stake to succeed Elmer A. Graff.

NEW WARDS ORGANIZED

Anaconda, Bozeman, Butte, Dillon, and Helena Wards, Butte Stake.

Laguna Beach Ward, East Long Beach Stake.

Highland View West Ward, East Mill Creek Stake.

Yuba City Second Ward, Gridley Stake.

Idaho Falls Sixteenth Ward, Idaho Falls Stake.

Gardena Ward, Inglewood Stake.

Roy Second and Third Wards, Lake View Stake.

Layton Fifth, Sixth, and Seventh Wards, Layton Stake.

Syracuse Second Ward, North Davis Stake.

Kearns Second Ward, North Jordan Stake.

Poplar Grove Third Ward, Pioneer Stake.

Van Nuys Second, Pacoima, and Woodland Hills Wards, San Fernando Stake.

Pleasant Grove Fourth Ward, Timpanogos Stake.

Twin Falls Fifth and Sixth Wards, Twin Falls Stake.

Rangely Ward, Uintah Stake.

Pocatello Eighteenth Ward, West Pocatello Stake.

INDEPENDENT BRANCHES ORGANIZED

Shady Cove Branch, Klamath Stake.

Hauula Branch, Oahu Stake.

Connell Branch, Richland Stake.

McCall Branch, Weiser Stake.

Bannock Creek Branch, West Pocatello Stake.

WARDS AND INDEPENDENT BRANCHES DISCONTINUED

Basin Ward, Cassia Stake.

Chuichupa and Pacheco Wards, Juarez Stake.

Arsenal Villa Branch, Lake View Stake.

Stibnite Branch, Weiser Stake.

THOSE WHO HAVE PASSED AWAY

Elder Albert E. Bowen of the Council of the Twelve.

Elder Stayner Richards, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve.

Elder Henry C. Jorgensen, member of the General Church Welfare Committee.

PRESIDENT DAVID O. McKAY

Elder Joseph W. Anderson has just read the vital statistical data, the changes in ward and stake organizations, and the obituaries of the Church.

There are a few more items which might be mentioned, in which you will probably be interested.

The Church construction of chapels, classrooms, and recreation halls continues without abatement, indeed, with acceleration. During the last nine months, the Church has spent $5,568,000.00 in stakes, and $2,109,000.00 in missions, a total of $7,677,000.00, or a total to date this year, including local funds contributed for this purpose, in stakes, $10,337,000.00, and in the missions, $2,704,000.00 (I am not reading the full amount), or a total of $13,041,000.00.

TEMPLE CONSTRUCTION

You already know about the dedication of two temple sites in Europe—the first in the history of the Church—one at Berne, Switzerland, and another between London and Brighton, England.

Friday, October 2

First Day

The construction of the temple in Los Angeles is proceeding satisfactorily. We wish to commend the members of the Church in the Los Angeles Temple district for their magnanimous contribution to this edifice. As has already been announced, they volunteered to contribute over a million dollars towards the construction and completion of this edifice, and their payments are practically up-to-date. In addition to giving this large cash contribution they recently volunteered to assist in the landscaping, and even now they are planting shrubbery and getting trees so that at the time of dedication of the temple, the grounds will be properly and beautifully landscaped. May the Lord bless these faithful people and enable them to fulfil their promise in order that this edifice may be completely paid for by its dedication within a year and a half or two years.

The plans already are drawn for the temple in Switzerland, and the architect and contractor are proceeding so that that edifice will be completed without delay.

STAKE MISSIONARY WORK

You will be interested to know that the stake missionary work is meeting with unprecedented results: 6518 stake missionaries are now working within the organized stakes. To date there have been 3441 who have accepted the gospel through the efforts of these stake missionaries, and the work is continuing with unabated zeal.

YOUTH PROGRAM

We might mention, too, for your interest, that the youth program is being carried on most ably. I shall not take time to weary you with statistics, but in the girls' program, covering all the girls from twelve to nineteen, for August 1953, there were 56,332 enrolled. We believe that is one hundred percent of all the girls between those ages. The average attendance of the girls at the three meetings for this month, August, were as follows: Of those young girls, forty-nine percent of them attended sacrament meetings; fifty-nine percent attended the Sunday Schools; and fifty-four percent attended the MIA meetings. We commend you, sisters. A very definite program is carried out by the MIA for getting in touch with inactive girls and in trying to interest them in the Mutual Improvement Association.

In YMMIA during the past three years there has been an increase of 11,872 in enrolment in the scouting program. According to a report (we have this from Brother D. L. Roberts, who is director of the Mormon relationships in the Boy Scouts, and from Brother Elbert R. Curtis, general superintendent), on Sunday evening, during the jamboree at Los Angeles, July 19, a great convocation was held. Attending were more than forty-five thousand Boy Scouts, and there were present fifty thousand or more visitors. During the convocation great attention was paid to the churches of America, and religious training, and our Church received favorable attention. This made us happy to see an organization such as scouting bring such favorable comments about the work that is being done for the young in the Church.

I have notes before me emphasizing particularly what the Primary Association is doing for our eleven-year-old boys who are now taking up preliminary Scout work, also commending the high percentage of attendance at Primary meetings, and the most excellent work that is being done by the Primary hospital.

UNIFICATION OF CHURCH SCHOOL SYSTEM

Since our meeting of last April there has been a unification of the Church school system. We have had, heretofore, as you know, a Church board of education with a commission presiding over the colleges, institutes, and seminaries. Then we had a board of trustees presiding over Brigham Young University. Those two great branches of education are now united under the direction of Dr. Ernest L. Wilkinson, who is appointed administrator of the Church board of education, in addition to his presidency over Brigham Young University.

Here I wish to say a word of commendation for the excellent service rendered by Commissioner Franklin L. West. For years he has devoted his entire time to the advancement of the institutes and seminaries and colleges of the Church. His heart has been in the work. He has expressed and radiated a fervent testimony of the divinity of the restored gospel, and his heart has been centered upon the instructing of the youth in the fundamentals and ideals of the Church of Jesus Christ. He retires with the confidence and blessing of the Authorities of the Church.

Under his direction there has been a steady increase in the number enrolled in our institutes and seminaries. Last year there were enrolled 36,081 seminary students, 4202 institute students, 1140 in the schools of the islands of the Pacific, or a total of 41,423.

I am glad to report to you that the Church is moving on with great rapidity and its influence being extended throughout the world.

PASSING OF TWO GENERAL AUTHORITIES

Since our last meeting, as already reported by Brother Anderson, two members of the General Authorities have passed away: Elder A. E. Bowen of the Council of the Twelve, and Elder Stayner Richards, Assistant to the Twelve—two stalwarts, clear in vision, sound in judgment; men loyal and true to their callings, to the ideals and doctrines of the Church! We pay respect to their memory. May their acts and services during their lifetime continue to reverberate for good in the hearts not only of all members of the Church, but of all those outside of the Church who were fortunate enough to come in contact with these two great men.

COMMENDATION OF TEACHERS AND CHURCH GROUPS

I have mentioned particularly the work of the Church among the youth, because the future of this world is largely determined, as Goethe says, "upon the opinions of its young men under five and twenty."

If that be true, to awaken in the minds of the youth of the land a desire to achieve life's truest values is to render the greatest of all great services to our country.

With this thought in mind, I commend the teachers in our public schools, who under present difficulties, are remaining true to their post of duty. Let us hope that they will continue to do so, and not go off on a tangent vainly seeking redress in unions, which will only aggravate a condition already regrettable. We have confidence in the teachers. They will be loyal to their profession, teaching the young to be loyal and true to our country, to love the best in life, rather than to seek that which leads to selfishness.

This morning I want, also, to commend the Presiding Bishopric, the bishops of the wards, the presidencies of the Aaronic Priesthood quorums, for their efforts to bring into activity all the boys between the ages of 12 and 19, and what is equally commendable, they are reaching out to incorporate in this great spiritual uplift those who are classified as the "senior members of the Aaronic Priesthood," a group of potential power for great good, not only in the Church, but in the world, many of them leading businessmen and professional men. I commend you, brethren, for organizing these able men into groups that their influence may be felt for good.

THE KINGDOM OF GOD OR CATASTROPHE

With this in mind, I should like to give the following message, feeling as I do this morning, the potency and divinity of the gospel of Jesus Christ. With all my soul I feel this morning that there is truly "... none other name

Friday, October 2

First Day

under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved." (Acts 4:12.) I cannot see how men can doubt that.

When I was a boy, there hung above the pulpit in the chapel in Huntsville, (Utah), a picture of President John Taylor. Under it in gold letters were these words: "The Kingdom of God or Nothing."

In childhood I gave little if any thought to its implication, nor in youth did I try to comprehend its significance.

This morning, with world conditions in mind—international suspicion and enmities—threatening war clouds—"man's inhumanity to man," and other discouraging aspects of human relationships, I am inclined to paraphrase that motto to read: "The kingdom of God or catastrophe."

Tradition tells us that Peter, when on the Appian Way going toward Rome, was met by this question "Quo Vadis?" (Whither goest thou?) Were that question put to people today, many pessimists would answer that we are headed for catastrophe, if not total destruction. One has already said of Europe:

"On the whole, during many generations, there has been a gradual decay of religious influence in European civilization. Each revival touches a lower peak than its predecessor, and each period of darkness, a lower depth. The average curve marks a steady fall in religious tone. Religion is tending to degenerate into a decent formula wherewith to embellish a comfortable life.

"Russia officially sanctions irreligion, and approves a system of sex relations lower than any sanctioned by the lowest African tribe.

"The paleolithic savages so far as we know had no such practices." (Man's Social Destiny, p. 23.)

WHAT MEN THINK

And Hayden, writes as follows: "Today, as never before, mankind is seeking social betterment. Today, as seldom if ever before, human society is threatened with disintegration, if not complete chaos. All the ancient evils of human relationships, injustice, selfishness, abuse of strength, become sinister and terrible when reinforced by the vast increase of material power. The soul of man cowers, starved and fearful, in the midst of a civilization grown too complex for any mind to visualize or to control. Joy and beauty fade from human living. Yet life, abundant, beauteous, laughing life, has been our agelong labor's end. What other conceivable worth has the mastery of the material world, the exploitation of the resources of nature and the creation of wealth, except as a basis for the release of the life of the spirit. We are witnessing either the crumbling of civilization under the weight of its material mechanism or the birth of a new organization with a spiritual ideal."

Oswald Spengler thinks, and has so written: "This machine technics (referring to the world) will end with the Faustian civilization and one day will lie in fragments, forgotten—our railways and steamships as dead as the Roman roads and the Chinese Wall, our giant cities and skyscrapers in ruins like old Memphis and Babylon. The history of this technics is fast drawing to its inevitable close. It will be eaten up from within like the grand forms of any and every culture. When, and in what fashion, we know not."

These references indicate what some men are thinking about the present-day conditions, and where such conditions are leading. Whether you accept them as true, or not, we must face the fact that we are in a changing world, and that the destruction of present-day civilization is a possibility.

But, brothers and sisters, the Lord has something better in store for his children than complete destruction. Nations may be born, live, flourish for a time, and through internal corruption or other causes, die or be destroyed; but the human race will continue, and the kingdom of God be established.

"... behold," said Daniel, "one like the Son of man came with the clouds of heaven, and came to the Ancient of days, . . .

"And there was given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations, and languages, should serve him: his dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed." (Daniel 7:13-14.)

The paramount need in the world today is a clearer understanding by human beings of moral and spiritual values, and a desire and determination to attain them.

Never before in the history of the world has there been such a need of spiritual awakening. Unless there is such an awakening, there is danger of catastrophe among the nations of the world.

But I feel this morning, with all my soul, that the sun of hope is rising. Many thinking men and women are recognizing the need of man's looking up towards the heavens instead of his groveling in response to his animal nature. One man commenting on this said, that "If all the destroyers of civilization could be eliminated, and the traits of the rest of us could be eliminated, an approach to the millennium some hundred years hence is by no means inconceivable."

The Savior of the world said: "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." (John 10:10.)

Whether we live miserably or live abundantly depends upon ourselves. Look introspectively, young man and young woman, and determine whether your innermost thoughts hold you on the animal plane or whether they tend to lift you into the mental, moral, and spiritual realm. And you be your own judge. Are you scheming to exploit another for personal gain? Are you justifying a lie? Are you entertaining the thought of robbing a young woman of her virtue? Are you, young woman, justifying an act of unchastity in exchange for the attention or favor of a male companion? If these or any other selfish sinful thoughts obsess you, then you are not following the path of the abundant life, but are contributing to the continuance of a sordid, unhappy world.

FOUR FUNDAMENTAL TRUTHS

In the brief sojourn of Jesus upon the earth, he marked clearly "the way, the truth, and the life." (See Ibid., 14:6.)

I shall take time this morning to call your attention to four incidents in his life, and mention probably, but of course, briefly, some connotations of those incidents, I repeat, because I feel, and know, that through him and through him only, and by obedience to the gospel of Jesus Christ, can we find happiness and salvation in this world and eternal life in the world to come. But I am thinking particularly of happiness and joy here and now, in this atomic age.

First, recall His experience on the Mount of Temptation. In that experience we find taught the sublime necessity of subordinating the animal part of our natures to the spiritual. Man is a dual being—he is human, physical, of the earth, earthy, but he is, also, divine, the offspring of God.

Well might Carlyle say: "There are heights in man which reach the highest heaven, and depths that sink to the lowest hell—for are not both heaven and hell made out of him, everlasting miracle and mystery that he is?"

"Beloved," said John, "now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is." (1 John 3:2.)

On the Mount of Temptation Jesus resisted every appeal to his physical appetite—" . . . command that these stones be made bread";—every appeal to his vanity;—"If thou be the son of God cast thyself down,"—from the pinnacle; every appeal to his selfishness and pride, every bribe offered by way of power and wealth in exchange for spiritual companionship with his Father.

Friday, October 2

First Day

Resisting all he said to the tempter: "Get thee hence, Satan: for it is written, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve." (Matthew 4:10.)

VALUE OF NOBLE THOUGHTS

Then during his brief mission among men, he emphasized the value of entertaining noble thoughts, what you think will determine your character, not alone what you do, and knowing that what one thinks about in one's secret moments determines what he is. He "decried the fatal effects of hatred and jealousy in the mind of the individual more vehemently than he did the acts that hate and jealousy prompt. Modern physiology and psychology confirm the practical wisdom of his teachings. These evil passions destroy a man's physical vigor and efficiency—they pervert his mental perceptions and render him incapable of resisting the temptations to commit acts of violence. They undermine his moral health. By insidious stages they transform the man who cherishes them into a criminal. On the other hand, if they are banished, and wholesome, kindly thoughts and emotions take their place, the man is incapable of crime. Right thoughts and feelings, if persistently kept in the forefront, inevitably lead to right acts." "A good tree bears good fruit; an evil tree, evil fruit." (See Matt. 7:17.) A good tree, he says, cannot bring forth evil fruit, nor an evil tree bring forth good fruit. That teaching lies at the very bottom of Christ's ethical teachings. His whole effort was to make the tree good, for when that end was achieved, the good qualities of the fruit were assured. Resist evil, members of the Church, young and old, and the devil will flee from you.

The second incident I take from the Sermon on the Mount—a mountain in the vicinity of the Sea of Galilee. "No man can serve two masters: for either he will hate the one, and love the other; or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon." (Ibid., 6:24.) Then he added, "But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you." (Ibid., 6:33.) Do you believe that? I believe in every word that Jesus spoke, and to me the teaching is applicable in my life and yours.

Keeping in mind the fact that we are the children of our Father in heaven, when we seek the kingdom of God, first, we become conscious of a new aim in life. To nourish and delight the body with its appetites and passions, as animals do, is no longer the chief end of mortal existence. Spiritual attainments, not physical possessions become the chief goal. God is not viewed from the standpoint of what we may get from him, but what we may give to him. Only in the complete surrender of our inner life may we rise above the selfish, sordid pull of nature.

"Giving God the glory" is a sure means of subduing selfishness—a willingness on the part of the individual to keep God as the ideal in his life. Faith, therefore, is a foundation element in true character building; for an upright character is the result only of continued effort and right thinking, the effect of long-cherished associations with Godlike thoughts. He approaches nearest the Christ spirit who makes God the center of his thoughts; and he who can say in his heart, "Not my will, but thine be done," approaches most nearly the Christ ideal.

TWO GREAT COMMANDMENTS

The third incident is the scene with the Pharisees when a lawyer asked him: "Master, which is the great commandment in the law?"

"Jesus said unto him, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind.

"This is the first and great commandment.

"And the second is like unto it. Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself." (Ibid., 22:36-39.)

For two thousand years, practically, men have considered this sublime doctrine as impractical—too ideal, they say, but if we sincerely believe in Christ's divinity, that he is "the way, the truth, and the life" (see John 14:6), we cannot consistently doubt the applicability of his teachings to everyday life.

True, there are weighty problems to solve—evils of the slums, the ever-recurring conflicts between labor and capital, drunkenness, prostitution, international hatreds, and a hundred other current questions. But if heeded, Christ's appeal for personal integrity, honor, fair-dealing, and love is basic in the proper solution of all these social and economic difficulties.

CHANGE MEN'S HEARTS

Most certainly before the world even approaches these ideals, men's hearts must be changed. Christ came into the world for that very purpose. The principal reason for preaching the gospel is to change men's hearts and lives, and you brethren who go from stake to stake and hear the evidence and testimony of those who have been converted recently through the stake missionary work, can testify how the conversion has changed their lives, as they have given their testimonies. By such conversion they bring peace and good will to the world instead of strife, suffering. On changing men's hearts Beverly Nichols, author of The Fool Hath Said, writes truly:

"You can change human nature. No man who has felt in him the spirit of Christ even for a half minute can deny this truth, the one great truth in a world of little lies. You do change human nature, your own human nature if you surrender it to him. . . . Human nature must be changed on an enormous scale in the future unless the world is to be drowned in its own blood. And only Christ can change it."

"Live in all things outside yourself by love," says Browning through Paracelsus, "and you shall have joy. This is the life of God; it ought to be our life. In him it was perfect, but in all created things, it is a lesson learned slowly and through difficulty."

LESSON FOR YOUTH

The fourth scene I name is with his disciples just before Gethsemane, when he said, "And now I am no more in the world, but these are in the world, . . .

"I pray not that thou shouldest take them out of the world, but that thou shouldest keep them from the evil." (John 17:11, 15.)

There is your lesson, young folk! You are in the midst of temptation, but you, as Christ on the Mount of Temptation, can rise above it.

We can so live, it is possible, that as members of the Church we can say to all the world in the words of Thomas Nixon Carver: "Come, our way of life is best because it works best. Our people are efficient, prosperous and happy because we are a body who aid one another in the productive life. We waste none of our substance in vice, luxury, or ostentation. We do not dissipate our energy in brawling, gambling, or unwholesome habits. We conserve our resources of body and mind and devote them to the upbuilding of the kingdom of God, which is not a mystical but a real kingdom. We believe that obedience to God means obedience to the laws of nature, which are but the manifestations of His will; and we try by painstaking study to acquire the most complete and exact knowledge of that will, in order that we may conform ourselves to it."

Yesterday, in this Tabernacle, seven or eight thousand women gathered—our mothers, members of the Relief Society. I wish the whole Church might have partaken of the spirit of that great conference. If so, we should have greater assurance in our souls that these ideals to which I have made brief mention will be effective throughout the world in bringing about a desire for greater spirituality, a greater need for the testimony that God lives, that his Son Jesus Christ is the Savior of the world,

Friday, October 2

First Day

and that divine beings restored to the Prophet Joseph Smith the gospel of Jesus Christ as he established it in the Meridian of Time.

I bear you that testimony this morning and pray that the influence of priesthood quorums, of auxiliaries, and of the missionaries may be more effective from this time on than ever before in leading the honest in heart of the whole world to turn their eyes upward to the worship of God, our eternal Father, and give them power to control the animal nature and live in the spirit, I pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Our next speaker will be Bishop Joseph L. Wirthlin, Presiding Bishop of the Church.

BISHOP JOSEPH L. WIRTHLIN

Presiding Bishop of the Church

PRESIDENT MCKAY, my beloved brethren and sisters, this has been a most inspirational hour. I am sure that the Lord has manifested through his servant the course that he wants his children to follow and pursue here in mortality.

Brothers and sisters, do you believe God is the same yesterday, today, and forever?

Do you believe he is a God of order in all things?

Do you believe that he governs the universe by the application of divine law?

Many would answer these three questions as follows: some in the affirmative, some not sure, and possibly some negatively. Those who are not spiritually inclined might indicate that they believe there is a God, a higher intelligence which governs the universe, and they point out some of the evidences that are found in the many forms of nature—the orderly sequence of the seasons, each in its place, spring, summer, autumn, and winter, and to the creation of storms based upon the application of divine principles; the sun, the moon, and the stars all held in their orbits by the application of the laws and powers best known to the Creator.

The scientist in his laboratory slowly unravels the wonders of the creation which evidences the existence of a divine being by whom the universe was created, by whose hand the animal world, the vegetable world, and the mineral world are ruled.

I wish to submit another question: What of man and woman, son and daughter of the Creator of the universe, created in his image, according to Genesis 1:27?

So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them.

Then another question: Is there a definite set of laws for the spiritual and the mental growth and progress of man to the end that he might enjoy salvation and exaltation in the kingdom of our heavenly Father? Again some may answer in the affirmative; some may doubt; some may have a negative attitude.

Definitely fixed laws and powers govern nature, planets, and the universe which can only be changed by the will of God. Man, the greatest of God's creations, can and does fix the laws that govern his mortal life regardless of any divine plan that was devised for his good. He is blessed with intelligence far above all the other creations. Hence, he knows the difference between good and bad, and being blessed with the divine gift of free agency, can decide what course he will pursue in life.

Recently, a noted reverend doctor declared, "There is nothing to the One Church Idea," which, from my point of view, is an admission by the reverend doctor that there is not anything to the idea of a divine plan for the blessing of our heavenly Father's children. There are many who think as the reverend doctor, and they say, "After all, we are all striving towards eternal life. It makes no difference which path we follow, for our destination is the same." To advocate there is but one God, one faith, and one baptism is considered by many to be narrow and unjust.

In this day and age the words of Paul are applicable when he declared to the Galatians:

I marvel that ye are so soon removed from him that called you into the grace of Christ unto another gospel. (Galatians 1:6.)

The concept of the Godhead has changed since the days of the Savior. He said:

... he that hath seen me hath seen the Father. . . . (John 14:9.)

The idea of one Church, one gospel, and in fact, one Savior, in the minds of many, is a fallacy.

It would not be consistent thinking to believe that God is orderly in the governing of the universe and indifferent and disorderly in providing a plan of life and salvation for his greatest creation, namely, his children.

But in the midst of all of this confusion and so-called broadmindedness by the teachers of man-made religions, the voice of a young Prophet was heard, coming from western New York, a young man who again declared that there is one Church, one God, one faith, one baptism. This young man dared to tell the world that he actually saw the Father and the Son. He reaffirmed to the world that God was a personage with body, parts, and passions; that Jesus Christ, the despised Nazarene who was crucified upon Calvary's hill, actually lived. He conversed and talked with him. He received definite instructions, and among other things, the resurrected Savior said:

... they draw near to me with their lips, but their hearts are far from me. . . . (Joseph Smith 2:19.)

This young American Prophet boldly declared to the world that an angel had appeared to him and entrusted to his care an ancient record which contained the history of the dealings of the Lord with the people that lived upon this, the American continent in ancient times, and there was contained in this sacred record the divine plan of salvation given to mankind through Jesus Christ when he visited the people upon the American continent.

He declared to the world that John the Baptist appeared to him and conferred upon him the Aaronic Priesthood; that Peter, James, and John, the former apostolic Presidency, bestowed upon him the Melchizedek Priesthood; that Elijah came and gave him the keys for the work of the dead, Moses the keys of gathering, and Elias the return of the spirit of the gospel.

In fact, he declared to the world that the Church of the Lord Jesus Christ had been restored to the earth with the priesthood of God and all the offices and officers that existed in the ancient Church.

The reaction to his divine message and tidings of great joy was received with scorn. He was looked upon as a bigot, narrow-minded. Finally, he sealed his testimony with his blood.

Now, let us go to the law and the testimony to determine whether or not the claims of the Prophet Joseph were false or true. All Christians accept the Bible as the law and the testimony.

First: Did the Savior establish one Church or many churches?

Second: Were there definitely assigned officers in the Church?

Third: Was there divine authority upon the earth and one gospel?

Reading from I Corinthians, 12th Chapter, 28th Verse:

And God hath set some in the church, first apostles, secondarily prophets, thirdly teachers, after that miracles, then gifts of healings, helps, governments, diversities of tongues.

Friday, October 2

First Day

Here we see the servant of God speaking of the Church, one church not many churches.

And again we read in Ephesians 5:23:

For the husband is the head of the wife, even as Christ is the head of the church: and he is the saviour of the body.

—one Church, only one, of which Christ was the head.

Therefore as the church is subject unto Christ, so let the wives be to their own husbands in every thing. (Ibid., 5:24.)

Here is evidence where Christ is the head of the Church, one Church not many churches.

And again in Ephesians 4, Verses 4 and 5:

There is one body [one church], and one Spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your calling;

One Lord, one faith, one baptism.

These are a few of the evidences found in the law and testimony which bear out the great truth—there was but one church organized by the Savior during his ministry, and in the establishment of his Church, there was but one organization, and in that organization there were definitely assigned officers endowed with divine authority from on high.

We read from Ephesians 2:20 and 21:

And are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone;

In whom all the building fitly framed together groweth unto an holy temple in the Lord.

Here twelve men were duly ordained and set apart as the Twelve Apostles of the first Church. We read in Mark 3:14, that he ordained the twelve, "... that they should be with him, and that he might send them forth to preach," the gospel, to represent this great organization, the one Church, and proclaim the gospel to the known world of that time.

We read in Acts 11:22:

Then tidings of these things came unto the ears of the church which was in Jerusalem: and they sent forth Barnabas, that he should go as far as Antioch.

Here we see a duly authorized servant of God being sent by the Church by those who were in authority in Jerusalem to Antioch to take care of Church affairs.

The Savior makes it very clear when he stated to the people in Matthew 7:13-14 (speaking of one Church, speaking of one organization with definitely ordained servants in the same, and one gospel):

Enter ye in at the strait gate: for wide is the gate, and broad is the way, that leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat:

Because strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it.

This statement of the Savior to the world is definite and clear to the point that there can be but one way, his way, through his organization, the Church of the Lord Jesus Christ—the one Church.

In his Church are found according to Paul in his message to the Ephesians 4:11:

And he gave some, apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers.

Christ was a high priest after the order of Melchizedek. We read in Hebrews 3:1:

Wherefore, holy brethren, partakers of the heavenly calling, consider the Apostle and High Priest of our profession, Christ Jesus.

In other words, all of the Apostles received the Melchizedek Priesthood. They received their apostolic calling from Jesus Christ.

We find in Luke 10:1, where there are seventies spoken of and who were sent out two and two to every city and place, whither he, the Church, would come.

In Acts 15:2, we read where Paul and Barnabas were going to settle a certain dispute, and they were sent up to Jerusalem to consult the Apostles and the elders about this question, elders in the Church.

We find in Philippians 1:1:

Paul and Timotheus, the servants of Jesus Christ, to all the saints in Christ Jesus which are at Philippi, with the bishops and deacons.

There were bishops in the organization of the Church as Christ established it.

In Luke 1:5, we read of Zacharias, the priest. We read of this same priest in Luke 1:8.

In Ephesians 4:11, Paul speaks of ordained teachers. In Philippians 1:1 the deacons are mentioned.

In Ephesians 4:11, are found evangelists or patriarchs.

As we carefully peruse the law and the testimony, we find there was but one Church organized by the Christ. He gave to the world but one gospel plan for the salvation and exaltation of mankind, and the priesthood of God, and in it officers duly ordained and authorized to serve in his kingdom upon the earth, his Church—one Church.

There were certain initiatory ordinances that had to be met to gain citizenship in the kingdom or membership in the Church of the Lord Jesus Christ. This was best illustrated on the Day of Pentecost when a multitude of people were gathered together, and Peter bore his testimony so strongly and impressively as to the mission of the crucified Savior that that great multitude arose as one man and asked the question, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" Peter answered them:

Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost.

For the promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call. (Acts 2:38-39.)

Here are the principles and the ordinances whereby the children of our heavenly Father might enjoy membership in the one Church, the Church of the Lord Jesus Christ.

I might digress long enough to say that there are different forms of baptism upon the earth, I speak specifically of baptism by pouring or sprinkling for children. As I understand the words of Peter on the Day of Pentecost, baptism was for the purpose of forgiving sins. Small children are not guilty of sins because they do not know the difference between good and bad, and the Savior said, "Suffer little children to come unto me, . . . for of such is the kingdom of God." (Luke 18:16.)

It was a great source of inspiration and encouragement to future generations when Peter promised in a distant day the gift of the Holy Ghost or the spiritual baptism would be available to those afar off and those who were afar off, I believe, are the people that live in this generation.

And coming back to the Apostles of Christ's day, they observed a falling away—the apostasy was underway, for Paul declared to the Galatians:

I marvel that ye are so soon removed from him that called you into the grace of Christ unto another gospel. (Gal. 1:16.)

The Apostles were blessed with prophetic vision for we read in Acts 3:19:

Repent ye therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out, when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord.

And continuing on in Acts 3:20 and 21:

And he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you:

Whom the heaven must receive until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began.

The apostasy was foreseen, and God revealed there would be a restitution, a restoration of all things before the

Friday, October 2

First Day

second coming of the Christ.

I think all Christians will admit that Christ atoned for all men, hence all men will enjoy the blessings of the resurrection.

Joseph Smith taught the world that in the plan of the gospel as it is represented in Mormonism, there will be a place for all of the Lord's children on the basis of merit as revealed in Revelation 20:12:

And I saw the dead, small and great, stand before God; and the books were opened: and another book was opened, which is the book of life: and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books, according to their works.

Modern revelation teaches us in the 76th Section of the Doctrine and Covenants, that all men, the sons and daughters of God, will enjoy a place in one of the glories prepared for them, according to their deeds in the flesh.

I ask you if this is narrow. I ask if this is bigotry. But I want to say to you, brethren and sisters, this is the broadest plan of salvation that has been given to the world since the Savior was crucified for the sins of all men:

For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life. (John 3:16.)

It is a glorious truth and blessing to enjoy membership in the Church, the one Church of the Lord Jesus Christ, restored to the earth in exactly the same form as it existed when Christ established it first twenty centuries ago. Each and everyone of us can testify by the Spirit of the Holy Ghost that we know that God is the same yesterday, today, and forever; that he is a God of order in all things; and that he spoke personally to the Prophet Joseph and assigned him the great task to establish upon the earth the Church of the Lord Jesus Christ, the one Church, the one gospel, and teach the world that there was but one Savior, the Son of God.

Personally, I am not ashamed of the restored gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ as it has been given to us through his Prophet. I want to testify to you that there is but one Church, and that is the Church that carries his name, the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. I want to testify to you, brethren and sisters, that there stands at the head of this one Church of the Christ, a Prophet, an Apostle, who has all the same rights, keys, and authority that were enjoyed by Peter in the beginning, and that the same is equally true of the Twelve, and all of those who preside in high places in this great organization.

Certainly, when God the Father declared:

For behold, this is my work and my glory—to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man, (Moses 1:39)

he devised a plan whereby this could be done, and an organization through which it could be accomplished, namely, the organization of the Church of the Lord Jesus Christ.

That is my testimony to you. I thank God for it. I hope that every member of this Church will have that same witness in his heart and that the children of men, as the prophet of God called all men this morning to repent of their ways and accept of this divine plan, and thus prevent the catastrophe which now faces the world. If the world will follow this divine counsel, there is no question but what we can live in the Spirit of the Christ, namely, the spirit of peace, for which all nations are struggling.

May God bless us. May we express our appreciation day by day for our membership and our many opportunities for salvation and exaltation in the kingdom of God, I humbly ask, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Bishop Joseph L. Wirthlin, Presiding Bishop of the Church, has just concluded speaking.

The Choir and Congregation will now sing, "High On the Mountain Top," two stanzas, led by Brother J. Spencer Cornwall, for whose restoration to health enabling him to be with us this morning, we are grateful.

After the singing, we will hear from our concluding speaker, who will be Elder S. Dilworth Young, of the First Council of Seventy.

Singing by the Choir and congregation, "High On The Mountain Top."

ELDER S. DILWORTH YOUNG

Of the First Council of the Seventy

THIS morning as President McKay and Bishop Wirthlin spoke, I thought to myself that it is our job to implement the work of the Church, the divinity and purpose of which President McKay bore witness, and the inspired organization to which Bishop Wirthlin testified. Somehow we must, ourselves, through the inspiration of the Lord, and through his guidance, make the destined goal a reality.

There were in the Church, in the stakes of Zion, on December 31, 1952, 1870 quorums of the Melchizedek Priesthood that totalled, in round numbers, 138,400 men. All of these hold the right and the privilege to preach the gospel, when called, to any portion of the earth or within their own stakes. Twenty-eight thousand, nine hundred fifty of these men, for various reasons, are not available to the wards or to the stakes in which they live. Some are on missions; 15,000 are engaged in Church activity other than quorum work, five thousand are away from home; and more than five thousand are in the armed services. That leaves a total of 109,000 men, however, who are available. It depends upon the strength of their testimony and upon what they intend to do with this great gospel, as to whether or not we are to succeed in what President McKay has so earnestly pleaded for this morning.

I estimate that there are in each quorum of the Melchizedek Priesthood, an average of forty-eight men who will not, normally, have direction from any ecclesiastical heads as to what they shall do except by their quorum presidents.

They will not be used by bishops in the wards; they will not be used by the stake officers; and if they have any assigned tasks, it will be because the presidents of their quorums assign them. Therein, in my opinion, lies the acid test of quorum leadership.

When I was a good deal younger, I read a verse of scripture. The first reading thrilled me. I was filled with wonder, and awed at its implications. This is the scripture:

Now the Lord had shown unto me, Abraham, the intelligences that were organized before the world was; and among all these there were many of the noble and great ones;

And God saw these souls that they were good, and he stood in the midst of them, and he said: These I will make my rulers; for he stood among those that were spirits, and he saw that they were good; and he said unto me: Abraham, thou art one of them; thou wast chosen before thou wast born. (Abraham 3:22-23.)

I confess that when I read these words for the first time, there sprang into my heart an intense hope, if a person can have a hope in reverse order, that I might, personally, have been one of those in whose midst the Savior stood when choosing those to be born as leaders on earth. I believe every young man who has any feeling for this Church gets that thought. I think I am not alone in it, at all.

The Lord revealed to Abraham that he was one so chosen. Now Abraham was called by the Lord out of the Chaldees to go and settle in Canaan. The Lord was testing him. I believe that the Lord tests his leaders, even his greatest leaders, by entrusting them with small positions where they will lead but few people. If they prove worthy, and unwaveringly lead these people toward their exaltation, he then adds more and more responsibility until there is no limit to capacity, development, and glory of that leader.

Friday, October 2

First Day

I remember with a good deal of feeling the words with which Abraham described his action. He left the Chaldees with such souls "as we had won in Haran." I think those souls were few. In my humble opinion, Abraham led out of that land a group of people corresponding in size to a quorum of elders. Probably when he first started out, he had perhaps fifty or sixty, and the Lord tested him to see if he would lead them as directed, and he did.

Now, brethren, statistically you have about fifty men in your quorums available for assignment. You young elders' presidencies, you young men who have enthusiasm but not yet much practice in the business of doing Church work, if you are to lead fifty men and can lead them into righteousness, if you do it successfully, the Lord will enlarge you and will bring upon you greater leadership, until finally you will find place among those to whom he referred when he spoke to Abraham as being among those who would become his leaders.

You do not have to preside over the Church, or over a stake, or over a ward to qualify for such a great thing. However, I do think that if you preside over a quorum of the priesthood, if it is your responsibility to bring into activity any man, then unless you bring that man into activity, you are not measuring up to what the Lord had in mind when he inspired the president of the stake to call you to that exalted position.

And what I say about an elder applies equally well to a seventy or to a high priest. It matters not. All are offices in the Melchizedek Priesthood, and it is this priesthood which will enlarge this Church and fill the earth.

Let us not, therefore, brethren, fall down in that responsibility. Let us not worry, brethren of the quorums, about the men whom the bishops call. Those men are taken care of, they have something to do. But let us not rest until the men who do not have exact responsibility are given such responsibility through quorum activity. Then we shall grow and then we shall flourish upon the mountain. Great will be our joy, for we shall sing praises and hosannahs to the most high God, as we see his great work coming to fruition.

I add my testimony to that of Bishop Wirthlin, that there stands at the head of this Church a prophet, a seer, and a revelator, and that those who preside with him, and who, under his direction, direct the affairs of this Church are likewise prophets and seers and revelators, and I uphold and sustain them with all my heart. I pray that I can do it with all my strength, for unless a person does it with all his strength, as well as with his heart, not much is accomplished.

This is my prayer, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

He to whom we have just listened is President S. Dilworth Young, of the First Council of Seventy.

The Relief Society Singing Mothers will now favor us with, "God Shall Wipe Away All Tears," conducted by Sister Florence Jepperson Madsen.

The closing prayer will be offered by Elder Glen G. Fisher, formerly President of the Western Canadian Mission, after which this conference will stand adjourned until 2:00 o'clock this afternoon.

Will you please listen carefully to announcements and important messages that will be given over the loud speaking system on the grounds at the conclusion of this session. All similar messages coming in later will likewise be broadcast at the close of each general session, without further notice.

The music as heretofore announced is furnished by the Relief Society Singing Mothers from 17 stakes in the Central Utah and Mount Timpanogos Regions, conducted by Sister Florence Jepperson Madsen; Brother Alexander Schreiner is at the organ. I am sure I speak your sentiments, after having heard those inspirational musical numbers this morning, that too much praise cannot be expressed for the work and skill of Sister Madsen. Perhaps you do not know that these sisters have been practicing for several months, and so far as possible Sister Madsen has visited groups and has helped them in the singing of these beautiful, inspirational hymns and anthems. But after that, really the only opportunity she has had, for practice with the groups, is since they have come here to Salt Lake City. How masterfully, inspirationally they sing under this inspired director.

"God shall wipe away all tears," by the Singing Mothers.

---

The Singing Mothers sang: "God Shall Wipe Away All Tears."

Elder Glen G. Fisher offered the closing prayer.

Conference adjourned until 2:00 p.m.

FIRST DAY

AFTERNOON MEETING

Conference reconvened at 2:00 p.m., Friday, October 2.

The Relief Society Singing Mothers from Stakes in the Central Utah and Mount Timpanogos regions furnished the choral music for this session of the Conference, Sister Florence Jepperson Madsen, Conductor.

President David O. McKay:

These lovely bouquets of flowers that you see on each side of the pulpit are antirrhinums from the Oahu Stake, Honolulu. We appreciate the kindness of the thoughtful members in Oahu in sending these flowers by airplane to contribute to the pleasure and inspiration of our Conference.

We shall begin the services by the Relief Society Singing Mothers rendering "Out of the Depths Have I Cried Unto Thee," conducted by Sister Florence Jepperson Madsen. The opening prayer will be offered by Elder Harold Brown, formerly President of the Argentine Mission.

---

The Relief Society Singing Mothers sang the anthem, "Out Of The Depths Have I Cried Unto Thee."

President David O. McKay:

For some unaccountable but I am sure excusable reason, Brother Harold Brown has missed this meeting. We shall ask President Willard Smith, President of the Cardston Temple to offer the invocation.

---

Willard L. Smith, President of the Alberta Temple, offered the invocation.

President David O. McKay:

The Relief Society Singing Mothers will now favor us with "How Lovely Is Thy Dwelling Place," conducted by Sister Florence Jepperson Madsen.

Friday, October 2

First Day

Following the singing, Elder Clifford E. Young, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve, will speak to us.

The Singing Mothers rendered the sacred selection, "How Lovely Is Thy Dwelling Place."

ELDER CLIFFORD E. YOUNG

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles

MY BRETHREN AND SISTERS: It seems to me that every time I stand in this position I feel less sure of myself. I recognize that as we go out in the stakes, there is a warmth of feeling between the congregation of the Saints and those who visit their conferences from time to time, and there should be no difference in this meeting, because that same spirit of warmth and fellowship is multiplied by the increased numbers that are here, and yet notwithstanding that, this vast congregation, and consciousness of the fact that there are so many listening in on the outside, presents a challenge indeed.

I have undertaken today to write what I would like to say in the interest of time, and I sincerely hope that the Lord will be with all of us, that what I shall say may be of benefit to you and to me, and give us increased faith.

Since our last conference it has been my privilege to visit two of the missions of the Church, one in southern California and one in eastern Canada. I have been thrilled with the splendid work that is being done by our missionaries. It seems to me they are doing more effective work than ever in our history. They do not go out with a spirit of antagonism toward any church or any people, but rather in the spirit of the counsel that was given in the early history of the Church by the Prophet Joseph when he said that we should contend against no church, save it be the church of the evil one, that we should take upon ourselves the name of Christ, and speak the truth in soberness, and that as many as repented and were baptized in his name, which is Jesus Christ, and endured to the end, should be saved. He also said that we should declare glad tidings, publish them upon the mountains and upon every high place and among every people that we should be permitted to see. We should do it with all humility, trusting in him, reviling not the revilers, and of tenets we should not talk, but should declare repentance and faith on the Savior, and the remission of sins by baptism and by fire, yea, even the Holy Ghost. It is in this spirit that our missionaries are counseled to go from house to house, preaching and bearing witness of the restored gospel of Christ. We recognize the fact that the world is full of good people, that they have their religious convictions and traditions, traditions that are deeply rooted from ages past. We do not ask them to give up any truths that they have, but we do ask that they re-appraise their faith and their religion, their church, to see if they harmonize with that which was taught by our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ. Our missionaries do not present a message of a new church; it is a message of the restored Church. We do not have a new gospel. It is the gospel that was preached by Jesus Christ, the same yesterday, today, and forever. Our position as Latter-day Saints is that we are entrusted with the responsibility of establishing the kingdom of God in the earth, that it may prepare mankind for the kingdom of heaven that is to come. We feel that there is no greater message that can be brought to the children of men than one that will make men conscious of error and turn them to the truth. Repentance is a grand Christian act. It is not only Christian, but it is also divine.

This missionary activity is a great contribution to our missionary's life, whether he be young or old. For two or more years, he is in the field of a spiritual uplift. He learns to pray as he never did before. He learns to draw near to God, and he finds that God draws near to him. He learns that there is only one way to every human heart, and that is through humility and prayer. He learns to be tolerant with his fellow men. Through study he learns to enrich his mind, enlarge his soul with the thoughts of great men, men of God, prophets of God, and thus he grows in knowledge and wisdom.

In the mission field a missionary is often tempted, but he does not yield. Thus he becomes brave and strong, strong physically, mentally, morally, and above all, spiritually. A missionary often has great decisions to make, decisions that many times are beyond the wisdom of his youth.

I recall an experience that was related by President J. Robert Price, former president of the Central Atlantic States Mission, as he met with us on one occasion in the temple, telling of two young missionaries who had just recently come into the field, neither of whom had had much experience. Brother Price had received a message that one of the families was having some difficulty, marital trouble as I remember, and so these two young, inexperienced missionaries were sent to this home. On entering the home, one of the elders asked if it would be in order with the family that they first kneel in prayer. And so they all knelt down, and the young elder who led asked that the Lord would guide in the proceedings that should follow, that the differences could be composed in that home, and that peace could be established. And he prayed for the home, and in the sincerity of his heart he brought conviction to those who listened. And when they all arose from their knees, the father, who seemingly had been the leader, who had been the source of the trouble, approached the missionary; taking him by the hand, he said, "We do not need you longer. You have touched our hearts, and we will compose our differences, and you can depend upon it that we will not fail." And Brother Price in reporting it said, "Surely, out of the mouths of babes and sucklings hath the Lord ordained strength."

And so it is in this spirit that our missionaries go forth, and they have great decisions to make, and they are equal to them.

The missionaries also learn the injunction that was given by Isaiah the prophet, that they should seek the Lord while he may be found:

... call ye upon him while he is near:

Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts: and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon. (Isaiah 55:6-7.)

Our missionaries learn to love their contacts, the people whom they meet, although they do not always see alike in matters of religion and do not always agree, yet they recognize that the world is full of good people. Many honest-hearted and upright men and women have not accepted and do not accept Mormonism because they cannot comprehend it. As the Savior said to Nicodemus, "They cannot see." And yet through the fine work that they are doing, our missionaries are gradually breaking down prejudices. They are being invited into homes that are blessed because of the faith and the testimony that they bring to them. There is no greater joy that can come to the human heart than to bring this message of eternal truth to those who do not have it. And so our missionary service becomes a great spiritual factor in the lives of those who have this unusual experience. There is nothing equal to it anywhere. Our boys come home filled with a testimony of the truth, acknowledging the goodness of the Lord to them and conscious of the fact that they have been able to do some good, not only to themselves but also to those with whom they have come in contact.

Thus has been laid a foundation of faith and spirituality and strength of character in our young people that has contributed greatly to the growth and the strength of this Church. It is no wonder the Bishop of York was led to say after his visit to Salt Lake City, on his return to England, as reported, I think, by Brother Sonne on his return from Europe, "The Mormon Church must be a wealthy Church, for it maintains so many missionaries in the world." At that time I think there were five thousand missionaries, and at an average cost of sixty dollars a month for each, you can see that would amount to $300,000.00 a month, or over $3,500,000.00 a year, and so the Bishop of York was calculating it in dollars and cents. He did not understand that the wealth that maintains these missionaries is not gold and silver, but faith, sacrifice, devotion on the part of parents, in most cases, parents of limited means, not of wealth, but rich in faith and in a confidence in this great work. It is not gold that has built our temples and our meetinghouses, but the same faith and devotion to the Lord on the part of those who also support the great missionary system of the Church.

Friday, October 2

First Day.

In conclusion, my brethren and sisters, may I read an extract from a sermon delivered in this pulpit many years ago by President George Q. Cannon. I think it was in 1871. It was subsequently reported in the Church Section of the Deseret News. For some of you who are younger, President Cannon served as counselor in the First Presidency from the time of President John Taylor on to the time of President Snow. I think it was during President Snow's administration that President Cannon passed away. He was one of the great leaders of this Church—a brilliant mind. He knew the Prophet Joseph. His father had come from the Isle of Man with his family. They had become converted to Mormonism, and had settled in Nauvoo, and were there at the time of the martyrdom. I think I may safely say that President Cannon's tribute to the Prophet Joseph in his biography is one of the finest that has ever been written regarding the Prophet Joseph. It was written from an intimate touch that the Cannon family had with the Prophet, and George Q. Cannon as a lad fourteen years of age remembered the great leadership and the spiritual power that characterized the Prophet of God, to whom the Lord had revealed his great work. And so I quote in conclusion some remarks from President Cannon:

The Latter-day Saints are not so uncharitable as to imagine that they are the only ones with whom God is dealing, or are they the only people over whom and toward whom his providences are being exercised. Such a thought has never entered into the hearts of those who are intelligent and reflecting in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. It is true that we believe and testify that we have been called to proclaim the everlasting gospel in its ancient purity and simplicity, with the plenitude of its gifts and graces, as enjoyed in ancient days, that we have been called to lay the foundation of that work which is destined to grow and increase and spread until it fills the whole earth from north to south and from east to west. Yet we do not on this account arrogate to ourselves all the kindness, all the mercy, care and goodness which God dispenses to his creatures here on the earth, but we firmly believe in every nation and among every kindred, tongue, and people, and in fact in every creed on the face of the earth, there are those whom God watches with particular care, and to whom his blessings are extended, and we believe that his providences are over all the works of his hands, and that none is so remote, friendless, or isolated that he is not the object of his care, his mercy and his love. This is our belief, and when we see the events which are taking place at the present time [and this sounds almost prophetic], when we hear of revolutions and wars, of nation rising against nation, of the various judgments and calamities, as well as the various kindnesses and mercies, that are bestowed upon and extended to the inhabitants of the earth, and to the various nationalities into which they are divided, we see in all these things the hand of our kind and beneficent Creator. We see his providences. We behold his going forth, and we acknowledge his goodness, and we also think that we can discern his overruling care and providence for the bringing to pass the great events of which he has spoken, which will eventually result in the emancipation of our race from the thralldom of evil, under which it now groans.

It is in this spirit, my brethren and sisters, that our missionaries go out into the world to proclaim the restored gospel, and I have nothing but commendation for these fine men and women who are sent out, and for the splendid men and women who preside over them. These mission presidents and their wives, outstanding in their faith and in their devotion to the work of the Lord, give these missionaries proper direction, and inspire them in the great work to which they are called. I am grateful as I stand here today for the privileges and blessings that were mine over forty years ago to be called to the mission field to preach the gospel. I am grateful for the foundation of faith that was established in my soul because of this unusual experience, and I humbly acknowledge on this occasion these blessings, and also the goodness of my parents in making such an experience possible. I express my gratitude to my heavenly Father, and I bear my testimony of the divinity of this great work, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

He to whom we have just listened is Elder Clifford E. Young, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve. We shall now hear from Elder Harold B. Lee of the Council of the Twelve, who will be followed by Bishop Isaacson.

ELDER HAROLD B. LEE

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

IN PRESIDENT MCKAY's address this morning he told of a picture that hung in the Huntsville meeting-house, a picture of President John Taylor, under which were the words, "Where the kingdom of God is not, there is nothing." That statement encourages me to talk about something about which I have been thinking for a long time. If the Lord is willing and I might have his Spirit, I would like to speak about a subject which I will introduce by quoting a question asked by a missionary, and a statement from a great thinker. The missionary asked, "Since the restored Church claims that it is necessary to have the same organization that existed in the primitive church, particularly Twelve Apostles, how then can we claim that the kingdom of God and the gospel were upon the earth before the time of the Savior when they had no Apostles?"

The statement which I wish to read is from Napoleon I, while he was in exile in 1817. It reads as follows: "I would believe in a religion if it existed from the beginning of time, but when I consider Socrates, Plato, and Mohammed, I no longer believe."

There are those who believe that the kingdom of God was not established until after the advent of the Savior and that the gospel of Jesus Christ was not upon the earth until the time of his advent.

As I have thought of that question of the missionary about the organization of the Church, and about Napoleon's statement, three questions have formulated themselves in my thinking: The first, How old is the kingdom of God and the gospel upon the earth? The second, What are the essentials of a gospel dispensation in the world? And third, What officers are necessary in an organization to constitute the Church and kingdom of God? I realize that to answer those questions fully would take much more time than is allotted to me, so I shall comment only briefly and make a few observations in answer to these questions.

In the Lord's revelation to Abraham, he spoke of the purpose in sending spirits upon the earth, to "... prove

Friday, October 2

First Day

them herewith, to see if they will do all things whatsoever the Lord their God shall command them" (Abr. 3:25), with a promise that if they would keep their second estate they should have glory added upon their heads forever and forever.

In the first chapter of the writings of John, the nature of that glory spoken of in the revelation to Abraham is implied. John said,

But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God. . . . (John 1:12.)

In a modern revelation that same statement is repeated with slight variation and then clarified, in these words:

But to as many as received me, gave I power to become my sons; . . .

And verily, verily, I say unto you, he that receiveth my gospel receiveth me; and he that receiveth not my gospel receiveth not me.

And then the Lord proceeds to define the fundamental principles of the gospel in these words:

And this is my gospel—repentance and baptism by water, and then cometh the baptism of fire and the Holy Ghost, even the Comforter, which showeth all things, and teacheth the peaceable things of the kingdom. (D. & C. 39:4-6.)

The gospel plan, as these scriptures would indicate, was laid in the heavens before the earth was organized and spirits were placed upon it.

That this gospel and the essentials of salvation have been upon the earth in every dispensation from the time of Adam, there can be no doubt. In an early revelation to Moses, which we have contained in the Pearl of Great Price, the Lord, speaking to Adam, said this:

If thou wilt turn unto me, and hearken unto my voice, and believe, and repent of all thy transgressions, and be baptized, even in water, in the name of mine Only Begotten Son, who is full of grace and truth, which is Jesus Christ, the only name which shall be given under heaven, whereby salvation shall come unto the children of men, ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost, asking all things in his name, and whatsoever ye shall ask, it shall be given you.

Then there follows an account of the baptism of Adam, and this declaration by a voice speaking out of heaven to Adam:

Behold, thou art one in me, a son of God; and thus may all become my sons. (Moses 6:52, 68.)

In writing to the Galatians, the Apostle Paul said,

And the scripture, foreseeing that God would justify the heathen through faith, preached before the gospel unto Abraham, saying, In thee shall all nations be blessed. (Gal. 3:8.)

He was speaking of the ordinance of baptism in Moses' day when he wrote these words to the Corinthians:

. . . how that all our fathers were under the cloud, and all passed through the sea; And were all baptized unto Moses. . . . (1 Cor. 10:1-2.)

And then of the children of Israel under the leadership of Moses, Paul again wrote to the Hebrews, and said,

For unto us was the gospel preached, as well as unto them: but the word preached did not profit them, not being mixed with faith in them that heard it. (Hebrews 4:2.)

All of these statements thus recorded in the Bible have been confirmed by modern revelation.

Just as in the dispensations of Adam, Abraham, and Moses were those fundamental teachings given and those fundamental ordinances of the gospel administered, so we hear the Savior speaking to Nicodemus,

Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God. (John 3:5.)

To suppose that God would initiate ordinances on which salvation would be conditioned, and then allow four thousand years to pass without any authority or any organization to administer those ordinances, is untenable to the thinking man. A thinking man would have to conclude with Napoleon, "Unless a religion existed from the beginning, I cannot believe."

Now for just a moment, let's take a hasty look at the Church organizations that have existed in each of these dispensations from the beginning. To Adam there was given "... dominion ... over every living thing that moveth upon the earth." (Genesis 1:28.) The government in his time was patriarchal, and the priesthood ruled. Men holding the priesthood ruled by direct revelation and commandment. In Enoch's time likewise, his government was patriarchal. Zion, the City of Holiness, was established, and Enoch gave a perfect economic law, known to us as the Order of Enoch. There was likewise a similar government from Noah to Abraham, as we are informed by modern revelation in these words,

The order of this priesthood was confirmed to be handed down from father to son, and rightly belongs to the literal descendants of the chosen seed, to whom the promises were made. (D. & C. 107:40.)

From Moses to the Prophet Samuel, Israel was governed by judges, who were chosen from among the people. And then you will recall, because they were "peculiar" in that type of government, they sought for a king, to be like other peoples; a king to rule over them in secular matters, while a prophet would continue to guide in spiritual affairs. You will recall that Saul was then chosen, followed by David, and by Solomon, and then the division of the children of Israel into the kingdom of Judah and the kingdom of Israel under Rehoboam and Jeroboam.

With the advent of Jesus, the Jews were in a state of apostasy, and you will recall he chose twelve men to be his special witnesses, and to one of these twelve, Peter, he gave the keys to the kingdom of God. The significance of that commission of the keys of the kingdom to Peter is better understood in the words of a revelation given to us by the Prophet Joseph Smith, when the Lord said this, speaking of the Prophet Joseph,

Unto whom I have given the keys of the kingdom, which belong always unto the Presidency of the High Priesthood. (Ibid., 81:2.)

In other words, Peter, holding the keys of the kingdom, was as much the president of the High Priesthood in his day as Joseph Smith and his successors, to whom also these "keys" were given in our day, are the presidents of the High Priesthood, and the earthly heads of the Church and kingdom of God on the earth.

The Apostle Paul describing the Church organization in his day said,

And God hath set some in the church, first apostles, secondarily prophets, ... after that ... helps, governments, ... etc. (1 Cor. 12:28.)

But in all of these Church offices we are told again in the revelations

... there is never but one on the earth at a time on whom this power and the keys of this priesthood are conferred. ... (D. & C. 132:7.)

We are living today in the Dispensation of the Fulness of Times, and we were given a statement, inspired by the Lord, to the Prophet Joseph Smith in these words, which make some explanation of what the Dispensation of the Fulness of Times contemplated. He said,

... for it is necessary in the ushering in of the dispensation of the fulness of times, which dispensation is now beginning to usher in, that a whole and complete and perfect union, and welding together of dispensations, and keys, and powers, and glories should ... be revealed from the days of Adam, even to the present time. And not only this, but those things which never have been revealed from the foundation of the world ... shall be revealed ... in this, the dispensation of the fulness of times. (D. & C. 128:18.)

The Apostle Peter spoke of that, in

Friday, October 2

First Day

referring to this same Dispensation of the Fulness of Times, when he said there would be a

... restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began. (Acts 3:21.)

It seems clear then that were the Church organization today to be devoid of that which Jesus gave, therefore, in the way of organization, this dispensation would fail by that same token, to be an established kingdom of God upon the earth in the Dispensation of the Fulness of Times in which was to be restored "all things." Undoubtedly the organization the Master gave was to be the pattern of organization more perfected than in the past dispensations. There is evidence of this in the fact that after he had left the people here following his resurrection, he went to the Nephites, and there again he chose twelve disciples, whom he set up to govern his Church and that part of the kingdom here on this continent among the Nephites.

We might then ask, what is the kingdom of God? And again we are not left without an answer, for the Lord replied, "The keys of the kingdom of God are committed unto man on the earth. . . ." Where there are the keys to the kingdom, There is the Church of Jesus Christ, and it is the stone which was cut out of the mountain without hands, as told in Daniel's interpretation of the dream, which was to roll forth and smite the image and break it in pieces and to roll on until it should fill the whole earth. (D. & C. 65.)

The Prophet Joseph Smith makes this definition of the kingdom of God:

Some say that the kingdom of God was not set up upon the earth until the day of Pentecost, and that John did not preach the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins, but I say to you in the name of the Lord that the kingdom of God was set up upon the earth in the days of Adam to the present time. Whenever there has been a righteous man on the earth, unto whom God revealed His word and gave power and authority to administer in His name, and where there is a priest of God . . . to administer in the ordinances of the gospel, and officiate in the priesthood of God, there is the kingdom of God. . . . Where there is a prophet, a priest, or a righteous man unto whom God gives His oracles, there is the kingdom of God; and where the oracles of God are not, there the kingdom of God is not. (Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith, pp. 271-272.)

This is but another way of saying what the picture in Huntsville declared as related by President McKay, "Where the kingdom of God is not there is nothing."

Just as the Master said in his day, the kingdom of God cometh not by observation, meaning that there would be no outward signs or no political changes, so today, it is now among us, as it has been in every dispensation of the gospel since the days of Adam.

Another statement was made by the prophets of the New Testament which to me has some significance. They are quoted as having said that "... the kingdom of God is within you." (Luke 17:21.) A more correct translation probably would have said, "The kingdom of God is among you or in your midst," but as I thought of that other statement, "The kingdom of God is within you," I recalled an experience that we had with a group of students from Brigham Young University, who were gracious enough to come under the leadership of President Wilkinson to a little group over in the Lion House, and there sixteen, representing sixteen foreign countries, were asked to stand and tell how they came to know about the gospel and accept it, why they were at Brigham Young University, and to bear their testimonies. It was a most intensely interesting evening. We heard from young men and women from Mexico, Argentina, Brazil, the Scandinavian countries, France, and England. The story was the same. When they began to relate how they came to find the gospel, it was this: They were yearning for truth. They were seeking for light. They were not satisfied, and in the midst of their search, someone came to them with the truths of the gospel. They prayed about it and sought the Lord intensely, intently, with all their hearts, and came to receive a divine testimony by which they knew that this is the gospel of Jesus Christ. One young woman said, "I had been studying the gospel, and this night I came to a meeting and I heard them sing, "Joseph Smith's First Prayer," which gave in song the story of the first vision, and before they had finished that song, into my heart the Spirit bore testimony that this is the Church and kingdom of God." So within the heart of everyone, every honest seeker after truth, if he has the desire to know, and studies with real intent and faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, the kingdom of God may be within him, or in other words, the power to receive it is his.

I bear you my humble witness that this is the Church and kingdom of God in the earth. This is the Dispensation of the Fulness of Times. Except for the fact that it is but a continuation of the same gospel, the same fundamental principles, the same authority which has existed from the beginning of time, we would have to say with Napoleon I, Except you can prove to me that this religion has been from the beginning, I will not believe.

God help us to take this message out to the world and convince them of the power of the gospel and the power which is within them to receive the kingdom of God while it is yet day, I pray humbly in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

BISHOP THORPE B. ISAACSON

First Counselor in the Presiding Bishopric

PRESIDENT McKay, President Richards, and President Clark, my beloved brethren and sisters: I feel very humble this afternoon in standing before you and in occupying this position. I sincerely pray that you will have a silent prayer in your heart for me, and I humbly pray that the Lord will sustain me. There is a very beautiful, sweet spirit here; there was this morning. We recognize that spirit as the sweet Spirit of our Father in heaven.

As members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, we have a great responsibility; we have an individual responsibility. Membership in the Church is not for the idler, nor for one who would seek an easy way to salvation. However, it should not be too difficult for us to keep the commandments of the Lord if we have a desire in our hearts to do so and if we are willing to make the effort. True, we must form good habits of righteous living, and good habits are just as easy and in fact easier to form than are bad habits. It should not be too difficult for us to be truthful and honest and prayerful and to meet our obligations honestly.

Yes, we have the right to choose which way we want to go. Thereby we develop our own strength of character. However, if we do only the things required of us, we may not gain full development. To do right only because we are forced to do so, rather than because we have a desire to do so, does not contribute to proper development of character; for the Lord, speaking to us in the Doctrine and Covenants, Section 58, Verses 26 to 29, says:

For behold, it is not meet that I should command in all things; for he that is compelled in all things, the same is a slothful and not a wise servant; wherefore he receiveth no reward.

Verily I say, men should be anxiously engaged in a good cause, and do many things of their own free will, and bring to pass much righteousness;

For the power is in them, wherein they are agents unto themselves. And inasmuch

Friday, October 2

First Day

as men do good they shall in nowise lose their reward.

But he that doeth not anything until he is commanded, and receiveth a commandment with doubtful heart, and keepeth it with slothfulness, the same is damned.

Probably our first and greatest responsibility is to see that we ourselves live righteously and well. When a man fails in life, the cause is sometimes within himself. We are often destroyed from within as well as from forces without. Wrongdoing destroys our morale and makes us an easy victim to outward forces that would also weaken us spiritually; and spirituality is as essential to a man's soul as vitamins are to his body.

Unless we can banish indifference, conquer indolence, renounce injustice, overcome intemperance, expel intolerance, and abolish ingratitude from our souls, we may not be good representative members of the Church, for has not the Psalmist said: "Except the Lord build the house, they labour in vain that build it." (Psalm 127:1.)

Let us for a moment consider indifference. Indifference can bring great tragedy into our souls, whether it be indifference to the laws of the land or indifference to the laws of God or indifference to the rights and privileges of each other. When we break the laws of the land, there is a penalty. When we break the laws of God, there is likewise a penalty; and when we show indifference to each other, somebody suffers.

Consider desecration of the Sabbath day. Surely our Father in heaven must have felt that this was important when he gave us the commandment concerning the Sabbath day, for he said to us beginning in Exodus 20:8, and if we could only think of this when we break the Sabbath day, I think we would be more careful about it:

Remember the sabbath day, to keep it holy.

Six days shalt thou labour, and do all thy work:

But the seventh day is the sabbath of the Lord thy God: in it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, thy manservant, nor thy maidservant, nor thy cattle, nor thy stranger that is within thy gates:

For in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that in them is, and rested the seventh day: wherefore the Lord blessed the sabbath day, and hallowed it. (Ex. 20:8-11.)

To so many people, Sunday is now spoken of as a holiday, not a "holy day." Let us consider this before we break the Sabbath day.

Now there are many ways of being truthful. We may not exactly tell a lie, but if we fail to raise our voices to set a situation right when we could, aren't we as guilty as the one who fails to tell all the truth? Indifference is one way to start one on the road to sorrow.

Indolence is another destroying characteristic. One of the greatest factors in building character is work and our attitude toward that work. I remember hearing President Clark one day say to some of us, "I am grateful for the blessings of work." Personally I consider it a challenge. I consider it a cure for heartache and discouragement. If we can accomplish something worth while as we go about our day's work, we can retire at night feeling that our day has been well spent.

When Brigham Young led the Saints into this, the Salt Lake Valley, he knew that there were some among them who would not assume their rightful responsibility, and he knew that it would take the combined efforts of all if they were to survive and be at all successful. He impressed upon them the need to work in order to eat. The Lord has told us in Genesis 3:19: "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, . . ." I believe it is our individual responsibility to work hard, and I am including work and service in the Church.

Injustice is another great evil. Perhaps as Latter-day Saints we must be concerned with the justice and welfare of all people, because the membership of this Church is made up of people from all nations, your grandparents and mine from foreign countries, united in a common cause, that of bringing salvation to the souls of men.

In our different walks of life we must be careful not to put our own personal interests above the welfare of the group. This would be unjust. In public life we have seen people who consider the effect of every act, first how will it affect myself, and how will it affect the other people later?

Selfishness is one of the greatest causes of injustice. Few there are of us who can see fault in ourselves—meanness of spirit, pettiness of disposition. Few of us will admit to befriending a man because he is right, rather than because of his importance. How often have we heard parents tell their children, "I wish you wouldn't associate with our neighbor's children because they are not of our own social status." These are gross injustices, but they are prevalent among us today. We must renounce injustice if we would grow spiritually.

We should try to overcome intemperance because it is self-defeating, devastating to character, and paralyzing to one's own progress. We have seen men in prominent places of our communities bring sorrow and disgrace upon themselves and their families because they failed to curb an appetite.

A few months ago it was my privilege to ride across the country on a train, and there I met a high-ranking army officer, and we visited for many hours. Among other things he told me that the increase in nervous disorders in the army, brought about largely by alcohol and other things, was very disturbing and alarming. He indicated that it was the most self-defeating factor that the army had to contend with, and then he told me that one-third of the beds of the hospitals of this country were occupied by patients with nervous disorders, largely brought about by the use of alcohol and other drugs, and that it would be very alarming to the country if we knew the true status.

Intolerance is another self-destroying evil. If it isn't banished out of our character, it may reflect on the Church as well as on ourselves, because brotherhood like charity begins at home. If we would be tolerant, we must obey the first and great commandment; we must love the Lord our God with all our heart, might, mind and strength, and then we must love our neighbor as ourselves.

Brotherhood and the love of mankind must be resident in our hearts, on our streets, in our towns. Otherwise we may not have it in our own hearts. We largely judge others by ourselves. If we are intolerant of others, we can expect the same treatment ourselves. The inner strength of the Church reveals itself to a great extent in our way of treating others.

Now probably the greatest sin of all is the sin of ingratitude, but we, favored of all our Father's children, should fill our hearts with gratitude for the magnitude of the power of the gospel and the blessings that he has brought to us. The resources by which we advance are the real qualities of character that we possess. We must show gratitude for our blessings. We can be judged more by what we love than by what we own.

Our greatest blessings as a people are spiritual, not material. The older I become, the more I am convinced that there are not many things of very much importance which do not belong to the spiritual. There are the things that are important, and then there are the other things.

Nothing can contribute so much to our own growth as being home-loving, God-fearing, freedom-earning, temperate men and women.

May we as individuals consider our own responsibility in the Church and try to become better Latter-day Saints. Each of us could perhaps make one or two adjustments in our own lives that would make us better Latter-day Saints.

I feel good in this work because it is the work of the Lord. I love the people; you have been wonderful to me as I go to you from stake to stake. And I am grateful for the opportunity of partaking of your spirit and of hearing your testimonies. Your kindnesses and courtesies to all the brethren are appreciated. We feel a closeness and warmth through our association with you.

Friday, October 2

First Day

Personally I am unable to express my gratitude for my association with these fine men. I have great love and respect and admiration for each one of them. I am particularly grateful for my close association with Bishop Joseph L. Wirthlin and Bishop Carl Buehner. I love these men. Yes, we talk together, and we pray together. When one has sorrow, we all have sorrow. I am grateful for my association with all of my brethren of the General Authorities. As I get to know them, I would class it as the greatest experience in my life to be with them and partake of their spirit and their advice and counsel, because they are prophets of God. Do you regard these brethren as you would the Apostles of old? In Doctrine and Covenants, Section 68, Verse 4, may we remember this:

And whatsoever they [our leaders] shall speak when moved upon by the Holy Ghost shall be scripture, shall be the will of the Lord, shall be the mind of the Lord, shall be the word of the Lord, shall be the voice of the Lord, and the power of God unto salvation.

Now I think as a people we should keep that in mind when these brethren give us advice and counsel. Talk about love that abideth in the heart of men, I know of no people in the world that has the example to follow as does this people in the President of the Church. Talk about love and beauty. I am sure we could do well to try and emulate that spirit and that love, and that is the same love that the Savior exemplified when he was here upon the earth.

This is a sweet work. It couldn't be anything else because it is the work of our Father in heaven among the children of men. I have had some experiences in school work as a teacher for seventeen years, as superintendent of schools, as an athletic coach, and I had some satisfaction in it, and I am grateful for those experiences, but they are not like this work. There isn't anything like it in the world, and I would plead with every man and woman and boy and girl in the Church to have some activity, to be rendering some service in the Church. While I have been associated with this work, I am sure that I have been the greatest benefactor. It has been sweet and uplifting to me. From the bottom of my heart I want to thank the Lord for his kindnesses to me. I know what it is to be humble, I believe, and I know when I go to the Lord in the proper spirit that my prayers are answered. I know the Spirit of the Lord is understandable. I know that the Spirit of the Lord may be to us ever prevalent if we ourselves keep in tune with his Spirit. May the Lord bless us and give us the power to help each other be happy. May he give us true comfort and genuine friendship, and may he bless us that we may fulfil the measure of our creation here upon the earth that when our time comes to leave mortality we may leave without feeling sorry for the way that we have treated each other. Let us give each other those flowers and those praises and those kind words now, here, while we are alive to enjoy them.

I would plead with my friends and associates who are members of the Church to affiliate yourselves with all the activities of the Church. Then you will know what great blessings are and you will know what happiness is, and the Lord will bless you, and I would plead with and encourage my friends who are not members of the Church that they will consider seriously baptism into the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

May God bless us that we may be true Latter-day Saints, that we may be humble and prayerful, that we may render that sweet service which the Lord expects of us, and receive the blessings that he has in store for us, I humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Bishop Thorpe B. Isaacson of the Presiding Bishopric has just spoken to us. The Choir and Congregation will now join in singing, "Praise to the Man Who Communed with Jehovah." Elder J. Spencer Cornwall will conduct, with Elder Roy M. Darley at the organ.

Following the singing, Elder Eldred G. Smith, Patriarch to the Church, will speak.

The Singing Mothers and the congregation joined in singing the hymn, "Praise To The Man Who Communed With Jehovah."

ELDER ELDRED G. SMITHPatriarch to the Church*

I SINCERELY seek an interest in your faith and prayers in my behalf. I feel that I could say amen to all that has been said thus far in this conference. I am sure that I can say amen to all that shall be said.

There has been a question come to me which is the thought that I would like to express here today. A question was put to me recently, which I have heard many times, and I am sure many of you have heard the same question. A young lady asked, "What difference does it make whether I go to the temple to be married now, or whether I wait a few years after we are married, and then go to the temple? Are not the blessings just the same?" These questions come always from those who are members of the Church and who should know and understand the blessings and purpose of temple marriage. When I asked, "Why not go to the temple at first?" I got the usual stock answer, "Oh, I intend to go to the temple but not now, later. I am young and I have plenty of time." I recall a friend of mine who had somewhat the same attitude. They wanted to wait a few years, and they have waited. They have waited twenty-four years now. They have two grown children, a son and a daughter. None of the family are active in the Church any more. Their interests lie in a more worldly direction.

Another man told me of his experience. He was married in California. They intended to go to the temple.

They made several trips to Salt Lake City. Never was it quite convenient enough to go to the temple, even though they did make many trips to Salt Lake City. Eventually his wife lost interest in the Church and in Church activity. He lost interest in attending his meetings; then soon his wife lost interest in him and eventually left him, and as a result he lost his wife and children. He has since returned to Church activity, and he testified to me that if he had made the effort to go to the temple, he knew he would not have lost his wife and children. I am sure there are many other such experiences which could be related and of which you know. Those who so procrastinate surely do not fully understand what celestial marriage means to them. They must act on faith. A full knowledge of such things comes only from faithful obedience. To those who marry in the temple, the Lord has made this promise:

... Ye shall come forth in the first resurrection; and if it be after the first resurrection, in the next resurrection; and shall inherit the thrones, kingdoms, principalities, and powers, dominions, all heights and depths— . . . , it shall be done unto them in all things whatsoever my servant hath put upon them, in time, and through all eternity; and shall be of full force when they are out of the world; and they shall pass by the angels, and the gods, which are set there, to their exaltation and glory in all things, as hath been sealed upon their heads, which glory shall be a fulness and a continuation of the seeds forever and ever.

Friday, October 2

First Day

Then shall they be gods, because they have no end; therefore shall they be from everlasting to everlasting, because they continue; then shall they be above all, because all things are subject unto them. Then shall they be gods, because they have all power, and the angels are subject unto them.

Verily, verily, I say unto you, except ye abide my law ye cannot attain to this glory. (D. & C. 132:19-21.)

How can a person understand that promise and take such a chance? So to procrastinate is the greatest gamble on earth. You gamble with death. Each day spent is a day closer to death and the day of judgment. A man is judged by the knowledge given him. Where much is given, much is expected. To those who have been given the knowledge and the opportunity of temple marriage and then procrastinate, they are gambling the eternal blessings of godhood for a few earthly pleasures. There just isn't any sympathy for a man who knows he has had his chance and has deliberately forfeited it. The Lord referred to such people in his parable of the ten virgins; the five who were wise and kept oil in their lamps, and the five foolish who procrastinated until it was too late, and they were therefore shut out of the kingdom. The author of the following poem is anonymous, but surely it was written about many of us:

I'll go where you want me to go, dear Lord;
Real service is what I desire.
I'll say what you want me to say,
But don't ask me to join the choir.

I'll say what you want me to say, dear Lord,
I like to see things come to pass;
But don't ask me to teach anywhere;
I would much rather stay in my class.

I'll give what you want me to give, dear Lord;
I yearn for the kingdom to thrive.

I'll give you some pennies and nickels,
But don't ask me to pay a full tithe.

I'll read what you want me to read, dear Lord,
If genealogy is not implied.
I never did like to search books
For the names of people who've died.

I'll give what you want me to give, dear Lord,
And I'm sure I'll not begrudge it,
But I haven't the money to spare
To pay on welfare or budget.

Yes, I'll go where you want me to go, dear Lord;
I'll serve you with all my might,
But don't ask me to go to the temple
Because I'm much too busy each night.

The Lord is with all those who try to do his will. The greatest blessings come from obedience. When we demonstrate obedience, the Lord is bound to bestow upon us his blessings. Let us help each other; teach our neighbors. We cannot effectively teach what we do not practise. Seek the Lord in prayer, and he will strengthen your faith and give you courage to do. If you desire the blessings of the Lord and seek them in prayer, with faithful obedience, he will open the way for you to do his will and receive those blessings which are for your good.

I pray the blessings of the Lord to be upon all of us, that as each step in the gospel comes to us we will have the power to accept it with obedience, and by obedience receive the blessings of the Lord, that we may even receive blessings of exaltation and eternal life. These blessings I ask from the Lord in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Elder Eldred G. Smith, Patriarch to the Church, has just spoken to us. Elder Alma Sonne, Assistant to the Twelve, will now address us, and Elder Sonne will be followed by Elder Marion G. Romney.

ELDER ALMA SONNE

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles

MY BRETHREN AND SISTERS, I want to join with President McKay in expressing appreciation for the very fine singing to which we have listened today. I have often thought that we take for granted the singing and the uplift which come to us from our choirs, and yet we know that singing is an essential part of worship and that we can get nearer to God when we hear these songs of Zion than we can in any other way. I wish all of you could have heard the two choirs who rendered the music in the Oahu (Hawaii) Stake of Zion a week ago last Sunday—one in the morning and one in the evening service. Everyone present was thrilled as the choirs sang their selections. I have heard choirs sing in all parts of the world, and I am here to testify that our choirs and other musical groups are improving every year, and I sincerely hope that this improvement will continue throughout the Church in the various stakes, wards, and missions. For one, I thank the leaders for their devotion and for the effort they put forth to instruct our singers.

I want to say a word about the testimony which comes to each one of us who is active in the Church. A testimony is a precious gift from God. I have often said that the testimony we possess, you and I, is in reality the strength of the Church.

Not very long ago, a man who was investigating the Church and its doctrines came to me with this statement, "I have discovered the genius of Mormonism."

I was interested, of course, and said to him, "What is it, pray?"

He answered, "It is your machinery for doing religious work." Seeing I was not particularly impressed, he turned to me and said, "You don't believe it, do you?"

"No, I don't believe it," I replied, and without further comment he left.

Several weeks passed before the man returned. This time his spirit and attitude were altogether different. Upon entering my office he said, "I have read the Book of Mormon from cover to cover."

"Well, brother, what's the verdict?" I asked.

To my surprise and amazement he replied, "It is true."

"Do you mean to say you believe the Book of Mormon is true?"

"Indeed, I do," he replied, "and I believe Joseph Smith was a prophet of God, and I believe you Mormons," as he called us, "have the restored gospel of Jesus Christ."

Of course, I was very happy. But I asked him another question: "Do you still believe that the genius of Mormonism is its superb organization?"

He answered, "No, never. There is something back of that organization or it would not function." He further said, "The thing that is back of it is the individual testimony of all the Mormons."

I am sure he analyzed the situation correctly, for he proceeded to tell me, "If it had not been for the well-founded faith of the Pioneers, they would never have made the trek across the prairies to the Rocky Mountains." He further said, "If it were not for these convictions, your missionary system would collapse, and soon you would have no missionaries to send into the world. Your fiscal system would crumble similarly, for people don't pay tithing unless they have a testimony."

So I believe it is our paramount duty today and always to safeguard our testimonies and to live so that we will never lose them. That may seem like a big order, but I am sure it is God's will. May he help us to appreciate our responsibilities in this respect and may he help us to safeguard our God-given testimonies.

I recall that Jesus, when he talked

Friday, October 2

First Day

to Nicodemus, bore his testimony when he said,

Verily, verily, I say unto thee, We speak that we do know, and testify that we have seen; and ye receive not our witness.

If I have told you earthly things, and ye believe not, how shall ye believe, if I tell you of heavenly things? (John 3:11-12.)

The testimony which Peter gave to the Savior will live as long as men and women believe in God. "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God," and the Savior's answer will similarly live, "Blessed art thou, Simon Bar-jona: for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven." (See Matt. 16:16-17.) There, my brethren and sisters, you have the very keystone, the source and explanation of the testimonies which are the strength of the Church.

"... I know whom I have believed," (II Tim. 1:12) said Paul, the Apostle, after a long life of trial and persecution. Paul knew, for he had lived in accordance with the gospel of Jesus Christ. And finally, said Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon,

... he lives!

For we saw him, even on the right hand of God; and we heard the voice bearing record that he is the Only Begotten of the Father. (D. & C. 76:22-23.)

There is no argument against testimonies like these, my brethren and sisters. May we be blessed abundantly in our endeavors to serve the Lord and preserve in our lives the truths of the restored gospel, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER MARION G. ROMNEY

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

MY BELOVED brethren and sisters and friends: I have in my pocket a wonderful talk, one I have been three months preparing. I find it necessary, however, to deprive you of the great pleasure of hearing it at this time because it has already been given. President McKay gave half of it, and Bishop Wirthlin and Brother Lee used most of my scriptures. I am very happy, however, to be in harmony with them.

I pray the Lord to be with me now while I address myself to another subject, one that has been going through my mind this afternoon. I need your prayers and want you to think these few remarks through with me.

The subject to which I refer is the atonement of the Savior, and surely there could be no more appropriate theme upon which this meeting could close. The atonement of the Master is the central point of world history. Without it, the whole purpose for the creation of earth and our living upon it would fail.

From the scriptures, we learn that from the very beginning of the world, there has been among the Lord's people those who have understood the gospel, a ceremony pointing to the atonement of the Redeemer. When Adam and Eve were driven from the Garden of Eden, the Lord told them to build an altar and offer sacrifice. This they did, and they did it without knowing the reason therefor. I wish every one of Adam's posterity had the faith of their first earthly father, the faith to do what the Lord tells him to do without first having to have an explanation as to why he should do it. But to continue with our theme:

And after many days an angel of the Lord appeared unto Adam, saying: Why dost thou offer sacrifices unto the Lord? And Adam said unto him: I know not, save the Lord commanded me.

And then the angel spake, saying: This thing is a similitude of the sacrifice of the Only Begotten of the Father, which is full of grace and truth. (Moses 5:6-7.)

The angel told Adam other things—some of them Brother Lee talked about.

He told him that in the Meridian of Time the Redeemer would come into the world, and that until he should come God's people were to offer blood sacrifices frequently. This they were to do to point their minds forward to the day when the Redeemer would come and be sacrificed for the sins of the whole world. Then the angel taught Adam the gospel and told him to repent and be baptized, as quoted here this afternoon by Brother Lee.

From the days of Adam to the days of Jesus Christ, every people who understood the gospel offered blood sacrifices, using animals or birds without blemish. This they did in contemplation of the great event which was to take place in the Meridian of Time.

When Jesus was about to go through that terrible suffering incident to the atonement, he took his disciples with him to the Passover. As they sat in an upper chamber, Jesus broke bread and blessed it, and gave of it to his Apostles, telling them that this they should do often in remembrance of his body which was soon to be wounded on the cross for them, and for you and for me. Then he took wine, blessed it, and gave of it to them, telling them to do this often in remembrance of his blood which was to be spilled for them.

Jesus then went into the Garden of Gethsemane. There he suffered most. He suffered greatly on the cross, of course, but other men had died by crucifixion; in fact, a man hung on either side of him as he died on the cross. But no man, nor set of men, nor all men put together, ever suffered what the Redeemer suffered in the Garden. He went there to pray and suffer. One of the New Testament writers says that it "... was as it were great drops of blood falling down to the ground." (Luke 22:44.)

In this dispensation the Lord, calling upon the people to repent, tells them that unless they repent they must suffer even as he suffered. He describes that suffering in these words:

Which suffering caused myself, even God, the greatest of all, to tremble because of pain, and to bleed at every pore, and to suffer both body and spirit—and would that I might not drink the bitter cup, and shrink—

Nevertheless, glory be to the Father, and I partook and finished my preparations unto the children of men. (D. & C. 19:18-19.)

Now, my brethren and sisters, I cannot here discuss with you in detail what the atonement of the Savior means to us. But without it, no man or woman would ever be resurrected. From Adam's time to the time of Jesus, men died—millions of them. The hills and vales were full of their remains. But not a single one of them ever came out of the grave as a resurrected person until that glorious morning when Jesus was resurrected. Without his victory over death, they never would have come out of their graves, worlds without end. It took the atonement of Jesus Christ to reunite the bodies and spirits of men in the resurrection. And so all the world, believers and non-believers, are indebted to the Redeemer for their certain resurrection, because the resurrection will be as wide as was the fall, which brought death to every man.

There is another phase of the atonement which makes me love the Savior even more, and fills my soul with gratitude beyond expression. It is that in addition to atoning for Adam's transgression, thereby bringing about the resurrection, the Savior by his suffering paid the debt for my personal sins. He paid the debt for your personal sins and for the personal sins of every living soul that ever dwelt upon the earth or that ever will dwell in mortality upon the earth. But this he did conditionally. The benefits of this suffering for our individual transgressions will not come to us unconditionally in the same sense that the resurrection will come regardless of what we do. If we partake of the blessings of the atonement as far as our individual transgressions are concerned, we must obey the law.

And it is perfectly just that we are required to obey it because through

Friday, October 2

First Day

the fall of Adam, man's free agency was preserved. We had nothing to do with death's coming into the world; death came as a consequence of Adam's fall. But we have everything to do with our own acts. When we commit sin, we are estranged from God and rendered unfit to enter into his presence. No unclean thing can enter into his presence. We cannot of ourselves, no matter how we may try, rid ourselves of the stain which is upon us as a result of our own transgressions. That stain must be washed away by the blood of the Redeemer, and he has set up the way by which that stain may be removed. That way is the gospel of Jesus Christ. The gospel requires us to believe in the Redeemer, accept his atonement, repent of our sins, be baptized by immersion for the remission of our sins, receive the gift of the Holy Ghost by the laying on of hands, and continue faithfully to observe, or do the best we can to observe, the principles of the gospel all the days of our lives.

We have in the Church an ordinance which I have explained. It is the sacrament. The Lord has commanded us to partake of the sacrament regularly. Members of his Church are by him directed to go on the Sabbath day to the sacrament meeting, and there partake of the sacrament. And what are we to do when we partake of the sacrament? We are to think of all these things above mentioned, and many more. If I can remember one of the prayers, I will conclude with it. This is what we go to the sacrament meeting for; this is what we ought to do when we are there. Think about it:

O God, the Eternal Father, we ask thee in the name of thy Son, Jesus Christ, to bless and sanctify this bread to the souls of all those who partake of it, that they may eat in remembrance of the body of thy Son, . . .

What we ought to do when we partake of the sacrament is think of the Redeemer—of his wounded body as we partake of the bread, and of his spilt blood when we partake of the water.

. . . and witness unto thee, O God, the Eternal Father, . . .

A witness is a testimony. We ought, silently, to testify to our Father—

. . . that they are willing to take upon them the name of thy Son, and always remember him and keep his commandments which he has given them; . . .

And to what end?

. . . that they may always have his Spirit to be with them. (D. & C. 20:77.)

God help us to renew our covenants every week in this manner, and remember the redemption wrought for us by our great Redeemer, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Elder Marion G. Romney of the Council of the Twelve has just spoken to us.

The Relief Society Singing Mothers will now favor us with "Peace I Leave With You," with Sister Florence Jepsen Madsen conducting.

The closing prayer will be offered by President James V. Thompson of the Richland Stake, after which this Conference will stand adjourned until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

Tonight at 7 o'clock here in the Tabernacle, under the direction of the Presiding Bishopric, there will be held a meeting of the Bishoprics of the Church, members of Stake and Ward Committees of the Aaronic Priesthood under 21; Senior Members of the Aaronic Priesthood, including High Councilmen in charge of these programs; Stake Presidencies and High Councilmen are also invited to be in attendance. There will also be held tonight in the Assembly Hall a meeting of the Melchizedek Quorum officers. All those who are engaged in the Melchizedek Priesthood quorum work and class instructors and others will please take notice and be in attendance at 7 o'clock.

The music for this session has been furnished by the Relief Society Singing Mothers from the seventeen stakes in the Central Utah and Mt. Timpanogos Region, conducted as we have announced several times by Sister Madsen. Elder Roy M. Darley has been at the organ this afternoon. We have been thrilled and inspired by the singing of this wonderful chorus. You did not know, however, and I didn't until after the session, that that second anthem this morning, "My Soul Is Athirst for God," was composed, by Sister Madsen herself. No wonder this gifted woman can inspire with her leadership as she has done this day. We are grateful to her and to our Singing Mothers for the inspiring contribution they have made this day, as they have heretofore. The Lord bless them abundantly.

"Peace I Leave with You" will now be sung by this musical organization, and prayer will be offered by President Thompson.

After the benediction by President James V. Thompson of the Richland Stake, this Conference will be adjourned until tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock.

---

Selection by the Singing Mothers: "Peace I Leave With You."

President James V. Thompson of the Richland Stake offered the benediction.

Conference adjourned until 10:00 a.m., Saturday, October 3.

SECOND DAY

MORNING MEETING

The third session of the great Conference convened in the Tabernacle Saturday morning, October 3, and was opened promptly at 10 o'clock by President David O. McKay, who presided and conducted the services.

A choir consisting of German-speaking members of the Church under the leadership of Heinz Rimmasch, furnished the choral music for this session.

President David O. McKay:

On this glorious autumn morning, the First Presidency and General Authorities extend hearty greetings and welcome to all who are assembled and who are listening in to this, the 124th Semi-Annual Conference of the Church. This third session is being held in Temple Square, Salt Lake City; the grounds are beautiful, the flowers and lawns well kept.

This session will be broadcast in the Assembly Hall and in Barratt Hall, 60 North Main Street, both over a loud-speaking system and by television. The services will also be televised over Station KSL-TV, channel five, Salt Lake City, and will be heard over radio station KSL and by arrangement through KSL over 12 radio stations in Utah, Idaho, Arizona, Nevada, Colorado, the names of which stations have already been announced to the radio audience.

We desire to express our appreciation to these various radio and television stations for their courtesy in making available their time and facilities for these broadcasts. Telegrams this morning and letters indicate how the people throughout this Western territory appreciate the services thus rendered by the radio stations.

The singing for this session will be furnished by German-speaking members of the Church who constitute this choir, with Elder Heinz Rimmasch conducting. Elder Frank W. Asper is at the organ.

We shall begin these services by the Choir singing, "Come O Thou King of Kings," conducted by Elder Rimmasch.

The opening prayer will be offered by Elder Arwell L. Pierce, President of the Arizona Temple.

---

The congregation sang the hymn, "Come, O Thou King of Kings."

Elder Arwell L. Pierce offered the opening prayer.

Saturday, October 3

Second Day

President David O. McKay:

We are pleased to note the attendance this morning of prominent state officials, government officials, leaders in educational circles, and others. We do not have their names, but we bid you all welcome.

The German Choir of the Church will now favor us with, "Though Deep'ning Trials Throng Your Way," conducted by Elder Heinz Rimmasch, Brother Asper at the organ. Following the singing, President J. Reuben Clark, Jr., of the First Presidency, will address us.

Singing by the German choir, "Though Deep'ning Trials Throng Your Way."

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.Second Counselor in the First Presidency*

MY BROTHERS AND SISTERS: This is an humbling experience. I pray the Lord will bless me while I stand before you, and I ask that you be good enough to add your prayers to mine that I may say something that will be useful, uplifting, and encouraging to all of us.

I am partly in the unfortunate situation that Brother Romney found himself yesterday. Others that have spoken have gone over my ground. However, I am not like him, I have not a good talk in my coat pocket. Brother Lee and Brother Romney went over much of the ground, some of which I shall try to cover this morning. I have made my peace with them.

So far as we know, humankind have been afflicted with great crises since the grand council in heaven. We are in the midst of a great crisis now, and curiously, the crisis which we now face has in it and is a part of it, the great elemental principle that was in the first crisis that occurred in the council in heaven—the free agency of man.

I should like to personalize that council a little more than I have usually thought. Two great rival personages were in that conference, one standing with the Father. As the chronology is given in the book, it appears that, first, they found space in which to build an earth; then they provided that this earth should be built; that the spirits should come here to prove themselves whether they would obey the commandments of the Lord, and they were told of the rewards that would come to them if they did, and the punishments if they did not.

Then the question arose with the Father, "Whom shall I send?" The plan called for redemption. One stood forth and said, "I will redeem all mankind. Not one soul will be lost. I will surely do it. So send me." That plan, when analyzed, involved, as the Lord has told us time and again, the destruction of our free agency. Just how we were to be redeemed under the plan and yet destroy our free agency, we are not told. The proposer of that plan said to our heavenly Father, "Give me thine honor." (See Moses 4:1-2; Abraham 3:27.) And our heavenly Father has told us that that meant that he should surrender to the proposer, his power, and he, the Father, become more or less a nonentity, I suppose.

Then the other Personage said, "Send me, and the honor will be thine." The heavenly Father chose the latter, the Only Begotten, who was to be sent to this earth.

Now this first personage, Satan—I can understand that his proposal was based upon the proposition that since the Father was the Father of all his children and loved them, nothing could be more satisfactory to the Father than the promise to redeem them all. It was a subtle approach, and, of course, God saw it. Satan was "cast down," and with him went one-third of the hosts of heaven.

He declared by his rebellion eternal enmity toward the plan that was adopted, and from that time until now, he has constantly sought to build the empire, the kingdom for which he planned, by leading us astray. He has never relented for a moment. Having our agency, he was to lead us to do evil.

He first struck at Adam and Eve in the garden and secured from them disobedience. There is much in the scripture that indicates that mere obedience, per se, irrespective of what the obedience involved, is a great virtue in itself. Mere obedience in spiritual matters requires that on occasion it shall be blind obedience because the Lord cannot explain to us all the things that he asks us to do. We could not understand.

You know, Satan won with Eve, but Eve, when she understood, gave a great hymn of praise that she had fallen because now they would have seed, and they could not have had seed had the fall not taken place.

Adam and Eve were thrust out of the Garden of Eden; they became mortal, subject to temporal death; but the Lord then said, and did as he said, that he would give to Adam the gospel plan by which the spirits that were to come here could live and gain the reward which he had promised. That gospel plan he gave, and when he gave it, he said it would never be taken away until the end of the world. It is my faith that the gospel plan has always been here, that his priesthood has always been here on the earth, and that it will continue to be so until the end comes. (While through the apostasy since the time of Christ, the priesthood was lost to the people generally and to the Christian churches, yet there have always been on the earth from the beginning, servants of the Lord who have held the priesthood. See: as to the descent of the priesthood down through Moses, D. & C. 84:6-17, 25-26; as to Moses, Elias, Elijah, D. & C. 110:11-15; as to the Apostle John, John 21:22-23; and as to the Three Nephites, 3 Nephi 28:1-10. See Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith, Smith, pp. 180-181.)

When Adam began to rear a family, Satan struck again. This time he divided the family. Part of them became worldly and wicked, and that wickedness increased. Part of them were righteous. Brother Lee, yesterday traced down the dispensations. There is no need of my retracing their course. These dispensations were, each of them, a crisis. The dispensation in which Enoch lived afforded Enoch a chance to demonstrate that he could do what no other leader of a dispensation has ever done—prepare a people to be taken into the presence of our heavenly Father. That was the greatest achievement of any leader of any dispensation.

Before the Meridian of Time and the birth of the Messiah, mankind looked forward thereto. Before that, all of the rituals pertaining to the gospel looked to the Messiah, to his birth, as Brother Romney told us. Since that time, we honor him, and our ritual, the sacrament, relates back to that time. We make covenants when we partake of the sacrament. But also, and ever since that time, we have been told that there would be a Dispensation of the Fulness of Times. And as Brother Lee pointed out, we now are in that dispensation, we are in the dispensation which is to prepare for the Second Coming, toward which all true Christians look.

The particular thing that I wish to say today is this: Being in that last dispensation, representing our heavenly Father therein, we have great responsibilities. If the world is to be prepared for the Second Coming, we must do it. No one else has the knowledge. No one else has the authority. The responsibility is ours. The last dispensation has welded together all of the doctrines and principles of the gospel that were advanced in former dispensations. We have the priesthood bestowed by heavenly hands. We have the restoration of the keys, conferred in the Kirtland Temple when Moses and Elias and Elijah came. We have all of the authority, all of the principles that are necessary for the great work of preparation; and ours, I repeat, is the sole responsibility to go forward and see that our mission is carried out.

Saturday, October 3

Second Day

We must live righteously. We must keep the commandments of the Lord. We must do his work. He has told us what we are to do, and if we are to gain the salvation which we hope and expect to gain and meet our responsibilities, we must obey what he has told us to do.

My brothers and sisters, if we think of this carefully, I am sure we cannot approach our work in the Church with lightmindedness. I am sure we shall have to be a prayerful people. I am sure we shall have to live in accordance with the commandments which he has given. I am sure we must use our utmost endeavors to build up the kingdom of God here on earth.

I hope, my brothers and sisters, that we shall not be remiss in anything that pertains to ourselves or to our activities in the Church.

I add again my testimony, which I have borne time and again, that God lives, that Jesus is the Christ, that he came to earth, lived, moved among men, carried on his mission, that in due time and in accordance with the plan, he was crucified, and lay in the tomb, and rose on the third morning. I testify that Joseph was the Prophet through whom the Lord re-established his Church here on earth, so ushering in this last Dispensation of the Fulness of Times, for the carrying forward of which and the perfecting of which we are responsible, that the priesthood came, that the gospel was fully restored.

I testify that those who followed the Prophet succeeded to his powers, to his rights and prerogatives and that has come down through to our present President, President David Oman McKay. I testify that if we will follow the advice and the counsel of those who are placed over us, we shall carry forward the work which we are obliged to do—I say obliged, because we are.

May the Lord bless each and every one of us and help us to do our part, I humbly pray, in the name of Jesus. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

President J. Reuben Clark, Jr., of the First Presidency, has just spoken to us. We shall now hear from Elder Thomas E. McKay, Assistant to the Twelve, who will be followed by Elder Antoine R. Ivins.

ELDER THOMAS E. MCKAY

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles

PRESIDENT McKay, Counselors, President Smith, other members of the General Authorities, brethren and sisters:

I am very thankful for this opportunity of being here this morning. I have enjoyed the services thus far, and especially the opening address of President McKay yesterday morning. I pray humbly that the same spirit that has prompted all those who have spoken will help me, also. I feel very humble, and my heart is full of thanksgiving at this time for this opportunity of again bearing my testimony to you that the gospel is true, that Jesus is the Christ and is head of this Church.

I feel more grateful than ever this morning for my mother, that she was instrumental in insisting on my father's accepting his call to go into the mission field at the time he was called and would not permit him to postpone that call for a year because of her delicate condition. That was a great decision in the history of the David McKay family, and I appreciate it more this morning than ever. She said, "David, you go on that mission. The Lord wants you now, not a year from now.

He can take care of me when you are in Scotland as well as if you were at my bedside." It was just ten days after he left for the mission field that a beautiful little spirit, one of the choicest, came to our home. She was over two years old before my father saw her.

I say I am grateful that that decision was made to go on a mission at that time. I love the missionary work, and I am so grateful to hear the beautiful voices of our German Saints. It is a wonderful choir, and I congratulate them. I am proud of them. I thought perhaps I had heard some of the voices over in Germany and Switzerland, but they all sounded so young and fresh that I think perhaps they were born since I left. Anyhow, it is a fine choir, and I congratulate them.

I recall that just fifty-three years ago (now you know why I think they are too young)—I am going to reminisce. I had decided I would not, because it is a sign of old age, but I suppose I am as I was the first time I rode a bicycle. Mother told me not to go on the highway. I just reached the highway and had to turn around, and there was a telephone pole and a heavy brace. I kept my eye on that pole and determined not to hit it, but I hit it. That is the way I am with reminiscing, I guess—but hearing this fine German choir is partly the cause of it.

Fifty-three years ago, I recall the first mission-wide conference that I attended after arriving there. It was in Berlin. President Francis M. Lyman was president of the European Mission. He had invited to accompany him my good friend, George Q. Morris, one of my classmates, and I knew more of the singers that were there, the students, than I did the missionaries. It was a thrill to meet them.

Our Church has always been interested in the young people studying music, and I was happy at that conference to see so many of our students there. The state of Utah has been proud, too. At that time we had more young people abroad studying music than any other state in the Union, according to population. Of course, that was before World War I, and Berlin and Vienna were the centers of culture so far as music was concerned. Those students—and I want to pay tribute to them—it has been my experience that they have always been willing, no matter what their positions—one of them sang in the Kaiser's Opera House, but they were always willing and pleased to take part in the branches and help the missionaries.

I was amused after that trip, to receive a book from Brother Morris, his Baedeker's Rhine. He wanted to prepare before he came into Germany, and he bought this Baedeker's Rhine as a guidebook, and he was kind enough after he arrived in London—he was President of the London Conference—to send this book to me. On the flyleaf was written, pardon me (Brother Morris and Sister Morris) was written in quotation marks, "Good-bye, Sweet Day." That is one of Sister Morris' favorite songs. I remember Anthony Lund, later to be conductor of the Tabernacle Choir, told me once that nobody could sing that song just as Sister Emma Ramsey could sing it, and it was "Good-bye, Single Bliss," also, Brother Morris, as far as you were concerned. She had rendered it at that conference. It was a wonderful conference.

After that session we went down to Frankfurt on the Main, and I had headquarters in that mission for thirty months. I was worried, of course, about the conference. I had the responsibility. We had the largest hall in Frankfurt at one of the big hotels. We had freedom there. Frankfurt is what we call a freistadt, and always has been, a free city; it did not belong to any kingdom but did belong to the German Empire.

We had to register our meetings, however, and we became acquainted with the policemen who used to attend, and we would always speak to them on the streets as we met them, and they were our friends. But at this conference—it was new, we had to register it, of course—none of our friends came to represent the authorities, but a young officer (in a new suit, his sword shined) came in. Our reception committee met him and offered to show him to a seat on the stand, but that would not do. He took a seat in the choir, the soprano section. He made himself conspicuous. He had me worried. I thought, maybe we will have some trouble here, but after the first song by the congregation, and the prayer, Sister Emma Lucy Gates Bowen, sang "I Know that My Redeemer Lives," and oh, how she did sing it. Right after that the choir, and we had a good choir—the missionaries were there helping, as usual—sang that favorite Mormon hymn, "Oh, My Father." They stood up to sing it. When they sat down, I looked for our German officer, but he had disappeared. He was so ashamed of the way he had acted there, and then to hear that beautiful singing, and see that wonderful choir and hear them, he decided that this was not any place for him.

Saturday, October 3

Second Day

The next day we took a trip down the Rhine, Brother Lyman and Brother Morris returning to England. Some of the presidents of the other conferences were accompanying us, and we went on and finished the tour of the Frankfurt Conference. Brother William Seegmiller was one of those presidents—he was president of the Berlin Conference at the time; Brother Heppler was another. You may think I am bragging now, but in that mission under Hugh J. Cannon, one of the greatest missionaries the Church has produced, there were President Mabey, President Neslen, and President Seegmiller, and as I have stated, Brother Heppler. Soon after we returned home, the German Mission, as President Cannon said, had taken over the state: Brother Mabey was governor (this was all at the same time); Brother Neslen was mayor of Salt Lake City; Brother Seegmiller, speaker of the house; Brother Heppler, floor leader in the house; and I was president of the senate. We were all German missionaries there together.

But I want to refer to the soloists that were there, the students that were studying in music, and pay tribute to them for the help they gave us in our missionary work. God bless their memory. I think it was that trip down the Rhine where we got so well acquainted with Brother Lyman, listening to some of his stories about early Church history. Perhaps this visit and better acquaintance with President Francis M. Lyman had a bearing on my call on my second mission, six years after I returned from my first, at least, President Lyman led me to believe so. I had been called to another very important position; I accepted and told the presidency of the Weber Stake I would rather go to South Africa or any other place on a mission than accept, but I accepted it, as bishop of one of the wards. I went home from the party that night and had a good cry.

I did not hear any more of that call, however, to the bishopric. The brethren, contrary to instructions, had spoken to me before they had sent my name in to the General Authorities for their approval, so the next thing I knew I was called to preside over the Swiss-German Mission. When I met President Lyman on the street, he smiled and said, "Brother Thomas, it is a good thing sometimes to have a friend at court." And I took it from that that he had had something to do with the change from being bishop to presiding over that mission.

That is why, six years after that first mission, I was back there again, this time to preside over the Swiss-German Mission, which comprised France, Switzerland, Germany, Austria, Hungary, and part of Romania. It was a great experience, brothers and sisters, and I am so grateful this morning for that missionary experience.

Yes, we had our choirs there to help us. I tell you, music is one of the greatest helps that the missionaries have in spreading the gospel. We had choirs in Königsberg, way up in East Prussia, Hamburg, Berlin, Frankfurt on the Main, Chemnitz, a large choir, Zurich down in Switzerland, and Basel, and these choirs composed largely, no, not largely, but quite a percentage of them were friends, investigators. They were not investigators long after they began singing our hymns and partaking of the spirit of these beautiful singers; they became members also. Music has been a great help in spreading the gospel.

I want to mention and pay tribute to Professor Thomas Giles, Tom Giles, as I always called him. He was there in Vienna studying. He was there when we baptized the first two members, a father and his daughter, and he remained there, after six years, and took over the singing and often the preaching. He was a great help, as were all the singers. God bless them.

In 1937 we were called to preside over the Swiss-German Mission with instructions to make three missions out of the two, that is the German-Austrian and Swiss-German. Out of this grew the East German mission with headquarters in Berlin, the West German mission with headquarters in Frankfurt, and the Swiss-Austrian mission with headquarters in Basel, Switzerland.

President Reese had been released on account of illness, and I was then appointed the president of the East German mission with instructions to continue as president of the Swiss-Austrian until my successor was appointed. I was in Berlin when war was declared.

President Joseph Fielding Smith and his wife were there touring the mission; they had just about finished. They were hurrying to catch their ship, and a cablegram came from the First Presidency when war was declared, to cancel their passages and remain there and help get the missionaries home. So they had to get out of Germany. They were in the West German Mission at the time. They left for Copenhagen where I had sent all of the missionaries from the East German Mission. Brother

Wood went up there with more than half of his missionaries, the others leaving via Holland, but Brother Mark Garff was presiding there in Copenhagen in the Danish Mission and with the added responsibilities was equal to the task as usual. He took care of all of them, and with the assistance of President Smith, did wonderful work; all of the missionaries were returned home.

Since I was in Switzerland, I was permitted to remain a little longer than the others. Our Consul General Boerman in Basel—oh, I will never forget him—made it possible through the offices of the Consul General to telephone to any of the headquarters that I wanted to—Brother Brown over in London, Brother Joseph Evans in Paris, and Brother Murdock in Holland, the Netherlands Mission, and then up to Copenhagen where the other mission presidents were. And this fine man—he is still alive, and you fisherman friends that I love so much, he is a great fisherman, and that brought us closer together—would do anything for us.

Then, of course, we had to leave the mission. We called local people to take charge, and they had charge all during the war. And I want to pay tribute to those men, three of them lost their lives in the war. Brother Herbert Kloepper, whom I put in charge, with two very wonderful men, elderly men, to help him, lost his life. The Brother Biel that Brother Wood left in charge, lost his life. But I remember getting a letter from him in which he said, "Brother McKay, I am called into service and have to leave in the morning. I have not time to get your approval, but I have chosen Brother Heck, and he says that his parents claim that you blessed him as a baby, so perhaps he will be all right." And he lost his life. Those three presidents gave their lives, and they were as fine spirits as ever came. God bless their memories.

Then the local brethren carried on all during the war. But they were not alone; not entirely left alone. Again,

Saturday, October 3

Second Day

music comes into it, our choirs. This wonderful Tabernacle Choir, singing as it has been doing for lo, these many years, the second longest, I think, in radio, continued singing; and their choir numbers were being transcribed by another fine young man in Stuttgart. He had charge of the radio system there, Brother Fred Taylor, Jr. And those Tabernacle Choir songs were transcribed and went into quite a large part of Germany. Our members were thrilled by them.

Scores of letters from appreciative friends in Europe were received by the choir. Sister Mary Jack, secretary of the choir sent them over to my office. I had the honor of being acting mission president for the European Mission, and we would read them and send them to these fine mission presidents over there.

Well, God bless our choirs and our music, it is a great help to this great missionary work.

I remember, too, I want to recommend not only choirs throughout the Church, but also singing in the home, the parents singing together, husband and wife. President Smith will pardon me for this, I am sure; he gave some fine sermons there in visiting our European Mission, but they will not be remembered like the duet that he and his sweetheart sang; he would sit down on the bench, and she would play the accompaniment, and they would sing a song. The members will remember that. There are members here in the choir who will remember that duet.

I recommend that as an example to you fathers and mothers, you husbands and wives. Sit down at the piano and play together. Sometimes the husband has to play with one finger, but it is all right; I want to tell you it does the work to that family.

And then I remember visiting a stake where a young mother brought her three children and handed the baby to somebody to take care of while she accompanied her family. I do not believe the conference was ever so touched as by the beautiful music of that mother accompanying her three daughters. So I recommend music in the home.

God bless our missionary system. This is a great missionary Church. And God bless the music in this system. I am glad that Brother Asper is playing here. He is one of my German missionaries, by the way. And speaking of—I should stop, I know; my wife is worrying; so are some others, I should not speak so long—but I recall receiving a letter on my second mission from Brother Hansen who was presiding over the Nuremberg District. He asked whether the mission could help buy an organ for the branch, that they had a wonderful little organist there, and I was delighted to help them. That little organist is our wonderful, one of the greatest organists in the world today, Brother Alexander Schreiner. God help us to have music in our homes, in our branches, in our stakes, and music everywhere. In the words of Tiny Tim, "God bless us everyone." I ask this in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Elder Thomas E. McKay, Assistant to the Twelve, has just spoken to us. Elder Antoine R. Ivins, of the First Council of Seventy, will be our next speaker.

ELDER ANTOINE R. IVINS

Of the First Council of the Seventy

MY BELOVED brethren and sisters: It is twenty-two years this month since I made the first trip up those steps, and it is no easier today than it was then.

I stand before you as your servant, depending entirely upon your faith and prayers and the Spirit of our heavenly Father to direct the testimony that I shall bear to you today. I have a fervent testimony and knowledge of the truth of the gospel, for which I am truly thankful. I am thankful to be a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, the organization which has the responsibility of implementing in the lives of its members, the gospel of Jesus Christ, and the carrying of a warning to the world that the gospel and priesthood have been restored.

The advantages of membership in the Church are tremendous. You know them as well as I. Time would hardly permit that we should enumerate them, but they are tremendous, and I am very grateful to be the recipient of those blessings. One of the greatest of them is the opportunity for service. In the twenty-two years that I have occupied this position, my purpose has been to learn my duty and gain the strength, if I could, to do it well, that perhaps my service might be helpful to someone else.

I realize that in it all, of course, I am the chief beneficiary, because I develop a love for the people whom I serve, and love of one's fellow, Christ said, was the second great principle of the gospel. If I can continue to do that, and serve you with that motive only, I shall be very happy.

I am glad that I belong to a Church which gives me the opportunity of striving to learn these things, to learn the truth, which encourages me to reach out and search constantly for the truth, and having learned it, to attempt to apply it. I am glad that you and I are not circumscribed in our privileges of study and research, for it has been the purpose of the Church, from its inception, to stimulate education among the people.

In taking the tremendous advantages as I do of membership in the Church, I feel an equal responsibility towards it; if I am to benefit by it, I should help it meet its tremendous burdens. They are of varying and different types, of course, but if I am to take the benefit of any organization, I feel duty-bound to carry my portion of its burdens, if I can. I feel that loyalty to the Church demands just that thing, and recently in talking to a conference, I suggested that, that if we could implant in the hearts of our children that type of loyalty, they would have no difficulty in subscribing to the program of the Church of which we are all members.

I was glad when President Clark said this morning that there are times when we must accept the requests of our heavenly Father even though we may not understand their purpose and, even though at times it be blind obedience that we render, that we should do it, if we expect to take the benefits and blessings that come from membership in the Church.

When I said that the other day, it was suggested that perhaps I was implying that the leadership of the Church is infallible, and that the free agency of man is circumscribed by that doctrine and teaching, but I do not believe that either applies. I have never been told what I should study. I exercise my freedom in the things that I teach, trying always, of course, to make them conform to the teachings of the Church. But I feel that in it I am not particularly circumscribed in my liberties and in my privileges, and I glory in the fact that the Church throws open to me all of the books that have been written, if I care to delve into them. I have faith that if I delve, seeking the Spirit of God in my teaching, I will never find anything that will upset and disturb my faith in God and the restoration of the gospel.

The blessings of membership in the Church, brothers and sisters, are tremendous. Loyalty to it should prompt you and me to abide by its teachings.

When I have occasion to set up a presidency of a seventies quorum, I teach the members this: You are to think independently, you are to discuss freely, and give expression to your thoughts regarding the problems that arise in your meetings, but if you happen to be on the losing end of the discussion, and the majority rules one thing while you have felt and argued for another, then loyalty on your part demands that you not only withdraw from opposition, but that you say, brethren, if that is your will, I will help you. I believe that is the spirit in which we ought to serve, brethren and sisters, and if we could develop that loyalty in our own hearts and implant it in the hearts of our children, the bad stories that we read in the newspapers would be fewer and fewer, as our teachings might be absorbed by the people.

Saturday, October 3

Second Day

We have no reason, whatsoever, to be ashamed of the Church or of its leadership. Let us support it. Let us teach seriously, for the message we have is absolutely essential to the highest exaltation of men in the kingdom of God. Nobody would deny the fact that any man who strives to live the gospel of Jesus Christ shall benefit by it, but adherence to the teachings in their detail requires that one repent, be baptized into the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, be confirmed a member thereof, and if he be a man, that he receive the responsibilities of the Melchizedek Priesthood and enjoy the benefits of such ordinances as the temple extends to each of us here in order that we may attain to the highest exaltation and eventually to the powers of God. Can we develop that loyalty, brethren and sisters, can we sustain the program of the Church to that extent; until I can, I shall feel unworthy to partake of the high blessings that the Church offers me.

God bless you all in your ministry; service to your fellows is your greatest privilege; to serve you is my greatest privilege, and I would like to live as long as I can do it well and then make way for somebody who can take it up, because it must go on, until the consummation of the purposes of God.

Again, may he bless you all, I pray in Jesus' name. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Will the congregation, and so far as convenient, the listening audience, now join with the choir in singing, "How Firm a Foundation." Brother Spencer Cornwall will conduct.

The Choir and congregation sang the hymn, "How Firm A Foundation."

President David O. McKay:

Elder Milton R. Hunter, of the First Council of Seventy, will now speak to us. He will be followed by Elder Oscar A. Kirkham.

ELDER MILTON R. HUNTER

Of the First Council of the Seventy

MY BRETHREN AND SISTERS: Today, with the help of the Lord, I would like to reason directly with members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, because they have taken upon themselves the name of Christ and have entered into a covenant to keep all of his commandments. According to the word of the Lord, they belong to "... the only true and living church upon the face of the whole earth. . . ." (D. & C. 1:30.) This Church has within it the power of the priesthood with all the ordinances of the gospel and doctrines necessary to bring its members back into the presence of God and give them exaltation. Members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints are heirs not only to the celestial glory but also to exaltation or eternal life in that glory; and that heirship shall be obtained if they keep all the commandments given by Jesus Christ to members of his kingdom. Thus, the words of Paul apply very aptly to the Latter-day Saints:

Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him. (1 Cor. 2:9.)

Certainly all the things that this world could offer would not be comparable if attained to the receiving of eternal life which God promises to members of his kingdom; for he has declared that "... eternal life ... is the greatest of all the gifts of God." (D. & C. 14:7.)

On a certain occasion, the Savior said:

For what is a man profited, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul? or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?" (Matt. 16:26.)

In answering those questions for the members of the Church, I would say, there is nothing that this world offers which would be equal to the eternal exaltation which God promises those who love him; nor is there anything in this world which we would give for our souls.

Yet I do recognize the fact, also, that there are many temptations in mortality which we have, and some of the Latter-day Saints, as a result of these temptations, fall into sin and thereby exchange their souls for the things of this world; for example, the desire to attain wealth, position, or power, accompanied by greed, selfishness, covetousness, and other earthly contaminations, cause some Latter-day Saints to lose their souls. The Savior has warned against covetousness; he said:

Take heed, and beware of covetousness: for a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth.

And he spake a parable unto them, saying, The ground of a certain rich man brought forth plentifully:

And he thought within himself, saying, What shall I do, because I have no room where to bestow my fruits?

And he said, This will I do: I will pull down my barns, and build greater; and there will I bestow all my fruits and my goods.

And I will say to my soul, Soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years; take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry.

But God said unto him, Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee: then whose shall those things be, which thou hast provided?

So is he that layeth up treasure for himself, and is not rich toward God. (Luke 12:15-21.)

And, we could say, so shall it be with the Saints in our day who love gold more than they love God.

We are all very familiar with the incident recorded in the New Testament wherein the rich young ruler came to the Master and asked what he must do to gain eternal life. After the Savior had listed many of the commandments to him, the young ruler said, "All these things have I kept from my youth up." And then the Savior, knowing of his weakness, said, "If thou wilt be perfect, go and sell that thou hast, and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven: and come and follow me." (See Matt. 19:20-21.) And the rich young man went away sorrowing, because he had much goods. He was not willing to exchange his earthly goods for his eternal soul; neither was he willing to follow the Savior's admonition wherein he said:

Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal:

But lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through nor steal:

For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also. (Matt. 6:19-21.)

I do not believe that the Savior objects to Latter-day Saints becoming wealthy, if they use that wealth as they should. God wants his children to have the good things of the world, if we use that wealth to pay our tithing, and fast offerings, to send out missionaries, to build church houses, and to help build up the kingdom of God here upon this earth in every way; but he warned against the evil effects that wealth might have on members of his

Saturday, October 3

Second Day

Church. Those who use their wealth for the building of the kingdom of God are following the Savior's admonition to

... seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you. (Ibid., 6:33.)

Throughout various dispensations of the gospel, the Lord has placed it upon those who have wealth to "remember the poor." In the latter days he gave definite commandments to members of the Church of Jesus Christ in this respect; and he gave these commandments in strong terminology. Let me quote from the Doctrine and Covenants:

Wo unto you rich men, that will not give your substance to the poor, for your riches will canker your souls; and this shall be your lamentation in the day of visitation and of judgment, and of indignation: The harvest is past, the summer is ended, and my soul is not saved! (D. & C. 56:16.)

On another occasion, the Savior revealed in modern days:

Therefore, if any man shall take of the abundance which I have made, and impart not his portion, according to the law of my gospel, unto the poor and the needy, he shall, with the wicked, lift up his eyes in hell, being in torment. (Ibid., 104:18.)

Now, what is meant by the law of his gospel? The law of his gospel, in this respect, no doubt, is fast offerings, the Church welfare contributions, probably tithing, and the other contributions that God has provided in his Church to take care of the needy and the poor, and to build up his kingdom here upon this earth. No Latter-day Saint who refuses to contribute his share in carrying forward the work of the Lord will be found guiltless at the judgment day.

Now, what shall the Latter-day Saint give in exchange for his soul? The Lord has given to us the Sabbath day law. In latter days he commanded:

And that thou mayest more fully keep thyself unspotted from the world, thou shalt go to the house of prayer and offer up thy sacraments upon my holy day. (Ibid., 59:9.)

And yet on the Sabbath day there are many Latter-day Saints who go to picture shows, who go to ball games, who go car riding, who work on their lots, and in these and numerous other ways contaminate themselves with the sins of the world, and thereby exchange their souls for improper Sabbath day observance and its accompanying vices.

The Lord has given a great law for the physical and spiritual health of his children, known as the Word of Wisdom. Paul, the ancient Apostle, declared:

Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you?

If any man defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy; for the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are. (1 Cor. 3:16-17.)

Thus, as Paul proclaimed, our bodies are temples of God, given to us that we might keep them clean, pure, and uncontaminated in all respects, that some day we might come back with our bodies into the presence of our eternal Maker and have them purified and exalted. So the things that we do that will contaminate our bodies certainly work against the saving of our souls. Would any women who belong to the true Church be foolish enough to drink tea and thereby contaminate their bodies? Would others among us drink coffee, use liquor or tobacco, and thereby exchange the gratifying of these physical appetites for our eternal souls? Foolish, indeed, would be such people, to say the least.

The Lord also gave the great law of chastity in ancient times, saying, "Thou shalt not commit adultery." (Ex. 20:14.) Speaking of sex immorality, Alma said to his son:

Know ye not, my son, that these things are an abomination in the sight of the Lord; yea, most abominable above all sins save it be the shedding of innocent blood or denying the Holy Ghost? (Alma 39:5.)

In modern revelation, the Lord has reaffirmed the commandment: "Thou shalt not commit adultery." (See D. & C. 42:24; 59:6.) We read in the Doctrine and Covenants, also:

And verily I say unto you, as I have said before, he that looketh on a woman to lust after her, or if any shall commit adultery in their hearts, they shall not have the Spirit, but shall deny the faith and shall fear.

Wherefore, I, the Lord, have said that the fearful, and the unbelieving, and all liars, and whosoever loveth and maketh a lie, and the whoremonger, and the sorcerer, shall have their part in that lake which burneth with fire and brimstone, which is the second death.

Verily I say, that they shall not have part in the first resurrection. (Ibid., 63:16-18.)

With such doctrine revealed by the Lord directly to us, we know, as Latter-day Saints, that if we commit adultery and if we continue to satisfy the lusts of the flesh, so to speak, by living that kind of life, we shall be thrust down to hell. Thus, we thereby sell our souls for the gratification of the lust of the flesh. Let me ask you, is sex immorality worth such an exorbitant price?

The Lord has also given the great law of celestial marriage, which is the crowning gospel principle, giving the promise that those who abide by that law and keep the other commandments shall rise in the resurrection and receive exaltation or eternal life which he declares is the greatest gift that he has in store for man.

Even after receiving such a glorious promise, there are many Latter-day Saints who refuse to abide by the law of celestial marriage, refusing to go to the temple and enter into God's holy covenant. And why do they refuse? For various reasons.

Would there be some members of the Church foolish enough to refuse to go to the temple because they did not want to wear garments for the short space of life in mortality? If there are members of the kingdom of God so unwise, certainly we would say, such a choice would be a very foolish one, indeed. Or would there be some among us who would refuse to pay tithing and fast offerings to the Lord, who would disregard God's law of health by breaking the Word of Wisdom, who would defile their bodies by not observing the law of chastity, or break God's other commandments and thereby cut themselves off from the blessings of the priesthood, from the blessings of the temple, and ultimately from exaltation? The truth remains that there are such unwise people who hold membership in the Church. At the coming of the Lord, if they fail to repent, they shall be counted among the "foolish virgins." (See Ibid., 63:54; 45:56.)

"For what is a man profited, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul? or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?" (Matt. 16:26. Italics added.)

Certainly, as Latter-day Saints, we would have no profit if we should gain the whole world and lose our souls. There is nothing that this world can offer that we would exchange for eternal life.

May God bless us as children of the covenant—members of his Church and kingdom—that we will keep the commandments, that we will walk in the pathway that our Savior has pointed out for us to follow back to the presence of our eternal Father, that we may someday attain an eternal and blessed exaltation, I humbly pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Elder Milton R. Hunter has just concluded speaking. Elder Oscar A. Kirkham, also of the First Council of Seventy, will be our next speaker, and our concluding speaker this morning, will be Elder Spencer W. Kimball.

ELDER OSCAR A. KIRKHAM

Of the First Council of the Seventy

I PRAY that the Lord may be with me and bless me and that you will incline your hearts toward me and lend that sympathetic understanding in this moment of real effort on my part.

There is a matter I wish to present on behalf of our President, President McKay, and brothers and sisters of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. As a National Council member at large of the Boy Scouts of America, I am pleased to say that President David O. McKay received last summer the highest honor award which can be given by that organization to its leaders—the Silver Buffalo.

Scouting membership has reached over three million in the United States of America, making a total of five and a half million members in the world. Among the persons receiving this honor of the Silver Buffalo award are some of America's most distinguished leaders in business, education, art, and religion. "In the service of youth" reads the citation.

We in scouting in the Latter-day Saint Church feel highly honored to have this distinguished recognition come to President David O. McKay. May the Lord bless his kindly words, his noble example, and the power and strength of his message that he has placed in the hearts of men in this glorious movement.

There are two great trails for a boy: from deacon to high priest; from Tenderfoot to Eagle Scout. I humbly pray in my heart that every boy—your boy, my boy, your neighbor's boy—all boys in this good land, may have the high privilege, through your encouragement and mine and all good men to devote their energy to following these two great trails that they may bless and glorify their lives.

As youth goes, so will civilization go. Thus we must safeguard their future with noble example on the part of worthy parents and leadership, with devoted personal attention; then our civilization will continue to progress.

Some time ago, a man on the highway halted, impressed by the rolling hills. In the midst of these hills he saw a beautiful straight furrow. He stopped by the fence, expecting to see an old, experienced farmer coming toward the end of the furrow, but instead he saw a youth. Immediately he said to the young chap, "Did you plow the first furrow in this field?"

"Yes, sir."

"You will do many straight things in life." And on his way he went.

Twelve years went by. The man came again. He was met by a lovely limousine at the station. "We have a fine hotel in the city," he was told, "but I am taking the privilege of inviting you to my home. Will you kindly come?"

"Yes, I will be pleased. I am tired of hotels," the gentleman replied.

That night before a large auditorium and before this man arose to address the audience, the man who had been entertaining him said, "I am the mayor of this city. Do you remember twelve years ago seeing a boy plow a straight furrow in an open field? That was I. Please do not say anything about it to this audience, but I shall be everlastingly grateful to you."

Oh, may the Lord keep deep down in our hearts the fine teaching of our religion, our devotion to our work, to do our utmost to guide youth to its destiny.

How I would love to be a boy again!

God bless my boys and your boys.

Not long ago, from a cabin home, a humble home, a telegram was sent to a son in a distant city, "Come home, Charles. I am not well." Signed, "Mother." And when the son arrived by plane, his mother said, "There are two gifts I want to give you, Charles. I have been thinking about them all day. Each day, on your knees and alone, say a prayer. And the second gift I would love to give you, is each day walk with good men. These are my gifts, Charles. Each day, pray alone on bended knee, and each day walk with good men."

God bless that boy who today is one of America's great Christian leaders, president of a bank of thirty million, head of one of the largest organizations in our land, a real Christian gentleman.

This is the touch that must be given. Halt, now; you can help a boy. It may be the army that he may face tomorrow, but today it is only a boy who needs a kindly word. These are precious moments. These are great days in the life of a boy.

And may I say, finally, I am humbly grateful. I wish my words may be from my lips to your hearts. In gratitude I thank God for a fourteen-year-old boy, who read the sacred word, who meditated, who prayed, unafraid, alone, and the Lord heard his prayer.

God bless us that your boy and my boy and the neighbor's boy may grow in the path of the Prophet, Seer, and Revelator. That is who the boy of fourteen was. These are our opportunities. These are our glorious privileges. God help us, I pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Elder Oscar A. Kirkham, of the First Council of Seventy, has just addressed us. Our concluding speaker for this morning's session, will be Elder Spencer W. Kimball, of the Council of the Twelve.

ELDER SPENCER W. KIMBALL

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

MY BELOVED brothers and sisters: My heart is filled with gratitude this morning for this occasion, for you, for the gospel, the Church, the priesthood, my family, and for all the privileges that have come to me.

Recently, as I held a meeting with a group of members of bishoprics, I had occasion to read to them that scripture of Paul's, given to Timothy, in which he said:

A bishop then must be blameless, the husband of one wife, vigilant, sober, of good behaviour, given to hospitality, apt to teach;

Not given to wine, no striker, not greedy of filthy lucre. . . . (I Tim. 3:2-3.)

My mind began to explore and I wondered: "What is filthy lucre?" I read a little farther and found that he said the same of the deacons, that they should not be "greedy of filthy lucre."

I found also that Paul spoke to Titus, his son in the faith:

For a bishop must be blameless, as the steward of God . . . not given to filthy lucre. (Titus 1:7.)

Peter also gave the same instructions to the elders, making the warning quite universal to the Church:

The elders which are among you I exhort, . . .

Feed the flock of God which is among you, taking the oversight thereof, not by constraint, but willingly; not for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind. (I Peter 5:1-2.)

I wondered about the term. I went to the dictionary to see just what Webster would say, and found that lucre, itself, has a bad connotation, and filthy lucre is worse; and to be "greedy of filthy lucre" is, of course, still worse.

This instruction was given by John, the Revelator, to the Laodicean Saints:

I know thy works, that thou art neither cold nor hot; I would thou wert cold or hot.

So then because thou art lukewarm, and neither cold nor hot, I will spue thee out of my mouth.

Because thou sayest, I am rich, and increased with goods, and have need of nothing; and knowest not that thou art wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked:

Saturday, October 3

Second Day

I counsel thee to buy of me gold tried in the fire, that thou mayest be rich; and white raiment, that thou mayest be clothed, and that the shame of thy nakedness do not appear; and anoint thine eyes with eyesalve, that thou mayest see.

As many as I love, I rebuke and chasten: be zealous therefore, and repent. (Rev. 3:15-19.)

And I began to think of many of our people whose minds are upon their wealth; who are increased with goods; who though clothed elegantly are naked and not in white raiment; who with eyes wide open see not; who are "greedy for filthy lucre."

Now, all money is not lucre—all money is not filthy. There is clean money—clean money with which to buy food, clothes, shelter, and other necessities and with which to make contributions toward the building of the kingdom of God.

Clean money is that compensation received for a full day's honest work. It is that reasonable pay for faithful service. It is that fair profit from the sale of goods, commodities, or service. It is that income received from transactions where all parties profit.

Filthy lucre is blood money; that which is obtained through theft and robbery. It is that obtained through gambling or the operation of gambling establishments. Filthy lucre is that had through sin or sinful operations and that which comes from the handling of liquor, beer, narcotics and those other many things which are displeasing in the sight of the Lord. Filthy lucre is that money which comes from bribery, and from exploitation.

Compromise money is filthy, graft money is unclean, profits and commissions derived from the sale of worthless stocks are contaminated as is the money derived from other deceptions, excessive charges, oppression to the poor and compensation which is not fully earned. I feel strongly that men who accept wages or salary and do not give commensurate time, energy, devotion, and service are receiving money that is not clean. Certainly those who deal in the forbidden are recipients of filthy lucre.

Thou shalt not bring the hire of a whore, or the price of a dog, into the house of the Lord thy God for any vow: for even both these are abomination unto the Lord thy God. (Deut. 23:18.)

And Micah lashed at this sin. He said:

... What is the transgression of Jacob? is it not Samaria? and what are the high places of Judah? are they not Jerusalem?

Therefore I will make Samaria as an heap of the field, and as plantings of a vineyard: . . .

And all the graven images thereof shall be beaten to pieces, and all the hires thereof shall be burned with the fire, and all the idols thereof will I lay desolate: for she gathered it of the hire of an harlot, and they shall return to the hire of an harlot.

For her wound is incurable. . . . (Micah 1:5-7, 9.)

I am sure that money is unclean when it is obtained through oppression, fraud, bribery, or through misrepresentations. You will remember the story of the Prophet Samuel:

... he made his sons judges over Israel.

And his sons walked not in his ways, but turned aside after lucre, and took bribes, and perverted judgment. (I Samuel 8:1, 3.)

And Samuel said unto all Israel, Behold, I have hearkened unto your voice in all that ye said unto me, and have made a king over you.

And now, behold, the king walketh before you: and I am old and grayheaded; and, behold, my sons are with you: and I have walked before you from my childhood unto this day.

Behold, here I am: witness against me before the Lord, and before his anointed: whose ox have I taken? or whose ass have I taken? or whom have I defrauded? whom have I oppressed? or of whose hand have I received any bribe to blind mine eyes therewith? and I will restore it you.

And they said, Thou hast not defrauded us, nor oppressed us, neither hast thou taken ought of any man's hand. (Ibid., 12:1-4.)

In Isaiah's day, there were those who accepted gifts as bribes and who brought forth the prophet's comments:

He that walketh righteously, and speaketh uprightly; he that despiseth the gain of oppressions, that shaketh his hands from holding of bribes, that stoppeth his ears from hearing of blood, and shutteth his eyes from seeing evil;

He shall dwell on high: his place of defence shall be the munitions of rocks: bread shall be given him; his waters shall be sure. (Isaiah 33:15-16.)

Woe unto them that are mighty to drink wine, and men of strength to mingle strong drink:

Which justify the wicked for reward, . . .

Therefore as the fire devoureth the stubble, and the flame consumeth the chaff, so their root shall be as rottenness, and their blossom shall go up as dust: . . . (Ibid., 5:22-24.)

In Exodus again we read of gifts of bribery:

And thou shalt take no gift: for the gift blindeth the wise, and perverteth the words of the righteous. (Exodus 23:8.)

In Matthew, the Master denounced unclean gifts which come from impure and unforgiving hearts:

But I say unto you, That whosoever is angry with his brother without a cause shall be in danger of the judgment: and whosoever shall say to his brother, Raca, shall be in danger of the council: but whosoever shall say, Thou fool, shall be in danger of hell fire.

Therefore if thou bring thy gift to the altar, and there rememberest that thy brother hath ought against thee;

Leave there thy gift before the altar, and go thy way; first be reconciled to thy brother, and then come and offer thy gift. (Matt. 5:22-24.)

The gift is acceptable when it is made clean and uncontaminated.

Fair dealing in business matters, in selling, in buying, and in general representations is spoken of frequently in the scriptures. The warning to Israel is still applicable in our own day:

And if thou sell ought unto thy neighbour, or buyest ought of thy neighbour's hand, ye shall not oppress one another:

. . . but thou shalt fear thy God: for I am the Lord your God. (Lev. 25:14, 17.)

And in the Proverbs we read:

He that oppresseth the poor to increase his riches, and he that giveth to the rich, shall surely come to want. (Prov. 22:16.)

Much is said about the hirer and the hired in the scriptures, and about the employer and the employee:

Go to now, ye rich men, weep and howl for your miseries that shall come upon you.

Your riches are corrupted, and your garments are moth-eaten.

Your gold and silver is cankered; and the rust of them shall be a witness against you, and shall eat your flesh as it were fire. Ye have heaped treasure together for the last days.

Behold, the hire of the labourers who have reaped down your fields, which is of you kept back by fraud, crieth: and the cries of them which have reaped are entered into the ears of the Lord of sabaoth. (James 5:1-4.)

. . . and I will be a swift witness against the sorcerers, and against the adulterers, and against false swearers, and against those that oppress the hireling in his wages, the widow, and the fatherless, and that turn aside the stranger from his right, and fear not me, saith the Lord of hosts. (Malachi 3:5.)

Woe unto them that call evil good, and good evil; that put darkness for light, and light for darkness; that put bitter for sweet, and sweet for bitter;

Woe unto them that are wise in their own eyes, and prudent in their own sight! (Isaiah 5:20-21.)

Again:

Thou shalt not oppress an hired servant that is poor and needy, whether he be of thy brethren, or of thy strangers that are in thy land within thy gates:

At his day thou shalt give him his hire, neither shall the sun go down upon it; for he is poor, and setteth his heart upon it. . . . (Deut. 24:14-15.)

And to me that means, woe unto them who will rationalize, who will explain away their errors in these matters, who justify their oppressions. Farm hands,

Saturday, October 3

Second Day

domestic help, and unprotected people are often oppressed, when economic circumstances place them in the position where they must accept what is offered or remain unemployed. And we sometimes justify ourselves in underpaying and even boast about it:

Woe to them that devise iniquity, and work evil upon their beds! when the morning is light, they practise it, because it is in the power of their hand.

And they covet fields, and take them by violence; and houses, and take them away: so they oppress a man and his house, even a man and his heritage. (Micah 2:1-2.)

And then there are those of us who require excessive compensation for services and who fail to give "value received" and who give no loyalty with their insufficient and inefficient service.

Scripture writers admonish the employed to obey masters, to please their employers, to work with singleness of heart, to be honest in time spent and service rendered and to avoid purloining.

The Lord knows that we need food, clothes, shelter, and other things. He expects us to earn our living. He commands us to give the necessities to our families. He permits, perhaps, that we may have reasonable luxuries, but not with unclean money.

The Savior said,

No man can serve two masters: for either he will hate the one, and love the other; or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon. (Matt. 6:24.)

And as we look about, we see many who are greedy for excessive wealth, and especially that which comes with sharp practices and at the expense of strict honesty and complete integrity. It is hard to satisfy us. The more we have, the more we want.

Paul seemed to understand human nature and fully endorsed the statement of the Master: "... a rich man shall hardly enter into the kingdom of heaven." (See Matt. 19:24.) He says:

For we brought nothing into this world, and it is certain we can carry nothing out.

And having food and raiment let us be therewith content.

But they that will be rich fall into temptation and a snare, and into many foolish and hurtful lusts, which drown men in destruction and perdition.

For the love of money is the root of all evil: which while some coveted after, they have erred from the faith, and pierced themselves through with many sorrows. (I Tim. 6:7-10.)

"Having food and raiment let us be therewith content."—Why another farm, another herd of sheep, another bunch of cattle, another ranch? Why another hotel, another café, another store, another shop? Why another plant, another office, another service, another business? Why another of anything if one has that already which provides the necessities and reasonable luxuries? Why continue to expand and increase holdings, especially when those increased responsibilities draw one's interests away from proper family and spiritual commitments, and from those things to which the Lord would have us give precedence in our lives? Why must we always be expanding to the point where our interests are divided and our attentions and thoughts are upon the things of the world? Certainly when one's temporal possessions become great, it is very difficult for one to give proper attention to the spiritual things.

Better is the poor that walketh in his uprightness, than he that is perverse in his ways, though he be rich. (Prov. 28:6.)

And then this from Proverbs struck me:

A faithful man shall abound with blessings: but he that maketh haste to be rich shall not be innocent. (Ibid., 28:20.)

And I wonder if many of us are not hasting to be rich. Are we making compromises in order to accumulate? I wonder if money earned upon the Sabbath, when it is unnecessary Sabbath earning, might not also be unclean money. I realize that some people must work on the Sabbath; and when they do, if they are compelled, that is, of course, a different situation. But men and women who will deliberately use the Sabbath day to develop business propositions, to increase their holdings, to increase their income, I fear for them. I think the Lord was speaking to them when he said: "Woe unto them that call evil good, . . ." (Isa. 5:20.) Sometimes we salve our consciences by saying that the more we get the more we can give to the worthy causes, but that, of course, is a subterfuge. There are people who work on the Sabbath, not through compulsion but because the income is attractive, and others who work voluntarily to get the "time and a half" that Sabbath work gives them.

In a stake recently I interviewed a man for an important position in the stake reorganization. And I said to him, "What is your occupation?" And he said, "I operate a service station." And I asked, "Do you operate on the Sabbath?" His answer was, "No, I do not." "Well, how can you get along?" Most service station operators seem to think they must open on the Sabbath. "I get along well," he said. "The Lord is good to me." "Do you not have stiff competition?" I asked. "Yes, indeed," he replied. "Across the street is a man who keeps open all day Sunday." "And you never open?" I asked. "No, sir," he said, "and I am grateful, and the Lord is kind, and I have sufficient for my needs."

I was in another stake, also in a reorganization program, and another brother was considered for one of the highest positions; and when we asked him of his occupation, he said he was a grocer by trade. "Well, most of the stores keep open on the Sabbath. Do you?" "We lock our store on Sunday," he said. "But how can you compete with these people who are open seven days a week?" "We compete. At least we get along very well," was his reply. "But would not the Sabbath be your biggest day?" "Yes," he answered, "we would probably sell twice as much on the Sabbath as we would on an average day, but we get along without it, and the Lord has been kind; he has been gracious; he has been good." "What do you sell in this store?" I asked him. He said, "Groceries and miscellaneous merchandise." "Your competitors sell other things including forbidden things, do they not?" I asked. "Yes, but we have felt it was not right," he said. "We lose trade, of course. People leave our store and go to the other store and buy many dollars' worth of groceries where they can get a few cans of beer or some wine, but we do not sell it." And I could not refrain from saying, "God bless you, my faithful brother. The Lord will not be unmindful of these seeming sacrifices. Your dollars are clean. They will surely not hinder you in finding your way into the kingdom of God."

The Savior knew that the ox gets in the mire on the Sabbath, but he knew also that no ox deliberately goes into the mire every week.

In my extensive travels I find many faithful people who forego the Sabbath day profits and those which come from the handling of the forbidden things. I have found cattle communities where the stockmen never carry on their roundup on the Sabbath; fruit stands along the roadside which are open night and day, but which close on Sunday even in the short fruit season; drugstores and confectionery businesses which earn their money on the six weekdays; eating houses and wayside stands, closed on the Lord's day. And there are many other people who might rationalize and justify themselves in Sunday profit taking but who take satisfaction and joy in refraining. And every time I see good folk who are willing to forego these profits, I rejoice and feel within my heart to bless them for their steadfastness, their courage, and their faith.

There are many other ways, of course, in which money can be tainted. I pray that we will keep our money clean. And I pray the Lord that he will bless his children that they will have the

Saturday, October 3

Second Day

faith to live his commandments, sacrifice though there may seem to be. I know that God will make it up to them. I know that men will never suffer, ultimately, for any seeming financial sacrifices that might be made, for he has commanded us to live his laws and then has challenged us:

... prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it. (Malachi 3:10.)

And may God bless all of us that we will live close to his teachings and thereby merit the blessings which he has promised to us, I pray, in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Elder Spencer W. Kimball of the Council of the Twelve has just concluded speaking.

The German members of the Church who constitute the Choir, which has furnished such excellent singing, will now sing, "Lord, Throughout the World Thy Powers Proclaim," conducted by Elder Heinz Rimmach.

The closing prayer will be offered by Elder Lewis R. Anderson, President of the Manti Temple, after which this conference will be adjourned until two o'clock this afternoon.

In addition to the words of appreciation expressed to the German members of the Choir by Brother Thomas E. McKay, we wish to commend our Choir members and leader for the choice selections sung so impressively this morning.

They have been accompanied by Brother Frank W. Asper, at the organ.

"Lord, Throughout the World Thy Powers Claim," will now be sung, after which Elder Anderson will offer the benediction.

The German-speaking choir sang "Lord Throughout the World Proclaim."

President Lewis R. Anderson of the Manti Temple pronounced the benediction.

Conference adjourned until 2:00 p.m.

SECOND DAY AFTERNOON MEETING

Conference reconvened at 2:00 p.m., Saturday, October 3, 1953.

The choral music for this afternoon's session was furnished by the German Choir, Elder Heinz Rimmach, conductor.

President David O. McKay, who presided and conducted the services, opening the meeting with the following statement:

President David O. McKay:

To the radio audience listening in, we are pleased to announce that the Tabernacle is crowded as heretofore in our sessions. This is the fourth session of the One Hundred Twenty-Fourth Semi-

Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

To those who are unable to gain admittance to the Tabernacle we announce that overflow meetings are held in the Assembly Hall and in the Barratt Hall, where a loud-speaking system and television are operating. These services will also be televised over KSL television of Salt Lake City, and will be heard over radio station KSL and by arrangement through KSL over twelve radio stations in Utah, Idaho, and Arizona, the names of which stations have already been announced to the radio audiences.

The singing for this afternoon's session will be by the German Choir, made up of German-speaking members of the Church, with Elder Heinz Rimmasch conducting, and Elder Frank W. Asper at the organ.

We shall begin these services by the choir singing "Hallowed Be Thy Name." The opening prayer will be offered by Elder A. George Raymond, president of the Logan Temple.

The German choir sang the sacred selection, "Hallowed Be Thy Name." Elder George A. Raymond, President of the Logan Temple, offered the invocation.

Singing by the Choir, "More Holiness Give Me."

President David O. McKay:

Our first speaker this afternoon will be President Joseph Fielding Smith, President of the Council of the Twelve, who will be followed by Bishop Carl W. Buehner.

ELDER JOSEPH FIELDING SMITH

President of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

IF I MAY have the guidance of the Spirit of the Lord, I wish to speak of our Redeemer as our Advocate and our Mediator. I think that quite generally we do not understand his mission as fully in this regard as it is possible for us to do.

In the sixth chapter of Exodus there is a statement which is a mis-translation which I will read to you:

"And God spake unto Moses, and said unto him, I am the Lord:

"And I appeared unto Abraham, unto Isaac, and unto Jacob, by the name of God Almighty, but by my name JEHOVAH was I not known to them." (Ex. 6:2-3.)

Now the Hebrew scriptures inform us that he referred to himself and is referred to throughout the Old Testament as Jehovah, so this cannot be a correct translation. It should read:

"And God spake unto Moses, and said unto him, I am the Lord:

"And I appeared unto Abraham, unto Isaac, and unto Jacob. I am the Lord God Almighty, the Lord JEHOVAH, and was not my name known among them?"

That changes the whole meaning of it.

Now an advocate is one who defends or pleads for or in behalf of another. A mediator is one who reconciles or brings about agreement between parties. I want to read one or two passages of scripture on this point.

"Lift up your hearts and be glad, for I am in your midst, and am your advocate with the Father; and it is his good will to give you the kingdom." (D. & C. 29:5.)

"Listen to him who is the advocate with the Father, who is pleading your cause before him—

"Saying: Father, behold the sufferings and death of him who did not sin, in whom thou wast well pleased; behold the blood of thy Son which was shed, the blood of him whom thou gavest that thyself might be glorified." (Ibid., 45:3-4.)

"Behold, and hearken, O ye elders of my church, saith the Lord your God, even Jesus Christ, your advocate, who knoweth the weakness of man and how to succor them who are tempted." (Ibid., 62:1.)

"I am the first and the last; I am he who liveth, I am he who was slain; I am your advocate with the Father." (Ibid., 110:4.)

"These are they who are just men made perfect through Jesus the mediator of the new covenant, who wrought out this perfect atonement through the shedding of his own blood." (Ibid., 76:69.)

"The power and authority of the higher, or Melchizedek Priesthood, is to hold the keys of all the spiritual blessings of the Church;

"To have the privilege of receiving

Saturday, October 3

Second Day

the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven, to have the heavens opened unto them, to commune with the general assembly and church of the Firstborn, and to enjoy the communion and presence of God the Father, and Jesus the mediator of the new covenant." (Ibid., 107:18-19.)

This from the First Epistle of John, Verse 1, Chapter 2: "My little children, these things write I unto you, that ye sin not. And if any man sin, we have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous."

Paul wrote to Timothy as follows: "For there is one God, and one mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus;

"Who gave himself a ransom for all, to be testified in due time." (I Timothy 2:5-6.)

When Adam was in the Garden of Eden he was in the presence of God, our Father. He learned his language. The first part of Genesis dealing with the creation and with Adam in the Garden of Eden is when the Father was present with him.

After he was driven out of the Garden of Eden the scene changed. Adam was banished because of his transgression from the presence of the Father. The scriptures say he became spiritually dead—that is, he was shut out from the presence of God.

From that time on Jesus Christ comes on the scene as our advocate, pleading for us as our mediator through his ministry and labors to reconcile us, to bring us into agreement with God, his Father.

That is part of his great mission. He stands between the Father and man. He pleads our cause. You know, when he was upon the earth he prayed frequently, and he prayed for his disciples, pleading with his Father in their behalf, and he has been pleading ever since, and he stands between us and God, our Father.

I would like to call your attention to one little thing in the first vision of the Prophet Joseph Smith. It is very significant, and Joseph Smith did not know it. If he had been perpetrating a fraud, he would not have thought of it. You will recall in your reading that the Father and the Son appeared, and the Father introduced the Son and told the Prophet to hear the Son.

Now suppose the Prophet had come back from the woods and had said the Father and the Son appeared to him, and the Father had said, "Joseph, what do you want?" and when he asked the question and told him what he wanted, the Father had answered him; then we would know that the story of the Prophet could not be true.

All revelation comes through Jesus Christ. I have not time to go into the scriptures and give you references for that, but that is the fact. He it was who led Israel, and if I do not procrastinate upon the time, I will take the rest of it to read to you the statement from President George Q. Cannon, bearing on this point.

"There is in modern Christendom a strong tendency to ascribe to the Father visits and communications with mankind that were really made by the Lord Jesus. There is even a respectable percentage of the members of his Church, established in these days, who have the idea that it was the Father and not the Son who appeared to the patriarchs and prophets of old, who delivered Israel from Egypt, who gave the law on Sinai, and who was the guide and inspirer of the ancient seers. This was not the understanding of the true servants of God either before or after his coming. Those who preceded the advent of the Messiah understood that he whom they worshipped as Jehovah should in due time tabernacle in the flesh, and the writings of Justin Martyr and other of the early fathers show that this was the belief of the early Christian Church on the eastern continent. The writings of the Hebrew prophets, as we have them in the Bible, are perhaps not as plain on this point as are those of the Nephite seers that are revealed to us in the Book of Mormon. But we have in this latter record some quotations from the earlier Hebrew prophets that make this point very clear. Nephi writes,

"And the God of our fathers, who were led out of Egypt, out of bondage, and also were preserved in the wilderness by him, yea, the God of Abraham, and of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, yieldeth himself, according to the words of the angel, as a man, into the hands of wicked men, to be lifted up, according to the words of Zenock, and to be crucified, according to the words of Neum, and to be buried in a sepulchre, according to the words of Zenos." (1 Nephi 19:10.)

"Here we have the testimony of Zenock, Neum, and Zenos that the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob was by wicked men to be lifted up, crucified and afterwards buried in a sepulchre, showing that these ancient worthies understood that it was the God of Israel who should come to his own. Nephi who himself was a Hebrew and the son of a prophet of that same race, also testifies in the above passage that it was the same God of their fathers who led them out of Egypt and preserved them in the wilderness. About four hundred years later another Nephite seer, King Benjamin, testifies that an angel came to him and made this glorious promise:

"For behold, the time cometh, and is not far distant, that with power, the Lord Omnipotent who reigneth, who was, and is from all eternity to all eternity, shall come down from heaven among the children of men, and shall dwell in a tabernacle of clay, and shall go forth amongst men, working mighty miracles, such as healing the sick, raising the dead, causing the lame to walk, the blind to receive their sight, and the deaf to hear, and curing all manner of diseases." (Mosiah 3:5.)

A little further on he says:

"And he shall be called Jesus Christ, the Son of God, the Father of heaven and earth, the Creator of all things from the beginning; and his mother shall be called Mary.

"And lo, he cometh unto his own, that salvation might come unto the children of men even through faith on his name; and even after all this they shall consider him a man, and say that he hath a devil, and shall scourge him, and shall crucify him." (Ibid., 3:8-9.)

"But we have the word of the Savior himself on this point that puts controversy to an end. When, after his resurrection and ascension into heaven, he first appeared to his Nephite disciples on this land, he declared, 'Behold, I am Jesus Christ, whom the prophets testified shall come into the world.

"... I am the God of Israel, and the God of the whole earth, and have been slain for the sins of the world.' (3 Nephi 11:10, 14.) Later during his ministry among the Nephites he affirms: 'Behold, I say unto you that the law is fulfilled that was given unto Moses.

"Behold, I am he that gave the law, and I am he who covenanted with my people Israel; therefore, the law in me is fulfilled." (Ibid., 15:4-5.)

"Should any still have a lingering doubt that the Jehovah who revealed himself to Abraham, to Moses and to others was any other than he whom we know in the flesh as Jesus Christ, that doubt is set at rest by the revelations given in these days. In the vision seen by the Prophet Joseph Smith and by Oliver Cowdery in the Kirtland Temple, 3rd of April, 1836, the following appears:

"We saw the Lord standing upon the breastwork of the pulpit, before us; and under his feet was a paved work of pure gold, in color like amber.

"His eyes were as a flame of fire; the hair of his head was white like the pure snow; his countenance shone above the brightness of the sun; and his voice was as the sound of the rushing of great waters, even the voice of Jehovah, saying:

"I am the first and the last; I am he who liveth, I am he who was slain; I am your advocate with the Father." (D. & C. 110:2-4.)

"Somewhat curiously an ancient Syriac manuscript has within the last few months been unearthed that is known as the gospel of the Twelve

Saturday, October 3

Second Day

Apostles. Whether the Twelve Apostles had anything to do with writing it has nothing to do with the point under consideration. The writing was originally in Hebrew, and what we wish to draw attention to is that whenever the manuscript was first written, the writers of the original believed that Jesus was he who spake with the ancient Israelites. It commences:

"The beginning of the gospel of Jesus Christ, the Son of the living God, according as it was said by the Holy Spirit, I send an angel before his face, who shall prepare his way.

"It came to pass in the 309th year of Alexander, the son of Philip the Macedonian, in the reign of Tiberius Caesar, in the government of Herod, the ruler of the Jews, that the Angel Gabriel, the chief of the angels, by command of God went down to Nazareth to a virgin called Miriam, of the tribe of Judah the son of Israel (her who was betrothed to Joseph the Just), and he appeared to her and said, "Lo! there ariseth from thee the one who spake with our fathers, and he shall be a Savior to Israel; and they who do not confess him shall perish, for his authority is in the lofty heights, and his kingdom does not pass away." "

The Lord bless you all I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

President Joseph Fielding Smith, president of the Council of the Twelve, has just concluded speaking. We shall now hear from Bishop Carl W. Buehner of the Presiding Bishopric, who will be followed by President Levi Edgar Young.

BISHOP CARL W. BUEHNER

Second Counselor in the Presiding Bishopric

MY DEAR brethren and sisters, difficult as this assignment is for me, I must admit that I am still very happy to be able to greet you in general conference, and to bear you my testimony of the divinity of this great work, the gospel of Jesus Christ, and I hope in the few moments that I stand here that the Lord will sustain me.

I should like to pay my humble tribute to the three great high priests who preside over our Church, the First Presidency of this Church, the men whom we love and honor, men who serve as if in the prime of life, and yet have lived many years beyond those at which most of us retire.

If I am right, and I think I am, all three of these great leaders have had a birthday since our last general conference. President McKay in his eighty-first year is an inspiration to the Church, a great leader. I have met several women who, when seeing President McKay walk by, say, "He looks just like an angel." I can concur in this, and besides that, he speaks and looks as a prophet.

Standing at his one side is President Stephen L. Richards, the youngest of these three, a man with a great legal mind, a great organizer, and he certainly has been an outstanding counselor to President McKay.

On his other side is the dean of the General Authorities of the Church, President Clark, in his eighty-third year—a man who has become one of the greatest statesmen we will ever know and with a testimony of the gospel as firm as the Rock of Gibraltar.

I am sure you all join with me in expressing our love and admiration for these three great men, for their devoted leadership over the Church.

As I figure this up, these men together have lived 237 years, and if I am right, and I don't think I am far from it, they have served either in the Council of the Twelve or as the Presidency of the Church for an aggregate of more than one hundred years.

I would like to suppose that the combined information of these three outstanding men, together with inspiration and revelation from our heavenly Father, would exceed the knowledge of any other three men upon the face of the earth today. I am sure I am right in this supposition.

They are our leaders. Brethren and sisters, I wish that leaders of men and nations all over this earth would listen to the counsel of these three great leaders of ours. When I think of the millions, yes, billions of dollars that are spent to create weapons of war, destructive weapons designed to wipe out the people of the earth, and I compare that with the message that goes forth from Zion carried by the missionaries of the Church, I assure you they go forth with greater power than the power of deadly weapons, and I sincerely hope the day will soon come when these young men can go forth as an army of men clothed with righteousness and the power of the priesthood, preaching the gospel of peace and salvation to the nations of the earth. I would that we had twenty thousand of them instead of the two or three thousand we have in the earth today and that they would not be restricted in their work of preaching to every nation, every kindred, every tongue, and every people.

Brother Sonne made a very significant statement in his talk, and I have felt the same thing, that the strength of the Church is in the individual testimony of its members, and as I have traveled about this Church, I have had some wonderful manifestations, and I have heard some very thrilling experiences. I would like to relate two or three of these to you.

Recently, when it was announced that we were going to build a temple in Switzerland and another one in England, a number of people came into my office, and I am sure they have to the offices of all of these brethren, wondering how they could make a contribution to the erection of these temples.

Among those who came to see me was a very elderly couple, and they said, "Bishop, just how could we make a small contribution toward the construction of the Swiss Temple? We have had such a thrilling experience in our life doing temple work and genealogical work, we would love to make a little contribution to that temple and to those good people in that far-off land." So, I told them that that was a very easy thing to do, and if they just wanted to leave the money, I would be glad to give them a receipt for it, and I would be sure that it would go toward that very marvelous project. Then, this man's good wife said, "Brother Buehner, would it be possible for my name to be put on that receipt?" and I said, "We will fix that receipt any way you would like to have it." She said, "Now, I don't want to give you the impression that my husband and I have not been very happy. We have been. We have had a wonderful life together, but I would like to see my name on that receipt along with my husband's name." This seemed satisfactory.

So they said, "We'll be back in a little while." In about thirty minutes, they returned, and this good man, his life almost over, and so was his wife's—they had lived a long time—laid down a check for a thousand dollars, and his wife gave me ten one-hundred-dollar greenbacks, another thousand dollars, each wanting to contribute a thousand dollars toward the erection of the temple in Switzerland.

Others with their two dollars and five dollars and ten dollars, and a thousand dollars and ten thousand dollars and more—it is marvelous what the people of the Church voluntarily do to help push forward this great work.

I heard another little experience that happened somewhere up in the Uintah Basin a while ago, where for twenty-five years they talked about building a new chapel. Finally, the bishopric then in the ward decided they had talked about this thing long enough, and they would like to organize a finance committee, a building committee and go ahead, so they sent out letters assessing the membership of the ward for this purpose.

Saturday, October 3

Second Day

Among those who received a letter and an assessment of one hundred dollars was a little widow who had not been very active in the Church, and one that the bishopric did not know very well; but they thought they would visit this woman. When they went to her home and opened the door, they realized they had made a great mistake. They should never have assessed this poor, little old soul one hundred dollars, they said, and so in the middle of their talk of trying to justify what they had done in talking themselves out of the assessment that they had made to this woman, she said, "Just a minute, brethren, you have assessed me one hundred dollars. I would like to do my part." They said she walked over to the mantel shelf, reached her hand into a little piece of crockery, and counted out to the bishop five hundred dollars in greenbacks.

Then he said that time went on, and the building got started. They were putting the rafters on it, and one day the bishop got another call from this woman, and he thought, "Oh, dear, she wants her money back, and we have spent it on the chapel."

When they went to see her, she said, "You don't know how thrilled I am to see our building come into fruition. We have talked about it all these years, but you brethren have actually gone to work, and now I can see it grow, and the rafters are going on. I would just like to give you another five hundred dollars to be sure it is completed because I don't think I'll live until we finish the building, and I would like to have a little credit on the other side."

This is not just an isolated case. We hear these stories all the time.

Let me tell you one other experience, a little different from this, and then my time is up.

I was up in Richland Stake in Richland, Washington, not so long ago, and a man was called out of the audience to bear his testimony, a new convert to the Church. When he came to the stand, he was shaking much worse than I am now, and I am very shaky, and said, "I think I'll tell you people how I became a member of the Church. I was a very ardent Baptist, and I lived in New York City near the leaders of the Baptist Church. One day they called me in and asked me if I would go on a mission to the Belgian Congo, and I accepted. Of course, they said, 'Now, we'll pay you $425.00 a month while you are on the mission,' but even at that they could not get very many missionaries to serve for the Baptist Church. I spent three years there, and when I completed my mission, I got on a boat coming up the African coast. The second day on board that boat, I noticed two fine, clean-cut looking young men walking around the deck of that boat, each with two books under their arms. They so fascinated me; they so attracted my attention that I could not keep my eyes off those young men, and I followed them nearly all day. Finally near the end of the day, I got enough courage to walk up to them and introduce myself. I learned they also had been missionaries in South Africa, and I said to these young men, 'The Baptist Church pays me $425.00 a month. How much does your Church pay you?' These two young men smiled and said, 'Our Church does not pay us anything. We pay our own expenses.' Then I began to feel humiliated. For twenty-one days as we crossed the ocean, we sat on the deck of the boat, and we compared the doctrine I taught as compared with the doctrine of these two fine young missionaries. I became so converted that I was all wrong and that these young men were all right that I hated to see the boat arrive in the harbor at New York, and I just did not want these young men to get out of my sight. As a matter of fact I did follow them halfway across the continent, and here I am in Richland today, a member of the Mormon Church, and the happiest member in this stake. To this day, I have not collected my last check of $425.00, and to this day, I have not reported to the leaders of the Baptist Church that I have returned from the Belgian Congo." And the way he said that, I just believe he was one of the happiest members of the Richland Stake.

It is wonderful what you see as you travel about the Church. Brethren and sisters, I just hope we will have a desire to serve our heavenly Father with all our might, mind, and strength.

Let us sustain these three great leaders of ours with all the strength we have. Let us live our religion. We are great teachers when we remember who we are and when we live our lives and reflect through our lives the value of the gospel to us. May we be loyal, may we be faithful, may we accept the responsibilities that come to us and do them faithfully and do them well. We will live longer. There is life when we are active, and there could be spiritual death if we do not accept the opportunities that come to us to serve.

If these great men can serve as they do, I am sure we should each have a desire to do our part to make their load as light for them as we can and to help push forward this great work of our heavenly Father, and may it be so, and may the blessings of our heavenly Father be with everyone of us always, I pray humbly in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Bishop Carl W. Buehner of the Presiding Bishopric of the Church has just addressed us. We shall now hear from President Levi Edgar Young of the First Council of the Seventy.

ELDER LEVI EDGAR YOUNG

Of the First Council of the Seventy

MY BRETHREN AND SISTERS: I should like to express my appreciation for this excellent choir that has been rendering the music of today. The singers are Germans, and we are all interested in the German people. They have made a contribution to this sacred religious movement that we represent. I believe with all my heart that the German nation will come back and establish again the civilization and culture that it once had. They are a great people.

A few days ago, two meetings of all the General Authorities of the Church were held. The first one was in the temple at Logan, and a few days later the second meeting was held in our temple here in Salt Lake City. In thinking of them I realize more and more that to love and know God is the highest blessedness of mankind. Temples built by the Latter-day Saints are houses of prayer, of fasting, and of faith, houses of glory and order, houses of God. You recall the words as found in the dedicatory prayer of the Kirtland Temple which were given by the Prophet Joseph Smith:

... seek ye diligently and teach one another words of wisdom; yea, seek ye out of the best books words of wisdom, seek learning even by study and also by faith;

Organize yourselves; prepare every needful thing, and establish a house, even a house of prayer, a house of fasting, a house of faith, a house of learning, a house of glory, a house of order, a house of God;

Have mercy, O Lord, upon all the nations of the earth; have mercy upon the rulers of our land; may those principles, which were so honorably and nobly defended, namely, the Constitution of our land, by our fathers, be established forever. (D. & C. 109:7-8, 54.)

I wonder sometimes if in reading our sacred books we enter into the thoughts of the prophets of God; and into their hearts. Have we as religious and moral men sought to attain the perfect life by contemplation and work? So much might be said about our meetings in the temples. We all felt the goodness and beauty of human life. We felt as we have never felt before the hunger and labor, love and death, faith and work which operated to produce these sacred buildings.

Saturday, October 3

Second Day

When we think of the Constitution of our land, we recall many historical statements that are sacred and true. First, the words of the French writer, Michelet. He had written about the terrible days of the French Revolution when he writes these words:

The world is waiting for a faith, to march forward again to breathe and to live. But never can faith have a beginning in deceit, cunning, or treaties of falsehood.

It is interesting to note that according to Washington Irving, Columbus when he set foot on the island of San Salvador, uttered the following prayer, which has been translated from the Latin:

O God, our Father, eternal and omnipotent, Creator of heaven and earth and sea, we glorify Thy holy name, praise Thy majesty, whom we serve in all humility, we give unto Thy holy protection this new part of the world.

Then we have the prayer of Pastor Robinson as he blessed the Pilgrim fathers when they left in the Mayflower for the New World.

Brethren, we are now quickly to part from one another, and whether I may ever live to see your face on earth anymore, the God of Heaven only knows; but whether the Lord hath appointed that or not, I charge you before God and His blessed angels, that you follow me no farther than you have seen me follow the Lord Jesus Christ. If God reveal anything to you, by any other instrument of His, be as ready to receive it, as ever you were to receive truth, by my ministry; for I am fully persuaded, I am very confident that the Lord has more truth yet to break forth out of His holy word. For my part, I cannot sufficiently bewail the condition of the reformed churches, who are come to a period in religion, and will go at present no further than the instruments of their reformation. The Lutherans cannot be drawn to go beyond what Luther saw; whatever part of his will our good God has revealed to Calvin, they will rather die than embrace it, and the Calvinists, you see, stick fast, where they were left by that great man of God, who yet saw not all things. This is a misery much to be lamented; for though they were burning a shining light in their times, yet they penetrated not into the whole counsel of God; but were they now living, would be as willing to embrace further light as that which they at first received. I beseech you to remember it as an article in your church Covenant. "That you be ready to receive whatever truth shall be made known to you from the written word of God." But I must herewithal exhort you to take heed what you receive as truth. Examine it, consider it, and compare it with other scriptures of truth, before you receive it; for it is not possible that the Christian world should come so lately out of thick anti-Christian darkness, and that perfection of knowledge should break forth at once.

To be called to the field as a missionary is an honor and a recognition of a person's real worth. It is a call to labor with undying zeal to awaken within men a faith in the living God and to turn to him with a repentant heart. No one can deny the force, the beauty of the passion for extending one's own belief and hopes to others, "for imparting to them the comfort of one's own salvation." What splendor of life is that of Paul the Apostle, who no sooner was his own life made over, no sooner had the faith and the hope of a new life taken possession of him, than he was overcome with the desire to disseminate this possession to all the world and to make Jew and Gentile alike see and glory in the light and splendor of the Christian truth. In our day, since the restoration of the gospel, we know the hundreds, yea, thousands who have gone into the remote parts of the world to preach the gospel and to turn men's thoughts to their God. This was even true long before there were railroads or quick and safe means of travel by sea. Missionaries left home and friends to go to faroff China and India, and the South Seas, to say nothing of Europe and South America. They faced hardships in strange lands, and often misery for the sake of communicating the Gospel message. Many have given their lives as they bore testimony of the restored word of God. The splendor of their spirits and the grandeur of their achievements are known. The stories of their experiences and accomplishments will someday become the most beautiful epics of the Latter-day Saints, epics that will thrill the world with their truth and beauty. Let me here relate a story of the long ago:

In the summer of 1857, my father, Seymour B. Young, Phillip Margetts, and David Wilcken were called to England on a mission. They were all of the same age, nineteen years. Constructing a handcart, they made ready to leave. Their first objective was Council Bluffs, just across the Missouri River from Omaha. From there they would take the train for New York, where they could embark on a sailing vessel for England. One night, while they were sitting around a wood fire on the Platte River, singing songs, and talking about the "folks at home," Brother Margetts began to recite some of the fine lines from the plays of Shakespeare, among which were the words of Macbeth:

Tomorrow, and tomorrow, and tomorrow
Creeps in this petty pace from day to day
To the last syllable of recorded time;
And all our yesterdays have lighted fools
The way to dusty death. Out, out, brief candle!

Life's but a walking shadow, a poor player
That struts and frets his hour upon the stage

And then is heard no more.

(Wm. Shakespeare, Macbeth, Act V. Sc. 5.)

"We sat deep in thought," said my father, "for we had been listening to a sage of history, a man who knew Shakespeare. We slept under the stars that night, as we did for over three months. Every night we studied the words of Holy Writ, every day as we pulled the handcart over the trail and through the rivers, our hearts were swallowed up in a kind of glow of God's love coming down as a constant stream of light."

They were missionaries of the Lord.

In the days of Queen Elizabeth of England, there were many able seamen who manned the large navy which brought England to the height of her power on the seas. Among the noted commanders of the fleet was Sir Francis Drake, who sailed up the Pacific Coast as far as the present state of Washington, and then went on around the world. He was the first Englishman to circumnavigate the earth. Standing on the deck of his ship one day, Drake said to his men:

Men pass away, but people abide. See that ye hold fast the heritage we leave you, yea, and teach your children its value, that never in the coming centuries, their hearts may fail them, or their hands grow weak. Hereto, we have been too much afraid. Henceforth, we will fear only God.

In this troubled world we need more and more the principle of unity amid all the marring elements of human life. We must in our work have a definite purpose, and before that purpose can be well established in our hearts, we must see it related to the very purposes of God. Every quorum should have an ideal which is well defined and which invites the greatest effort on the part of every member to help realize that ideal. The ideal is to bring about a brotherhood within the quorum, a brotherhood so lasting that nothing can break it. Certainly no outside power can. This brotherhood will be expressed in their thoughts and interest in one another. The members touch one another by doing good, by kindness, by philanthropy—something more than the mere clasp of hands and interchange of idle words. It is the delight of diffusing something of the spirit of gentility and graciousness. In all such expressions of good-will and respect, the grace of the act depends as much on the manner of it, as on the act itself.

One of the essential things with Jesus Christ was the training of his disciples to have faith in God. "... ye believe

Saturday, October 3

Second Day

in God, believe also in me." (John 14:1.) His disciples went into the world to preach the gospel. I have given you an example of missionary zeal. And now one of ancient times: Paul, the Apostle, had become one of the disciples of the Lord. He went about preaching the gospel "with inspired eloquence and logic." He went to Athens. They took him to the Areopagus, saying: "... thou bringest certain strange things to our ears." (Acts 17:20.) You read Paul's discourse for yourselves. "It is the shortest important speech ever made, excepting only Lincoln's undying Gettysburg speech address. In less than one hundred and fifty words he put the argument for and assertion of the living God of salvation and the resurrection of the dead. In doing this he even included a quotation from the Greek poets." He had planted the seed. He had aroused interest.

As missionaries, we should find the good in people. We should judge all people not by their mistakes but by the abundance of their powers. Our work as teachers is based on love, and if we have the love of our listeners, we must see to it that their merits are understood, rather than their faults found out.

Let us keep in mind the beautiful words of the Chinese Confucius, ages before Christ:

Those who know the truth are not equal to those who love it; and they who love it are not equal to those who live it.

I pray that we may all come to a deeper understanding of the gospel, that we may live as God would have us live. Amen.

The Choir and congregation joined in singing the hymn, "O Say, What Is Truth?"

President David O. McKay:

Elder John Longden, Assistant to the Twelve, will now speak to us. He will be followed by Elder Delbert L. Stapley of the Council of the Twelve.

Elder Richard P. Condie led the Congregation and Choir in that song.

ELDER JOHN LONGDEN

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles

Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness: for they shall be filled. (Matt. 5:6.)

IN THE OPENING remarks of our dear President McKay at the beginning of this conference he stated that he hoped our souls might be uplifted and inspired. I am sure you can bear witness with me that our heavenly Father has literally blessed us, and our souls have been uplifted because we have been inspired by the word of the Lord.

I have noted without exception that each who has occupied this position regardless of his calling in the Church, regardless of his standing in the community or the nation, before taking these responsible Church positions, has invoked the blessings of our heavenly Father upon him that he might be able to speak under the inspiration of the Spirit. I realize as I stand before you this afternoon that I must depend upon the inspiration of my heavenly Father through his Son, Jesus Christ, for, to teach the gospel of Jesus Christ can be done not by the wisdom of men, but only by the power of God.

Much has been said here today and yesterday in these conference sessions regarding the missionary program of the Church. I would feel most ungrateful if I did not take just a moment to pay tribute to a great missionary who is absent from us today, but who was with us here six months ago occupying a seat on the row that I am privileged to occupy—Elder Stayner Richards.

He in very deed typified the true missionary spirit of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, and I feel sure that he has touched the hearts of thousands in the British Isles or wherever he has labored to spread truth and righteousness, exercising his energy and talent in building up the kingdom of God.

So, I pay tribute to his memory today. It was my privilege to labor with him for about fourteen years in the Highland Stake, the stake in which I now reside.

Going back a few years, a prophet of God, Brigham Young, declared:

... there is neither man or woman in this Church who is not on a mission. That mission will last as long as they live, and it is to do good, to promote righteousness, to teach the principles of truth, and to prevail upon themselves and everybody around them to live those principles that they may obtain eternal life. (Discourses of Brigham Young, 1943 ed., p. 322.)

That is the true missionary spirit. That was the word of a prophet of God many years ago. The same teaching goes forth from this pulpit today: that each individual who has membership in this, the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, is on a mission, and that mission is to teach first, by example, and second, by precept, the truths of this gospel, which is the gospel of salvation and exaltation into the presence of our heavenly Father and his Son, Jesus Christ.

I thrill as I have the privilege of touring missions and visiting in the stakes and mingling with the stake missionary groups to catch the spirit of those who are specifically called to do missionary work.

As I toured the Western Canadian Mission just a few months ago, I heard many heartwarming missionary stories. One thrilling story I should like to share with you. I would like to take you with me for a moment or two to a concentration camp in France, in which are incarcerated two German prisoners, young men who never had become acquainted with each other until they were in this camp.

One of them was utilizing his time to study the word of the Lord that he might hold fast to the testimony which he had. This attracted the attention of the other German prisoner, who asked what he was so interested in. The reply came that he was reading The Voice of Warning. I am sure that rings a familiar note to many missionaries assembled today and who might be listening on television and the radio.

So, a gospel conversation ensued. Then this young man became interested, and many conversations thereafter followed. The war was over. They were released. The one returned to his locality in Germany, where he further investigated this thing he had heard in a French concentration camp. Then he applied for baptism. He was baptized, and after a few months was called by President Wunderlich to go on a mission for the Church. The young convert said, "I have only twelve marks," but President Wunderlich, because he had the priesthood of God, because he could speak with that power and authority which comes to those who are truly called to serve the Lord, made a promise to that young man if he would accept the call and respond to it that the Lord would provide a way.

So the young man, in blind faith, believing, as we have heard from this pulpit today, accepted the call and filled his mission. It was my privilege to interview him while he was doing stake missionary work in the city of Edmonton, Canada. He had migrated from Germany and is now living in Canada.

We all have a zone of influence, my brothers and sisters. I should like to ask the question here today, "When did you last have a gospel conversation with someone who does not claim membership in the Church?"

Well, you do not have to answer it, only in your own minds. I humbly pray that the Spirit of the Lord will take hold of us, that we will exercise our rightful influence to teach the principles of salvation and exaltation to our heavenly Father's children.

Saturday, October 3

Second Day

I thrill as I see someone here in the audience today who is not ashamed of the gospel of Jesus Christ. After having filled a mission in the Southern States for this great Church before the turn of the century, he decided he wanted to follow further his education in electrical engineering, so he selected that great University of Cornell. One Sunday each student was to have the opportunity and privilege of filing past the rostrum and shaking hands with the first president of Cornell, Andrew White, introducing himself and making known where he was from. When it came this young man's turn, he said, "Thomas E. Yates from Scipio, Utah." Immediately Andrew White said, "Are you a Mormon?"

Brother Yates did not flinch because he was not ashamed of the gospel of Jesus Christ. He said, "Yes, sir, I am."

Then Andrew White asked for an interview the following Sunday. Brother Yates said that week seemed mighty long because he realized the persecution that had been sustained by the missionaries, even while he was in the Southern States.

But the time passed, and he was ushered into the study of Andrew White. There it was revealed to him just why he had been invited for this interview.

Andrew White told him, on one occasion while he was a special representative to the Russian government he had become very friendly with Count Leo Tolstoi, the great Russian philanthropist and writer. On one occasion as he called at the home of Tolstoi he was told by the servant that Tolstoi was out in the fields plowing, and if he wanted to see him he would have to go there, which he did.

As he met Tolstoi there was the usual friendly salutation, and then Tolstoi said, "If you want to converse with me, you will have to come along while I finish my plowing."

This he did, and they conversed about many things. After a discussion on religion Tolstoi said to Andrew White, "But what about your American religion?"

Andrew White said, "We do not have a state church in America. People are allowed to worship God according to the dictates of their own conscience."

Tolstoi said, "I know all that. I know that the Catholic Church originated in Rome. I know that the Lutheran Church originated in Germany, that the Episcopal Church originated in England, but I want to know something about your American religion, commonly called the Mormon Church."

Andrew White said, "I'll have to admit that I know very little about the Mormon people, other than that they are a superstitious people and that they are peculiar."

Then Tolstoi decided he would give Andrew White, great as he was, a rebuke, and so as not to lose the significance of this rebuke, I should like to read it to you.

"Then Count Leo Tolstoi, in his honest and stern but lovable manner, rebuked the ambassador: 'Dr. White, I am greatly surprised and disappointed that a man of your great learning and position should be so ignorant on this important subject. The Mormon people teach the American religion: their principles teach the people not only of heaven and its attendant glories, but how to live so that their social and economic relations with each other are placed on a sound basis. If the people follow the teachings of this Church—nothing can stop their progress—it will be limitless.

"There have been great movements started in the past, but they have died or been modified before they reached maturity. If Mormonism is able to endure, unmodified, until it reaches the third and fourth generations, it is destined to become the greatest power the world has ever known."

I believe that, as I stand before you today and testify that this thing called Mormonism has continued down through the stream of time for 123 years, unchanged, unmodified, and that it is the fulness of the gospel of Jesus Christ.

Yes, blessed are they who hunger and thirst after righteousness, and brothers and sisters, I believe that men are thirsting and hungering for righteousness in the world today.

It is our great responsibility, as has been outlined here, to be the humble servants in the hands of the Lord in carrying this glorious message to those individuals.

May God bless us with this vision, and the spirit of missionary work, as I bear witness that these things are true, in the name of our Savior, Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

He to whom you have just listened is Elder John Longden, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve.

Elder Delbert L. Stapley of the Council of the Twelve will now address us.

ELDER DELBERT L. STAPLEY

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

IN ALL humility, my brothers and sisters, I approach this solemn and sacred responsibility this afternoon. I feel my dependence upon the Lord for his blessings and strength as I speak to you.

When a scientist makes a great discovery, it is not long before some other scientist makes the same discovery. The Lord has released that knowledge in the earth. It is not confined to one or two but to all who search for it. As the brethren of the General Authorities seek the Spirit for inspiration in the preparation of conference talks, and drawing from the same Spirit, there is a constant theme through the talks of each, for the Spirit has influenced them in that direction.

Recently in the solemn assembly held in the Logan Temple, President David O. McKay said, "The Lord is impressing his servants to extend and intensify the work of his Church."

Stake presidents and bishops, presidents of priesthood quorums, presidents and superintendents of auxiliaries know this statement to be true. There has been increased activity among the Aaronic Priesthood, the senior members of that priesthood, the girls' program, the Relief Society as it works with inactive women, the missionary program now at home as well as abroad, the great welfare program of the Church, and many other activities designed to build faith and testimonies in the hearts of Latter-day Saints.

The tempo and the good feeling of this upsurge in activity and devotion must inspire and find expression in the lives of all Church members, not just alone in its leaders. As leaders it seems to me necessary that we let information go on down to the rank and file of our Church membership in order that they might have and enjoy the same counsel and direction that we receive. Where this condition is true, and our people understand, it wipes out any prejudice, resentment, or rebellion that might be in their hearts, and also they will support and work diligently for the accomplishment of the Lord's great purposes in the earth.

The Lord has not chosen us to fail in this work of his kingdom, but to succeed. We have no reason to fail. This is the Lord's work. He is inspiring and revealing unto those who have been properly called his mind and his will. This guiding force is present in the affairs of his kingdom today. Without this holy influence we would be groping in spiritual darkness.

In all ages of the world, the divinely appointed servants of God have entreated the people to love the Lord and to keep his commandments. Today is no exception in that respect. We are called to be a light to the world. The Lord has appointed us to be that light because we have the truth of the gospel of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ.

Saturday, October 3

Second Day

The Savior said, "... A city that is set on an hill cannot be hid." (Matt. 5:14.) Nor can we be hid from the world here in the tops of the mountains, for our works and our deeds go out from this place.

Even from the beginning the Lord has said that the way is straight and narrow that leadeth unto life. To the Prophet in our day those words have been repeated, and someone has wisely quipped, "The reason the way is so straight and narrow is because there are so few who enter that way." Should more enter, by yielding obedience to the laws and the commandments of the gospel plan, then it would become wider, and I am sure God would be happier as a result of it.

Praise has been given in this conference to the First Presidency. With all my heart I support the sentiments expressed by the brethren. It is a great privilege and joy to be associated with the Presidency, to sit in their councils, and to receive their instructions. A wish of President McKay's is almost a command to us who are associated with him.

Keeping in mind the great spiritual strength of these brethren of the First Presidency, I would like to say to you, my brothers and sisters, that in President McKay we have a great and inspired leader. He sets a terrific pace at his age, that some of us younger men find difficult to follow. His hours are long. He comes early to the office. He goes late. He responds to the wish and the will of the people, doing all things, even beyond his physical strength to do, to bless the people of the Church. He sets a marvelous example of devotion, love, faith, and good will.

In these days of turmoil and distress, as God's chosen servant, under the inspiration of his divine calling, he is pointing the way, it seems to me, with clarity and understanding to the people of the Church.

I bear witness to you, my brothers and sisters, that God sustains him, and no one else in the world today but him, because he has the holy calling of prophet, seer, and revelator, representing the Lord upon the earth in our time. He only has the right to revelation for the people of the Church, and if all people would understand that, they would not be tossed about by those who would seek to divert their minds from the Church and its glorious principles, and I am sure they would be more happy and contented than they now are.

It is a great and inspiring moment in our council to hear President McKay say, "Brethren, the Lord has spoken. His will has been done." It is a great moment, a thrilling moment, and you have the sure feeling that what he has said or designated is true, and of God.

Now, President McKay does not require any defense. I do not need to say these words in defense of him. His life, his works, his faith, his love and devotion are unquestioned and exemplary, not only to the people of this Church but also to all the world, but if the people of the Church understand the calling and position of the chosen and anointed prophet of God, they will be fortified against false teachers and anti-Christ's, and we do have them among us.

When the brethren of Nephi did not understand the vision of their father Lehi, they came to Nephi, their younger brother, for an explanation of that vision. He asked of them, as I would ask of you,

Have ye inquired of the Lord?

They said unto Nephi,

We have not for the Lord maketh no such thing known unto us. (See 1 Ne. 15:8-9.)

Now my brothers and sisters, if there are any doubts in your hearts about your leaders or this Church being true, again I would ask of you, "Have ye inquired of the Lord?" I am sure if you ask sincerely and with real intent that the Lord will manifest the truth of it unto you. There will no longer be any doubt, for God can bear you that witness through the Holy Ghost, which power all of us should seek.

Many of the signs spoken of by the prophets to precede the second coming of Christ are now being fulfilled before us. They are easily recognizable, and they remind us of the parable of the ten virgins, the five who were wise, and the five who were foolish. Those who were foolish were not prepared when the bridegroom came, and as they went out to prepare themselves, the doors were closed against them, and they could not gain admittance.

You and I need to be prepared. We know not the day nor the hour in which the Son of Man shall come. That day we must be prepared for.

Alma, as he wrote to the people of Gideon, complimenting them for their faithfulness said of the Savior,

And he doth not dwell in unholy temples; neither can filthiness or anything which is unclean be received into the kingdom of God; therefore I say unto you the time shall come, yea, and it shall be at the last day, that he who is filthy shall remain in his filthiness. (Alma 7:21.)

Brothers and sisters, worthiness is becoming to the Saints of the living God. The Lord in the Doctrine and Covenants counseled, through the Prophet, the people of his Church to "practise virtue and holiness before me." (38:24.) If they would do so, walking in all worthiness before the Lord, there would come great strength and power to his work among the children of men.

For baptism, we expect every convert to repent truly and forsake all his sins before we approve receiving him into the Church of Jesus Christ. When we invite people into the Church, we must be sure our lives are worthy to make attractive our invitation. I know there are those desiring to come into the Church who look at Church members and wonder why they fail to keep the commandments when they themselves are required to do so before the sacred ordinance of baptism can be performed. It is an individual responsibility. Surely God will hold accountable those who violate the sacred ordinances and covenants of his kingdom. He requires of all who come into his Church to repent of all their sins.

I am wondering, my brothers and sisters, if we should not approach every sacred ordinance or rite of the gospel with complete worthiness. I also wonder if some of the mistakes people make are not because through inactivity or unworthily participating in sacred and holy ordinances, they do not renew nor keep their covenants, obligations, and testimonies in force.

We must always see and understand the great spiritual forces that underlie the mechanics of all gospel ordinances. The outward appearance of these ordinances is but a symbol of their eternal significance. This we should always realize, and again we must always keep in force our covenants and obligations with our God. That opportunity is afforded us as we attend the sacrament meetings and partake of the holy sacrament.

It has been said, that a sacrament is a sacred, binding oath of allegiance to obey one's leader and not desert his standard. We find that true in the sacrament of the Lord's supper. The Lord said to the Nephites on this continent emphasizing the sacredness of this holy ordinance,

... ye shall not suffer anyone knowingly to partake of my flesh and blood unworthily, when ye shall minister it. (3 Ne. 18:28.)

He goes on to say the unworthy shall be forbidden to partake, otherwise they shall eat and drink damnation to their souls. The Lord has said to us in our day, "... if any have trespassed, let him not partake until he makes reconciliation." (D. & C. 46:4.)

The Apostle Paul said to the Corinthian Saints:

Wherefore whosoever shall eat this bread, and drink this cup of the Lord, unworthily,

Saturday, October 3

Second Day

shall be guilty of the body and blood of the Lord.

But let a man examine himself, and so let him eat of that bread, and drink of that cup.

For he that eateth and drinketh unworthily, eateth and drinketh damnation to himself, not discerning the Lord's body.

For this cause many are weak and sickly among you, and many sleep. (I Cor. 11:27-30.)

Now, my brothers and sisters, what is true of worthiness in partaking of the sacrament, it seems to me, applies to all the sacred ordinances of the gospel plan, and the other sacred privileges available to us in this great Church of ours.

It applies to advancement in the priesthood, for the receiving of our patriarchal blessings, attendance in holy temples for our sacred endowments and sealings. The great challenge to the Latter-day Saints is to live faithfully, to be worthy, to live exemplary lives, and thus obtain the blessings of God, that they might accomplish the great destiny of this Church and enjoy, as President McKay said yesterday, "spiritual companionship with our eternal Father."

Brigham Young said, "The man or woman who lives worthily is now in a state of salvation." The greatest wealth that can be given us, any of us, is eternal life in the presence of God, our Father. There are no riches in all the world that compare to the riches of eternity that God has placed in the way of us all.

There are certain conditions; there are certain laws; there are certain standards and ideals; but if these are observed, they will lead to a state of glory and exaltation. May God help us to be faithful and worthy in all things, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Elder Delbert L. Stapley of the Council of the Twelve has just concluded speaking.

We express appreciation at this time for the inspirational singing rendered by the Swiss-German Choir this morning and this afternoon. We thank you Brother Rimmasch, and all the members of the Choir for the excellent, inspirational service you have rendered. Each number has been characterized by a soulful expression which radiates directly from your hearts, and whenever music is thus rendered it carries the message which our hymns should carry.

In behalf of the congregation assembled and listening in we extend to them our hearty appreciation and thanks.

The Choir will sing "The Lord's Prayer," and the closing prayer will be offered by Elder Harold S. Snow, president of the St. George Temple, after which this conference will be adjourned until 7 o'clock this evening when a general meeting of the Priesthood of the Church will be held in the Tabernacle.

Only those holding the Priesthood are invited to be present. Persons not holding the Priesthood will kindly refrain from attempting to enter the building, and that applies to those who have been excommunicated, who sometimes refuse to accept the excommunication.

That session will not be broadcast. Overflow meetings will be held in the Assembly Hall and in Barratt Hall. At both places, we are informed, there will be television.

The session at 10 o'clock Sunday morning will be broadcast over Station KSL and by arrangement through KSL over radio stations in Utah, Idaho, Arizona, Nevada, Colorado, California, Oregon, Washington, and by television in Utah, California, Oregon, and Washington.

The Church of the Air Broadcast will be from 8 o'clock to 8:30 tomorrow morning. Elder Henry D. Moyle of the Council of the Twelve will be the speaker. Those desiring to attend this broadcast must be in their seats by 7:50 a.m. The Tabernacle Choir Broadcast will be from 9 o'clock to 9:30 tomorrow morning. Those who desire to attend this broadcast must be in their seats by 8:50 a.m., ten minutes before the broadcast begins.

It is requested that the audience, during the broadcasts, refrain from making any noise. Large crowds will undoubtedly be waiting outside the closed doors. Please note this, because the Choir occupies a few moments in practice before the doors are opened, and there is usually a rush by those outside to get good seats.

Now we suggest most earnestly that those thus standing waiting for entrance show courtesy, one to another. Be considerate of others in the crowd.

Avoid pushing or crowding, will you please. Let us remember to be courteous and considerate to others who are also standing. Courtesy is a great virtue. Let us show it one to another, and especially to our visitors who are within the city's gates.

The regular session of the Conference will begin at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

We shall now have "The Lord's Prayer," by the Choir, and after the benediction by Elder Snow, this Conference will be adjourned until tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock.

---

The Choir sang the anthem, "Our Father Which Art in Heaven," (Gates).

Elder Harold S. Snow, President of the St. George Temple, offered the closing prayer.

GENERAL PRIESTHOOD MEETING

The General Priesthood meeting of the Church convened in the Tabernacle at 7:00 P.M., Saturday, October 3.

President McKay presided at this meeting and conducted the services.

The Tabernacle Choir Men's Chorus was present at this meeting and rendered sacred selections.

President David O. McKay:

We have a minute yet, but I think we might as well begin. Every seat is taken.

This is the fifth session of the 124th Semi-Annual Conference of the Church. As previously announced we have overflow meetings in the Assembly Hall, and in Barratt Hall; we have a meeting in the Field House in Provo by direct wire, probably between 1500—President Wilkinson says there may be 2,000 assembled there tonight. We also have a direct wire to the Institute in Logan. It is estimated that between 800 and 1,000 men of the Priesthood will listen in to the proceedings by direct wire from this meeting.

We have just had word that we can accommodate from 300 to 400 at the KSL-TV studios on Motor Avenue.

Television may be shown there, so if there be any who cannot get access to the three buildings, we are in, the Tabernacle, the Assembly Hall, or Barratt Hall, you may find seats at the Motor Avenue studio and see television.

This service will be broadcast, also, on the grounds where there are several hundred already assembled.

The singing during this session will be furnished by the Men's Chorus of the Tabernacle Choir, with Elder J. Spencer Cornwall as director, and Elder Alexander Schreiner at the organ.

We shall begin by the Men's Chorus singing, "Jesus, Joy of Man's Desiring."

After the singing, President Robert I. Burton, in the Presidency of the Salt Lake Temple, will offer the invocation.

---

The opening selection which was sung by the Chorus was "Jesus, Joy of Man's Desiring."

Elder Robert I. Burton of the Salt Lake Temple Presidency offered the opening prayer.

President David O. McKay:

The Men's Chorus of the Tabernacle Choir will now sing, "I Need Thee

Saturday, October 3

Second Day

Every Hour," directed by Elder Cornwall.

Our first speaker this evening, will be Elder Mark E. Petersen, of the Council of the Twelve, following the singing.

The Men's Chorus then sang the hymn, "I Need Thee Every Hour."

ELDER MARK E. PETERSEN

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

BRETHREN: My heart surely echoes that beautiful song which has just been rendered "I Need Thee Every Hour." It was the favorite song of our recent President of the Council of the Twelve, President George F. Richards. It was also a favorite of our beloved Albert E. Bowen who is no longer with us. It brought many memories to me as I listened to this wonderful chorus sing that song. I have long since learned that without the help of the Lord I can do nothing, and I earnestly pray that he will be with me here tonight.

I would like to read to you two parables, one from the 15th chapter of Luke, and the other from the 101st section of the Doctrine and Covenants.

And he spake this parable unto them, saying,

What man of you, having an hundred sheep, if he lose one of them, doth not leave the ninety and nine in the wilderness, and go after that which is lost, until he find it?

And when he hath found it, he layeth it on his shoulders, rejoicing.

And when he cometh home, he calleth together his friends and neighbours, saying unto them, Rejoice with me; for I have found my sheep which was lost. (Luke 15:3-6.)

I read this to you to remind you of the fact that the Savior expects that we will participate in a rescue operation, if I may use that expression, a work whereby we will seek after those of our members who have slipped away from us, and bring them back to the fold.

Then he also instituted a work of prevention, and I would like to read to you the beautiful parable that illustrates that great work whereby we are expected to take preventive measures to keep the enemy from invading our ranks.

A certain nobleman had a spot of land, very choice; and he said unto his servants: Go ye unto my vineyard, even upon this very choice piece of land, and plant twelve olive-trees;

And set watchmen round about them, and build a tower, that one may overlook the land round about, to be a watchman upon the tower, that mine olive-trees may not be broken down when the enemy shall come to spoil and take unto themselves the fruit of my vineyard.

Now, the servants of the nobleman went and did as their Lord commanded them, and planted the olive-trees, and built a hedge round about, and set watchmen, and began to build a tower.

And while they were yet laying the foundation thereof, they began to say among themselves: And what need hath my lord of this tower?

And consulted for a long time, saying among themselves: What need hath my lord of this tower, seeing this is a time of peace?

Might not this money be given to the exchangers? For there is no need of these things.

And while they were at variance one with another they became very slothful, and they hearkened not unto the commandments of their lord.

And the enemy came by night, and broke down the hedge; and the servants of the nobleman arose and were affrighted, and fled; and the enemy destroyed their works, and broke down the olive-trees.

Now, behold, the nobleman, the lord of the vineyard, called upon his servants, and said unto them, Why! what is the cause of this great evil?

Ought ye not to, have done even as I commanded you, and—after ye had planted the vineyard, and built the hedge round about, and set watchmen upon the walls thereof—built the tower also, and set a watchman upon the tower, and watched for my vineyard, and not have fallen asleep, lest the enemy should come upon you?

And behold, the watchman upon the tower would have seen the enemy while he was yet afar off; and then ye could have made ready and kept the enemy from breaking down the hedge thereof, and saved my vineyard from the hands of the destroyer. (D. & C. 101:44-54.)

So you see, the Lord did institute a work of prevention. He provided that we build fortifications to keep the enemy from within our ranks and to take preventive measures to save our own. You notice, also, how disturbed the Lord was when some of the servants in the vineyard began to say that the work was not necessary.

... And what need hath my lord of this tower?

And consulted for a long time, saying among themselves: What need hath my lord of this tower, seeing this is a time of peace?

Might not this money be given to the exchangers? For there is no need of these things. (Idem, 47-49.)

And always when the servants in the vineyard begin to say that the commandments of the Lord of the vineyard are unnecessary, that there is no need for these things, then they become slothful and they hearken not unto the commandments of the Lord, their God.

Now, I would like to tell you a parable.

The Lord of the vineyard appointed a great nobleman to supervise all the work in the vineyard. The nobleman was very pleased with the work of the vineyard, but he noticed that although there were many, many people in the vineyard who were busy and doing as they should and keeping the commandments, some were slipping away. A work of prevention was necessary. Especially was the nobleman concerned about the young people in the vineyard, so he called upon certain of the servants of the vineyard, telling them to set up an Aaronic Priesthood program whereby the boys of teen-age could be labored with in a protective way to keep them from transgression and to prevent the destroyer from invading their ranks.

Much good was accomplished. But in certain parts of the vineyard there were those who began to say, "What need hath my lord of this program? This is a time of peace. Might not this time be spent in other ways? There is no need of these things." The result was that they became slothful and some of the boys in their charge, not being cared for by the servants in the vineyard, slipped away.

And then the nobleman saw that a labor should be taken up with the girls in the vineyard, and so he assigned a work to the young women of the Mutual Improvement Association to labor among the young ladies of the vineyard and requested that a member of the bishopric in each part of the vineyard should labor with the officers of the young Women's Mutual Improvement Association. Much good was accomplished and the nobleman was pleased. But he also saw, however, that as was the case with the boys, so with the girls, there were some in certain parts of the vineyard who began to say, "What need hath my lord of this program?" And as they did so, some of the girls slipped away, and the destroyer led them down to destruction.

And then the nobleman saw that some of the young women from rural areas were beginning to move into the cities, and as they came, some of them were led astray by evil people. So the nobleman in his great wisdom spoke to the servants in the vineyard and invited them to cooperate in a program whereby the Church officers within the cities could help these girls, providing, of course, the names and addresses of these girls were given to them. So the nobleman requested that the bishops and the other servants in the various rural areas of the vineyard, should send in to one of the other servants in the vineyard, Brother Spencer W. Kimball, the names and addresses of the girls who were moving into the city to get away from home for one reason or another, to try their wings. When their permanent addresses were established, Brother Kimball, as one of the servants in the vineyard, could send them to the bishops within the cities who would bring these young ladies into wholesome environment, rather than to allow them to slip away.

Saturday, October 3

Second Day

There was a girl named Mary, who decided she would like to go to the city. She talked it over with her mother and father. The father told Mary that the bishop in their part of the vineyard had announced in the ward meeting that if any girls were planning on going to the city, the bishop would like to have a consultation with them. So the father and the mother and the young lady all went over to the home of the bishop in this part of the vineyard, and discussed their plans. The bishop arranged with them that when Mary's permanent address was obtained, he would notify Brother Kimball so that Brother Kimball in turn could notify the city officers of the Church who would be willing to co-operate with this young lady.

The father and the mother, however, wanted to go further. They were nervous about their girl. This would be the first time away from home for her. So mother and dad decided that they would go into the city with Mary and help her to find a suitable place in which to live. And after a day's searching they did find a lovely Latter-day Saint home in which Mary could enjoy the proper kind of environment. The father went home, but the mother decided she would stay on a few more days. Where would Mary go to work? The mother was going to help Mary find a job and be sure that Mary found work in an environment which would be wholesome, and so she stayed on until the proper kind of job was found.

Then she decided to stay on until Sunday. Having learned from the landlady where the meetinghouse was, Mary and her mother went over to the meetinghouse on Sunday and there looked up the bishop of the ward and introduced themselves. The mother explained that Mary was going to be in the ward, now that she was coming to the city to work and she was living with such and such a family, and would appreciate it if the bishop would arrange to provide the proper help for Mary in getting acquainted in the ward so that she could have wholesome friends.

The mother then went home. Shortly afterward the bishop in the home ward sent the word to Brother Kimball and Brother Kimball confirmed the arrangements with this city bishop and Mary got along beautifully. She had good friends, safe environment, and remained active in the Church.

Then there was a girl named Jane. Jane's parents were not quite as careful as were the parents of Mary, and they allowed her to come to the city all by herself. But they did arrange for her to go directly to the Beehive House where enquiry was made as to a place in which Jane could live. For a short time she stayed at the Beehive House and the bishop of the home ward got in touch with Brother Kimball's office and Brother Kimball got in touch with both the girl and the bishop of the ward and satisfactory arrangements were made for her. So when she began her stay in Salt Lake City she found the right kind of friends, and the right kind of environment, and all went well with her.

But then there was a girl named Helen. Helen was eighteen. She, too, wanted to leave the little country home and come in to the big city, as she spoke of it. She did not get along too well with her parents. There had been some difficulties and she wanted, for one thing, to get away from home restraints. The bishop in that part of the vineyard knew about the situation, but he was one of those who said, "What need hath my lord of this program? Isn't Helen old enough to take care of herself? And if she wants to go into the city, that is her business. Why should I be bothering with her affairs? What need hath my lord of this program?"

And so, without either the cooperation of the bishop of that part of the vineyard or her parents, Helen came into the city, all by herself. She got off the bus, checked her suitcase, and wandered around town that evening for a few hours. Then she found a rooming house where she inquired about a place to stay. They were willing to take her in. She went back to the bus station and got her suitcase, and came over to the rooming house to stay.

Then she had to find a job. She was not skilled in anything but decided that at least she could wait on tables. The next day she began looking for a job as a waitress in a restaurant. She got a job, and was quite thrilled with it. One of the other girls waiting on tables there seemed to attract her, and they became good friends. Within a matter of a week this other waitress had invited Helen to come and live with her in her apartment. Helen, thinking that it was wonderful to have a friend like that, for she was lonesome, went over to stay with her new friend. This girl had a number of boy friends. Some of them were not so young but were rather mature men. The two girls went out with them to have a good time, as they thought. Once in a while liquor was served. Cigaretts were passed around. Helen started going out on her own too, and the other girl went out on her own.

It was not so very long until Helen found out she was going to have a baby. She came to her friend, the other waitress, in a panic, and asked her what in the world she could do. This other girl ridiculed her for allowing herself to get in that condition. But she did direct her to a doctor who performed illegal operations. The operation was performed, but this doctor was not clean. Infection set in. High fever caused Helen to toss about on her bed. The only care she had now was this other waitress, and a good part of the time she was left alone. She became worse and worse and when she seemed to be in desperate condition, the waitress friend got frightened and sent to Helen's home, and told her father and mother they had better come and get her and take her home.

They came and when they found out what the condition was they were terribly distressed. Why should this have happened to their daughter? They rushed her to a hospital where expert care was given to her. Her life was saved. After she had been in the hospital for quite a while, they took her home to the little country town from which she had come.

She now was very much disillusioned. Her life seemed shattered. Her passing through all this was so unnecessary. But some servant in the vineyard had said, "What need hath my lord of this program? There is no need. Isn't Helen old enough to take care of herself? If she moves to the city, that is her business. Why should I bother about her? What need hath my lord of this program?"

And because one of the servants in the vineyard was so slothful and so disinterested in this program of prevention, he had thrust upon him a work of rescue that was far more difficult than the prevention ever would have been.

But this servant in the vineyard, now repented. He began to do the work assigned to him, and the nobleman was pleased. One day the Lord said to him and to all other faithful servants in the vineyard, "This shall be my seal and blessing upon you, a faithful and wise steward in the midst of mine house, a ruler in my kingdom."

May we have the wisdom, to accept the Lord's program as it is given to us. May we be willing to undertake this work of prevention in saving our girls and our boys from the onslaught of the destroyer. May we be willing to be awake to our responsibilities. May we be willing to follow the leadership of the great nobleman who stands at the head of the vineyard, I pray, in Jesus' name. Amen.

ELDER LEGRAND RICHARDS

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

BRETHREN: I feel honored to have the privilege of meeting with you here tonight. I have enjoyed the proceedings of this conference a very great deal. I feel that the Lord has been near to us, and if we return to our fields of labor and observe the counsel and the advice that has been given, it will prove to be a great uplift to the Church.

I earnestly pray that I might enjoy the spirit of the Lord during the few moments that I stand before you. It has been suggested that I say a few words on the missionary work of the Church. Those of you who have attended the sessions of this conference, will know that a number of the brethren have already spoken on this important subject. I cannot think of anything I would rather talk about. I love the missionary work. I have had the privilege of filling four missions for the Church, and I just would not want to raise a boy and not have him enjoy that opportunity, even though he might have to serve his country.

I wonder if we really appreciate the great importance of the missionary system of the Church. I have often said that to me it is the greatest organization or institution in the world—without it the kingdom could not be built. I was thinking about it this morning, and I wondered what the Savior would say if he were here tonight and talking to this body of Priesthood, the instruments in his hands for carrying on his work in the earth.

We might ask him his opinion as to the importance of the work, something like this: "Master, is it because you thought the missionary work was so very, very important that you started out the first few verses of your introduction to the revelations contained in the Doctrine and Covenants with a message on the missionary work?" I preface what I want to say by reading those few verses:

"Hearken, O ye people of my church, saith the voice of him who dwells on high, and whose eyes are upon all men; yea, verily I say: Hearken ye people from afar; and ye that are upon the islands of the sea, listen together.

"For verily the voice of the Lord is unto all men, and there is none to escape; and there is no eye that shall not see, neither ear that shall not hear, neither heart that shall not be penetrated." . . .

"And the voice of warning shall be unto all people, by the mouths of my disciples, whom I have chosen in these last days.

"And they shall go forth and none shall stay them, for I the Lord have commanded them." (D. & C. Sec. 1:1-2, 4-5.)

That is the beginning of the introduction to the Lord's revelations to guide his church and kingdom in this dispensation as he spake these words unto the Prophet Joseph Smith.

And then we might say, "Master, when you bade your apostles farewell, following your resurrection, was the importance of this missionary work indicated in your last command to them, 'Go ye into all the world, and preach the Gospel to every creature, . . . and these signs shall follow them that believe, . . . (and then he named the signs) and, lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world.'" (Mark 16:15-18 and Matt. 28:19-20.)

I would like to bear my testimony to you tonight, that my experience has taught me that the Christ has never rescinded that promise. Wherever the missionaries go, bearing his holy Priesthood, bearing witness of the truth, the Lord goes with them. He goes with them and fills their hearts to overflowing.

I have had many a letter from missionaries while president of a mission indicating that. I have an excerpt from a letter from a widow in the mission-field in which she said that five souls were about to be brought into the Church and the very thought of it filled her heart with such joy that she felt like it would burst, and then she added, "such happiness I have never known in my life."

Is it because the Lord promised that he would be with them unto the end of the world, and we are approaching the end of the world, that a missionary can make a statement like one that I heard in Oregon a few weeks ago by a missionary who had just returned from his mission? He came down with his fist on the pulpit and said, "Brothers and sisters, I would not take a check for a million dollars today, for the experience of my mission."

Is it because the Lord is keeping his promise, "And, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world," that when we meet for hours and hours, six and eight hours at a time, in the mission field with a missionary group bearing their testimonies and reporting their work, that there is often not a dry eye there? Is it because the Savior has made good his promise that he is with them? After all, he creates the feelings of the human breast, and as I have often said, he is the best paymaster in all the world. His servants are better paid, without their salaries, than others who are paid large salaries for preaching.

I heard President Grant say in Europe, when he was president of the European Mission, that notwithstanding the years he had served as an apostle in the Church, the greatest joy he had ever had in his ministry was in the mission-field. And after we had met in a Priesthood meeting at Rotterdam for a whole day, because he brought a hundred missionaries with him out of England, and each one had had an opportunity to speak, and there had not been a dry eye there, he turned to us missionaries and said, "Now, brethren, today we have feasted on the fat things of the spirit of the Lord. Now go out," he said, "and give it away, give it to the people,—the more you give away, the more you will have left." Is it not wonderful? I have been in missionary meetings where I felt like I was lifted up into another world, and that should I open my eyes I could see the angels of heaven there. That, to me, is an evidence of how the Lord values this work.

When he stood upon the Mount of Olives and told his disciples that the temple should be broken down and not one stone should be left upon another, they enquired of him saying, "Tell us, when shall these things be? and what shall be the sign of thy coming, and of the end of the world?" He told them of the coming of wars and rumors of wars and tempests and earthquakes and so forth, and then he said, "And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come." (Matt. 24:2, 14.)

And how shall it be preached? Paul said that "faith cometh by hearing and hearing by the word of God." And how shall they hear except it be preached unto them, and how shall it be preached, except they be sent. (Rom. 10:14-17.) So, if the Master is to come and claim his kingdom, the Gospel must be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations.

Is it because this missionary work is so important in his mind that when He said to one, "Follow me, But he said, Lord, suffer me first to go and bury my father," Jesus, as if he would say to the Priesthood of his Church, that they should not find excuses not to preach the kingdom, said, "Let the dead bury their dead, but go thou and preach the kingdom of God." And then "another also said, Lord I will follow thee; but let me first go bid them farewell which are at home at my house, and Jesus said unto him, No man having put his hand to the plough and looking back is fit for the kingdom of God." (Luke 9:59-62.)

And then he sent the Seventy out. Is it because the work is so important that he said unto them: "The harvest truly is great, but the laborers are few; pray ye therefore the Lord of the

Saturday, October 3

Second Day

harvest, that he would send forth laborers into his harvest." (Luke 10:2.)

And, brethren, in this dispensation, when men were first converted to the Church they went to the Prophet Joseph to find out through him from the Lord what thing they should do that would be the most pleasing unto the Lord, and almost invariably the answer came back from the Lord through the Prophet of this dispensation, that they should thrust in their sickles and reap because the harvest was white already to be garnered, and then he added, and if it so be that ye shall labor all your days and bring save one soul unto me, how great shall be your reward in the kingdom of my Father.

I have thought of that promise and have reached the conclusion that I would not exchange the friendships that have been mine with those whom I have had the privilege of bringing into this Church, with the help of the Lord, as one of his missionaries, for all the wealth of this world. When the Lord said, "If you bring save one soul unto me how great shall be your joy," I never realized just what that meant until I had a letter from a man from Phoenix while I was president of the Southern States Mission, in which he indicated that his father was one of the first converts out of the State of Mississippi back in 1840, and said, "Since that time my father's own descendants have given 100 years of missionary service to this Church, and there were 15 then in the missionfield, and we had three of them. I told that story here in the Barratt Hall at a Missionary Conference in 1940, just 100 years after that man had been gathered into the fold by the efforts of a missionary, and this good brother happened to be present, and at the close of the meeting he came up and said, "Brother Richards, it is now 160 years." When you get to adding 15 or 20 years, a year, it soon runs into figures.

Think of the young missionary who might have traveled through the swamps of Mississippi in those early days, when many of the missionaries contracted the malaria fever, and if he only brought, say, this one soul into the Church, he might have felt that his labors had been in vain. But in 100 years time there are 160 years of missionary service from the descendants of that one man, alone, not counting all the converts they had made, and their converts, and their converts, until you would have, literally an empire of people who had joined the Church because this missionary brought this one man into the Church.

Is it because of the importance of this great missionary work that when the Savior asked the twelve Nephite disciples what thing they desired at his hands, all but three expressed the desire that they might live to the allotted age of man, and then come unto him in his kingdom, but three of them hesitated, and he told them that he perceived that their desire was the same as that of his Apostle John, that they might tarry to bring souls unto him, until he should come in his kingdom, and for this desire he commended them.

He indicated that the desire of the nine was good, but the desire of the three was a greater desire, to have in their hearts a desire to bring souls unto him.

Brethren, I feel that every man who bears the priesthood of God should desire to contribute to the missionary work of this Church. I think every father in Israel ought to raise his boys with a desire to be missionaries. When we think of the blessings that we have, the priesthood that we bear, it is worth more than all the wealth and the success of the world. Why should we not want to share with those who know not the truth and make it possible for them to enjoy the glorious blessings that are ours which we enjoy as members of this Church.

I remind you of the story that President Grant used to tell about the good Scandinavian brother who came to Utah. He had not been taught very much about the Gospel, but he loved it. The bishop went to him and taught him the law of tithing, and he paid his tithing; he taught him the fast offering, and he paid his fast offering; and then he went to get a contribution for the erection of a meeting house, and the brother did not know why that could not be taken out of the tithing, but before the bishop got through with him, he paid his contribution for the meeting house; and then the bishop went to him to get his son to go on a mission, and the brother said, "That is the straw that breaks the camel's back. He is our only child. We just can't let him go." And then the bishop countered, "Brother so-and-so, whom do you love in this world more than any one else outside of your immediate family?" And he thought a minute, then he said, "I guess I love that young missionary who came up to the Land of the Midnight Sun and taught me the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ." And then the bishop countered, "How would you like someone to love your boy just like you love that boy?" And he said, "Bishop, you win again. Take him."

When I went on my first mission, President Anthon H. Lund told us missionaries that the people over there would love us. "Now don't get lifted up in the pride of your hearts," he said, "and think that they love you because you are better than others, they will love you because of your calling, and the Spirit of the Lord that rests upon you." I did not know just what Brother Lund meant by that, but when I went to leave Holland to return home, I shed a lot more tears than I did when I left my loved ones to go to Holland. I went to one home; and a man old enough to be my father, in the government service all of his life, with a long beard, knelt down on the ground and took my hand in his and hugged it and kissed it and bathed it with his tears, and then I knew what Brother Lund meant, and then I went into another home where the woman said, with the tears rolling down her cheeks, "Brother Richards, it was hard to see my daughter leave for Zion a few weeks ago, but it is much harder to see you go." And then I realized what Brother Lund really meant, that they should love us because of the Spirit that we take with us into the world.

I feel that every father in Israel ought to want to see his boy go on a mission, and if he has not been himself, I think he ought to want to go, or else help with the stake missionary work. I think we all ought to want to have to our credit, when a count is finally taken, that we have done something in the great missionary cause of this Church.

President McKay threw out a challenge to us in the temple at Logan the other day, that each one of us ought to try and bring one soul into the Church during the next year. If every member of this Church would try and do that just think what a harvest there would be, and when you stop to think about it, here in this stake missionary work, we have all of our buildings to offer to our friends, we have a great program. I think now of a man who came into my office a few months ago. He was here from Michigan with his family, and he said, "Bishop, how can I get my family into your Church. I have seen so much and heard so much about your activities for youth, and we do not have any," he said, "and I must have my children enjoying these things."

And so, right here in our midst, if we will just carry the message to our neighbors and our friends, many of them will join the Church.

Since the close of the afternoon meeting, I visited with a man for nearly an hour in my office. He lived in one of our towns here in Utah for three years and no one ever offered him the Gospel or told him anything about it or invited him to come to one of our meetings, and then he moved off down to California and years later he got into a good man's office who gave him a book to read and now he is an Elder in this Church.

I do not know whether this story is true or not, but it is a good story, and I like to tell it, and I heard it when I was young. The story is told of an Englishman who bought a farm up here in Davis County, he was not a member of the Church and all around him were Mormons, but, you know, when they met this Englishman neighbor they did not want to impose their religion upon him and so they passed the time of day and talked about current events, and finally one of the neighbors was called on a mission to Great Britain, and while he was there, his English friend decided to go back and visit his relatives in England, and while there he picked up a newspaper one evening and read an announcement of a Mormon Conference to be held and everybody invited and no collection—you know how that goes. "Well," he said, to himself, "after living out there among them for all this time, I do not know a thing about what they believe. I guess I had better go and listen to them." So he went, and to his surprise, the principal speaker that evening was his neighbor from next door, from over in Davis County, and he had to go all the way back to Great Britain to get that neighbor to tell him of the marvelous work and a wonder the Lord had set his hand to do in our day.

Saturday, October 3

Second Day

I met a Stake Mission President in one of our stakes outside of Utah, and learned that he was a convert to the Church; that he had lived in Salt Lake City for twelve years, but he had never attended one of our meetings, nor did he join the Church until he moved away, and the missionaries contacted him. I said, "Why didn't you join when you were in Salt Lake?" He said, "No one ever invited me."

Brethren, I hope that right here at home we will do some good missionary work. You bishops, don't be too stingy in giving these mission presidents the help they need, where you have non-members living within the confines of your stake. Some of these stakes are going to be comparable to our foreign missions through the missionary work that is being done and the spirit of missionary work that is coming into the Church.

It is a great loss to a man to miss the experience of a mission. It is a great loss to a home to miss having their boys go on missions. A short time ago one of our mission presidents reported that they had eighteen missionaries come into their mission out of homes where the parents were not active in the Church, but in a short time, in fifteen of those homes the parents had become active, so that the missionary work is not done only with the ones we meet in the missionfield, but in our own homes, in the lives of the missionaries, in the communities in which we reside, the wards and stakes, we help to lift the spirituality by the missionary work that is rendered in these wards and in these stakes.

We are also trying to reach out to what we call the minority groups. I like the spirit that Brother Kimball has with these Lamanites. I believe it is because of the importance of this great missionary work that he loves them like he does. I was in a stake president's home not so long ago, and there was a picture of his missionary boy on the piano, and I said, "Where is he laboring?" And the wife said "Down among the Indians." And I hardly dared ask the next question, I was afraid. Finally, I got up courage and said, "How is he enjoying it?" "Oh, Bishop," she said, "He thinks they are wonderful. He is even talking of going back to live there when he gets released from his mission."

I think that is what the Lord meant when he said, "And, lo, I will be with you alway even until the end of the world." He plants that love in their hearts.

I heard a young girl reporting her mission among the Indians just recently and she just wept when she told of the souls of those women among whom she had labored. We might not have thought that they were worth saving. And so we have the Indians and the Mexicans and the Chinese and the Japanese and other races of people here in our midst, and remember the Lord said, "And this Gospel of the Kingdom should be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations."

And when John saw the angel flying in the midst of heaven with the everlasting Gospel, it was to be preached to every nation, every kindred, every tongue, and every people. (Rev. 14:6-7.) Does that leave anybody out? If not, that is a part of the great missionary responsibility that we bear to the world.

I bear you my testimony that it is one of the sweetest experiences that can come, and I hope that even our boys who have been in the armed forces will not be robbed of the privilege of going on missions. I think the bishops ought to interview them all, and if they are worthy, give them an opportunity and even if they cannot go, they will feel drawn to the Church because they have been invited.

I would like to say in parting to the bishops, do not just sit in your offices and decide that boys cannot afford to go on missions. I will tell you a story that was told to me. A good brother, a friend of mine, who aims to keep a missionary in the field all the time, decided to go to a poor section of the city and see if the bishop would like to furnish him a missionary, so he said, "Do you have a young man that you think would like to go on a mission and you have not called him because you did not think he would have the money?" The bishop said, "We have just such a man as that." My friend said, "Well, you talk to him about it." So the bishop went to him and when he told this young man that he wanted him to go on a mission, the young man's face lighted up and he said, "Bishop, I have the money in the savings bank for my mission. I have been waiting two years for you to tell me you would like me to go on a mission." I wonder how many men in Israel there are who have waited on their bishops and the call never came.

God help us to arise to the importance of this great missionary work, I humbly pray, and leave my love and blessings with you all, in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

The congregation, and that includes those brethren in Provo and in Logan, in the Assembly Hall, in Barratt Hall, and other places, will now join in singing, "We Thank Thee O God for a Prophet," Brother Spencer Cornwall directing.

The Men's Chorus and the congregation joined in singing: "We Thank Thee, O God, For A Prophet."

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

Second Counselor in the First Presidency

MY BRETHREN: It is always a thrill to meet with this great body of Priesthood, and every time I meet with you, I am afflicted with the dread that we are not exercising the power for righteousness that belongs to us. No one can estimate the power and the influence that we might wield, no one can estimate the amount of good we might do if we were united, and no one can estimate the amount of good we are not doing, because we are not united as we should be, united in faith, united in action, believing the same things, supporting our leaders, ward, stake, Priesthood, and all the rest. What we could do if we would but exercise the powers of the Priesthood which we have.

And I return again to a thought that I have expressed, I think, every time I have been here in the last twenty years, that we cannot trifle with the Priesthood. It is not something that we can take off as we wish, and put on when we get ready. It is something that is with us all the time, until we lose it through transgression, and then we may not put it back on, because we shed a few tears. Brethren, guard, guard your

Saturday, October 3

Second Day

Priesthood, magnify it, bring it into your homes honestly, preserving your covenants.

I approve of everything that Brother LeGrand has said tonight. I love to hear him speak about missionary work. His whole soul is filled with it. All that he said is true. But I want to enlarge the missionary labor a little bit, Brother LeGrand, I want to say that every one of you men is a missionary in your own homes. You have souls there to save. Do you know where your daughter is tonight, and every night? Do you know what kind of company she is keeping? Do you know that when she goes to meeting, as you suppose, Mutual, that she goes? Do you know the same things about your sons? Are you living the Gospel, are you magnifying your Priesthood in such a way that you can exercise influence to see that they do go where they should. Are you so exercising your Priesthood that when one of them starts to go astray that you can counsel with them, have them listen to you. I know children may be reared in the same home, the same environment, the same care, the same instruction, the same example, and yet one lives righteously and an other goes astray. But, oh, the woe, the misery and the sorrow that come to the father and the mother of a wayward daughter or son. Brethren, do not overlook the home mission.

Deal gently, deal kindly, deal understandingly, deal justly, deal with charity, deal with love, with your sons and your daughters, and your wives. I cannot over emphasize these thoughts, because I have had fathers come to me and say, "my daughter has gone wrong, what can I do?" I am sure they did all what they thought they should do. Of course, all of their intents and purposes were as they should be, but somewhere they probably failed. You can only have one such mistake before the damage is done.

You know, our soldiers returning from foreign countries bring back with them various kinds of infections, infections of the body, bring back new germs, we are unaccustomed to them, we become subject to them. But they bring back other infections, too, moral infections. And those moral infections also spread, they are spreading. I hope that you brethren of the Priesthood are on guard against these infections, usually infections destroying chastity. Do not rest easy, brethren, be on the watch-tower always. Guard against these infections. Watch as you would watch your own life, the lives and purity of your children, your loved ones.

You know, I believe that the Lord will help us. I believe if we go to him, he will give us wisdom, if we are living righteously. I believe he will answer our prayers. I believe that our Heavenly Father wants to save every one of his children. I do not think he intends to shut any of us off because of some slight transgression, some slight failure to observe some rule or regulation. There are the great elementals that we must observe, but he is not going to be captious about the lesser things.

I believe that his juridical concept of his dealings with his children could be expressed in this way: I believe that in his justice and mercy he will give us the maximum reward for our acts, give us all that he can give, and in the reverse, I believe that he will impose upon us the minimum penalty which it is possible for him to impose.

Brethren, watch your homes, be missionaries in your homes, have all the zeal, all the faith, all the righteous living that you would have if you were in the mission field, and then put your trust in God, asking his blessing, ask his help, that he will teach you how to govern your family, that you may have no tragedies therein.

God bless you, I humbly pray, in the name of Jesus. Amen.

PRESIDENT STEPHEN L RICHARDS

First Counselor in the First Presidency

I BELIEVE, my brethren, we have cause for encouragement. Listening to the report of the Church made by President McKay at the opening of the Conference, and the various other items which have been mentioned, I believe that we should feel optimistic about the progress of our work. I do. I think that we are going forward, and I have confidence and faith that we will meet all the problems and situations which arise.

I thank the Lord always for the principle of continuous revelation. I thank him that he has made provision for his Spirit to attend all of those who are called to preside in his work, and I speak not only of the General Authorities, but those who are charged with the responsibility of presidency in the stakes and the wards, in the quorums, in the missions, in the temple, and in all of our organizations.

I am a firm believer in improvement. I think improvement is the law of life, and I am grateful that we are not so controlled by practices and conditions of the past that we are not open to the consideration of ways and means to advance the Kingdom of our Father.

I remember hearing a president of one of our stakes illustrate the point. One of the sister workers in an organization of the stake said to him, because he was a pretty hard-driving president, "President, it seems that you are never satisfied." "O, yes I am," he said, "I am always satisfied that you can do better." And so I am persuaded that such new methods as present themselves and come regularly through the proper channels will be conducive to the upbuilding of our Father's work. We have evidences of it. I might submit some of the figures to attest this, but time will not permit tonight. The whole picture looks to me to be one of encouragement, one to give us cause for great gratitude in the assurance that the blessings of the Lord have been upon us.

Now there are opportunities for further perfecting our work, and those opportunities rest in large measure with our presiding brethren. I would like to say just a word to the presidencies of quorums. These quorums of priesthood, as you are all aware, are designated of the Lord. They are substantially the only organizations among us, other than that of the general organization of the Church, which have been specifically mentioned in the revelations. The Lord must have set great store by these marvelous institutions which he created. He knew in the beginning that his priesthood would be the basic foundation of his work. I was thinking tonight if Joseph and those associated with him in the beginning of the work could witness what we see tonight, this great demonstration of power, resident within God's Holy Priesthood, and perhaps they do see it, how gratified they would be.

And here is a great reservoir of power to be utilized for the advancement of our Father's Kingdom. Upon the quorums rests the largest measure of that responsibility. I am persuaded that no other organization can or ought to take their place, because they constitute the Lord's grouping of the manpower of his Church. Upon the presidencies of quorums rests the responsibility of seeing that their quorums function properly.

We used to have years and years ago, when the Priesthood Committee of the Church was first organized; many may remember it; President McKay will, a very concise and comprehensive definition of a quorum. We used to say it is three things: A class, a fraternity, and a service unit. And so we sought to group around these headings the responsibilities of the men of the quorum. And while there has grown out of the original concept a more elaborate organization, I am persuaded that if we could make our quorums serve the functions indicated by those three things we should accomplish much for the members and for the Church.

Saturday, October 3

Second Day

I am thoroughly persuaded that we can learn the Gospel in our quorums, and thus comply with the revelation that men are "to learn their duties." When men profess that some of the courses of study are a little intricate and difficult, I think of the days in Kirtland when a few men of meager learning and education had what seems to be the effrontery and boldness to set about to learn Hebrew, and you will recall how in the School of the Prophets, they engaged a Professor Seixas to teach them Hebrew in order that they might the better interpret God's word. We can learn. We can learn by study. We can learn the fundamental things that we need to know as members of God's Holy Priesthood. And we can learn about the apostasy, which is essential for us to understand in order that we comprehend in its fulness the restoration and be fortified to defend the restoration in the latter days.

And I take the liberty of urging you men, through your quorum presidencies, to see to it that your teachers study, that they receive the instruction which is provided for them, and the facilities which have been maintained in order to give them a concept of these great truths and to teach them intelligently to those who come to the classes. The more we make our classes worth while to the members, the more readily will they come, and the greater the value they will receive from them.

Now, I don't know that it is possible for any organization to succeed in the Church under the priesthood without adopting the genius of our Church government. What is that? As I conceive it, the genius of our Church government is government through councils. The Council of the Presidency, the Council of the Twelve, the Council of the Stake Presidency, or quorum, if you choose to use that word, the Council of the Bishopric, and the quorum of Council of the Quorum Presidency. I have had enough experience to know the value of councils. Hardly a day passes but that I see the wisdom, God's wisdom, in creating councils: to govern his Kingdom. In the spirit under which we labor, men can get together with seemingly divergent views and far different backgrounds, and under the operation of that spirit, by counseling together, they can arrive at an accord, and that accord, (the occasions are so negligible as not to be mentioned) and therefore I say that accord is always right. That accord represents the wisdom of the council, acting under the Spirit.

Now, brethren of priesthood quorum presidencies: You need those councils, and I have no hesitancy in giving you the assurance, if you will confer in council as you are expected to do, God will give you solutions to the problems that confront you with reference to your quorums. And he will enable you to find ways and means of approaching the men whom you would like to reach to bring them into accord with your quorum, and have them enjoy its spirit. I am sure we can go out and get many of these men. My heart is always troubled for the unusually large number of our elders who do not ally themselves with the quorum and secure the spirit and the benefit to be had therefrom. I am not at all persuaded that these are bad men, but I am persuaded that they are negligent often and forgetful and neglectful, and they need your care. And the quorum presidency, no matter how many committees you appoint, the quorum presidency is responsible for every man in the quorum; and I am sure you cannot be relieved of that responsibility, although you will want the help of all those who may come to your assistance.

And I am persuaded too that if you approach many of these men in frankness and true friendship, you will touch their hearts. I have long been persuaded that it is something of a waste of time to go to a man's home who has been neglectful and spend the time in talking about the weather or the crops or politics or something else.

I always admired my dear brother, the President of the Church, George Albert Smith. I have been with him on many occasions. I have seen him meet many old friends, and I frequently have seen him take their hand, and ask the first question, not how are you getting along, which usually means how much money are you making, but "How are you feeling in the Church?" I have seen him ask that of business men. I have been with him on the streets of this city and had him meet a business man and say, "Well, how are you feeling in the Church?" It was a direct approach, and one usually that brought a response that probably made the man search his conscience, and that is what we need to do with these men, to get them to search their own conscience, and make their own decisions to avail themselves of these glorious opportunities that we bring to them.

Now, my brethren, I recognize that I can't deal with many problems tonight. There is one problem that President McKay suggested that I mention to you about the missionaries, and I fully endorse all that has been said about that great work, and that is, brethren, that we still think it wise to use some caution in the general advertising of missionary farewells. I don't need to take the time to tell you the rather strenuous period we have been through in trying to arrange for our missionary program. It has not been easy. Thank the Lord it is now operating in good measure and producing results, but it has not been easy; and for the time being, it is suggested that you follow the directions that were issued sometime ago to avoid newspaper advertising of our missionary farewells. Times may change, and this instruction may change.

I just want to bear my testimony to the divinity of this great power that you and I hold. I know that it is genuine. I know that it is authentic. I have no more question about its authenticity and its derivation than I have of any other fact established by the most concrete evidence we could ask. Sometimes there are those who when I have laid my hands upon their head in ordination have asked me for the derivation of my priesthood. I repeat four steps: I was ordained by President Joseph F. Smith. He was ordained by President Brigham Young. Brigham Young was ordained by the three witnesses, one of whom was Oliver Cowdery, and that ordination was subsequently confirmed by the Prophet. Oliver Cowdery and Joseph Smith were ordained by angelic ministers from the Lord Jesus Christ himself. We don't have to go into antiquity to establish the authenticity and the genuineness of this power that we hold, and you and I know, that aside from the evidences of its authentic derivation, we know that there is an essence within it which makes it more than a mere name. I have felt it and you have. I know that our Father has given it to his men and boys to establish his work. God help us to use it effectively in the creation of a better world, I humbly pray, in the name of Jesus. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Thank you President Richards and President Clark.

We have received a report that by actual count and by report over the telephone from Provo and Logan, we have in attendance at this great Priesthood Meeting, 16,173 members.

PRESIDENT DAVID O. McKAY

MY DEAR FELLOW WORKERS: Just a few words in conclusion.

I commend the appeal made by Brother Petersen, and once again ask that the bishops send the names to Elders Spencer Kimball and Mark E. Petersen of those girls and boys who leave their home towns to come to the centers.

Saturday, October 3

Second Day

The Young Women's Mutual Improvement Association will help you, if you ask them to report to you; they have so written to me within the week. They are prepared to report on every girl in every ward in the Church. The Lord bless them and may he bless you, bishops, in this service of saving souls.

EXCURSIONS

One other point—when you have excursions for young people, either to the temple or visiting a city, please see to it that you have registered or chartered busses, unless you come in your private cars. In either case be sure that the boys and girls are properly chaperoned.

ON SOLICITING FUNDS

Wards and branches should not solicit funds or try to raise money for their buildings in other places than under their own jurisdiction. We do not favor bidding on shovels used for breaking ground for church edifices.

HOW TO OBTAIN A TESTIMONY

A few years ago a stranger sat in the gallery opposite this pulpit and listened to the testimony of one of the elders of the Church. He accompanied a man who had been excommunicated from the Church. As they were walking out of the grounds, the stranger said, referring to the testimony of the speaker that day, "Do you know, I would give all I possess if I knew that what that speaker said today is true."

Several of the brethren throughout this conference have emphasized the value of a testimony. Brother Sonne, particularly, laid stress upon the fact that that is the strength of the Church. It is. There is nothing which a man can possess in this world, which will bring more comfort, more hope and faith than a testimony of the existence of a Heavenly Father who loves us, or of the reality of Jesus Christ, his Only Begotten Son, that those two heavenly personages appeared to the Prophet Joseph and established the Church of Jesus Christ, and that men are officially authorized to represent Deity.

Scientists are seeking that knowledge, some of them in vain. One of them recently declared that he had failed to find it, and had lost his faith even in God, and he is recognized as one of the great.

You know, too, you who have read the book "Man Does Not Stand Alone," how impressively that great author leads the world to accept the existence of God's guidance. You who have heard missionaries return and bear witness that they know that this Gospel is true, will remember, probably, when you were boys, that you, too, would have given anything if you could so testify in truth.

We have hundreds, perhaps thousands of young men here with us to-night. They are eagerly longing to have that testimony. Of its value, there is no question. Of its reality, too, there is no question in the minds of you leaders who possess an absolute knowledge of these things.

But as I have listened to the testimonies, I have wondered how many of us are showing the boys how they may know. Are we sufficiently emphasizing the fact that they will never know it if they indulge in sin; they will never find it out if they live to gratify their passions and appetites. "My spirit shall not always strive with man." (Gen. 6:3; D. C. 1:33; Moses 8:17.) His spirit will not dwell in unclean tabernacles. ("The Spirit of the Lord doth not dwell in unholy temples." Helaman 4:24.) And you cannot have a testimony without the Spirit of God.

Young men, may I just name three steps that will aid you in obtaining this priceless possession, and then you follow them.

On the night of Gethsemane, Jesus offered a great prayer. In the introduction he said this: "Father, thou hast heard me," and he thanked the Lord for it, and then he said: "And this is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent." (John 17:3.)

That is what a testimony means. To know God, and Jesus Christ, is to have life eternal, the great possession of eternal life.

But the question arises—How may I know? Jesus has answered it, as he has shown the way in every aspect of life. One day, when he bore testimony to his divinity, that his teachings were of God, the Pharisees and others around him said, "How knoweth this man letters, having never learned?" How do we know (that was their question), that you are divine? And he gave a simple answer: "If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself." (John 7:15, 17.) There is a definite answer—a clear-cut statement, young man. "If ye will do the will, ye shall know." And, "to know God, and Jesus Christ, whom he has sent, is eternal life."

However, there still remains unanswered the question: What is God's will? On one occasion several thousand people asked that question saying "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" It was on the Day of Pentecost, and Peter, who had received a testimony and instructions from the Savior, answered: "Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost. For the promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off even as many as the Lord our God shall call." (Acts 2:37-39.)

Did you note that first sentence, that first condition? Repentance, which is a changing of life. If you have been swearing, stop it. That is what repentance means. If you have been disobeying father or mother, cease your disobedience. If you have been thinking impure thoughts, substitute them with noble ideas. Repentance means ever to change your thoughts and acts for the better.

A lawyer, a Pharisee asked Christ, on one occasion, "Which is the great commandment in the law?" (Matt. 22:36.) And in answer, most profound, Jesus said, the first fundamental law is to "love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength." (Mark 12:30.) "And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." (Matt. 22:39.) And the Pharisee admitted that Jesus had spoken wisely.

Analyze that and you will find that it means that instead of centering your thoughts on self, that God becomes the center of your existence; your thought is what you are going to do for him. You will pray to him at night. You will pray to him when you have some heavy task to perform. In your school work, pray. I know, you may not hear his voice always, and you may feel that he did not answer your question in your prayer, but in youth, keep praying, holding to the assurance that God is near you to help you.

Christ has given us "all things that pertain unto life and godliness, through the knowledge of him that hath called us to glory and virtue: Whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises: that by these ye might be partakers of the divine nature," (II Peter 1:3-4) that is, the Holy Ghost promised by Peter, to live in this world and be a partaker of the divine nature of our Father in Heaven.

I bear witness to you that that is a reality. Young man, never lose sight of it. And then, after Peter bore witness that that is a reality, he said this:

"... add to your faith virtue; and to virtue knowledge;

"And to knowledge temperance (note the words); and to temperance patience; and to patience godliness;

"And to godliness brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness charity,"—love.

Now note the promise:

"For if these things be in you, and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ,"—of the things of God. (II Peter 1:5-8.)

And to know God is eternal life.

Sunday, October 4

Third Day

Those are divine steps, that lead back to the presence of God, our Eternal Father.

May the young within the sound of our voices tonight, and all in the Church, follow those steps, and gain, each one, the precious gift of a knowledge of the divinity of this work, I humbly pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

The Men's Chorus of the Tabernacle

Choir will sing, "Seek Thy God," after which, Elder Joseph Anderson, Clerk of the Conference, will offer the benediction.

---

Singing by the Men's Chorus, "Seek Thy God."

Elder Joseph Anderson, Clerk of the Conference and Secretary to the First Presidency, offered the closing prayer.

THIRD DAY MEETING

CHURCH OF THE AIR

Columbia Broadcasting Company's Church of the Air was presented at 8:00 a.m., Sunday, October 4th. The program as presented was as follows:

The Tabernacle Choir, under the direction of J. Spencer Cornwall, furnished the music for this service, with Frank W. Asper at the organ. Richard L. Evans was the announcer.

Music: Organ and humming choir: "Sweet Is the Work."

Announcer: The Church of the Air is presented by CBS Radio so that men of many faiths may speak to a nationwide audience. Today's service comes to you from the Mormon Tabernacle on Temple Square in Salt Lake City, through the facilities of Station KSL. The speaker will be Henry D. Moyle, of the Council of the Twelve Apostles of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Music is by the Tabernacle Choir, under the direction of J. Spencer Cornwall. Frank Asper is at the organ.

The Choir opens the service with one of the hymns of Eliza R. Snow, sung to the music of Evan Stephens: "Awake, Ye Saints of God, Awake. Call on the Lord in mighty prayer."

(The Choir sang the hymn, "Awake, Ye Saints of God."—Stephens).

Announcer: We continue this Church of the Air Service with the worshipful words and music of Will James: "Jesus, Our Lord, We Adore Thee, Jesus Our Crucified Savior."

(The Choir sang: "Jesus, Our Lord"—James).

Announcer: We shall now hear on this Church of the Air service, Henry D. Moyle of the Council of the Twelve Apostles of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, frequently referred to as the Mormon Church. In addition to his Church service, Brother Moyle has had a distinguished career as a lawyer, business administrator and civic servant. He has titled today's talk: "Who Shall Deny or Question the Justice of God?"

ELDER HENRY D. MOYLE

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

MANY PEOPLE of the world today have lost their faith in the living God. Their trust is placed in many different gods, fashioned after the weakness and inclination of men: A god who makes might, right; a god of riches, a god of selfishness and greed; a god of lust; a god whom professional and business men serve, men who worship their profession or business to the exclusion of almost all else in life; a god of sports; a god of industrialism or unionism as the case may be; all in preference to the God of heaven and earth, our eternal Father, who has instilled in the hearts of obedient children throughout the ages, a love of truth and virtue! God has said:

... I will put my laws into their mind, and write them in their hearts: and I will be to them a God, and they shall be to me a people. (Hebrews 8:10.)

Herbert Spencer has well said, "The choice is not between a personal God and something lower, but between a personal God and something higher."

Isaiah prophesied of such disbelief, as we find in the world today.

The earth also is defiled under the inhabitants thereof; because they have transgressed the laws, changed the ordinance, broken the everlasting covenant. (Isaiah 24:5.)

Wherefore the Lord said, Forasmuch as this people draw near me with their mouth, and with their lips do honor me, but have removed their heart far from me, and their fear toward me is taught by the precept of men:

Therefore, behold, I will proceed to do a marvellous work among this people, even a marvellous work and a wonder: for the wisdom of their wise men shall perish, and the understanding of their prudent men shall be hid. (Ibid., 29:13-14.)

Through the courtesies and facilities of the Columbia radio network, it is my privilege upon this Church of the Air to represent a people who today profess to worship the God of Israel and lend obedience to his eternal laws.

We believe the Bible to be the word of God. We read in the first chapter of Genesis, 27th verse:

So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them.

This same God of whom we bear witness to the world is the creator of heaven and earth and of all things that in them are, of which man is his crowning glory. God gave man dominion over all things pertaining to this earth.

"The glory of God is intelligence." (D. & C. 93:36.) Man's intelligence is God-given. Man is the offspring of God. The power to think and reason emanates from this same eternal source. Dr. Francis L. Patton, onetime president of Princeton University, 1882 to 1902, and president of Princeton Theological Seminary, 1902 to 1913, wrote a book entitled Fundamental Christianity, dedicated to his wife on their sixtieth wedding anniversary. I quote therefrom:

It is true, as has been said, (by Milton, I think) that we need not find fault with Reason since it is all we have wherewith to judge a revelation. But we have this treasure in earthen vessels. Human reason works under the limitations of a finite mind and shares in the defects of a sinful nature. It has often taken the wrong side in debate, and has tried to make "the worse appear the better reason." More than once it has been the leader in an insurrection against the government of God. It has often accepted a retainer, prepared the papers and acted as leading counsel in the great case of Man v. his Maker. It has been trammelled by prejudice, blinded by foregone conclusions, and dominated by pride. It has misread the facts, or misapplied the reasoning based upon them. All this goes to show that we need another light than that which reason gives. It can handle categories and make syllogisms, but it cannot make history; cannot survey the whole area of being; cannot speak with authoritative confidence on themes which only revelation can unfold, and it transcends its prerogative when it says that a revelation is impossible. It is for reason to take the more modest part of showing us that what we confessedly need has been given us in the religion which came from God. * * * We cannot flee from God's presence. The Psalmist got at the root of all philosophy when he said: "If I ascend up into heaven, thou art there: if I make my bed in hell, behold, thou art there."

If I take the wings of the morning, and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea;

Even there shall thy hand lead me, and thy right hand shall hold me." (Psalms 139:8-10.)

All our observations of nature strongly declare the existence of God. Paul, in his epistle to the Hebrews, writes:

Sunday, October 4

Third Day

... every house is builded by some man; but he that built all things is God. (Hebrews 3:4.)

The prophets of old have recorded their testimony concerning God in Holy Writ. They, in their lives, exemplified an absolute faith in their God. Moses gives us the early account of God's dealings with his children here upon this earth; his personality; his character; his attributes to inspire and direct us in our worship of our Creator in whose image we stand. The Lord spake unto Moses face to face as a man speaketh unto his friend. (See Ex. 33:11.) Adam walked and talked with God. The voice of God was heard from the heavens at the baptism of Jesus Christ. Peter, James, and John heard his voice on the Mount of Transfiguration when he declared: "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased; hear ye him." (Matt. 17:5.) Stephen saw God.

But he, being full of the Holy Ghost, looked up stedfastly into heaven, and saw the glory of God, and Jesus standing on the right hand of God. (Acts 7:55.)

Paul was converted by a heavenly manifestation. Finally in the beginning of this dispensation, which the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints proclaims to the world is the Dispensation of the Fulness of Times, in which all things heretofore given of God to man will be restored, we have this remarkable testimony given by two of its early founders concerning the Son of God, Jesus Christ our Lord and Savior.

And now, after the many testimonies which have been given of him, this is the testimony, last of all, which we give of him: That he lives!

For we saw him, even on the right hand of God; and we heard the voice bearing record that he is the only Begotten of the Father—

That by him, and through him, and of him, the worlds are and were created, and the inhabitants thereof are begotten sons and daughters unto God. (D. & C. 76:22-24.)

Moses' life was given to receiving the laws of God and proclaiming them to his people, as a prophet of God and leader of men. Many of God's laws, binding upon the people of Israel in the days of Moses, have come down to us. They bind our consciences as much to-day, if not more, than they did that of ancient Israel thousands of years ago. Today, no matter how far we may have departed from the true knowledge and understanding of God, we cannot violate the Ten Commandments of God with complacency and a clear conscience. No one throughout the history of mankind ever permanently profited in their violation, whereas all who have obeyed have been blessed in their obedience. Disobedience thereto has brought sorrow and remorse to the human soul with the resulting loss of all promised blessings.

One prophet of old, Mormon by name, has said:

Therefore ye need not suppose that ye can turn the right hand of the Lord unto the left, that he may not execute judgment unto the fulfilling of the covenant which he hath made unto the house of Israel. (3 Nephi 29:9.)

The wisdom of man has never produced a code of conduct to compare with the laws of God. His laws also give us an insight into the personality of God. His nature is the better understood. The Ten Commandments begin as follows:

I am the Lord thy God, which have brought thee out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage.

Thou shalt have no other gods before me.

Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image, or any likeness of any thing that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth:

Thou shalt not bow down thyself to them, nor serve them: for I the Lord thy God am a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate me;

And shewing mercy unto thousands of them that love me, and keep my commandments. (Ex. 20:2-6.)

The Ten Commandments constitute a divine decree of transcendent importance to all mankind. To a believer in God, the very thought of finding fault with his holy judgments is sacrilege. We believe his judgments are binding on us here and now, as well as in all preceding generations, and will be binding upon all future generations.

It was Job who proclaimed after he had lost everything but life, and suffered most in body, his absolute reliance upon, and his submission to the decrees of God:

... the Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord. (Job 1:21.)

Job's faith in God endured. God's existence was real. He was actually Job's heavenly Father, a Personality to whom he could pray, and upon whose justice and mercy he could depend implicitly.

Job comprehended God. He could not deny his existence. To those who denied God, he propounded some questions that have never been answered by the wisdom of men; for example:

Where wast thou when I laid the foundations of the earth? declare, if thou hast understanding.

Who hath put wisdom in the inward parts? or who hath given understanding to the heart? (Ibid., 38:4, 36.)

God's nearness, yes, his presence, was felt by Job when he finally declared:

For I know that my redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth:

And though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God:

Whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold, and not another; though my reins be consumed within me. (Ibid., 19:25-27.)

Though centuries separated them, Job could have declared as well as did the Apostle James:

If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him. (James 1:5.)

Down through the ages, from Father Adam on, came to man the same knowledge and understanding of God received from God by those who sought wisdom, in keeping with the admonition of James.

Today God has not left us alone, dependent upon the testimonies of ancient prophets. In every dispensation of the gospel upon the earth, from the time when Adam walked and talked with God, to the present, God has revealed himself to man, and through his prophets he has disseminated his law and his gospel to the earth anew, that all men might know that he lives, that he is the rewarder of them that diligently seek him. He lives to bless mankind. He has declared from the heavens in these latter days:

For behold, this is my work and my glory—to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man. (P. of G. P., Moses 1:39.)

The importance of this knowledge is made clear by the prophet Jeremiah:

Let not the wise man glory in his wisdom, neither let the mighty man glory in his might, let not the rich man glory in his riches:

But let him that glorieth glory in this, that he understandeth and knoweth me, that I am the Lord which exercise loving-kindness, judgment, and righteousness, in the earth: for in these things I delight, saith the Lord. (Jeremiah 9:23-24.)

God gave knowledge and understanding to the disciples of Christ which prepared them to suffer persecution and even death rather than deny the divine mission of their Lord and Savior.

... without faith it is impossible to please him: for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him. (Hebrews 11:6.)

I know that God lives to enlighten our minds, quicken our understandings, and give to us a knowledge and understand-

Sunday, October 4

Third Day

ing of God and of his eternal purposes, and of the divine mission of his Only Begotten Son, Jesus Christ; that he hears and answers our prayers with a filial love for us, his children here upon this earth. In the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

Music: Organ and humming choir—"Sweet Is the Work."

Announcer: Time and facilities for the Church of the Air are provided without charge by CBS Radio and its affiliated stations, and in the same spirit the participating speakers and choirs give their services.

CHOIR AND ORGAN BROADCAST

The regular Sunday morning Choir and Organ Broadcast was presented Sunday morning, October 4, at 9:00, which was followed at 10:00 o'clock by the regular Conference session.

Long before the hour for commencing the Choir and Organ Broadcast, the Tabernacle was crowded to capacity by members who had assembled from all parts of the Church. In addition, the Assembly Hall just south of the Tabernacle was filled with people, as was also the Barratt Hall (60 North Main Street), provision having been made so that those assembled in these buildings could watch and hear the Conference services by means of television. Then too, hundreds of people assembled on the grounds and listened to the services by means of amplifiers as the Conference was broadcast from the Tabernacle.

The following broadcast, written and announced by Richard L. Evans, and originating with Station KSL, Salt Lake City, was presented from 9:00 to 9:30 a.m., through the courtesy and facilities of the Columbia Broadcasting System's network, throughout the United States.

The broadcast was as follows:

(The organ played "As the Dew," and on signal the Organ and Choir began the hymn, "Gently Raise the Sacred Strain," singing the words to the end of the second line, and humming to the end of the verse for the announcer's background.)

Announcer: Once more we welcome you within these walls with music and the spoken word from the Crossroads of the West.

The CBS Radio Network and its affiliated stations bring you at this hour the Tabernacle Choir and Organ from Temple Square in Salt Lake City, with J. Spencer Cornwall conducting the Choir, Frank Asper at the Organ, and the spoken word by Richard Evans.

The Choir turns first to a song of supplication by Tschesnokoff as arranged by Noble Cain: "Let Thy Holy Presence Come Upon Us, O Lord, We Pray."

(The Choir sang: "Let Thy Holy Presence"—Tschesnokoff)

Announcer: Frank Asper first selects on Temple Square today, a devotional theme from the writings of Robert Leech Bedell: "Lullaby and Prayer."

(Organ number: "Lullaby and Prayer"—Bedell)

Announcer: From the Tabernacle Choir we hear one of the hymns of Parley P. Pratt, sung to a hymn tune by John Tullidge: "An Angel from On High the long, long silence broke."

(The Choir sang: "An Angel From On High"—Tullidge)

Announcer: We hear another organ offering as Frank Asper selects the quietly thoughtful mood and melody of a song without words by Joseph Bonnet.

(Organ number: "Romance sans Paroles"—Bonnet)

Announcer: The Tabernacle Choir now recalls a Motet for mixed voices with the music of F. Quilici: "Jesu, Word of God Incarnate."

(The Choir sang: "Jesu, Word of God"—Quilici)

THE SPOKEN WORD

We recall the often quoted comment of Lewis Carroll's Red Queen: "Now here, you see, it takes all the running you can do to keep in the same place." It does require an earnest effort to keep even with life—and one of the chronically discouraging experiences is to be chronically behind. Leaving things that should be done sooner, until just a little later is a factor in unhappiness and failure. This is evident in students who habitually leave homework too late and first pursue other pastimes and pleasures, and count on doing the essentials second—who ignore the alarm just a little too long, who leave home just a little too late, and who, literally or figuratively, live life breathlessly trying to beat the bell—and seldom arrive in time to be quite comfortable, or to seem settled or to feel prepared. In the words of a wise educator: "It is easier to keep up than to catch up." Cramming isn't a pleasant pursuit. Nor is trying to do several days work in one. Loafing along and then trying to pour in, in one night, all the knowledge that should have been absorbed in small daily doses is always difficult and discouraging. This is true not only of young people, not only of academic obligations, but in all of life as well: Leaving to the end of the year what should be kept up currently, leaving too late any obligation of life, is an uncomfortable way of living, and hazardous as to the things both of time and eternity. There is seldom any real reason to suppose that what we ought to be doing now will be easier to do after we find ourselves farther behind. There is seldom any experience to suggest that sluffing today and doubling the obligations of tomorrow will improve our future prospects. To concur with the comment of the Red Queen: We have to run so fast to stay where we are. And to the student near the starting of school, and to all people at any point in life: "It is easier to keep up than to catch up." There is no better time to keep up than currently, and there is little reason to suppose that it will be easier to do all at once what should be done in digestible amounts each day. Repentance is a great and blessed principle (one that all of us have need of), and catching up is a kind of repentance. But better than repentance is keeping the commandments; and better than catching up is keeping up—so that postponement and procrastination are not permitted to place an always uncomfortable penalty upon us.

(Organ number: "Sweet Hour of Prayer"—Bradbury)

Announcer: Frank Asper has presented a hymn melody by William Bradbury, which takes its title from the words of W. W. Walford: "Sweet Hour of Prayer."

And now we close with a sacred song from Handel's Messiah, written on a scriptural text: "His Yoke is easy; his burden is light."

(The Choir sang: "His Yoke is Easy"—Handel)

Announcer: Once more we leave you within the shadows of the everlasting hills. May peace be with you, this day—and always.

This concludes the twelve hundred and fifty-ninth presentation, continuing the 25th year of this traditional broadcast from the Mormon Tabernacle on Temple Square, brought to you by CBS Radio and its affiliated stations, originating with station KSL in Salt Lake City.

J. Spencer Cornwall conducted the Tabernacle Choir with its three hundred seventy-five singing voices. Frank Asper was at the organ. The spoken word by Richard Evans.

In another seven days, at this same hour, music and the spoken word will be heard once more from the Crossroads of the West.

SUNDAY MORNING GENERAL CONFERENCE SESSION

The regular Sunday morning session of the Conference convened promptly at 10:00.

The Tabernacle Choir, under the leadership of J. Spencer Cornwall, furnished the choral music for this session. Frank W. Asper was at the organ.

President David O. McKay:

In solemn worship this beautiful

Sunday, October 4

Third Day

Sunday morning, thousands are assembled in the Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, in the Assembly Hall, the Barratt Hall, and I see on the walks and lawns, Tabernacle grounds, many others who are listening in over the local radio and television stations.

This is the sixth session of this General Conference. The fifth session was not broadcast. It was a General Priesthood Meeting, held last evening in the Tabernacle, with overflow meetings in the Assembly Hall and the Barratt Hall, and for your interest as well, we should like to say that as nearly as the ushers could count, there were assembled in that Priesthood meeting last evening 16,173 men and boys holding the Priesthood. The speakers were Elder Mark E. Petersen and Elder LeGrand Richards of the Council of the Twelve, and members of the First Presidency. The Men's Chorus of the Tabernacle Choir furnished the music.

Elder Henry D. Moyle was the speaker on Columbia's Church of the Air program this morning at 8 o'clock. We trust that many of you listened to that excellent address.

So we are now assembled in the sixth session of the 124th Semi-Annual Conference of the Church. These services are being broadcast in the Assembly Hall, in the Barratt Hall, over a loud-speaking system and by television. These services are also being televised over KSL Television at Salt Lake City, and will be heard over radio through KSL over twenty-two stations in Utah, Idaho, Arizona, Nevada, Colorado, California, Oregon, Washington, and by special arrangement over five television stations in San Francisco, Los Angeles, Portland, Oregon, and Tacoma, Washington. The names of all these stations have already been announced to the radio and television audiences.

At this time we desire to express our deep appreciation to these various radio and television stations for their courtesy in making available their time and facilities for these broadcasts.

The Choir singing for this morning's session of the Conference will be by the Tabernacle Choir, with Elder J. Spencer Cornwall conducting, and with Elder Frank W. Asper at the organ. We shall begin by the Choir and congregation singing, "Come, Come, Ye Saints," with Richard P. Condie conducting. The opening prayer will be offered by Elder Donald Ellsworth, President of the Mesa Stake.

The Choir and congregation joined in singing the hymn, "Come, Come Ye Saints," Richard L. Condie conducting.

Elder Donald Ellsworth, President of the Mesa Stake, offered the invocation.

The Tabernacle Choir sang the hymn, "The Morning Breaks," directed by J. Spencer Cornwall.

President David O. McKay:

We wish to acknowledge the presence of prominent visitors who are worshipping with us this morning, and others who for the first time are listening in by television. We observe in the audience Senator Wallace F. Bennett, Brother LaMont Toronto, Secretary of State; Dr. Aldous Dixon, President of the Utah Agricultural College; Superintendent Allen Bateman, State Superintendent of Public Instruction; Dr. Homer Durham, Vice President, University of Utah; Mayor Earl J. Glade, Mayor of Salt Lake City; Dr. Ernest Wilkinson, President of the Brigham Young University; Dr. M. Lynn Bennion, Superintendent of the Salt Lake City Schools; and others probably whom we have not observed. We bid you all welcome.

And we wish to extend greetings and a heartfelt welcome to the thousands who are sitting opposite their television sets in San Francisco, Los Angeles, Portland and Seattle, and probably Sacramento, for we have just learned that telephone connections have been in progress, with a view of having these television sets available in that city.

As we contemplate this new situation, we cannot help but be impressed that this is an epoch-making service. In a way it may be compared to the first telegraph message that went over the wires from Salt Lake City October 24, 1861. That message was sent to President Abraham Lincoln, and read: "Utah has not seceded but is firm for the Union. (Signed) President Brigham Young"

Today, for the first time in history, thousands have an opportunity, outside of the State, to meet with us in this worship. With all our hearts, we bid you welcome, and pray that the spirit of this great assembly may be in your hearts, to the end that in our worship during the next two hours, our souls may be uplifted, our minds directed towards the real things in life,—the existence of our Heavenly Father, his love for his children, and his desire that good will may prevail in the hearts of men to the end that peace may be established in the earth.

God bless you all, who are sitting with us by radio and by television, in this worship.

Our first speaker this morning will be President Stephen L. Richards, member of the First Presidency of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

PRESIDENT STEPHEN L RICHARDS

First Counselor in the First Presidency

I AM DEEPLY grateful for the high privilege of being present in person with you at this great conference of the Church. I rejoice with you in the inspiration, the encouragement, and the uplifting remarks and spirit which have characterized the sessions to this point. I thank the choir for singing that great hymn, "The Morning Breaks," my favorite, embodying in a measure at least the essentials of the message which I would give to you today. I approach the task humbly, asking the Lord to bless my utterance beyond the mere import of the words, to bring to you the spirit of our work.

In a recent address by the president of one of our American universities, the following observations were made. I give their substance to you. Speaking of the technological age in which we live, this educator pointed out that the economic and military security of the nation depends upon scientists, physicists, and engineers to keep abreast of new developments. "But," said he, "to survive in the complex world, however, America must have specialists outside the technical and scientific field." He declared that it was not a shortage of engineers or atomic physicists that caused the loss of China to our side.

A brilliant cadre of engineers is ineffective while the waterfront is ruled by gangsters. A high level of training in economics is less meaningful if labor and industrial leaders cannot realize that "although the whole is never healthier than its parts, it is always greater. A stockpile of atomic bombs has less power if sections of the population are blocked by prejudice or made stagnant through ignorance." After setting out the place of education in our American system, he concludes with this statement: "The skills we lack most are in human relations."

It is this statement which intrigued my interest and made me feel that it might be well to use this occasion to call the attention of my brethren and sisters, and our friends who listen in, to the unique contribution which the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints has to make and is making in this all-important aspect of the world's affairs.

Human relations—what things are comprehended by this caption! In the economic world the term is frequently used interchangeably with public relations and is reduced in final analysis to an adjunct of the profit motive, to bring about a better understanding of people, their natures and desires, to create sympathetic understandings of businesses and their problems, with the ultimate objective of inducing favorable attitudes and a wider reception of the products of business and thereby increase profits. In the main I have no criticism of the honest efforts put forth by business to create good will for themselves and that which they have to sell. Many of the statements by business executives lauding the principles of service and considerate treatment are elevating in character and intent, but I fear much of their force is lost in the natural, if not always warranted, inference of the people that such idealism is primarily self-serving. I shall have more to say about the economic phase of human relationships in its bearing upon wider aspects of the subject at a later point in these remarks.

Sunday, October 4Third Day

And next, human relations, as comprehended within the social sciences: I don't profess to have knowledge sufficient to warrant my giving any definitions or classifications, but I assume that the social sciences embrace what in the law we used to call domestic relations, which included rights and obligations arising out of the family relationship, the association of people in communities, and even in the larger groupings of states, nations, and races. I readily concede that research and study concerning the social make-up of the world can be and should be of great value in solving some of its problems and directing the thinking and energies of mankind to a more peaceful living together in the societies of the world. I would not discourage continued study in the field of sociology. I could even go along with the president of the university, who seems to recommend greater emphasis upon it. I think, however, to be candid with ourselves, we might ask ourselves just what profit to date has been realized in the study of the social sciences in bringing about a greater stability in the homes of the people, in curbing juvenile delinquency, in composing the acute problems arising out of traditional industrial strife, in suppressing class hatreds manifesting themselves among the peoples of the world, and lastly, and perhaps most importantly of all, in the acquisition of peace among the nations. I will not say, and I do not wish the inference to be drawn, that no progress has been made along the lines I have mentioned. Enlightenment from study is always a step in progress. A development of the facts through research is highly desirable and necessary in the formulation of forward-looking programs, but I fear, and I confess I have little more than hearsay evidence and occasional observations in my reading to support my fear, that the teachings of some of the sociologists have retarded more than they have advanced the attainment of the goals good people hope for, especially in regard to home and family life.

I come now to human relations among the nations, which is the phase of the subject most engaging to me at the present time. I understand there is a department of human relations, or the humanities, in the set-up of the United Nations. I have no definite knowledge as to the prescribed functions of this department, but one would naturally infer that its objective is to improve the conditions among suffering and underprivileged peoples, and thereby create better understandings and good will among men and women all over the globe. If it is in position to contribute to this betterment, I am sure that all men of good will would wish it success, although many might have objection to the means of accomplishing its purposes.

This very brief outline may serve to remind us, and it is my hope that it will, of the vital, transcendent importance of the field of human relations in the lives and affairs of mankind, in homes, communities, societies, and nations of the world. It was undoubtedly a recognition of the importance of the subject that induced the college president to say that the skills we lack most and need most are in human relations. I think few of us would disagree with him, although there would probably be great variance of opinion on the vital issue—What are these skills and how are they to be obtained? That is where we come into the picture, my brethren and sisters. In order to make a contribution of substance to the solution of these pressing problems, we have to make positive statements. These positive declarations sound intolerant and presumptuous to many of our listeners who don't understand fully the nature of our work and the grounds on which we issue such statements.

There has been a great build-up in our own country, and perhaps in others in the last several decades, for what is termed broadmindedness and tolerance. It is one of the most popular subjects on which a man can speak. I heard a young minister of very engaging personality deliver a most entertaining address on aspects of this theme just a short time ago. In his advocacy of Christian good will and brotherhood he asked people to consider and reconsider their attitudes toward life, banish prejudices, and be kind and friendly to all. He pictured the Savior during his earthly ministry going about advocating such tolerance and friendliness. He urged a de-emphasis on denominational differences and the formation of a brotherhood that would permit all to come together in harmony and good fellowship. I don't know whether he thought his formula would cure all the world's ills, but I am sure he was convinced that it would help, and I think too that good will come from his popular lectures over the country.

But I do not think, my friends, that this friendly counsel for tolerant brotherhood is a realistic or basic answer to the problems facing us today, particularly in the sphere of human relations. I am very fearful that this popular appeal for so-called broadmindedness and tolerance has brought in the past and still continues to promote a type of thinking which does not contribute to the seemingly worthy objectives its proponents entertain for it. It sounds good, but how good is it? It would be interesting to know how some of its advocates would answer questions such as these: Should we be tolerant of infractions of the Ten Commandments, that great statement of basic divine law? Would you tolerate a little stealing, a little lying? Would you tolerate violation of the law of chastity? To what extent? Do you think that a loose or equivocal position with reference to the virtues enjoined by God is calculated to inspire in youth a respect for moral rectitude, the type of American life that the founders left as our heritage? I grant that it is a commendable interpretation of Christ's teachings to solicit compassionate consideration for those who are weak and who have made mistakes, but it is a tragic error to fail to distinguish between tolerance for the sin and sympathy for the sinner. Truth is not tolerant of error. Standards of truth are exacting, and the blessings Christ promised are obtainable in their fulness only upon strict observance. No greater boon could come to America and the world than a universal conviction of this principle. The nations could have their hearts' desire of peace in righteousness if they would make themselves worthy.

I have traveled a little, it might be considered a lot except as compared with the marvelous globe-encircling record of our dear President; I have visited countries far removed from America; I have had special occasion to observe the attitudes of other peoples toward our country. I am convinced that what we of America need first and foremost in our relations with foreign nations, and as a basic essential to their friendliness, is respect, not respect born of fear of our great military prowess, our economic production, nor envy of our widely advertised high standard of living, but respect for our integrity, our character, through the conformity of our living to the ideals we profess and expound. There can be no friendliness and brotherhood not founded on mutual respect. I have witnessed the distrust in which we are held by some foreign peoples, but I make no comment as to the justification for it because it might reflect credit or discredit in places where

Sunday, October 4Third Day

I do not feel competent or positioned to judge, but I do feel that it is within my province and my duty to point out to our own people and to our fellow Americans the discrepancies between American ideals and practices, which account in large measure for our inability to win the confidence and true friendships of many of those whose cooperation we so urgently need in the crises now confronting us.

I think there are very few peoples in the world who do not have admiration for the concepts of liberty and freedom which we espouse. The founding of the Republic has been an inspiration to the oppressed everywhere, and still is, but unfortunately the discrepancies I have briefly mentioned, and will hereafter call to your attention, have militated immeasurably against its influence for good.

While in South America a few years ago, I took occasion everywhere I went to inquire what the people knew about our own country. I speak now of the common people, not the diplomats and some academic researchers who have greater opportunities for information. I discovered that the people secured their information and formed their opinions about the USA in large measure from the picture shows and the magazines, and the sensational stories carried by the publications about our gangsters and divorcees. Most unfortunately, the finer aspects of our American living were seldom brought to their attention. To all too great an extent, they picture us as a nation of law-breakers, extravagant and riotous livers, and violators of the sanctity of the home and the marriage relation. Are these concepts, whether erroneously acquired or not, conducive to the building of respect for us? They are not. Many of us are prone to ascribe our difficulties in Latin American countries to the ambitions of avaricious dictators. I would not say that there is some basis for this position. But I do say, without fear of successful contradiction, that there would be infinitely less menace to our friendly relations with our neighbors to the south, and far less fertile ground for planting the seeds of insurrection and autocratic controls if our friends had more respect for our character, our way of life, and our consistency. Remember, there wouldn't be sent out from our country the kind of films which are shown throughout the world and the lurid stories of our newspapers and magazines if there was not some foundation in fact for their production. That is the pity of it all. They are altogether too true.

I found the same condition, perhaps to a lesser extent, prevailing in Europe and the Near East. There we are judged, as all over the world, by the way we advertise ourselves, and unfortunately, the worst segment of our society constitutes our most effective advertisers.

Now I ask you to observe, as one of the most important points in this consideration, this fact that the values in all this advertisement and education are moral values. Although some of our appraisers are not fit to judge, we are nevertheless judged on moral standards. It doesn't bring respect to the accused even if the accuser has to admit that he himself is guilty of the same sins. Much as we disparage certain ideologies, what we fear most is the ruthless malevolent actions of immoral, unmoral, and Godless men, and most unfortunately, there may be some justification for the other side to question our own sincerity and consistency in moral purpose.

I am aware that there are students of world problems who contend that, after all, the final solutions are economic, that if people are well-fed, clothed, and housed, they will be peaceable and happy. I am not converted to this view. A few months ago I sat at a luncheon in New York City with a man who had given forty years of his life as a missionary in Africa. He was acquainted with many tribes and peoples of what we call the Dark Continent and undoubtedly had had wide opportunities for observation. He told us that among all these tribes he had never been able to discover a word in their language which could be interpreted as materialism, as opposed to spirituality, as we use these terms. He said that everything in their lives from the cradle to the grave transpires on, to them, a spiritual basis. Many will say that they are crude, backward, ignorant peoples, but I pose this question for you. May it not be that there has been providentially preserved for them, from ancient lineage, a concept of life, which in the mad scramble for the earth's bounties, has escaped the great host of their sophisticated brethren, who have attained dominance of the earth, and who are now being rudely awakened to the realization that all their materialistic striving and attainments may bring only frustration and ruin?

I know I don't have to argue in this company, perhaps not with many of my listeners, for the recognition of moral and spiritual values in the solution of our problems. I take it that we are all gratified from time to time to hear expressions of this recognition by some of the leading men of the country and the world. I am hesitant to say a word that might be construed in disparagement of such statements, but I am constrained to question a little from time to time their sincerity. Is spirituality anything other than a personal attainment and investiture? Is there any such thing as mass morality? The Master taught us that as a man, not the masses, thinks, so is he, not they. It is true that if enough individuals are convinced of spiritual realities, they can greatly influence the society in which they move, but it is the individual and not the mass mind which has the conviction.

I hope you will approve the application which I make of this principle. I don't believe that men in high places, in government, in business, or elsewhere can successfully divorce their private lives from their public declarations and protestations. Nor do I believe that women who attain positions of eminence can do it either. We often speak of the gullible public, but I am very much inclined to think that there is enough of discernment in this public to see behind the idealistic words of speaker or writer, the consistency of performance. I note with growing concern the declination of governmental appointing power to take into consideration morality, except as it affects stealing and treason. The sooner men learn that they cannot teach virtue without living it, the quicker we will attain the respect of those whose co-operation we seek. And what is even more important, the sooner we will bring ourselves to our own self-respect.

You will gather from these remarks that I would subject every representative of the American people, from the small community level, to state, national and international position, to the scrutiny and test of virtuous, moral standards. I would. Some will say, you are discounting the value of brains and "know-how" in this intricate business of government and sociology. I am not. I stand in awe in the presence of a great mind with superior intelligence devoted to human welfare. We are greatly dependent upon such minds, but if I had to make a choice, which I ought not to have to make, between talent and integrity, I would choose integrity and virtue, for without them we are lost.

If I speak of things which are perhaps to a considerable extent beyond our control, I shall be accused of propagating visionary, utopian ideas. The young minister to whom I referred a few moments ago told us in an effective sentence that Christ warned that we could not attain perfection in life, but he also admonished that we never cease to strive for it. Furthermore, these are not basically my own ideas, although I may be responsible for the crude way in which they are put. They emanate from the revelations of the Lord. How thankful I am every day that I live that we are not left wholly to rely on the reasoning and wisdom of men, and that God in his infinite solicitude for the welfare of his children has made available his own wisdom and will for the guidance of humanity. To us, my fellow members of the Church of Christ, has been committed much of this revealed wisdom and divine guidance for the human family. This is a precious possession, a pearl of great price, to be forever cherished by us and disseminated to the whole family of the Lord. This revealed knowledge contains the full and complete answer to the problem of human relations. Within it there is the Lord's wisdom about the family, the basic unit of society, the community, government in all its stages, from the most limited to the most comprehensive, economics and property, brotherhood and peace, and most important of all, man's relationship to God, his heavenly Father. Intelligent, worldly-wise men have reasoned for years about these problems. They are seemingly still as far from solution as in ancient days. Think for a moment of the contributions to be made in mending the broken homes of our land and protecting the children from delinquency, crime, and ruin, and restoring to marriage its sanctity, and to the home its solidarity, in the conservation of the human resources of the world. Think of the concept we have to give to the world of the dignity of the individual, the aristocracy of his birth, the incomparable goals of his life, and the freedom of choice to attain them. Think of the help we can give to the cause of brotherhood in the earth through the recognition of the Fatherhood of God and the bond of his Holy Priesthood, a fraternity whose like is not to be found in all the associations of men. Think what it would mean to the worthiness of men to receive the inspiration of God, if all were to accept the concept of the body as being the tabernacle of the Lord's spirit child resident within it. I cannot enumerate all the glorious principles of truth committed to our custody. If we are accused of presumption in claiming custody of some of these precious truths about life, we can but point to the revelations which have brought them to us and charged us with their dissemination.

Sunday, October 4

Third Day

We set forth the word of God as we have received it. We claim no monopoly on goodness, Christian virtue, and the love of Christ. We rejoice that millions of his adherents, of his children throughout the world revere his holy name and seek to follow in his ways as they understand them. We know the Spirit of the Lord strives with men for their uplift and betterment. We are not despondent about human nature. We have confidence in men and women the world over. When they shall be privileged to hear the full truth of the gospel of our Lord, countless numbers, under the influence of the Holy Spirit, will embrace the truth. What the world needs for improvement in human relations is the truth and missionaries. It needs missionaries even more than soldiers, great as may be the need for military defense of our homes and our liberties. So long as we have to have soldiers, I wish they could be missionaries also, missionaries for the finest ideals in American life, missionaries for integrity, virtue, and the great character that has brought about the best in the life of the Republic. How much good they could do all over the world where they are stationed if they would so live as to counteract the influence of the ugly pictures of America which are presented to foreign peoples in ways I have mentioned.

Not only do we need soldier missionaries, we also need missionaries who are ministers of the gospel of Christ, with information, power, and testimony to give to the people of the world a thorough and complete understanding of the glorious blessings he holds out to the faithful and true. I hope I will not be out of the bounds of propriety and that I will give no offense when I make an appeal to the draft boards of our states to give consideration to the invaluable services which may be rendered by devoted ministers of religion in the promotion of spirituality among our own people and those of foreign lands. The Congress has recognized by the enactment of law this essential feature in our national life and activities. Exemption has been declared for ministers of religion from certain military obligations. We are keenly aware of problems confronting draft boards in some of the determinations they are obliged to make. These men, loyal and devoted citizens of the country, serving without pay, have the thankless task of making selections under the selective service act. In communities where our people reside in numbers, they are confronted with some problems which probably do not arise in other sections. The missionary system employed in the Church probably has no counterpart outside the areas where our people live. We have no professional clergy, as other churches do, and in a sense we have no laity, for all bearing the priesthood are charged with ministerial responsibilities. The missionaries, for whom we claim exemption as provided by law, do not serve in legal ministerial capacity for life, but for very limited periods. After limited ministerial service, they are all instructed to report immediately to draft boards for their disposition. May we take this opportunity of extending, on behalf of the people of the Church, our thanks and appreciation for the understanding cooperation given to our program by the draft boards of many of the states in which our people reside. In this connection, on behalf of the First Presidency, I should like to take the liberty of publicly expressing our thanks and gratitude to General Lewis B. Hershey, national head of Selective Service at Washington, D. C. His uniformly courteous and sympathetic consideration of our problems has been deeply appreciated. I wish to assure General Hershey and all of you that by this public statement of appreciation we intend no inference to be drawn of an endorsement, or the approval of other selective service officials, beyond that which they have expressly given to our program by official action or written communication.

And now, my dear brethren and sisters, I speak no idle words when I give you assurance that we are in a position to make an inestimable contribution to the betterment of human relations in this anxious, distracted world. We are a relatively small group among the populations of the earth, but we are not reliant only on ourselves and our own strength. God is at the helm of this ship, which is his kingdom, sailing through troubled waters. He has charted the course. He has chosen the pilot, his servant, tested and true, to keep us on course. This ship, like the ark of old, bears all the essentials for the re-establishment of the personal reign of the Lord Jesus Christ in the earth, and the essentials for the exaltation of man in the celestial presence of God the Father and the Son. This ship will eventually come to its point of refuge in the harbor of a peaceful world. With all my soul, I plead with you, my beloved brethren and sisters, to stay with the ship, lend a helping hand, and persuade as many of our Father's children as you can possibly reach to avail themselves of the safety, the security, and the glorious promise awaiting all who cleave unto the Lord, our Master and Deliverer. With inexpressible gratitude for his countless blessings, I invoke upon you, his Church, and all his children, his holy and divine benedictions, in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

He to whom we have just listened is President Stephen L. Richards, member of the Quorum of the First Presidency of the Church.

Elder George Q. Morris will please come to the rostrum.

In addition to the prominent educators named at the opening of the meeting, we are pleased to extend wel-

Sunday, October 4

Third Day

come to Dr. John L. Clarke, President of Ricks College, Dr. Darrel Chase, President of the Branch Agricultural College at Cedar, Dr. Howard McDonald, President of the Los Angeles State College.

Elder George Q. Morris, Assistant to the Twelve, will now speak to us.

ELDER GEORGE Q. MORRIS

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles

MY DEAR BRETHREN AND SISTERS, I thank the Lord for the privilege of being one with you here this morning, and during this whole glorious conference. I pray earnestly that the Spirit of the Lord may direct all that I shall say.

I have been impressed as I have looked out over this audience and been conscious of the atmosphere of this great Tabernacle and listened to the impressive and inspired testimonies and exhortations that have been given, that this is truly an historic and sacred building. Here for nearly a century the word of God has been preached by the authority of God, proclaiming the last Dispensation of the Fulness of Times. In this remarkable building, so unique in its structure, so simple, with the absence of all the ornamental and gilded appointments of great cathedrals, humble, brave, and devoted men and women have met to worship God. One prominent feature in this building is the great organ, and the choir seats, from which, as the choir occupy them, the glorious music comes, typical of harmony and heaven. The feature perhaps of greatest significance is this stand—this series of pulpits—a token of the priesthood of God, for here is assembled this morning the authoritative presiding servants of God in this last dispensation, men chosen of him, who possess the power and authority to speak in the name of almighty God.

As President Richards was speaking of the world situation and of our relation to it, I could not help feeling, though it may seem presumptuous and some may take offense, that this, nevertheless, is the spiritual capitol of this world. From here God speaks to this world, and his Authorities are officially seated this day in this sacred Tabernacle, and their word is binding on all the world; and they are calling this world to repentance, to accept the gospel of Jesus Christ, the only power in the world that will save it, that will enable men and women to shape acceptable lives before our Father in heaven. Men and women by it are led to love the truth, to love God and to keep his commandments, and by their example and by their word, spread this glorious gospel.

I have before me a very simple statement from the Prophet Moroni, I think a statement of very great significance. He is addressing himself to this generation and all other generations where this idea prevails.

And again I speak unto you who deny the revelations of God, and say that they are done away, that there are no revelations, nor prophecies, nor gifts, nor healing, nor speaking with tongues, and the interpretation of tongues;

Behold I say unto you, he that denieth these things knoweth not the gospel of Christ; yea, he has not read the scriptures; if so, he does not understand them. (Mormon 9:7-8.)

That simple statement has tremendous implications.

That's the key to the history of Christendom for seventeen centuries. Following the death of the apostles, religious leaders set up the principle which persists to this day—perhaps to the best of their knowledge and understanding—that revelation had ceased and was finished, and that prophets and apostles were things of the past. And that is in itself definite and conclusive proof that, so far as the world is concerned during seventeen hundred years, such was the case. For when revelation is shut off, and when all the preachers of religion (and this is and was their well-nigh universal opinion) deny its existence, then the Church and kingdom of God is not there, and has not been during this eclipse of seventeen hundred years; and that is the simple reason why men did not know what the gospel was, and why, consequently, when they read the scriptures they could not understand them because they are only understood by the spirit and power by which they were written. The ministrations of the authorized servants of God produce scripture; the scripture cannot produce authorized ministers of God, nor authority to preach, nor are they bringing new revelations to a living Church. That must be done by living oracles. And they were killed off. The world would not accept them. The world would not accept the Lord Jesus Christ himself; he was crucified. And then his Apostles, chosen and sent out to preach the gospel to the world, in the main, met the same fate. Revelation did cease, and the world went into an eclipse, a spiritual eclipse—seventeen hundred years of darkness. Men were left to themselves to do the best they could. But no man knows the gospel of Jesus Christ by his natural wisdom, nor by the wisdom and learning of the world. It must be taught by one sent of God. No man knew how the Church should be set up and organized, how its priesthood should function, nor what priesthood is. There was no priesthood operating for them to see or be instructed by and no organized church for them to see in operation during this seventeen hundred years of darkness and of night. There was, for perhaps a century or so, the afterglow of a sunset as this night set in, a reflection from the ministry of the Savior and his Apostles, but then darkness came. Churches were established by men not called of God (as the Apostle Paul said, "Having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof" [2 Tim. 3:5]), and doctrines were formulated without authority, and the significant and unhappy thing is that the prevailing doctrines of Christendom today found their origin in this spiritual darkness. Unfortunately, they still persist.

But later on after what historians in general agreement have called the Dark Ages, when these doctrines were being crystallized into creeds and man-made churches were increasing, the dawn began to break. The first rays of light appeared with the development of human freedom and the enlightenment of the human mind in the Renaissance, and with the discovery of America—America, the Promised Land—which in the providences of God had been held in reserve, hidden from men, on which it was his declared purpose to set up a free government, so that he might restore again the kingdom of God to the earth. And the sun arose, and the night was past, and this Church, the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, was set up in the earth. All this the scriptures had clearly foretold.

Three very important things occurred. I will mention them in just the moment of time remaining. First of all, and most essential, God again revealed himself to man. The Father and the Son stood in the presence of a fourteen-year-old boy and talked with him. He saw these celestial Personages. He heard their heart-penetrating voices. He received their glorious instructions. That swept away all the erroneous ideas, the false teachings and conceptions as to the identity and nature of God, and restored the true and living God to the knowledge of man. The second thing was that new scripture was brought forth. The Book of Mormon was given to the world by the power of God, containing a fulness of the gospel, which explains gospel doctrines and teachings and substantiates the teachings of the Bible and makes possible their correct interpretation. Also through the Prophet Joseph Smith a volume of revelations was brought forth, containing today's instructions of God to his Church. And then, third, was restored the priesthood of God, which exists in his Church in all generations, and is the power of God which administers the gospel and manifests godliness to men in the flesh. Without this priesthood the Church of God does not and cannot exist.

Sunday, October 4

Third Day

The absence of these three things had brought on the dark ages. They were now restored, and the sun has again risen. The Church and kingdom of God is here. Its sun is in the heavens to be seen by all men who will open their eyes to see its light, and here is its center place in the tops of the Rocky Mountains. May God help us to live its principles and proclaim its doctrines and devote our lives and our means and all that we have and are to the establishment of this cause in the earth for the happiness and the salvation of mankind. I humbly bear witness that Jesus is the Christ, the Redeemer of the world, and Joseph Smith was his prophet, and through them this Church has come into existence and will continue, and no power can stay it, for by the power of God it will cover the earth, and Jesus Christ will come and reign in the world. May God give us power to be true to this great revelation of truth, I humbly pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Elder George Q. Morris, Assistant to the Twelve, has just addressed us. The Choir and congregation will now sing, "O Ye Mountains High." We invite all who are listening in to join in spirit and where practicable and feasible, in song, as the Choir and congregation now led by Brother Richard P. Condie sing "O Ye Mountains High."

The Choir and congregation sang the hymn, "O, Ye Mountains High."

President David O. McKay:

Elder Matthew Cowley, member of the Council of the Twelve, will now address us. Elder Cowley will be followed by Elder Adam S. Bennion.

ELDER MATTHEW COWLEY

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

I TRUST, my brothers and sisters and friends, that I may be able to round out my thoughts in a fluency of expression that will carry conviction to all of you who are listening. To enable me to do that, I must plead for an interest in your faith and prayers. I believe it was William Jennings Bryan who once said that true eloquence is from the heart to the heart, and not from the mouth to the ear. By that standard of eloquence, if there is any eloquence in what I may say, I assure you that it will be the eloquence of the heart and not the eloquence of the properly chosen phrase or the well modulated voice.

I believe implicitly in the efficacy of prayer. Even as I stand before you I believe in the power of God to instill within my heart those thoughts which may be for your benefit, or for at least the benefit of some of you who may be praying to hear something which you need.

When President Richards was speaking so eloquently, especially about the sanctity of the home and the solidarity of the family, my mind raced back to my early childhood to a home which to me was sacred always, and to a family, the solidarity of which was preserved mostly by the family prayers. I thank God that in my infancy I knelt in a circle, in a humble home, night and morning with my parents, my brothers and sisters, and each in his turn invoked the blessings of God upon the family. I am grateful that I learned to pray in my infancy because I had only passed from infancy when I was called as a missionary to the uttermost bounds of the earth; I had just turned seventeen. I was called to faraway New Zealand, and in that mission I was assigned, without a companion, to one of the most humble places I have ever seen in all my life, one of the most poverty-stricken places, and in that little village, I had to pray. I was there but a few days when a woman came rushing to my room, and I have a picture of that room—no floor, just the ground with a woven mat and a blanket or two. She came rushing to that room and asked me to arise from my bed and hurry to her little hut, and when I arrived there, I found her companion lying on the ground, being consumed by the fire of typhoid fever. All I could do was pray; and I knelt beside that suffering native and I prayed to God, and opened up my heart to him; and I believe the channel was open; and then I placed my hands upon that good brother; and with the authority of the priesthood which I as a young boy held, I blessed him to be restored to health. The next morning the wife came again to my room and said, "If you have anywhere you desire to go, you are now free to go; my husband is up."

I remember that on another occasion I rode horseback all day long and far into the night to arrive at a native village on the seacoast of New Zealand, and when I arrived at a bay dividing the place where I had to stop and that little village, I made a fire so that the people across in the village would send a rowboat to get me, and when that boat arrived, I was taken across the bay, and I walked through that village, and in every home there were cases of typhoid fever. But I walked fearlessly, with my head erect, impelled by the priesthood of God which I held, and in each of those homes I left the blessings of heaven, and I laid my hands upon the sick. And then I had to go across the bay again and get on my horse and ride all night long to arrive at another native village where there was sickness.

Brothers and sisters, we are at our greatest, not only in the sight of God, but also in our own sight when we are upon our knees. We have heard tributes paid here to the leaders of this Church, these great men who stand before you every six months and manifest to you their great leadership, but never have they been raised to greater heights of leadership than when I have knelt with them in the temple of God and listened to each one open up his heart and appeal to God for his sustaining influence and power to enable Him to carry on as your servant in His divine ministry. How high, brothers and sisters, these men are raised when they are on their knees in a circle, claiming sanctuary from the outside world in God's holy temple.

President Richards mentioned about servicemen being missionaries. It brought to mind that statement which we have heard, that an army marches upon its stomach. I feel that the day is not far off when our armies will have to arise from their stomachs and march upon their knees. No iron curtain can ever be drawn between heaven and earth when the armies of men will march upon their knees. The great marches of this nation, the great marches of progress in the history of this country have been marches behind the leadership of men who went to their knees. Never was George Washington as great, in all of his majestic power as a soldier, as when he was upon his knees at Valley Forge. Never was the great emancipator so great as when he was driven to his knees before Gettysburg. And the greatness of this nation, my brothers and sisters, has been because men who have been elected to high office in this country have never been too proud to go to their knees and invoke the power of heaven to sustain them in their great jobs and callings of leadership.

A prayer comes to my mind, and no

Sunday, October 4

Third Day

more beautiful prayers were ever uttered than those uttered by our mothers. I recall the prayer of Hannah. You remember Hannah who wanted a child, and she went to the sanctuary to pray, but her prayer was not audible. Her lips moved, but she said nothing that could be heard, and Eli thought that she was intoxicated, and he reprimanded her, but then she convinced him that that which she was doing was not because of intoxication, but it was a prayer from her heart to God that she might bear a child. And how earnest she was in that prayer, so earnest, so sincere, that she said, "If God will give me this child, I will lend him to the Lord for this life." (See I Sam. 1:11.) How well the mothers know that life is eternal. How well she knew that in lending this child to the Lord for this life, that beyond and down through the ages of eternity, he would be her child, and she would be his mother. The Bible is full of great prayers and the stories of great prayers.

The prophets have all been close to God when they have been upon their knees; and that which they have said in all of their greatness and power as they stood upon their feet was because they first had gone to their knees, and then when they arose, God spoke through them. From Gethsemane to Calvary, Christ was a living prayer. He groaned within himself; he pleaded with his God; he had a wish that the cup might pass from him, but then he uttered those words which should attend every prayer offered up to heaven, "... not my will, but thine, be done." (Luke 22:42.) And then on Calvary, as he was hanging upon the cross, he uttered that prayer of prayers, "Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do." (Ibid., 23:34.)

We have heard the prayer of the Prophet referred to this morning. Here was a young lad who believed in a promise that if any man lacked wisdom and would ask of God, it would be given to him; and in response to that injunction he took himself out into that grove, away from the superficial structures of men, and he didn't stand looking into heaven; he bowed upon the bended knees of his body, and he offered up his prayer to God his Father to bring clearness of vision to his mind, to divest from his mind the confusion which existed there pertaining to religion. How can people doubt that God heard that prayer? Anyone who would question that God heard the prayer of that boy must believe that the Father in heaven is cruel and shuts himself away from his children when they seek him. But he did hear that prayer, and as Elder Morris has mentioned, the light burst from heaven; down through that channel of light came the Father and the Son. Young people, if you prayed for your father to come in your hour of need, would he hide from you? Of course not. Neither will our Father who is in heaven hide from us who seek him out.

God grant that we may always have the spirit of prayer in our hearts.

I love to sit among these great men, men who have a profound knowledge of the gospel of Jesus Christ. I will never have the knowledge of the principles of the gospel as profound as they have because I can't get myself past the first principles. But I know how to pray, and I tell you no man knows himself until he has broken his heart before God on his knees and pleaded for his forgiveness. How I enjoy my friends who belong to Alcoholics Anonymous, men who have descended so low in degeneracy that as one of them has said, they have to look up to see the bottom of the gutter. But then they discover that there is a power beyond that can bring them help. In their meetings they always offer this prayer, "God grant me the serenity to accept the things I cannot change, the courage to change the things I can, and the wisdom to know the difference." But each one testifies that he has opened his heart to God, and that deep down in the recesses of that heart, which has almost been blackened by lives thrown away with reckless abandon, he has found a spark of divinity, and that divine within has reached up for the divine beyond, and then there has come a regeneration of his life, and he is led back to sobriety. But he continues to pray. That he must never cease doing. And I was talking to one of them recently who was a neighbor of mine during my childhood days right over here across the block, and he said to me, "You know, if I hadn't had the fortification of the prayers of my mother when I was a boy in that home, I am sure that even now my own prayers would not be heard. But I was fortified by that mother's prayers, and down through the years as I went astray, I could never divest from my mind the image of my mother upon her knees, with her children, and asking God to bless us. Now I have turned my life back to God," and he said, "I hope to live to see the day when I can be worthy to go where my mother is."

Some people think it is a sign of weakness to get upon one's knees and pray to our heavenly Father. It's the greatest sign of strength that exists. No men are greater than when they are upon their knees in communion with God and having a sacred interview with him. God does not always answer our prayers the way we want them answered, but if the channel is open, I testify to you that he answers them the way they should be answered, and those answers are for our best good and have an eternal and everlasting value.

My brethren in whose council I sit, I know you are men of God. I think of the Master when he said to his disciples, "You have not chosen me, but I have chosen you and ordained you and set you apart." I thank you for your humility because in that humility you have been magnified. You have been called from the profession of the law; you have been called from the great field of education; you have been called from industry. You did not choose him, but he has chosen you and is sending you forth, and as you go forth to the stakes of Zion and the wards of the Church, you carry with you the power of the apostleship, the power of the priesthood of God our Father.

In humility I thank God for this association I have with you. God bless you, and bless us all, as we minister to the people, under the inspiration of God our Father, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER ADAM S. BENNION

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

PRESIDENT McKay, my brethren and sisters, and friends: This is a wonderful conference. The Spirit of the Lord is here; and your sustaining faith and fellowship add to his power. Together we witness to the world that this is God's Church.

I should be ungrateful and ungracious if I did not express appreciation for the blessings of the last six months. In a varied career, these months have been rich beyond compare with anything else in my life. The kindness of friends has kept a lump in my throat most of the time, and in the spirit of what Brother Cowley has just said, I am here today, thanks to the answer to prayer. It is an inspiring thing to be ordained to this office by the President of this Church—prophet, seer, and revelator. That day I shall never forget.

But in the complications that attached to trying to leave one job and under the pressure that attaches to this one, I was brought low, and I lay for five days unable to move. I have had pains in my life, but I think these were a little more excruciating than anything I had known. For the first time in my life, I was wholly unable to move. Now if Brother Lee will pardon this personal mention; he, with these other brethren, are men of God. He was good enough to come into my home. He could bear you witness of my helplessness, and in part, of my pain. I asked him for a blessing, which he gave in the power that is his. I am a living witness to you today, and I bear my testimony humbly and gratefully, the next morning, after a night's peaceful rest, I arose and walked. I bear you my witness that God still administers in the affairs of men, and his servants bearing the priesthood are our greatest physicians.

When I listened to that statesmanlike declaration this morning of Brother [Stephen L.] Richards, I wished that I might have the genius to draw upon the same source of inspiration, to bring to the individual member of this Church some things I have been pondering in recent weeks.

Life was never meant to be a holiday. It has its problems and its perplexities and its crises. When we are children, we turn to our parents for sustaining help. Growing into maturity, we turn to our fellow men and our leaders. All my life I have turned to one other source—a source which I want to commend to you. You have had it. I hope you will keep it always and cherish it.

The Master of mankind came to teach us how to live, and he died that we might be resurrected to live forever. I find my finest challenge, as I find my finest hope, as I turn to him to ask, "What would he have me to do?"

Tribute has been paid to our leaders, and I wouldn't flatter them, but I should like to express an appreciation. Would you come to understand what Jesus taught, what his pattern of life is, then I beg you to contemplate the life of our President. For forty years I have been associated with him and have felt of his spirit. He is the Christian ideal—a man who has the capacity to translate into daily action the sublime truths of him who is the Redeemer of mankind.

A few weeks back I had the privilege of listening to a choir, much like this choir today and of the last two days. It thrilled me so that their singing I cannot forget. You have sung their song; you recall its wonderful words:

Jesus, the very thought of thee
With sweetness fills my breast:
But sweeter far thy face to see
And in thy presence rest.

Nor voice can sing nor heart can frame,
Nor can the memory find
A sweeter sound than thy blest name,
O Savior of mankind!

Oh hope of every contrite heart,
O joy of all the meek,
To these who fall how kind thou art!
How good to those who seek!

Jesus, our only joy be thou,
As thou our prize wilt be:
Jesus, be thou our glory now
And through eternity.

—Bernard of Clairvaux

My brethren and sisters, out across the tomorrows, in the problems that confront you, I commend to you the life and the thought of Jesus Christ. In these brief minutes all that I can hope to do is to give a glimpse of one or two things in his life, a suggestion as to one or two things that he taught, and then the subsequent witness that comes to us because we are Latter-day Saints. Whatever your bringing up may have been, whatever your circumstances may now be, please remember these things: Jesus was born away from home, to be cradled in a manger. I think only the mothers here can fully appreciate what that means. He was born the Only Begotten of the Father, and if there may be those who have difficulty in reconciling their understanding that he was not born of Joseph, I beg of you to remember that he was to be the Author of the resurrection, made possible because of the divinity that was in him, born into him, and magnified throughout all his existence.

"And the child grew, and waxed strong in spirit, filled with wisdom: and the grace of God was upon him." (Luke 2:40.) I have always been impressed with his great awakening at twelve.

"And all that heard him were astonished at his understanding and answers." (Ibid., 2:47.)

And then as President McKay pointed out in reference to his great temptation. After forty days you remember he came back, and he "... returned in the power of the Spirit ..." (Ibid., 4:14) to carry forward his great ministry.

In the last six months I have read and re-read the gospels. Having been called to be a witness to him, I made my resolution that I should begin by coming a little more fully to understand him and his message. You remember that "He went about teaching and preaching and doing good." What he did—and what he preached—constitute the gospels. Out of them all, let me name ten which you may well ponder:

1. The Beatitudes, first of all, which in nine short verses present one of the most comprehensive statements ever given to the world:

Blessed are the poor in spirit: for their's is the kingdom of heaven.

Blessed are they that mourn: for they shall be comforted.

Blessed are the meek: for they shall inherit the earth.

Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness: for they shall be filled.

Blessed are the merciful: for they shall obtain mercy.

Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God.

Blessed are the peacemakers: for they shall be called the children of God.

Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake: for their's is the kingdom of heaven.

Blessed are ye, when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake.

Rejoice, and be exceeding glad: for great is your reward in heaven: for so persecuted they the prophets which were before you. (Matthew 5:3-12.)

2. The Golden Rule, than which there has never been devised a better principle for human relations or for the guidance of the individual life:

Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them: for this is the law and the prophets. (Ibid., 7:12.)

3. The Lord's Prayer, patterned for all mankind, sung beautifully yesterday, couched in sixty-six words:

Our Father which art in heaven, Hallowed be thy name.

Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven.

Give us this day our daily bread.

And forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors.

And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil: For thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, for ever. Amen. (Ibid., 6:9-13.)

4. The spirit of the Second Mile:

And whosoever shall compel thee to go a mile, go with him twain. (Ibid., 5:41.)

5. His idea of forgiveness hinted in the phrase:

Then came Peter to him, and said, Lord, how oft shall my brother sin against me, and I forgive him? till seven times?

Jesus saith unto him, I say not unto thee, Until seven times: but, Until seventy times seven. (Ibid., 18:21-22.)

6. "Judge not, that ye be not judged."

For with what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged: and with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again.

And why beholdest thou the mote that is in thy brother's eye, but considerest not the beam that is in thine own eye?

Or how wilt thou say to thy brother, Let me pull out the mote out of thine eye; and, behold, a beam is in thine own eye?

Thou hypocrite, first cast out the beam out of thine own eye; and then shalt thou see clearly to cast out the mote out of thy brother's eye. (Ibid., 7:1-5.)

The clearing up of a catastrophe in this city in the last few days should bring a solemn realization to the men and women of this state and community that they ought not carelessly to have unjustly indicted two of the finest people in the world in the heretofore unsolved tragedy that shocked our state.

Sunday, October 4

Third Day

7. "... where your treasure is, there will your heart be also." (Ibid., 6:21.)

8. "... seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you." (Ibid., 6:33.)

9. That challenging remark to all parents:

Wherefore by their fruits ye shall know them. (Ibid., 7:20.)

10. Already hinted here this morning under our limitations of mortality, but the ideal is there:

Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect. (Ibid., 5:48.)

And I have named only ten. Would you catch the spirit of them further, I suggest that you compile and reread the thirty-odd parables. And then if you want to be stirred, stirred all the way through, read with these parables, the same number of miracles, and you will come in some measure to catch the spirit of this great Soul.

It is singularly tragic that after all he did for the blessing of mankind, he should be led to Calvary. The Master of mankind suffered the cruellest death known to men. And whatever our difficulty may be, he can always stand by and say without putting it into words, "All that you suffer, I, too, have suffered, and more." That is why it is so wonderful, as one of my soldier friends wrote me, out in the wastes of Alaska, against the odds of military service, "It's so wonderful always to have someone speak over your shoulder who understands."

That were enough for any man, but as Latter-day Saints we have two other witnesses which I needn't take the time to expand. If anybody in all the world should appreciate the Master of mankind, it ought to be Latter-day Saints. Here we have in our Book of Mormon the account of his appearance to those people who had left the Old World six hundred years before he was born, with a remnant who had gone far earlier, how he appeared to them, and the glory of it all is that he appeared after he had been resurrected. You will read it one day in Third Nephi. If you want to be touched and inspired this day, I suggest before it closes, you turn to the eleventh chapter, and in fancy sit with that multitude who had gathered in the land of Bountiful, and have him appear, because he came to declare himself, and the Father attended him and they heard his voice saying,

Behold my Beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased, in whom I have glorified my name—hear ye him. (3 Nephi 11:7.)

And now it came to pass that there were a great multitude gathered together, of the people of Nephi, round about the temple which was in the land Bountiful; and they were marveling and wondering one with another, and were showing one to another the great and marvelous change which had taken place.

And they were also conversing about this Jesus Christ, of whom the sign had been given concerning his death.

And it came to pass that while they were thus conversing one with another, they heard a voice as if it came out of heaven; and they cast their eyes round about, for they understood not the voice which they heard; and it was not a harsh voice, neither was it a loud voice; nevertheless, and notwithstanding it being a small voice it did pierce them that did hear to the center, insomuch that there was no part of their frame that it did not cause to quake; yea, it did pierce them to the very soul, and did cause their hearts to burn.

And it came to pass that again they heard the voice, and they understood it not.

And again the third time they did hear the voice, and did open their ears to hear it; and their eyes were towards the sound thereof; and they did look steadfastly towards heaven, from whence the sound came.

And behold, the third time they did understand the voice which they heard; and it said unto them:

Behold my Beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased, in whom I have glorified my name—hear ye him.

And it came to pass, as they understood they cast their eyes up again towards heaven; and behold, they saw a Man descending out of heaven; and he was clothed in a white robe; and he came down and stood in the midst of them; and the eyes of the whole multitude were turned upon him, and they durst not open their mouths, even one to another, and wist not what it meant, for they thought it was an angel that had appeared unto them.

And it came to pass that he stretched forth his hand and spake unto the people, saying:

Behold, I am Jesus Christ, whom the prophets testified shall come into the world.

And behold, I am the light and the life of the world; and I have drunk out of that bitter cup which the Father hath given me, and have glorified the Father in taking upon me the sins of the world, in the which I have suffered the will of the Father in all things from the beginning.

And it came to pass that when Jesus had spoken these words the whole multitude fell to the earth; for they remembered that it had been prophesied among them that Christ should show himself unto them after his ascension into heaven.

And it came to pass that the Lord spake unto them saying:

Arise and come forth unto me, that ye may thrust your hands into my side, and also that ye may feel the prints of the nails in my hands and in my feet, that ye may know that I am the God of Israel, and the God of the whole earth, and have been slain for the sins of the world.

And it came to pass that the multitude went forth, and thrust their hands into his side, and did feel the prints of the nails in his hands and in his feet; and this they did do, going forth one by one until they had all gone forth, and did see with their eyes and did feel with their hands, and did know of a surety and did bear record, that it was he, of whom it was written by the prophets, that should come.

And when they had all gone forth and had witnessed for themselves, they did cry out with one accord, saying:

Hosanna! Blessed be the name of the Most High God! And they did fall down at the feet of Jesus, and did worship him. (Ibid., 11:1-17.)

And if you are inspired to do a little more reading this same evening, turn over to the seventeenth chapter:

Have ye any that are sick among you? Bring them hither. Have ye any that are lame, or blind, or halt, or maimed, or leprous, or that are withered, or that are deaf, or that are afflicted in any manner?

Bring them hither and I will heal them, for I have compassion upon you; my bowels are filled with mercy.

For I perceive that ye desire that I should show unto you what I have done unto your brethren at Jerusalem, for I see that your faith is sufficient that I should heal you.

And it came to pass that when he had thus spoken, all the multitude, with one accord, did go forth with their sick and their afflicted, and their lame, and with their blind, and with their dumb, and with all them that were afflicted in any manner; and he did heal them every one as they were brought forth unto him.

And they did all, both they who had been healed and they who were whole, bow down at his feet, and did worship him; and as many as could come for the multitude did kiss his feet, insomuch that they did bathe his feet with their tears.

And it came to pass that he commanded that their little children should be brought.

So they brought their little children and set them down upon the ground round about him, and Jesus stood in the midst; and the multitude gave way till they had all been brought unto him.

And it came to pass that when they had all been brought, and Jesus stood in the midst, he commanded the multitude that they should kneel down upon the ground.

And it came to pass that when they had knelt upon the ground, Jesus groaned within himself, and said: Father, I am troubled because of the wickedness of the people of the house of Israel.

And when he had said these words, he himself also knelt upon the earth; and behold he prayed unto the Father, and the things which he prayed cannot be written, and the multitude did bear record who heard him.

And after this manner do they bear record: The eye hath never seen, neither hath the ear heard, before, so great and marvelous things as we saw and heard Jesus speak unto the Father;

And no tongue can speak, neither can there be written by any man, neither can the hearts of men conceive so great and marvelous things as we both saw and heard Jesus speak; and no one can conceive of the joy which filled our souls at the time we heard him pray for us unto the Father.

And it came to pass that when Jesus had made an end of praying unto the Father, he arose; but so great was the joy of the multitude that they were overcome.

Sunday, October 4

Third Day

And it came to pass that Jesus spake unto them, and bade them arise.

And they arose from the earth, and he said unto them: Blessed are ye because of your faith. And now behold, my joy is full.

And when he had said these words, he wept, and the multitude bare record of it, and he took their little children, one by one, and blessed them, and prayed unto the Father for them.

And when he had done this he wept again;

And he spake unto the multitude, and said unto them: Behold your little ones.

And as they looked to behold they cast their eyes towards heaven, and they saw the heavens open, and they saw angels descending out of heaven as it were in the midst of fire; and they came down and encircled those little ones about, and they were encircled about with fire; and the angels did minister unto them. (Ibid., 17:7-24.)

Add to all this the manifestation of this same Jesus to the boy Prophet in our own day. Remind yourselves of that great vision:

At length I came to the conclusion that I must either remain in darkness and confusion, or else I must do as James directs, that is, ask of God. I at length came to the determination to "ask of God," concluding that if he gave wisdom to them that lacked wisdom, and would give liberally, and not upbraid, I might venture.

So, in accordance with this, my determination to ask of God, I retired to the woods to make the attempt. It was on the morning of a beautiful, clear day, early in the spring of eighteen hundred and twenty. It was the first time in my life that I had made such an attempt, for amidst all my anxieties I had never as yet made the attempt to pray vocally.

After I had retired to the place where I had previously designed to go, having looked around me, and finding myself alone, I kneeled down and began to offer up the desire of my heart to God. I had scarcely done so, when immediately I was seized upon by some power which entirely overcame me, and had such an astonishing influence over me as to bind my tongue so that I could not speak. Thick darkness gathered around me, and it seemed to me for a time as if I were doomed to sudden destruction.

But, exerting all my powers to call upon

God to deliver me out of the power of this enemy which had seized upon me, and at the very moment when I was ready to sink into despair and abandon myself to destruction—not to an imaginary ruin, but to the power of some actual being from the unseen world, who had such marvelous power as I had never before felt in any being—just at this moment of great alarm, I saw a pillar of light exactly over my head, above the brightness of the sun, which descended gradually until it fell upon me.

It no sooner appeared than I found myself delivered from the enemy which held me bound. When the light rested upon me I saw two Personages, whose brightness and glory defy all description, standing above me in the air. One of them spake unto me, calling me by name and said, pointing to the other—"This is My Beloved Son. Hear Him!" (P. of G. P., Joseph Smith 2:13-17.)

We have his record in the gospels. We have his visitation in Third Nephi. And our Church rests upon the fact that he has come to declare the everlasting gospel to us in our day and to restore it. I give you my witness that he has so restored it. I join with these brethren here, the honor of whose association I have from week to week, in that testimony. New among them, I bear you witness they are strong men; they are men of God; and you can with full heart sustain them.

I always face a group of people like you, wondering when this conference is all over what you will do. Today I suggest to you, as a sort of Christmas thought, that this time you do something about it. In the four gospels there are only eighty-nine chapters all told. With two or three of the short ones tucked in one day, if you really would catch the spirit of this conference, I suggest that you read one chapter of the gospels each day; and if you do it devotedly, you will have read again these great witnesses by Christmas time. And come Christmas this year, Santa Claus will not be able to crowd out Jesus, and the holiday will become a holy day. In the few minutes that it takes, morning or noon or night—my own program is to read at least one of these chapters each night before I close the day—you will find the key to great spiritual enrichment. Better it were if you would read the chapter together as a family, and I give you the promise that if you do it, not only will this Christmas be made glorious, but every day of your life will also catch the spirit of these sacred words.

Now in the resolution of your heart let me challenge you:

Ninety and nine are with dreams content,
But the hope of a world made new
Is the hundredth man who is grimly bent
On making that dream come true.

God put it in your heart, out of 160 million people in America, to be the hundredth man who brings himself and his family close to the Master of mankind, the guide and the inspiration of us all, into whose presence one day we hope to return, with all the loved ones whom he has redeemed. I pray his blessings upon you, in his holy name. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Elder Adam S. Bennion of the Council of the Twelve has just spoken to us.

For your information and for an intensifying of the realization of the fact of our nearness to our brethren and sisters and friends in the Northwest I will read you the following telegrams:

From Millbray, California: "The television reception on the Conference over KVO-TV is excellent in the San Francisco Bay area. We are most grateful for the availability of this great service. Paul A. Peterson, Millbray, Cal."

From San Diego: "We are viewing the Conference perfectly in San Diego over KNX-TV Channel 2. Shirl Kimball."

From Portland, Oregon: "Reception by television coming through fine. Enjoying services. God bless you. Moreland Ward Bishopric." Portland Stake.

In closing may I say just a word of appreciation of our choir and its leader. We are glad that Brother Cornwall is sufficiently restored to health to be back with us and attend to his duties as leader of the Choir. Carlyle says that appreciation, or the veneration shown to human worth, is a Godlike virtue. May I express for you this morning that virtue in expressing appreciation of the labors of the Tabernacle Choir. They have been here since 7:10 this morning. God bless them for the service they render, not only throughout the Conference, but throughout the nation.

The closing song will be sung by the Tabernacle Choir, "Jesus Name of Wondrous Love." How appropriate!

The closing prayer will be offered by Elder James Franklin Peel, President of the Oquirrh Stake, following which this Conference will stand adjourned until 2 o'clock this afternoon.

The Tabernacle Choir sang as a closing number, "Jesus, Name of Wondrous Love."

Elder James Franklin Peel, President of the Oquirrh Stake, offered the closing prayer.

Conference adjourned until 2 o'clock p.m.

THIRD DAY AFTERNOON MEETING

The concluding session of the great Conference convened in the Tabernacle Sunday afternoon, October 4, at 2:00 p.m., with President David O. McKay presiding and conducting the services.

Again great crowds assembled in the Tabernacle, the Assembly Hall to the south of the Tabernacle, and in Barratt Hall, and in addition a great number listened to the services on the Tabernacle grounds.

Sunday, October 4

Third Day

The Tabernacle Choir, under the direction of J. Spencer Cornwall, furnished the choral music for this session. Alexander Schreiner was at the organ.

President David O. McKay:

In addition to the prominent educators mentioned this morning, and other distinguished visitors, we note the presence of the president of the Weber College, and the president of the Snow College, and undoubtedly there are others whom we have not yet seen, but to whom we also extend cordial welcome, and we are pleased to have you with us.

The members of the Church are convened in the Tabernacle on Temple Square in Salt Lake City, Utah in the concluding session, the seventh session of the One Hundred Twenty-Fourth Semi-Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

For those who are unable to enter the building—and the building is crowded to capacity, even the doorways are filled—to all those who are unable to enter the Tabernacle, we announce that these services are being broadcast in the Assembly Hall and in Barratt Hall over a loud-speaking system and by television.

These services also are being televised over KSL television, Salt Lake City, and are being heard over radio through KSL over 19 radio stations in Utah, Idaho, Arizona, California, Oregon, Washington. The names of these stations have already been announced to the radio audience.

We desire to express our deep appreciation to these various radio stations for their courtesy and contribution in making available their time and facilities for these broadcasts.

In addition to those telegrams of appreciation read this morning, you will be pleased to hear these. This is from Tacoma, Washington:

"CONFERENCE TELECAST VIEWED IN CHAPELS, HOMES, TACOMA STAKE AND VICINITY APPRECIATED. Tacoma Stake Presidency, signed by Elijah Dickson."

This from Van Nuys, California: "RECEPTION WONDERFUL. A MOST INSPIRING PRIVILEGE. GOD BLESS YOU ALL. Curtis McMullin, counselor to Bishop Cottam in the Sherman Oaks Ward."

These are indicative of the satisfaction and blessing these radio and television officials have rendered to the members of the Church and others in the northwest and on the western coast.

The music for this session will be rendered by the Tabernacle Choir under the direction of Elder J. Spencer Cornwall, with Elder Alexander Schreiner at the organ.

We shall begin this service by the Choir singing "The Pilgrim's Chorus."

The opening prayer will be offered by Elder Thomas W. Muir, president of the Emigration Stake.

---

The Choir sang: "The Pilgrim's Chorus."

Elder Thomas W. Muir, President of the Emigration Stake, offered the invocation.

The Choir sang the anthem, "Surely He Hath Borne Our Griefs."

President David O. McKay:

For those of our listeners who probably have just tuned in we announce again that President J. Reuben Clark, Jr. of the First Presidency will now present the General Authorities, General Officers, and General Auxiliary Officers of the Church for the sustaining vote of the General Conference.

Those who are listening in, members of the Church, cast their votes with those assembled.

---

President J. Reuben Clark, Jr., Second Counselor in the First Presidency, presented for the vote of the people the General Authorities, General Officers, and General Auxiliary Officers of the Church, and they were unanimously sustained by those present. The list as presented and sustained is as follows:

GENERAL AUTHORITIES OF THE CHURCH

THE FIRST PRESIDENCY

David O. McKay, Prophet, Seer and Revelator, and President of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Stephen L. Richards, First Counselor in the First Presidency.

J. Reuben Clark, Jr., Second Counselor in the First Presidency.

PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL OF THE TWELVE APOSTLES

Joseph Fielding Smith

QUORUM OF THE TWELVE APOSTLES

Joseph Fielding Smith

Harold B. Lee

Spencer W. Kimball

Ezra Taft Benson

Mark E. Petersen

Matthew Cowley

Henry D. Moyle

Delbert Leon Stapley

Marion G. Romney

LeGrand Richards

Adam S. Bennion

Richard L. Evans

PATRIARCH TO THE CHURCH

Eldred G. Smith

The counselors in The First Presidency, the Twelve Apostles and the Patriarch to the Church as Prophets, Seers and Revelators.

ASSISTANTS TO THE TWELVE

Thomas E. McKay

Clifford E. Young

Alma Sonne

George Q. Morris

ElRay L. Christiansen

John Longden

Hugh B. Brown

TRUSTEE-IN-TRUST

David O. McKay

As Trustee-in-Trust for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

THE FIRST COUNCIL OF THE SEVENTY

Levi Edgar Young

Antoine R. Ivins

Seymour Dilworth Young

Oscar A. Kirkham

Milton R. Hunter

Bruce R. McConkie

Marion Duff Hanks

PRESIDING BISHOPRIC

Joseph L. Wirthlin, Presiding Bishop

Thorpe B. Isaacson, First Counselor

Carl W. Buehner, Second Counselor

CHURCH HISTORIAN AND RECORDER

Joseph Fielding Smith, with A. William Lund as Assistant

GENERAL CONFERENCE

Third Day

CHURCH BOARD OF EDUCATION

David O. McKay
 Stephen L. Richards
 J. Reuben Clark, Jr.
 Joseph Fielding Smith
 Harold B. Lee
 Spencer W. Kimball
 Ezra Taft Benson
 Mark E. Petersen

Matthew Cowley
 Henry D. Moyle
 Delbert Leon Stapley
 Marion G. Romney
 LeGrand Richards
 Adam S. Bennion
 Richard L. Evans

ADMINISTRATOR, BOARD OF EDUCATION

Ernest L. Wilkinson

AUDITING COMMITTEE

Orval W. Adams
 George S. Spencer
 Harold H. Bennett

TABERNACLE CHOIR

Lester F. Hewlett, President
 J. Spencer Cornwall, Conductor
 Richard P. Condie, Assistant Conductor

ORGANISTS

Alexander Schreiner      Frank W. Asper
 Roy M. Darley, Assistant

CHURCH WELFARE COMMITTEE

ADVISERS

Harold B. Lee
 Henry D. Moyle
 Matthew Cowley
 Delbert L. Stapley
 Marion G. Romney
 LeGrand Richards
 Thomas E. McKay
 Clifford E. Young

Alma Sonne
 El Ray L. Christiansen
 John Longden
 Antoine R. Ivins
 Oscar A. Kirkham
 Joseph L. Wirthlin
 Thorpe B. Issacson
 Carl W. Buehner

General Presidency of Relief Society

GENERAL COMMITTEE

Henry D. Moyle, Chairman
 Harold B. Lee, Managing Director
 Marion G. Romney, Assistant Managing Director

Paul C. Child
 T. C. Stayner
 Mark B. Garff
 Leonard E. Adams
 J. Leonard Love

W. T. Lawrence
 Lorenzo H. Hatch
 Walter Dansie
 LeRoy A. Wirthlin
 Walter Stover

GENERAL AUXILIARY OFFICERS OF THE CHURCH

RELIEF SOCIETY

Belle Smith Spafford, President
 Marianne Clark Sharp, First Counselor
 Velma Nebeker Simonsen, Second Counselor
 with all members of the Board as at present constituted

DESERET SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION

George R. Hill, General Superintendent
 David Lawrence McKay, First Assistant Superintendent
 Lynn S. Richards, Second Assistant Superintendent
 with all members of the Board as at present constituted

YOUNG MEN'S MUTUAL IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION

Elbert R. Curtis, General Superintendent
 A. Walter Stevenson, First Assistant Superintendent
 David S. King, Second Assistant Superintendent
 with all members of the Board as at present constituted

YOUNG WOMEN'S MUTUAL IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION

Bertha S. Reeder, President
 Emily H. Bennett, First Counselor
 LaRue C. Longden, Second Counselor
 with all members of the Board as at present constituted

PRIMARY ASSOCIATION

LaVern W. Parmley, President
 Arta M. Hale, First Counselor
 Leone W. Doxey, Second Counselor
 with all members of the Board as at present constituted

President J. Reuben Clark, Jr.:

President McKay, so far as I am able to judge, all votes were cast in the affirmative, and no negative votes were cast.

President David O. McKay:

We have just heard President J. Reuben Clark, Jr. of the First Presidency present the General Authorities, General Officers, and General Auxiliary Officers of the Church. We thank you brethren and sisters for your unanimous vote in the affirmative.

Brother Evans, will you please come forward and take your place.

Brother Hanks, will you please take your place with the First Council of Seventy.

Brother Hugh B. Brown is in Edmonton, Alberta, Canada. We were in touch with him last evening by telephone. He expressed surprise, but when we asked his attitude, he said, "I have but one attitude. When the Church calls, my answer is yes."

We asked whether he could fly from Edmonton to Salt Lake to be here in time for this session, but he could not get here before four o'clock, so we suggested that he remain and begin to put his affairs in order, and report at the first possible convenience.

I told him we would express to

Sunday, October 4

Third Day

the audience his willingness and the excellent spirit that he manifested.

Our first speaker this afternoon will be Elder Ezra Taft Benson of the Council of the Twelve. He will be followed by Elder Bruce R. McConkie.

ELDER EZRA TAFT BENSON

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

HUMBLY and imploringly, my brethren and sisters and friends, I approach this very difficult, but challenging task. I trust that I may have an interest in your faith and prayers and be favored with the sweet influence of the Holy Spirit.

I rejoice in what we have just witnessed, in the call of these three noble men to fill vacancies in the councils of the Church. This is but typical, my brothers and sisters, of what is going on throughout the Church in the wards, stakes, and missions, weekly—the calling of men and women to positions of responsibility. Always the response is the same. To me it is a modern miracle not duplicated anywhere upon the earth. I am happy to welcome these brethren. I know them all. I love them.

I have loved Brother Richard L. Evans since I first became acquainted with him years ago. He is loved by the entire Church. He is loved by this nation, because for years he has had a national audience. His influence has reached beyond the borders of America. And I would like to say this to him: Brother Evans, you now enter upon the sweetest association known to men in this world, the association which you will have with your brethren of the First Presidency and the Council of the Twelve. There is nothing in this world in the associations of men so sweet and so satisfying. I know that more deeply today than ever before, particularly since I have been away since last December, and yet at times, though I have been miles away, I have felt even nearer through their faith and prayers—the faith and prayers of my brethren.

I love Brother Brown. I have known him for many years. I was closely associated with him in Europe right after the war, and he is loved by the people of the British Isles, the Saints of Europe, and the servicemen all over the Church, to whom he rendered such great service during the last war. I had the privilege of serving as a counselor to his older brother, Scott B. Brown, in the Boise Stake, who now serves as a patriarch there. Hugh B. Brown comes from one of the great families of the Church.

I have not known Brother Marion Hanks intimately, but I have watched him with great interest and considered him one of the most promising young men in the Church.

With all my heart I extend the hand of fellowship to these, my brethren, and I am sure, as I do so, I am but echoing the feeling of all the other brethren in the councils of the Church, as well as the entire Church membership.

Brethren and sisters, this has been a glorious conference. I have received a great spiritual uplift. No, we have not heard anything particularly new. I recall some years ago a young fellow, a Mormon boy, returned from sacrament meeting, and as he met his father, who had been out on a high council assignment, his dad said to him, "Well, son, how did you enjoy the sacrament meeting?" He replied, "Well, Dad, it was a good meeting. However, it was pretty much the echoing of re-echoing echoes, but still it was a grand meeting."

We have heard discussed some of the old virtues. We have heard admonitions pertaining to eternal principles. They have been presented in a little different setting, with different emphasis, but in the main there has been very little new, but, oh, how we need the admonitions which have been presented.

I would to God that every man, woman, and child in this nation and throughout the world might have been listening to the counsel that has been given.

Now, as we leave the conference and go our various ways, how are we going to implement the instructions that have been given, what are we going to do to see to it that this counsel does not fall unheeded? As I think of the most effective way of implementing this counsel, I turn, my brethren and sisters, naturally, to our most basic institution, the American home, because, after all, it is still our greatest and most primary educational institution. It is, in very deed, the center of our economic, social, and cultural interest. The home is the bulwark of the nation and our most fundamental and basic institution.

Unless as parents, we can go back into the homes of the Church and carry these instructions with a determination to put them into effect at our own firesides with our own children, this conference will not have been fully effective.

Marriage, the home, and family are sacred institutions. They are not man-made. Thank God for that. They are divine. The first marriage performed was the marriage of two immortal beings. Following the consummation of that marriage, the Lord gave important scriptures and instruction to us regarding the home and the family.

The Lord made it clear it is not good for man to be alone. Woman was created as a helpmeet for man, and the two united in the sacred bonds of eternal marriage become one flesh.

"What therefore God hath joined together," said he, "let not man put asunder." (Mark 10:9.) Then later, "Thou shalt love thy wife with all thy heart, and shalt cleave unto her and none else." (D. & C. 42:22.) How we need that counsel today in America! What heartaches could be avoided if men would only heed that counsel wholeheartedly. How much less unfaithfulness and infidelity there would be if we could live by that admonition.

Then as though to strengthen further the marriage bond in the home, the Lord gave instructions to children through his prophets. The Apostle Paul, echoing the admonition of Moses on Sinai, said, Children, obey your parents in the Lord: for this is right.

Honour thy father and mother; which is the first commandment with promise;

That it may be well with thee, and thou mayest live long on the earth. (Eph. 6:1-3.)

And then in modern revelation, the Lord has made it very clear that parents have great and serious responsibilities. Listen to these words as the Lord speaks to the parents of the Church:

And they shall also teach their children to pray, and to walk uprightly before the Lord. (D. & C. 68:28.)

And again, inasmuch as parents . . . teach them not to understand the doctrine of repentance, faith in Christ the Son of the living God, and of baptism and the gift of the Holy Ghost by the laying on of the hands, when eight years old, the sin be upon the heads of the parents. (Ibid., 68:25.)

That is a serious responsibility, and I believe, my brethren and sisters, the early history of this Church clearly indicates that our grandparents, the pioneers of these valleys, in fact, the Pilgrims, who came and settled this great American continent, honored these obligations and were blessed in their homes for so doing.

I realize that many changes have come about in the last fifty to seventy-five years. Our industrialization, specialization, concentration of populations in great cities, the great reduction in the number of people living on farms, the change in our agriculture—all these have had their effects. Greater emphasis upon material things and the seeking after money, after pleasure, personal gratification, and the insidious inroads of liquor, tobacco, and gambling—all these have had a pulling-away influence on this most sacred institution, the American home.

It is difficult to realize that fifty years ago there was only one divorce in six-

Sunday, October 4

Third Day

teen marriages here in America. By 1946 the ratio had increased to one in three, and it is reported in some cities in America, there are actually more divorces each year than marriages. Our best authorities indicate that most of the delinquency in America is the result of broken, bad, and neglected homes. As J. Edgar Hoover, one of the best authorities has indicated, referring to delinquents, "The actions of the majority of them were, and are, directly related to the conduct of their parents." Yes, crime begins at home.

Now, my brethren and sisters, as Latter-day Saints, what should be done? What can be done? I am sure we all agree that no nation ever rises above its homes. This Church will never rise above its homes. We are no better as a people than are our firesides, our homes. The school, the church, and even the nation, I feel confident, stand helpless before weakened and degraded homes. The good home is the rock foundation, the cornerstone of civilization. It must be preserved. It must be strengthened.

There has never been and there never will be a satisfactory substitute for the home established by the God of heaven. If this nation is to endure, then the home must be safeguarded, strengthened, and restored to its rightful importance.

May I suggest, in the few moments remaining, five simple things that, I believe, we might well give attention to, as some of the needs of our homes today:

First of all, I am convinced, my brethren and sisters—and this is no reflection on our devoted mothers, who spend day after day, week after week, obediently serving their families—but I feel sure that one of our greatest needs is more time of parents in the home. Youth of the Church and of the nation need more than physical comforts. We will need to leave them more than lands and stocks. They need more than a modern automobile and a lovely modern building to live in. There is no satisfactory substitute for mother, and no one can take care of her children as she can. No so-called social obligations, social enticements, or outside interests should impel any mother to neglect the sacred charge which is hers of caring for her own flesh and blood. Her first loyalty in the eyes of God is to her Church and her family. I feel confident that while civic and social activities may return much good, she will serve her community and her nation best, if she first devotes herself to the needs of her own children.

Second, and this was emphasized this morning by Brother Cowley, we need daily devotion in the home. We need to return to the practice of family prayer, secret prayer, the old-fashioned practice of devotion in the home daily, night and morning, the singing of hymns, the reading of the scriptures. How much more happiness there would be, how many fewer divorces there would be, if these simple practices were followed as was the custom in the pioneer home, as well as in the early days of this country, according to the diaries of our early founders.

Third, I think one of the great needs is more parental instruction in life's problems. I know there is a tendency for parents to shrink from this responsibility, the instructing of their own children in the problems of sex, the relationship with other young people, the problem of dating, and all of the many temptations that confront a growing boy and girl. These instructions should not be left to the school or to a class in sociology. The safest place, the best place, to give this vital counsel, these sacred instructions, in matters of moral purity should be in the home on a basis of confidence between parent and child. As parents, we should instruct our children. The sacred books of the ancient Persians say: "If you would be holy, instruct your children, because all the good acts they perform will be imputed unto you."

Fourth, I believe there is a great need, my brethren and sisters, for family recreation and cultural activities together. We should do things together as a family. It may mean a reduction in participation in women's clubs, in men's clubs, but if families could only seek their recreation and cultural activities more as a family unit, I am sure that untold benefits and blessings would accrue. A little boy was asked only this last summer, after he said he was going to a summer camp, "What is a summer camp?" And he answered, "Those places where little boys go for mother's vacation." Let us take more of our vacations together as families. Can we have a weekly evening at home, as has been admonished and counseled for years by the First Presidency of the Church? More wholesome activities together is a great need of the families of America.

And fifth, we need a closer parent-child relationship. This is closely related to the other four matters. One of the greatest needs of our young people is a closer, more frequent companionship with father and mother. There is no satisfactory substitute. I was thrilled some time ago, as I picked up a paper in the East and read an account of a letter which a rich industrialist had sent to his son, his sixteen-year-old boy, as a Christmas present. This man could have given his son anything that money could buy—an automobile, a yacht, I guess, if he wished. But when the boy came down from his room Christmas morning and went over to the mantel where he usually found his present, there was an envelope, a plain envelope with his name on it, and he opened it and read:

"To my dear son:

"I give to you one hour each weekday and two hours of my Sundays to be yours to be used as you want it without interference of any kind whatsoever.

"Lovingly,
"Dad."

As I read that, I thought, what a wise father, and what a fortunate son! Yes, that is what they need.

God bless us, my brethren and sisters, that we may give personal attention now to these vital matters:

More time of parents in the home

Daily family devotion in the home

Parental instruction in life's problems

Family recreation and cultural activities together

A closer parent-child relationship

May we be faithful to this great obligation of parenthood, this sacred obligation, that we may build our homes solidly upon eternal principles, that we may have no regrets. May we never be recreant to the great trust which has been imposed in us. May we always keep in mind that these spirits that have entered our homes are choice spirits. Many of them have been born under the covenant. As we look into their faces and contemplate their needs, we might well consider that some of them were probably choicer spirits up there than we were. It is a grave responsibility. May we not shirk it.

God bless us in our homes and in all our worthy endeavors. May we carry with us from this conference the instructions given and put them into practice in our homes I humbly pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER BRUCE R. McCONKIE

Of the First Council of the Seventy

IT HAS been my privilege, for seven years now, to serve on the First Council of the Seventy with Elder Richard L. Evans, and I think I can certify to you from personal knowledge, born of that association, that Brother Richard is a man of great ability and devotion to the cause of Christ. He supports and sustains the brethren and the programs of the Church, and, I am persuaded, has a great mission to perform in his new and high calling.

I think, perhaps, there is scarcely a name in the Church more widely known

Sunday, October 4

Third Day

and heralded than his; and in the field of his especial talent and assignment, that of radio, he approaches as near the indispensable man as any man could. For myself, and I am sure, speaking also for the other members of the Council, we are pleased with the selection that has been made and give him, as we do all the brethren who sit on this stand, our united support and love and affection.

Brother Hugh B. Brown and Brother Marion D. Hanks, as yet, I do not know well, but with the rest of these brethren, and with all of you, I extend a welcome hand of fellowship.

I have had it in my heart for some-time, if the Spirit would give me utterance and direction, to say a few words in this great conference about that faith which leads to life and salvation and without which no man can be saved in the kingdom of God.

Briefly, speaking in outline form only, I would like to suggest:

First, what faith is.

Second, how faith may be gained.

And third, the test whereby it may be known whether we have gained faith in sufficient measure to justify a hope of life and salvation.

The Prophet Joseph Smith taught, as may be found recorded in the Lectures on Faith—which lectures I commend to all men—that faith is the first principle in revealed religion, that it is the foundation of all righteousness, that it is a principle of power. He taught that faith is the assurance which men have of the existence of things which they have not seen, that it is the moving cause of all action in intelligent beings, and that it is the first great governing principle which has power, dominion, and authority over all things.

He gave this formula whereby men may exercise faith in God unto life and salvation:

First, we must believe in God, and that means in the true and living God, the Being who actually exists and is our Father in heaven, in whose image we are created, and who by his grace and because of his desire to see his children gain salvation, appeared in our day, with his beloved Son, to usher in this great work.

It is not sufficient to believe in a god of wood or stone, one that has been created by men, or to believe in the god described in the creeds that have been created by men. We have to get to the truth if we are to have faith.

Faith is founded on truth. It was Alma who said that, "... if ye have faith ye hope for things which are not seen, which are true," (Alma 32:21) and so, without truth, there can be no faith.

The second requisite in gaining faith is to have a correct idea of the character, perfections, and attributes of God. The Prophet summarizes the character of God in these words, and I think every member of the Church ought to memorize them:

First, that he was God before the world was created and the same God that he was after it was created.

Second, that he is merciful and gracious, slow to anger, abundant in goodness, and that he was so from everlasting and will be so to everlasting.

Third, that he changes not, neither is there variableness with him, and that his course is one eternal round.

Fourth, that he is a God of truth and cannot lie.

Fifth, that he is no respecter of persons;

And sixth, that he is love.

Then the Prophet gives the attributes of God, also six in number, as follows: knowledge, faith or power, justice, judgment, mercy, and truth. The perfections of God are given as the perfections which attach to the attributes of his nature.

Then the third requisite for gaining faith unto life and salvation is so to live that we have the actual knowledge that the course of life we are pursuing is in harmony with the divine will.

I suppose there are many people in the Church who have a measurable knowledge of the attributes of God. I think there are even more who have a correct idea of his character and of his perfections. And I am sure that nearly all, perhaps all in the Church, believe in him as the personal Being who actually lives. But the place where we fall down in acquiring faith, faith unto life and salvation, is in that we do not order our lives in such a way that we have the assurance that our conduct is in harmony with the divine will.

Faith comes by righteousness, and without righteousness and obedience we cannot have the measure of faith that will save us.

Now the test whereby it may be known whether we do have faith is very simple. It is the eternal truth proclaimed by the Lord when he said: "And these signs shall follow them that believe." (Mark 16:17.) If we have faith, there will be signs. If there are no signs, there is no faith. Where there is faith, there will be the gifts of the Spirit; there will be the ministering of angels and the working of miracles. Where there is faith, there will be apostles and prophets; there will be the authority of the priesthood; there will be the knowledge of God and the organization of the kingdom of God on earth.

Now, I suggest to you that faith is the great foundation upon which we must build: faith in God, faith in Christ, faith in the restored truth and in the living oracles who direct the kingdom under the Lord in our day.

By faith all things can be done. There is nothing too hard for the Lord, and if we have faith, we can do whatever is requisite, according to his mind and will. By faith the worlds were made; by faith the elements can be controlled, rivers turned out of their courses, mountains removed. By faith we can have angels minister to us, see our sick healed, and the dead raised; and what is more important than all this, by faith we can live so as to become the sons of God and be joint heirs with Jesus Christ, entitled to receive and inherit and possess, as he has done before, the fulness of the kingdom of the Father.

In the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Elder Bruce R. McConkie, of the First Council of Seventy, has just concluded speaking. The Choir and Congregation will now sing, "Redeemer of Israel," conducted by J. Spencer Cornwall, following which we will hear Elder Elray L. Christiansen, Assistant to the Twelve.

The Choir and congregation joined in singing the hymn, "Redeemer of Israel."

ELDER ELRAY L. CHRISTIANSEN

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles

I REMEMBER that we used to come in from the mission field, and somehow we gave a ten minute talk each time the conference convened, and for three times in succession, somehow, I was in this position—the very last speaker before the summary remarks of President Grant. On one occasion I felt to say this: that I had never had a headache to speak of, I had never had a pain, I had never been to the hospital, but I knew what it meant to suffer. I have experienced that, to a degree, during the past three days.

I think in all my experience in temple work, where four thousand couples knelt before the altar at which I officiated, the most thrilling thing was to have the parents, the brothers and sisters, and the in-laws, in addition to the friends assembled in the temple on the day of the marriage of their loved ones who had achieved so much in the early years of their lives and had prepared and

Sunday, October 4

Third Day

qualified themselves to come into the house of the Lord, and there receive their great and eternal blessings. It seems to me that if we intend to be together as families and associate as such in the life to come, that it is necessary for us to get a little experience in being together while here on earth. I was glad to hear Brother Benson speak of family recreational activities, but I think that the most fitting place for families to gather is in the temples of our Lord. If they will do so, often enough, it will help to keep them in line of duty and in a spiritual frame of mind and attitude which is conducive to successful living.

It was always pleasing, I say, to have the parents come to the temple with their children. And now, as I have visited stakes and missions, I have been greatly satisfied in my heart and made to rejoice because many of these same young couples have come to me and with happiness written on their faces, saying: "Do you remember us? We were married in the temple. These are our children. Aren't they wonderful?" Such an experience has been mine in every stake where I have yet gone as well as in every mission that I have visited. To have those young people, after having gone to the temple, living now as they should and active in the Church, even though they may be attending some university far away from home, come and make a sort of report that they are doing well, that they are active and that they are living the gospel and doing all the things they were asked to do in the temple, has been satisfying, indeed, to me.

The picture of these young couples expressing their joy and happiness in their associations and in their anticipation of eternal joy can be contrasted with one case that came to my attention. A young woman of our Church wrote me a letter asking for advice. She said, "I was born in the Church, but I fell in love with a fine young man who did not belong to our Church. We decided finally that we would marry. As we talked it over, we decided that even though our religious beliefs were entirely different, neither of us would impose our beliefs or practices upon the other, that we would leave each other free to worship and to believe as each saw fit." She said, "This went along all right until our baby came. When I wanted to have it blessed in our Church, or branch (she was in a far-away city at the time), my husband objected, and he had the support of his mother and others who insisted that our child be christened in their church. My heart is broken." She ended her letter with this question, "What would you suggest?"

Well, I was dumbfounded to know what to suggest at that point in her experience, my brothers and sisters. I thought, surely somewhere along the line some of us had failed to suggest and to advise and to counsel this young woman long before she got into this situation. She, like others in like circumstances, had thought that everything could be "worked out later."

What I shall say today is said with a hope that others may avoid getting into such a difficult situation in this very important event in their lives—that of choosing a companion in marriage. How will this young woman now obtain the blessings that are promised to the faithful children of God? How will she obtain her eternal blessings? How will she be assured the association of her husband and of her children and of others that are dear and close to her?

Parents, bishoprics, and all agencies in the Church, and officers and teachers in the various classrooms are responsible to see that boys and girls do not get so far away from us that they marry out of the Church. Even though there are fine, wholesome, wonderful people outside the Church, nevertheless, when we engage in marriage with them our divine destiny is imperiled!

To preserve the family relationship here and hereafter is one of the great and important purposes of life and of the gospel. That such relationships and associations hereafter should be possible, is consistent with reason. All righteous parents, all righteous people have a natural, inborn desire to associate forever with those whom they love, but it is consistent also, my brothers and sisters, to believe that we must conform to the laws of God which make such associations possible! This is clearly stated in the revelations that have come to us in this day. I read from the 131st Section of the Doctrine and Covenants:

In the celestial glory there are three heavens or degrees;

And in order to obtain the highest, a man must enter into this order of the priesthood [meaning the new and everlasting covenant of marriage];

And that is what we are speaking of:

And if he does not, he cannot obtain it. He may enter into the other, but that is the end of his kingdom; he cannot have an increase. (D. & C. 131:1-4.)

Death does not separate husbands and wives who are united by the power of our Father in heaven in his holy temples. It does not take the children from the parents because these children are born under the covenant and the parents have a right and a claim on them in the life hereafter.

President Brigham Young made this very clear when he said:

"When a man and a woman have received their endowments and sealings, and then had children born unto them afterwards, those children are legal heirs to the kingdom, and to all its blessings and promises, and they are the only ones that are on this earth." (Discourses of Brigham Young, p. 195.) Yet, I have heard persons say to me, surely, a just God would not want marriage to terminate with this life, and I have agreed with them. The Lord does not want that to be. That is why he has instituted this principle of eternal marriage and has given to man here upon the earth the power, the authority, and the keys to seal upon the earth and have it sealed and ratified in the heavens. (See D. & C. 132:3-8.)

Yes, he is a God of order, not of confusion. He has said that all who would have a blessing at his hands must obey the law upon which that blessing is predicated, and so all of us who would have the association, one with the other hereafter, must receive it through the obedience to the law which makes it possible.

My, what disappointment, what regret, what remorse will be felt by those of us who should, because of neglect or indifference, fail or refuse to enter into the marriage covenant according to the way God has designed it! To refuse to enter into such a covenant would end with this life, the associations as husband and wife.

If, after we have received our endowments in the temple and have entered into the covenant of marriage, we refuse to do what the Lord has prescribed that we do, live according to his laws and "abide in my covenant," as he says, if we fail to do that, then we are in danger of losing the blessings which are promised and which can be realized only upon our faithfulness.

Now, in contrast to the remorse that will come to those who see their mistakes too late, what joy and what happiness await those who come forth in the "resurrection of the just" to find their companions by their side, their children, and their grandchildren perhaps, all of them having qualified while on earth for the greatest of all the gifts of God—eternal life and exaltation in the kingdom of God.

When we think that this greatest of all gifts, this power to have eternal happiness and joy and association with those we love most, is possible for all of us, how foolish, how frail, and how unwise we are if we pass by the opportunity to make these ties binding in the next life.

By example and by precept, parents should show the importance of the temple and of temple work. I have always felt that it is well for children to observe their parents hustling about getting ready to go to the temple, to do work for the dead; to see them preparing their temple clothing; to note that emphasis is given to genealogical research and temple work. I think that is all conducive to good. Children then will inquire of their parents why this is so important and the parents then have the opportunity to explain these grand and glorious principles in terms that are understandable to their children. With such help children will have a desire to go themselves to the temple.

Sunday, October 4

Third Day

Now, the Doctrine and Covenants is replete with the word of the Lord, saying that the obligations and covenants that we enter into for this life that are not sanctioned and entered into by the laws of God, end with this life. But it is equally plain when it states that those who do enter into covenants of marriage and sealings in the temples of the Lord shall pass by the angels and the gods and the sentinels and go on to their exaltations and have glory in all things, as hath been sealed upon their heads, which glory shall be a fulness and a continuation of their seeds forever, and that such a marriage will be in full force when they are out of this world.

Oh, how I wish we could teach that to the people of the world, and especially to our own people, so they may not lose the glorious blessing and associations promised to the faithful children of God.

God bless us, my brothers and sisters, that as parents we may teach our children early in life to walk uprightly before the Lord and help them to understand these principles before it is too late.

I pray that we may do this, in wisdom and in love, and in kindness, and prepare them and point them toward the temple and temple marriage as soon as they are able to understand what we say. I testify that this work is true, that the power to seal is upon the earth, and that these men who sit before us here have the keys and the authority to act in the name of God and seal upon the earth and have it ratified in the heavens. Thus I testify because I know it is so. I do it humbly, and in the name of Jesus Christ, the Lord. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

We have just heard Elder ElRay L. Christiansen, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve. Elder Evans, whom you know and have known because of his work on the radio and his service in the stakes, and whom the entire nation knows,—Richard L. Evans,—will now speak to us, and he will be followed by Elder Marion D. Hanks of the First Council of the Seventy.

ELDER RICHARD L. EVANS

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

I PRAY that I may be given utterance in that which I should briefly say.

I have frequented these beloved walls for a period now approaching a quarter century in many situations and assignments. But this is the most difficult thing that I have here had to do. It seems that this chapter was not in the script which I had written for myself.

In the brief, but in some respects too long a time since first I became aware of this possibility, I have measured the full measure of my life many times over. There are those here who know much better than I the weight of this work. There is none here who knows better than I my own limitations, inadequacies, and imperfections, and the feeling of smallness which I have. But if you and my Father in heaven will accept me as I am, with your help and his, I shall earnestly endeavor to be better than I am or have ever been.

I should not want to pass without thanking God for a noble father whom I never knew; for a blessed mother who, in her widowhood, reared nine of us, and faced her problems on her knees in prayer and on her feet gloriously in courageous action; for brothers and sisters, who with their children, I have had no cause but to be proud of in their faith and their awareness of their responsibilities in life.

I thank him for the choice and lovely girl who has been by my side for twenty years and for the four sons that are ours. I pray for them, for their generation, and for youth everywhere, for their guidance in the ways of truth and righteousness. I pray for their generation, that they may know of the promise of the future, that despite all uncertainties there are glorious certainties that transcend them all, as President McKay noted in his opening address.

I would say to their generation: be prayerful, keep the faith, avoid cynicism, be not shaken by the waves of controversy and confusion which sweep over and are quickly spent, while the truth remains forever.

This is a gospel not of despondency and discouragement, not of ensnaring technicalities, not of quick condemnation, but as President Clark suggested so beautifully in his utterance last evening, it is a gospel of hope, of happiness and of helpfulness, of peace and of promise.

There is no act of man, nor any combination of men, despite what passing troubles they may bring upon this earth, who can thwart the purposes of our Father in heaven, nor stay him in his plans to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of his children, and I thank God for it.

As to these, my brethren, they know of my affection for them—President McKay, President Richards, President Clark, President Smith, President Young of the First Council of the Seventy, Bishop Wirthlin, all others here, each of whom I could name with some point of affection and distinction. No one could be to any man more considerate or gracious or kindly than they have been to me.

I shall miss some of the intimate associations with my beloved brethren of the First Council with whom I have sat for fifteen years. God bless them.

I wish I had had some greater part, or some part at all, in the making of this choice young man who has been sustained by you to sit with the First Council of the Seventy, Brother Marion D. Hanks. He is a man of courage and of faith, and I love him; and you who do not know him will learn to love him. Likewise Brother Hugh B. Brown, with his great gifts of utterance, will give sincere service to the Church.

May I leave with you the witness of my very soul that God lives; that Jesus the Christ is the Only Begotten of the Father in the flesh, our Savior and Redeemer; that the Father and the Son did appear in this dispensation to the Prophet Joseph Smith, and that he and all in line of succession, including our present President McKay, have held the keys and the powers of the priesthood, and do unto this day.

President McKay, I pledge my love and loyalty, and all that is good or useful in me, with gratitude to you for many kindnesses and considerations and for your confidence.

I beg of you, my brethren and sisters, your confidence and help.

May God bless each and all of us in the things we need most, in understanding and peace and joy in living, and in the realization of our highest possibilities here and hereafter, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Elder Richard L. Evans, whom you have this day sustained as a member of the Council of the Twelve, has just spoken to us. We shall now hear Elder Marion D. Hanks, whom you have sustained to fill the vacancy in the First Council of the Seventy made by the calling of Elder Evans to the Twelve.

ELDER MARION D. HANKS

Of the First Council of the Seventy

I AM humbled and honored beyond my capacity to express by this calling and assignment. In the past five years, during which I have followed after the footsteps of Brother Evans on Temple Square, I have had a great many occasions, hundreds of them, to stand behind this pulpit and to welcome to our city, into this great building, thousands of guests who have come here to learn of us and to hear our story. I have always done so humbly, but I assure you that I have never felt in doing it as humble as I do today.

In the few brief moments that I shall stand here, I should like to pay tribute to a principle as I pay my respects to a few people to whom it is in my heart today to give thanks. The principle I should like to suggest is one so basic and so simple that each of you knows it, and yet so important that scarcely anything we might say would supersede it, and that is that the gospel of Jesus Christ is a personal thing, a very personal thing.

We talk in multiples, and we think in numbers, and we teach classes with many people in them. We direct guide tours where there are large numbers. But always there is the simple truth which we must understand: that the gospel of Jesus Christ is God's plan to get us home individually; and while we may teach classes, and while we may hold cottage meetings for groups, people come to faith and convictions individually. They enter the waters of baptism individually; individually they receive the blessing of the imposition of hands by those who have that authority; and when they seek to get acquainted with their Father in heaven, and to go to the place he would like them to be, they do it individually.

President McKay is honored by this congregation and his people beyond my efforts to add or augment, but I should like to say of him this one thing: Within the last two weeks, a call came from his office inviting us to meet a Protestant clergyman who was visiting in our city. As he directed, we walked up the street and met President McKay about halfway. He brought with him this good man of another faith who had come here to visit us and to learn a little about us.

President McKay brought him personally, having spent a good deal of time with him, and turned him over to us, and we brought him here to this building and spent some more time telling him our story, but the thing he wanted to talk about most was how a great man so busy, so very busy, had taken time to give him the personal attention he had received from President McKay. When I received a note of thanks from this clergyman last week, saying about the same thing, I said to myself, "How unwilling have you been to take as much time as you have needed, or been offered opportunity to take, to bless many, while President McKay, with all he has to do would take and has taken the time."

I should like to pay a moment of tribute also in reference to the general theme of these few remarks, to the people who serve on these grounds and with whom it has been my privilege to spend much of my time for five years, particularly to Brother Evans who has no need of my further tribute in your minds, I know. I should like to have it known here that I have as much love for him as my heart has capacity to offer. The greatest thing that has come into my life in my mature years has been the privilege of enjoying his confidence and spending time in his company.

I should like to pay tribute to the people who do the work on Temple Square, who greet, and in an individual manner teach and love and take to their homes many who come here. I should like to pay tribute for a moment also, in the same vein, to the youth of this Church with whom I have spent the major portion of my short life, and I should like to say that I have all the faith and confidence in them which it is in my power to possess.

I have had the privilege of teaching them for a number of years now at high school and institute level. I wonder if you know how faithful they are. Do you know, for instance, that in this very city for a number of years large groups of these young people have been coming at seven o'clock in the morning to learn the story of the Book of Mormon and to read that great book together in seminary gatherings? This activity has spread to California where thousands of fine young people are meeting the same test.

I have spent some time in the service. I have spent a good deal of time in the missionary field, and wherever I have gone, I have felt it in my heart—although there are some who are not what they ought to be, I know that—that there never has existed on the earth, a more righteous and excellent and loyal group of young people than these who are ours to teach and to take care of, and I honor them. When they come up to me and tell me occasionally, as they have done this morning on these grounds, that they appreciate what little I have been able to do in their lives, I rejoice, and my heart fills.

I would like to take just a moment to pay tribute to those who teach the youth of the Church in their religious education classes. While they are not always understood and while they are criticized to some extent, their job is difficult, and I want to express my own faith in them, and my conviction that there is no body of men more faithful, more loyal, and more able to support these brethren whose job it is to lead this Church. I am proud to have been numbered among them.

Finally, may I pay tribute, as I feel I must on this occasion—and I perhaps will not have it or take it here otherwise, to my own family; to my father, whom I did not know—he passed away when I was a baby; to my angel mother who reared six of us under conditions very much like those Brother Evans' mother endured and braved; to my brothers and sisters, each of whom I love, and who have given service to this Church; to my beautiful wife who has stood at my side during many hours of activity in the Church; and to my lovely children.

I should like, too, as I leave this pulpit, to say to you that I do not come to this position faultless. I have been at times a little critical of some people in some instances. I do not feel critical today. I have been impatient. I do not feel impatient today.

I do ask God to bless me, that my efforts might be of some value to him, to these brethren, in forwarding a work which I know to be true, which I have spent my young life trying to forward in this earth because I know it to be true. I ask God to help me as I in humility seek to do a job which seems to me at this moment to be beyond my poor capacity to do, and I humbly pray it in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

PRESIDENT DAVID O. McKAY

WE HAVE just listened to Elder Marion D. Hanks, whom, as I stated a few moments ago, you have this day sustained as a member of the First Council of the Seventy.

Messages of appreciation of the television service rendered this forenoon to the people of the Northwest and on the Pacific Coast, still come in. Knowing your interest, I will read two more.

This is from Seattle, Washington, signed by Wilford H. Payne, Seattle Stake: "Please accept appreciation of the first television broadcast conference session to Saints and friends in the Northwest."

Sunday, October 4

Third Day

From Los Angeles, signed by the President of the California Mission, Bryan L. Bunker: "Televised conference messages received perfectly. Marvelous missionary opportunity in the future. Gratefully, President of the California Mission."

And now at the conclusion of this great conference, may we express again the gratitude of our hearts to these men, and companies, who have so graciously contributed of their means, with so little expense to the Church, to broadcast by radio and by television, the proceedings of this great conference. We want them to know that you and the Church generally deeply appreciate their co-operative efforts.

EXPRESSES APPRECIATION

We express gratitude, also, to the public press. I want to name especially the reporters on our papers, who have given such accurate and careful, complete accounts of the various meetings, speakers of our conference since last Wednesday, including the great Relief Society conference.

We wish to express appreciation to the audience here in the Tabernacle, your responsiveness and your reverence, may it be an example to the audiences, to the congregations throughout the Church when they enter our places of worship: Very little moving about, no leaving of the services; I have been favorably impressed and commend you.

We appreciate the co-operation of our city officials, their ready and efficient service, wherever it is needed; our traffic officers in handling the crowds. I have noticed new precautionary measures taken and the presence of the members of the police force on the corners, courteously, carefully protecting the crowds surrounding this block and throughout the city.

We wish to mention again these beautiful flowers sent from Oahu and others furnished by our local florists. We appreciate our singers, and although we have already expressed it to each choir, I repeat again your appreciation of the Relief Society Singing Mothers, the members of the Swiss-German Choir, the Men's Chorus, who rendered such good service last evening in the Tabernacle, and finally, and of course, not least, the members of our Tabernacle Choir. To all of these and to all others, including our ushers, we extend heartfelt appreciation.

And now, this great conference draws to a close. Our anticipation, our hopes, our prayers that it might prove to be uplifting and inspirational, have been realized, and for that we are grateful to our heavenly Father, grateful for the inspiration he has given to the General Authorities who have spoken to you. What great messages they have given to us and to the world! Truly, our hearts have been filled with gratitude that the Lord has magnified each one, to the end that his word has been spoken.

In conclusion, may I leave just one closing thought. This Church of Jesus Christ commonly known as "Mormonism," is in the world to make people happy. Happiness is the end, really, of our existence. That happiness comes most effectively through service to our fellow men, and the Church is the most effective means in the world through which that service may be rendered.

There is no happiness without peace. Today, the President of the United States, his Cabinet, Congress, the Senate, the House of Representatives, the Judiciary, are all seeking peace in the world. Nations are longing for it. Mothers and fathers, grandmothers and grandfathers who have children and grandchildren in the armed forces are praying daily that we might have peace.

Peace is the message that came when the Savior was born a Babe in Bethlehem. It was heralded by the angel choir, singing, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men." (Luke 2:14.)

"Peace," he said to his disciples toward the close of his ministry, "These things I have spoken unto you, that in me ye might have peace. In the world ye shall have tribulation: but be of good cheer; I have overcome the world." (John 16:33.)

After his resurrection, when the doors were closed and the ten disciples were in session, as he greeted them, his first salutation was, "Peace be unto you." (Ibid., 20:21.) And eight days later, when the eleven were there, the same salutation, "Peace." (See Ibid., 20:26.)

What a glorious thing it is, brethren and sisters, and this is my message: Peace cannot be found in external things. Peace comes from within. "There is no peace except by the triumph of principles," said the wise Emerson. Peace is within the individual soul. There is no peace when one's conscience is seared or when one is conscious of having committed some untoward act.

There was certainly no peace in that young girl's soul who came and confessed the other night, fearful of the disgrace she had brought upon her loving parents, fearful of how she could again meet the world. She was experiencing the pangs of retribution—the antithesis of peace.

Peace springs from righteousness in the soul, from upright living. If we are going about in the world to establish peace, let us begin at home, first with each individual. If you want peace tonight, remember yours is the responsibility to obtain it, and it is my responsibility, and it is your privilege and mine to attain it.

Certainly, let us establish peace in our household. We are sending out missionaries, it is true, to proclaim peace and universal brotherhood. That is one great mission of our Church. May all the world recognize it and co-operate with us in spreading the glad news, the glad tidings of great joy. That is the paramount purpose of our missionary work. May God guide the boys and the girls, the young men and women who go out, paying their own expenses or receiving support from their parents, in thus proclaiming peace to a disturbed and unsettled world. What a glorious concept, but let us set the example by having peace in our homes.

Paraphrasing the author of The Simple Life: "Let our homes become sanctuaries for ourselves." (I commend the appeal made by Elder Benson.) Sanctuaries! A sanctuary is where we have peace. May our homes become warm nests where children may be protected and grow into noble men and women; where love may find privacy, old age repose, prayer an altar, and the nation a sure source of strength and perpetuity.

With all my soul at the close of this great, inspirational conference, my dear fellow workers, I say God bless you, that in your hearts and in your homes you may have peace. I say to all our friends who have been listening in, may the peace that comes from obedience to the gospel of Jesus Christ find lodgment in your hearts, through your acceptance of the truth.

May the spirit of peace be poured out upon all nations, that the threatening clouds of destruction may be dissipated, and the sunshine of peace shine once more all over the world. I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

---

Singing by the Choir, "Hallelujah Chorus," (Messiah).

President David O. McKay:

The Conference of the Deseret Sunday School Union will convene in the Tabernacle tonight at 7:00 o'clock. Officers and teachers are requested to be present, and the public cordially invited.

President Elwood J. Corry of Cedar Stake, will now pronounce the benediction.

---

Elder Elwood J. Corey, President of the Cedar Stake, pronounced the benediction.

Conference adjourned for six months.

Sunday, October 4

Third Day

The congregational singing of the Conference was directed by J. Spencer Cornwall, Conductor, and Richard P. Condle, Assistant Conductor, of the Tabernacle Choir.

The Tabernacle Choir furnished the choral singing for the Sunday morning and afternoon sessions, J. Spencer Cornwall and Richard P. Condle, conducting.

The Tabernacle Choir male chorus provided the choral music for the General Priesthood meeting Saturday evening, J. Spencer Cornwall conducting.

The Relief Society Singing Mothers from Stakes in the Central Utah and Mount Timpanogos regions, with Sister Florence Jepperson Madsen conducting, presented choral numbers at the Friday morning and afternoon sessions.

A choir consisting of the German-speaking members of the Church in Salt Lake City furnished the choral music for the Saturday morning and afternoon sessions, Elder Heinz Rimmasch, Conductor.

J. Spencer Cornwall directed the Tabernacle Choir and Frank W. Asper was at the organ, on the Tabernacle Choir and Organ broadcast, and also on the Church of the Air program.

Accompaniments and interludes on the great organ were played by Alexander Schreiner, Frank W. Asper and Roy A. Darley.

---

Stenographic notes of the Conference were taken by Frank W. Otterstrom and Joseph Anderson.

JOSEPH ANDERSON
Clerk of the Conference.

Index

	Page
Anderson, Elder Joseph .....	4
Authorities and Officers Present .....	1
Authorities and Officers Sustained .....	117
Bennion, Elder Adam S. ....	109
Benson, Elder Ezra Taft .....	120
Buehner, Bishop Carl W. ....	60
Changes in Church Officers, and Stake, Ward and Branch Organizations .....	4
Choir and Organ Broadcast .....	94
Christiansen, Elder ElRay L. ....	125
Church of the Air .....	90
Clark, President J. Reuben, Jr. ....	38
Clark, President J. Reuben, Jr. ....	83
(General Priesthood Meeting)
Clark, President J. Reuben, Jr. ....	117
(Presentation of General Authorities and Officers)
Cowley, Elder Matthew .....	106
Evans, Elder Richard L. ....	94
(Choir and Organ Broadcast)
Evans, Elder Richard L. ....	128
First Day—Afternoon Meeting .....	19
First Day—Morning Meeting .....	3
General Authorities and Officers Present .....	1
General Authorities, Officers and Auxiliary Officers Sustained .....	117
General Priesthood Meeting .....	73
Hanks, Elder Marion D. ....	130
Hunter, Elder Milton R. ....	46
Isaacson, Bishop Thorpe B. ....	27
Ivins, Elder Antoine R. ....	44
Kimball, Elder Spencer W. ....	51
Kirkham, Elder Oscar A. ....	50
Lee, Elder Harold B. ....	23
Longden, Elder John .....	66
McConkie, Elder Bruce R. ....	123
McKay, President David O. (Opening Address) .....	5
Temple Construction 5, Stake Missionary Work 6, Youth Program 6, Unification of Church School System 6, Passing of Two General Authori- ties 7, Commendation of Teachers and Church Groups 7, The Kingdom of God or Catastrophe 7, What Men Think 8, Four Fundamental Truths 9, Value of Noble Thoughts 10, Two Great Commandments 10, Change Men's Hearts 11, Lesson for Youth 11.

	Page
McKay, President David O. (General Priesthood Meeting) .....	87
Excursions 88, On Soliciting Funds 88, How to Obtain a Testimony 88.
McKay, President David O. (Closing Address) .....	131
McKay, President David O. ....3, 4, 5, 12, 16, 18, 19, 23, 31, 32, 36, 37, 38, 40, 44, 46, 49, 51, 56, 57, 60, 63, 66, 69, 72, 73, 83, 87, 90, 95, 96, 103, 106, 115, 116, 119, 125, 128, 129, 131, 133.
McKay, Elder Thomas E. ....	40
Morris, Elder George Q. ....	104
Moyle, Elder Henry D. .... (Church of the Air)	90
Obituaries .....	5
Petersen, Elder Mark E. .... (General Priesthood Meeting)	74
Presentation of General Authorities and Officers .....	117
Priesthood Meeting, General .....	73
Richards, Elder LeGrand .....	78
(General Priesthood Meeting)
Richards, President Stephen L. ....	85
(General Priesthood Meeting)
Richards, President Stephen L. ....	97
Romney, Elder Marion G. ....	34
Second Day—Afternoon Meeting .....	56
Second Day—Morning Meeting .....	37
Smith, Elder Eldred G. ....	31
Smith, President Joseph Fielding .....	57
Sonne, Elder Alma .....	33
Spoken Word, The .....	94
Stapley, Elder Delbert L. ....	69
Sustaining of General Authorities, Officers and Auxiliary Officers .....	117
Tabernacle Choir and Organ Broadcast .....	94
Third Day .....	90
Third Day—Afternoon Meeting .....	115
Wirthlin, Bishop Joseph L. ....	12
Young, Elder Clifford E. ....	20
Young, Elder Levi Edgar .....	63
Young, Elder S. Dilworth .....	17

Education Lives As Long As You Read GOOD BOOKS

The Gospel and Man's Relationship to Deity.....$1.50

B. H. Roberts

New Witness for Christ in America

Francis W. Kirkham

Volume I .....$2.75

Evidence of Divine Power in the "Coming Forth" of the Book of Mormon

Volume II .....$2.75

Attempts to prove the "Book of Mormon" man-made

Witnesses of the Book of Mormon .....$2.75

Preston Nibley

Doctrine and Covenants Commentary.....$5.00

Joseph Fielding Smith

Autobiography of Parley P. Pratt .....$3.00

Key to Theology .....$1.50

Parley P. Pratt

J. Golden Kimball .....$4.00

Claude Richards

New Witness for God—Vol I, II, III .....$2.50

B. H. Roberts

Each

---

ALL PRICES ARE SUBJECT TO CHANGE WITHOUT NOTICE

---

DESERET BOOK COMPANY

"THE BOOK CENTER OF THE INTERMOUNTAIN WEST"

44 East South Temple Street, Salt Lake City 10, Utah

Some Suggestions for Your Church Library

Books of lasting inspiration by our Church leaders

On the Way to Immortality and Eternal Life..$3.50
J. Reuben Clark

Priesthood and Church Government .....$2.50
John A. Widtsoe

Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith .....$3.50
Joseph Fielding Smith

Essentials in Church History .....$4.00
Joseph Fielding Smith

Gospel Standards .....$2.25
Heber J. Grant

Sharing the Gospel With Others .....$2.50
George Albert Smith

Word of Wisdom .....$2.75
John A. Widtsoe

Discourses of Brigham Young .....$3.00
Compiled by John A. Widtsoe

The Spoken Word .....$2.00
Richard L. Evans

Unto the Hills .....$2.00
Richard L. Evans

This Day and Always .....$2.00
Richard L. Evans

At This Same Hour .....$2.00
Richard L. Evans

Tonic For Our Times.....$2.50
Richard L. Evans

---

ALL PRICES ARE SUBJECT TO CHANGE WITHOUT NOTICE

---

DESERET BOOK COMPANY

"THE BOOK CENTER OF THE INTERMOUNTAIN WEST"

44 East South Temple Street, Salt Lake City 10, Utah

One Hundred Twenty-fourth

ANNUAL

CONFERENCE

OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST
OF LATTER-DAY SAINTS

Held in the Tabernacle
Salt Lake City, Utah

*April 3, 4, 5 and 6,
1954*

With Report of Discourses

Published by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints
Salt Lake City, Utah

Printed in the United States of America

Education Lives As Long As You Read

GOOD BOOKS

Life of a Great Leader .....$2.50

Biography of President Heber J. Grant
Bryant S. Hinckley

Presidents of the Church .....$4.00

Preston Nibley
New revised edition including biographical sketch of
President David O. McKay

Brigham Young, the Man and His Work.....$3.00

Preston Nibley

Masterpieces of Latter-day Saint Leaders.....$2.00

Compiled by N. B. Lundwall

A Marvelous Work and a Wonder .....$1.75

LeGrand Richards

Sermons and Missionary Services of Melvin J. Ballard .....$2.75

Bryant S. Hinckley

Prophecy and Modern Times .....$1.75

W. Cleon Skousen

Book of Mormon Evidences in Ancient America .....$6.00

Leatherette Edition .....$7.50

Dewey Farnsworth

Outlines of Ecclesiastical History .....$2.25

B. H. Roberts

---

ALL PRICES ARE SUBJECT TO CHANGE WITHOUT NOTICE

---

DESERET BOOK COMPANY

"THE BOOK CENTER OF THE INTERMOUNTAIN WEST"

44 East South Temple Street, Salt Lake City 10, Utah

The One Hundred Twenty-fourth Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints

The One Hundred Twenty-fourth Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints was held in the Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, Utah, Saturday, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, April 3, 4, 5, and 6, 1954.

The general sessions of the Conference were held at 10:00 a.m. and 2:00 p.m., Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, and the General Priesthood meeting was held in the Tabernacle Saturday evening, April 3, at 7:00.

The proceedings of the general sessions were broadcast and telecast over Station KSL, and by arrangement through KSL over the following stations:

In Utah: K SVC at Richfield, K SUB at Cedar City, K VNU at Logan, K JAM at Vernal.

In Idaho: K RXX at Rexburg, K JRL at Pocatello, K ID at Idaho Falls, K GEM at Boise, K BAR at Burley (Sunday only), K EEP at Twin Falls.

In California (Sunday only): K BLA at North Hollywood, K EEN at San Jose, K SBR at San Bruno, K RON-FM at San Francisco, K GO-TV at San Francisco, K CCC-TV at Sacramento, K NXT-TV at Los Angeles.

In Oregon (Sunday only): K PAM at Portland, K SGA at Cottage Grove, K GAL at Lebanon, K GAE at Salem, K ERG at Eugene, K OIN-TV at Portland.

In Washington (Sunday Morning only): K TNT-TV at Tacoma.

In Hawaii (Sunday Morning only, by delayed broadcast): K GMB at Honolulu.

The proceedings of the general sessions were also televised over KSL television station, Channel 5.

All general sessions of the Conference were broadcast in the Assembly Hall on Temple Square, and in Barratt Hall (60 North Main Street), over a loud-speaking system and by television. Thousands, in addition, listened to the services on the Tabernacle grounds by means of amplifying equipment.

The proceedings of the General Priesthood meeting were broadcast by special wire in the following places: Bonneville Stake Tabernacle, Granite Stake Tabernacle, Salt Lake City; Sandy Amusement Hall; Ogden Stake Tabernacle; George Albert Smith Fieldhouse of the Brigham Young University, Provo; the Institute of Religion Building of the Utah State Agricultural College in Logan; South Idaho Falls Tabernacle in Idaho Falls; Big Horn Stake Tabernacle in Lovell, Wyoming. This was for the accommodation of large groups of brethren holding the priesthood who had assembled in those buildings to listen to the services.

President David O. McKay presided and conducted the services at each of the sessions of the Conference, including the General Priesthood meeting.

A full report of Columbia Broadcasting Company's Tabernacle Choir and Organ broadcast is also included in this record as is also a full account of Columbia's Church of the Air program.

GENERAL AUTHORITIES OF THE CHURCH PRESENT

The First Presidency: David O. McKay, Stephen L. Richards and J. Reuben Clark, Jr.

The Quorum of the Twelve Apostles: Joseph Fielding Smith, Harold B. Lee, Spencer W. Kimball, Ezra Taft Benson, Mark E. Petersen, * Henry D. Moyle, Delbert L. Stapley, Marion G. Romney, LeGrand Richards, Adam S. Bennion, *Elder Matthew Cowley passed away December 13, 1953.

Richard L. Evans, and George Q. Morris. **

Assistants to the Twelve Apostles: Thomas E. McKay, Clifford E. Young, Alma Sonnet, ElRay L. Christiansen, John Longden, Hugh B. Brown, and Sterling W. Sill. ***

The First Council of the Seventy: Levi Edgar Young, Antoine R. Ivins, Oscar A. Kirkham, Seymour Dilworth Young, Milton R. Hunter, Bruce R. McConkie, and Marion Duff Hanks.

Presiding Bishopric: Joseph L. Wirthlin, Thorpe B. Isaacson, and Carl W. Buehner.

GENERAL OFFICERS AND OTHER

AUTHORITIES PRESENT

Church Historian and Recorder: Joseph Fielding Smith, and A. William Lund, Assistant.

Members of the General Welfare Committee, Church Welfare Program.

Members of Church Board of Educa-

**Elder George Q. Morris was sustained at this Conference (April 6) as a member of the Quorum of the Twelve to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Elder Matthew Cowley.

***Elder Sterling W. Sill sustained as an Assistant to the Twelve Apostles to fill the vacancy caused by selecting George Q. Morris to fill the vacancy in the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles.

tion and Administrator Church Board of Education, Directors and Associate Directors of Institutes, and Seminary instructors.

Presidents of Stakes and their Counselors, Presidents of Temples, Patriarchs, High Priests, Seventies, Elders, General, Stake and Ward officers of Auxiliary Associations, etc., from all parts of the Church.

Mission Presidents: Richard L. Evans, Temple Square, Salt Lake City; Delbert G. Taylor, Eastern States; J. Howard Maughan, New England; Isaac A. Smoot, Northern States; Lorin L. Richards, Great Lakes Mission; John B. Hawkes, North Central States; Cornelius Zappey, East Central States; Alvin R. Dyer, Central States; Peter J. Ricks, Southern States; Bryan L. Bunker, California; Thomas W. Gardner, Northern California; LeGrand F. Smith, Texas-Louisiana; A. Lewis Elggren, Western States; James A. McMurrin, Northwestern States; J. Melvin Toone, Canada; R. Scott Zimmerman, Western Canadian; Claudious Bowman, Mexico; Harold I. Bowman, Spanish-American; Golden R. Buchanan, Southwest Indian; Edward L. Clissold, Hawaii, Gordon M. Romney, Central American.

FIRST DAY

GENERAL PRIESTHOOD MEETING

The first session of the Conference was a General Priesthood meeting, which was held in the Tabernacle at 7:00 p.m., Saturday, April 3.

President David O. McKay, who presided, conducted the services of this meeting, and made the following introductory statement:

President David O. McKay:

Fellow laborers in the Cause of our Lord and Savior: In behalf of the First Presidency and other General Authorities of the Church, I bid you welcome to this, the opening session of the 124th Annual Conference, probably the most largely attended Priesthood Meeting ever held in the Church.

You will be interested to know that these services are being broadcast in the Assembly Hall, in Barratt Hall, over public address systems, and in addition, are being broadcast by direct wire over a public address system to members of the Priesthood assembled in the following places: Bonneville Stake Tabernacle, Granite Stake Tabernacle, Sandy Amusement Hall, Ogden Stake Tabernacle, George Albert Smith Fieldhouse of the Brigham Young University, Provo; the Institute of Religion Building of the Utah State Agricultural College in Logan; South Idaho Falls Tabernacle in Idaho Falls; Big Horn Stake Tabernacle in Lovell, Wyoming.

The singing during this session, will be furnished by the Millennial Chorus, with Elder A. Burt Keddington as Director and Elder Roy M. Darley at the organ. We shall open these services by the Millennial Chorus singing, "Joseph Smith's First Prayer," conducted by Elder Keddington.

Elder Earl S. Paul, formerly President of the Mount Ogden Stake, and President of the Samoan Mission will offer the opening prayer.

Selection by the Millennial Chorus, "O How Lovely Was the Morning."

Elder Earl S. Paul, formerly President of the Samoan Mission, offered the invocation.

Singing by the Chorus: "Out In the Fields With God."

President David O. McKay:

We shall now have a message from the presidency of the Aaronic Priesthood, represented by Bishop Wirthlin.

BISHOP JOSEPH L. WIRTHLIN

Presiding Bishop of the Church

RESIDENT McKay and my beloved brethren of the Melchizedek and Aaronic Priesthood, I sincerely trust that the Holy Spirit will guide and inspire me in my utterances this night.

This is a new day—a new day that dawned when a young man in the woods of western New York supplicated God humbly for divine direction in finding the Church of the Lord Jesus Christ. The prayer was answered. The Father and the Son appeared to him which appearance reaffirmed to the world that God, our Eternal Father, is a being with body, parts and passions and in whose image we are created. His visit confirmed to the world that the despised Nazarene crucified upon Calvary's Hill was the only begotten of the Father in the flesh—the Creator of mankind.

By divine direction, this young man, Joseph Smith, unearthed a sacred record buried centuries ago in the ancient Hill Cumorah. This record contained the revelations of the Lord to the people that lived upon this the American Continent centuries ago. The scriptures in this holy record are among the most profound ever given to any people or in any dispensation. For example, Lehi declared:

Adam fell that men might be; and men are, that they might have joy. (2 Nephi, Chapter 2, Verse 25.)

In this day, a new philosophy had fallen upon the ears of a disillusioned generation. The world was in the throes of a great apostasy.

As we think of the joy mentioned by Lehi, I submit the following questions: Could men have joy in the doctrine that unbaptized babes would burn in hell forever? Could men have joy in being denied the right to worship God according to the dictates of conscience? Could men have joy in being denied the right to read the word of God? Could men have joy in the thought that mental and physical torture manifests genuine repentance? Could men have joy in being lead into the realms of ignorance and worshiping a God of whom they could not conceive?

Many statements fell from the mouth of the young Prophet, but one which startled the world was the declaration: "The glory of God is intelligence." "Men cannot be saved in ignorance."

The Lord, through this American

Saturday, April 3

First Day

Prophet, revealed in the Book of Moses, Chapter 1, Verse 39, that his glory and work was as declared by the Lord:

For behold, this is my work and my glory—to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man.

Had anyone previous to the Prophet Joseph Smith ever revealed to the world the most important work and glory of the Creator? Imagine if you will he who created all things—the universe, endless worlds and man declared that his most important objective was to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man. If the work and objectives of the Lord are to be accomplished, there had to be established a direct relationship between our Father in heaven and man on earth. Channels of communication had to be reopened so that the Lord could reveal his mind and will to those he selected to represent him. Hence, the priesthood was restored to establish the former relationship wherein God directed his work for the bringing about the immortality and eternal life of man. John the Baptist returned to earth and conferred upon Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery the Aaronic Priesthood, the same authority which existed in the days of John the Baptist which holds the keys of the ministering of angels and the gospel of repentance and baptism by immersion for the remission of sins. Shortly thereafter, by divine direction, the Apostolic Presidency, Peter, James, and John bestowed upon Joseph Smith and his associate the Melchizedek Priesthood which holds the keys of loosening and binding both upon the earth and in the heavens, the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost, the keys to preach the gospel to every nation, kindred, tongue and people, the keys for the work for the dead, and, hence, the relationship which existed between the prophets and apostles of old was established in this day to the end that the Lord's plans for the eternal blessing of his children might be brought into fruition. Priesthood is divine authority, and as Joseph Smith declared:

... is an everlasting principle and existed with God from eternity and will to eternity without beginning of days or end of years. The keys have to be brought from heaven whenever the Gospel is sent.

In Section 121, Verse 36, of the Doctrine & Covenants, to confirm the above statements, the Lord declared:

That the rights of the priesthood are inseparably connected with the powers of heaven, and that the powers of heaven cannot be controlled nor handled only upon the principles of righteousness.

The priesthood is that which places a man in condition to receive the ministration of angels and to enjoy the presence of God the Father and his son Jesus Christ, which substantiates the declaration of the former apostle, John the Beloved, when he declared:

And this is life eternal that they might know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent. (John 17:3.)

Brethren, this is a new day—the day of which the Apostles of old spoke when they prophesied a time of great refreshing would come when there would be a restoration of all things before the second coming of the Redeemer of the world. Does all of this mean anything to you and to me? My beloved brethren who hold the priesthood must realize that the joy of which Lehi spoke is the joy of service in the Lord's work; the joy of contributing to the salvation of the souls of our Heavenly Father's children; the joy of rendering service when called upon by those who preside over us and furthering the work of the Lord—his work to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man; and the joy in sustaining those who preside over us.

Today in the stakes of the Church, there are 156,000 men endowed with the authority of the Holy Melchizedek Priesthood, the priesthood after the order of the Son of God, and 129,000 holding the Aaronic Priesthood, or a total of 285,000 sons of God holding divine authority—the most precious gift that has ever been bestowed upon mankind.

The membership of the Church in stakes only is 1,034,000 of whom 28% hold either the Melchizedek or the Aaronic Priesthood. By the way of comparison, the largest church in the United States with a membership of 29,407,000 has but 45,000 members authorized to participate in the rituals of the Church and to carry on its work, which indicates that 1.5% of the total membership as against 28% of the membership of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints enjoy the privilege of service.

One of the greatest evidences of the divine origin of this great Church and its priesthood lies in the fact that every male member of the Church over the age of twelve who is worthy may hold the priesthood of God and function therein. The bestowal of divine authority upon so many of the Lord's sons is an evidence that our Heavenly Father is no respecter of persons. Station in life and wealth make no difference. Faith in him and the gospel of salvation and obedience thereto wherein men live lives that are compatible with the wishes of our Heavenly Father qualify men to hold the priesthood. Priesthood privileges, powers and service are not in the hands of a few. All of these blessings are not for the General Authorities, stake authorities or bishoprics, but for every worthy holder of the priesthood. After all, salvation is an individual matter, and priesthood service in the cause of the Savior contributes to salvation and exaltation in the Celestial Kingdom. Brigham Young makes this point very clear in the following declaration:

The Gospel of salvation—The Priesthood of the Son of God—is so ordered and organized, in the very nature of it, being a portion of that law of heaven by which worlds are organized, that it is calculated to enlighten the children of men and give them power to save themselves.

Continuing with another statement, President Brigham Young stated:

The Gospel and the Priesthood are the means he employs to save and exalt his obedient children to the possession with him of the same glory and power to be crowned with crowns of glory, immortality and eternal lives.

This is the joy of which Lehi spoke: "Men are that they might have joy," and the highest degree of joy will only be found in the presence of God the Eternal Father and his Son Jesus Christ and to share his glory with him.

Some of our brethren who hold the priesthood and have within their grasp all of the blessings and privileges promised to the faithful have laid aside the opportunity of service and for some reason or another have become indifferent and thereby forgotten the covenants they made with the Lord when they received the priesthood. In the 108th Section of the Doctrine & Covenants, Verse 3, the Lord very implicitly reminds us of our priesthood covenants when he declared:

And arise up and be more careful henceforth in observing your vows, which you have made and do make, and you shall be blessed with exceeding great blessings.

No individual who holds either the Aaronic or the Melchizedek Priesthood has received it but what they were asked the question as to whether or not they would be faithful and true and to keep themselves sweet and unspotted from the sins of the world, and to render whatever service may be required.

To those who are active in the priesthood, the Lord has admonished us in the 108th Section of the Doctrine & Covenants, the 7th Verse, as follows:

Therefore, strengthen your brethren in all your conversation, in all your prayers, in all your exhortations, and in all your doings.

This places squarely upon the shoulders of all of us the responsibility to strengthen those who may be weak in the spirit of tolerance, patience, and love.

As I think of our inactive brethren, I feel that they are to some degree the

Saturday, April 3

"Forgotten Men." Might I ask you the question, "What have you done to encourage and stimulate the indifferent young men or older men to activity in the Church?" This should be the time to take an individual inventory of your attitude and my attitude toward our brethren. These men are not problem men, but they are men with a problem. Neither are they marked men, nor are they to be stigmatized, but rather your responsibility and mine is to find solutions to their problems. We must never forget that the Priesthood is a Divine Brotherhood, and the Divine Brotherhood of God should radiate love, good will and helpfulness to all.

There are no deficiencies in the priesthood organization as the Lord has revealed it to us, but there may be some deficiencies in those of us who fail to carry out the plan of the priesthood in being our brother's keeper. Our brethren who are not as interested as they might be have outstanding qualities of character, and these qualities could well be emulated by all of us. Again, the statement of Lehi of old: "Adam fell that men might be; and men are, that they might have joy," and the greatest joy of all is brought forcibly to our attention in the 18th Section of the Doctrine & Covenants, the 15th Verse:

And if it so be that you should labor all your days in crying repentance unto this people, and bring, save it be one soul unto me, how great shall be your joy with him in the kingdom of my Father!

And in the 16th Verse:

And now, if your joy will be great with one soul that you have brought unto me into the kingdom of my Father, how great will be your joy if you should bring many souls unto me!

Again, in the spirit of kindness, tolerance and patience let us strive to the accomplishment of bringing back into the fold of activity every member of the priesthood, and that by uniting together we shall lift one another up to the full stature of servants of God, even from the deacon to the high priest.

These past two years due to the untiring work of stake presidencies, high councilmen, bishoprics and senior Aaronic Priesthood advisors, it has been possible to organize 1,581 senior Aaronic Priesthood quorums and groups constituted of the following: 826 senior priests quorums, 368 senior teachers quorums, 371 senior deacons quorums, and 16 mixed groups. These priesthood quorum organizations require the services of approximately 5,000 of our senior Aaronic Priesthood brethren to make up the presidencies. This is a most encouraging accomplishment, but we cannot cease our efforts upon this accomplishment, but we must look forward to see what there is left to be done.

In the stakes, there are 65,000 senior members of the Aaronic Priesthood. If all of these brethren were organized into quorums as the Lord has indicated in the 107th Section of the Doctrine & Covenants, we would have at least a total of 5,000 Senior Aaronic Priesthood quorums. The accomplishment of this will require unceasing effort.

In 1953, 3,000 senior members of the Aaronic Priesthood were advanced to the Melchizedek Priesthood. For this accomplishment, I would have you know we are most grateful, but unfortunately there were more of our brethren joined the senior Aaronic Priesthood group than were advanced to the Melchizedek Priesthood, which brings me to another question, "What about our sons who hold the Aaronic Priesthood under the age of twenty-one—these wonderful young men who Elbert Hubbard declared were made of 'Soul Stuff'?" And the most valuable "Soul Stuff" in the Church of the Lord Jesus Christ are these young men born in this dispensation. They are the choice spirits, for they have been born in most instances under the new and everlasting covenant. It causes us deep concern when we find that during the year 1953 there were 3,332 twenty-year-old deacons, teachers and priests that within the coming year will become members of the senior Aaronic Priesthood group. This terse statement tells a sad story. If we were to go into the lives of these young men, out of our investigation, we would find that someone, either a bishop, a bishop's counselor or an Aaronic Priesthood advisor has been remiss in his duty. I can't help but believe that all of these young men have become inactive and disinterested because they have lost contact with the Church, and we lose contact with all of these potential members of the senior Aaronic Priesthood by our failure to keep in constant touch with them, particularly when they are inactive and indifferent. There is but one solution to keep Aaronic Priesthood members under the age of twenty-one interested, motivated and active in their priesthood work, and that is through a very definite system of personal contacts. The Church has been built up on personal contacts. Your grandfather and my grandfather accepted the gospel because of many personal contacts made by missionaries. The contact system is still the most profitable and only one whereby inactive and indifferent members of the Church can be brought back into the fold.

I should like to relate a beautiful story of one of the great spiritual leaders of the Church, President Edward J. Wood, former president of the Alberta Temple and Alberta Stake. The story as related to me by him is as follows:

The bishop of his ward called into a special meeting some of the brethren, and among them was President Wood. The bishop announced that the brethren had been called together to go on a special mission, and this was the mission: The bishop announced, "We have a group of young men under the age of twenty-one who hold the Aaronic Priesthood who now manifest no interest and render no service. They must be brought back. Hence, I am calling each one of you brethren on a special mission to bring back one of these boys." President Wood said, "I wondered at first what kind of a mission my bishop was calling me to perform when I was president of the Alberta Temple and president of the Alberta Stake of Zion, but when he made his announcement, I gladly responded to the call. My assignment was to visit a boy who lived five miles out of Cardston. I thought first of the boy's family. I knew I would have to face an indifferent father and an indifferent mother, and so I decided to invite him to attend the ward Priesthood Meeting with me which was held on a week night. I drove the five miles to the boy's home, and as I anticipated, the father was indifferent and the mother was indifferent saying, 'If our son decides to go to priesthood meeting with you that is his privilege.' And so the president stated that after a good deal of persuasion the boy reluctantly consented to go to priesthood meeting.

During the time it took to drive the five miles, what do you suppose this wise man talked about? Did he talk about the Church? "No." Did he talk about priesthood? "No." Was he critical of the boy for his failure to attend to his priesthood obligations? "No." But, he talked about the things that the boy and all boys are interested in, namely athletics. He opened up the subject by telling the boy of his own experience when he and his brother William were the champion bicycle riders of the State of Utah. Was the boy interested? "Surely," for he, too, was interested in athletics as all boys are. The president of the stake, the president of the Temple brought himself down to the level of the boy in being able to look through the eyes of a boy, and with the same viewpoint, the boy opened his heart to President Wood and was willing to talk about his achievements in the field of athletics.

Arriving at the chapel, President Wood asked the boy if he would attend his deacons meeting. "Yes," he would. Then, the president requested him to listen intently and to report to him as to what had been said and what had been done. After the meeting, it was easy to open up a discussion on the priesthood, and as the boy reported in all frankness and forthrightness, he told the president that he hadn't heard anything he liked, nor was there anything done in the quorum meeting that inspired him. President Wood asked him what was wrong, and the boy readily answered, "The teacher was not prepared. I knew he was not prepared because when the quorum opened its meeting, he handed the manual first to one boy and then to another to read a paragraph." He said, "I might as well of stayed home, I am sure I would have learned more." There were no assignments made to the deacons, either for passing the sacrament or gathering fast offerings. In fact, there was no action in the quorum meeting, and boys love action.

Saturday, April 3

First Day

Arriving home, the president extended another invitation to the boy to attend priesthood meeting. The boy consented, but during the interim between the first meeting and the second, the president of the stake went to the advisor of the deacons quorum and pointed out to him the reason why the boys were inactive and indifferent, the president's reason being that the teacher was unprepared, secondly, the president of the deacons quorum was not called up to preside over the quorum, and thirdly, no assignments were being made. You can rest assured that the next week the teacher was prepared, the presidency of the deacons quorum was in its place presiding over the meeting, and assignments were made, and thus for six consecutive weeks the man with the greatest amount of responsibility and work to do made a round trip of twenty miles to pick up a deacon and take him to priesthood meeting. As the seventh week dawned, the president asked himself the question, "I wonder if I am accomplishing anything in behalf of this boy? Tonight I will make a test of my plan." In place of driving to the boy's home, the president went to priesthood meeting, and soon the fruits of the president's efforts were manifested, for thirty minutes late, the deacon came in. At the end of the meeting, President Wood declared, "I received the greatest thrill of my life.

That boy sided up to me and placed his hand in mine, looked me squarely in the eye, and expressed his gratitude and appreciation for what I had done in just two words in boy language, 'My Pal.'"

Brethren, that is the solution to the problem of the Aaronic Priesthood under the age of twenty-one where they become indifferent—"Palship," and may I emphasize it is the solution. Palship first means contacts with boys. It means that if you establish palship, you have their confidence, good will, and their love. They will follow you to the ends of the earth if necessary. Yes, Elbert Hubbard was right when he declared, "Boys are made of Soul Stuff," and the most precious "Soul Stuff" in all the world is found in the Church of the Lord Jesus Christ, for herein are potential General Authorities, stake presidents, and bishoprics, and numerous other future leaders.

Yes brethren, there are some outstanding achievements due to the efforts of you Aaronic Priesthood workers. It affords me a great thrill to announce tonight that more than 15,000 young men will receive an Individual Aaronic Priesthood Award for their faithfulness and service in the priesthood, for they have attended their sacrament meetings, priesthood meetings, have paid a full tithing, have kept the Word of Wisdom and met their priesthood obligations in full. Again, we must not look back at what we have done, but rather we should look forward and remember that out of a total of 63,000 members of the Aaronic Priesthood under the age of twenty-one, there are still 48,000 who have not achieved as have the 15,000. These 48,000 should enjoy that divine thing that I choose to call "palship."

Brethren, there is but one question left, "Are you and I our brother's keeper?" The answer is obvious. The priesthood of God is a divine order founded upon the love of God for his sons, for God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son, and his son so loved the world that he gave his life for the redemption of all, and if you and I love our neighbors, as God has commanded, as ourselves, we shall close our priesthood ranks and we will gather our brethren who may be inactive in the priesthood to our side and present to the world a priesthood solidarity which will give all of us the strength to destroy the enemy of indifference and temptation and criticism, and which will inspire us to be as one, as are the Father and the Son one, and as Lehi declared: "Men are that they might have joy," and above that and most important of all that we shall be instrumental in the Lord's greatest work to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man, which I humbly pray will be the heart-felt desire and accomplishment of all of us, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

Bishop Joseph L. Wirthlin:

Brethren, the First Presidency, out of their kindness and generosity, have permitted the Presiding Bishopric to show you a film tonight that deals with the procedures of the Adult Aaronic Priesthood plan and program. May I say to you that in this film there is a story and in the story there is a character. We want you to understand that while we show the extremes to which this particular man went, the purpose is to show what can be done if we are kind and patient, no matter how far afield some of our brethren may go. This film does not intend to carry the impression that all of our senior Aaronic brethren have gone as far as this particular character went.

(There was then presented on a screen a film story entitled "Come Back, My Son.")

The congregation and the Chorus joined in singing: "I'll Go Where You Want Me To Go."

President David O. McKay:

President J. Reuben Clark, Jr. will now speak to us.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

Second Counselor in the First Presidency

MY BRETHREN: I hope that you will help me by your prayers for the few moments that I shall stand before you. This is a humbling experience, and I am sure we are all mellowed by that powerful picture showing how one man was led back from temptation and waywardness to enjoy the blessings of the Lord.

In recent years there has come to be a new philosophy which affirms that the world has been working on the wrong theory over the centuries, and they say that we must not longer talk of punishments, but only of rewards. You know, I believe that there are no real punishments except those which we bring upon ourselves. The felon in the penitentiary cell has punished himself by his course of action which has taken away from him a blessing with which God endowed him, namely, his freedom.

The Lord has laid down as a part of the eternal plan great principles which we are to follow if we are to gain the blessings which are predicated thereon. If we fail to live those principles and rules we fail to get the blessings. The Lord does not need to punish, we punish ourselves, we deprive ourselves of the blessings which the Lord promised us.

And so with these members about whom we have heard and have seen tonight,—they are not punished by anybody. They are just failing in themselves to enjoy the blessings which they could enjoy if they lived as they should. And I should suppose that of the ways in which, some at least, might be approached, one would be from the point of view entirely of leading them to blessings, not to pointing out the punishments. For instance, the Word of Wisdom. Lead them to see the blessing which sobriety brings, the giving up of things which the Word of Wisdom denies. That is the point. We are not enjoying the blessings we might enjoy by righteous living. It is not a question of somebody imposing punishments upon us.

Saturday, April 3

First Day

And so through the whole realm of our activities.

Now one thing stood out tonight, I thought, in that picture: Here was a bishopric, finally shaken into a realization of their duties, but the bishopric did not undertake to do it all alone; they immediately called in help. You know, it takes more than three good men as a bishopric to make a good ward. Three good men may build a good ward, but they cannot do it all by themselves, and so with a presidency of a stake, so with a presidency of a quorum, and so with every group of leaders in the Church. They cannot do the service alone. They must have the help of every man and woman who serves under their direction.

And that brings me back to my theme song—this question of unity. We shall never, brethren, get to the place that the Lord expects us to go and marked out for us to get to, save we shall work together in unison. We cannot each one go out by himself, along his own lines, live his own life, so to speak, and have this Church reach the destiny which it will reach if we do cooperate.

And I repeat to you what I have said time and time and time again in these Priesthood meetings, and pardon the repetition, but I think there is still room for some to hearken to the suggestion: We must work together as one. We must follow our leaders and if we do I say again, there are no limits to the things which, in righteousness, we may accomplish. Every man living as he should, cooperating as he should, brings into the ward or into the quorum a power against evil that cannot be attained in any other way.

Now, brethren, I should like to urge you to take to heart the lesson which this picture has taught us tonight. Remember the splendid instruction given us by the Presiding Bishop and rally around our leaders, let them tell us what to do and how to do it, and then so doing, we shall build up in our quorums, in our ward, in our stake, in the Church, a power for good, for righteousness which Satan cannot tear down and he is on the look-out all the time, all the time, day and night. Perhaps all of us, each of us, can think of some way in which we might help our presiding officers and to build up the unity, the standing together which is so essential to this Church.

May the Lord give us this spirit of unity, I humbly pray, in the name of Jesus. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

President Stephen L. Richards of the First Presidency will now address us.

PRESIDENT STEPHEN L. RICHARDS

First Counselor in the First Presidency

Y BRETHREN: With the impressive presentation which we have witnessed here in this building tonight, I wish that all assembled who are privileged by special wire to hear this service might have seen it also.

With President Clark's remarks as something of a background and justification, I would like to say a few words to the priesthood upon a subject which has been weighing upon my mind for quite a period of time. I would like to speak briefly on the subject of justice and mercy. The Gospel of Jesus Christ is founded on law, salutary, righteous, benevolent law, established for the salvation and the blessing of humanity. For every law given, there is a penalty for its infraction. I know of no scripture where this is more plainly stated than by the Prophet Alma: "Now, how could a man repent except he should sin? How could he sin if there was no law? How could there be a law save there was a punishment?" (Alma 42:17.) The Savior himself declared that he came to fulfill the law, not to do away with it, but with the law he brought the principle of mercy to temper its enforcement, and to bring hope and encouragement to offenders for forgiveness through repentance.

I presume it has always been a nice question, and a perplexing one, to determine when the demands of justice are satisfied and the principle of mercy takes over. To assist in the determination of this issue, we have available to us again the words of Alma: "For behold, justice exerciseth all his demands, and also mercy claimeth all which is her own; and thus, none but the truly penitent are saved. What, do ye suppose that mercy can rob justice? I say unto you, Nay; not one whit. If so, God would cease to be God." (Alma 42:24-25.)

Now the Church of Christ is commissioned with the authority to interpret the law and pass judgment on infractions thereof. This is a heavy responsibility, one which many officers of the Church would forego, if they could justify themselves in so doing. In civil government it is not uncommon to hear references to the majesty of the law, by which is contemplated, we may assume, not only its supremacy and binding force, but also the deference and respect which should be shown for it, and the obligation to sustain its sovereign power. Certainly this applies with greater force and extended meaning to the majesty of divine law. It is God's law. It must be supported and it must be enforced to win salvation and the respect of those within the Kingdom and those without.

For the maintenance of the law of the Lord, judges have been set up in his Kingdom, tribunals established, and guiding principles laid down for the administration of justice. Bishops of Wards have been designated common judges in Israel, and they, with their counselors, have been delegated with authority to deal with cases properly coming under their jurisdiction. Appellate courts, culminating in the First Presidency of the Church, have likewise been designated by revelation having both appellate and original jurisdiction.

With this as a premise, I ask first the question, How can the priesthood and ecclesiastical authority of the Church best discharge the responsibility so committed to it. Do not "the judges in Israel" have a compelling obligation to deal with all cases of infraction against the law, mercifully but justly? What good to the Church, what real benefit to erring members, can come from ignoring this obligation and, as we sometimes say, winking at and "white-washing" the offenders? Can the judges thus help in setting people on the way to repentance and forgiveness?

What is repentance, and when does it become operative in the attainment of forgiveness? We all know the answer. Repentance consists first in a godly sorrow. Note the term "godly sorrow," which the scriptures tell us "worketh repentance to salvation . . . but the sorrow of the world worketh death." (II Cor. 7:10.) This godly sorrow is something more than admission after being discovered in sin, and the judges in Zion will do well not to confuse the two. Next after godly sorrow comes confession, which is prompted by the inward sorrow and the earnest desire for relief from the suffering entailed by acute realization of wrong-doing of which we saw an impressive illustration tonight. To whom should confession be made? To the Lord, of course, whose law has been violated. To the aggrieved person or persons, as an essential in making due retribution if that is necessary. And then certainly to the Lord's representative, his appointed judge in Israel, under whose ecclesiastical jurisdiction the offender lives and holds membership in the Kingdom.

Saturday, April 3

First Day

Is the offender justified in by-passing his immediate Church authority and judge, and going to those who do not know him so well to make his confession? Almost universally, I think the answer should be No, for the local tribunals are in position to know the individual, his history and environs far better than those who have not had close contact with him, and in consequence the local authorities have a background which will enable them to pass judgment with more justice, and also mercy, than might be reasonably expected from any other source. It follows that it is the order of the Church for confessions to be made to the Bishop, which entails heavy and exacting responsibilities on the part of the Bishop, the first of which is that every confession should be received and held in the utmost confidence. A Bishop who violates such a sacred confidence is himself guilty of an offense before God and the Church. Where it becomes necessary to take counselors into his confidence, as it frequently does, and where it is necessary to organize tribunals, the Bishop should inform the confessor, and if possible obtain his permission so to do.

Why is confession essential? First, because the Lord has commanded it, and secondly, because the offender cannot live and participate in the Kingdom of God, to receive the blessings therefrom, with a lie in his heart.

Now the confessed offender is not left without hope, for he can obtain forgiveness by following the course outlined, and by forsaking sins comparable to that committed, as well as all other sin, and living before the Church and the Lord in such manner as to win approbation of both. The offender who has brought stigma and affront to the ward, the stake or the mission should seek the forgiveness of those he has thus offended. That may be had at times through the presiding authorities of the various divisions of the Church. At other times it may be appropriate and quite necessary to make amends for public offenses and seek forgiveness before organizations of the people. The judges of Israel will determine this matter. And if the judges in the missions, the wards and the stakes need counsel in the matter, they know where to get it.

How may the judges of Israel determine when repentance is adequate? Surely this determination must rest with the inspired discernment and discretion of the judges. No specification of time required can be definitely made, but one caution may be wisely observed. That caution is for a sufficient time to elapse to permit a period of probation for the one seeking forgiveness. This probation serves a double purpose: First, and perhaps most important, it enables the offender to determine for himself whether he has been able to so master himself as to trust himself in the face of ever-recurring temptation; and secondly, to enable the judges to make a more reliable appraisal of the genuineness of repentance and worthiness for restored confidence.

Now I well recognize that the most serious aspects of this whole matter relate to personalities involved. I think I have never been moved to greater compassion than that arising out of sympathy for the innocent victims of a sin committed by a son or a daughter, a father or a mother. I am sure that the officers of the Church will always be susceptible to feelings of deep pity for those who have fallen from the path of righteousness and for their families. And the question will continually arise in the future, as it has done throughout the past, how far such considerations shall deter the judges of Israel from merciful, kind, but just adjudication of offenses against the laws of God. Long ago I have taken the position, with which I think my brethren accord, that every case of infraction and I speak now of those infractions violative of the laws of God which involve moral turpitude, every infraction against the laws of God should be dealt with. I do not say how. I leave that to the inspired wisdom of the judges. Knowingly permitting a serious infraction of divine law to pass unnoticed is no kindness to the offender. He will never gain forgiveness except on the terms the Lord has prescribed, and which I have tried to outline.

And I ask you as a final question, How can we ever hope to maintain the dignity of the Church and the majesty of the law of the Lord without exercising disciplinary action through the tribunals which the Lord has set up. So I think I am justified in calling upon the Bishoprics, the High Councils, the Stake Presidencies, the Mission Presidencies, and the officers of quorums to be watchmen on the towers of Zion, to guard and forewarn the people against the incursion of sin, to teach in plainness and without equivocation the law of the Lord, to uphold the law, and righteously and mercifully enforce it for the blessing of our membership in the Church and all mankind.

Now I hope, my brethren, that I do not seem too exacting in what I have laid before you. I believe that it is but a kindness to our brethren and our sisters throughout the Kingdom of the Lord to make them understand these principles which he has laid down, and I believe that if we exercise the great priesthood which has been given to us in the manner in which we should exercise it, we shall accomplish for those who offend, as well as for the Church, a great service. And I ask the Lord to bless us in this great power of the Holy Priesthood, to which tribute has been paid here tonight. It is the power of God; it is the direct delegation of his authority for the administration of his work, and he has selected his servant who stands at the head of this Kingdom to represent him, and I know that as we follow his direction and counsel and his example, we will win for ourselves his confidence and we will win the confidence of the Lord, and the blessings which will make us happy.

May the Lord bless you, my brethren, I humbly ask in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

PRESIDENT DAVID O. McKAY

WE HAVE several notes here that should be considered by presiding officers in stakes and wards, in addition to those already mentioned in the message given by the Bishopric and by the counselors in the Presidency.

One of these I will mention. The others we can carry over. Will the presidencies of stakes at your quarterly conference please present to the visiting General Authorities any problems which you have that are current, or might be current within a few days or weeks. Let the Brethren who are on the ground consider these problems with you. It may be the reorganization of a bishopric, the appointment of high councilmen, or the reorganization of a high council. Not infrequently we find before us correspondence from stakes in which quarterly conference was held just the week before our Thursday meeting, problems which should have been taken up with the visiting Brethren.

If you will follow that little suggestion it will expedite matters in the Presidency's office, which are accumulating.

As I contemplate the vast audience of Priesthood tonight, assembled in the various places named at the opening of the meeting, and realize the potency and power of this great body of men, I am overwhelmed. As I sat in the audience and listened to the message given so impressively by the Bishopric, and so successfully by the men and women who produced that film, I felt my feelings swell within my breast as to the possibility of the good that will be done, and can be done, by these fifteen or twenty or twenty-five thousand men of the Priesthood who are worshipping tonight.

Saturday, April 3

First Day

"There's surely somewhere a lowly place
In earth's harvest fields so wide,
Where I may labor thro' life's short day
For Jesus, the Crucified;
So trusting my all to Thy tender care,
And knowing Thou lovest me,
I'll do Thy will with a heart sincere,
I'll be what you want me to be."

I hope everybody who sang that verse applied it to himself, and in a way made a sacred vow to do better in the future than in the past, and there came to my mind five fundamental virtues which should be associated with that will. I will just name them.

First is faith,—faith in God the Father, in His Son, faith in our fellow men.

The second is honesty, a childish sincerity, honest in dealing with our fellow men. It is the foundation of all character. If you offer prayer at night and you have dealt dishonestly with your fellows during the day, I rather think that as the king in Hamlet, your words fly up but your thoughts remain below; but if you have dealt honestly, the Lord will hear and answer your true feelings.

The third is loyalty. It is a wonderful principle. A true friend is loyal. Many acquaintances are not, and may not be. Be loyal to the Priesthood. Be loyal to your wives and to your families, loyal to your friends.

I cannot think that the Spirit of God will strive with a man who in any way helps to break up another man's family. I care not what seeming attraction may be between him and the wife of the other man. God will withdraw his Spirit from such a one.

Do you know that five or six letters that have come just this week from broken-hearted wives of some men who are disillusioned with the Church have their origin in dishonest dealings with men, or fancied dishonest dealings of brethren, and three of them from broken-hearted wives who are pleading for something to be said to have their husbands brought to recall what it means to be loyal to covenants made in the House of the Lord.

Fourth, there springs from that chastity. All these 25,000 men, clean. That means something in this old world.

Fifth, in the heart of each one a willingness, indeed, a desire, to serve their fellow men.

I will say no more, but I feel impressed to ask you, and all other listening in to repeat with me the First Article of Faith, and the Thirteenth Article of Faith, and let us say it slowly, and think of each word as we say it.

You recall the first: "We believe in God, the Eternal Father, and in His Son, Jesus Christ, and in the Holy Ghost."

The Thirteenth: "We believe in being honest, true, chaste, benevolent, virtuous, and in doing good to all men; indeed, we may say that we follow the admonition of Paul—We believe all things, we hope all things, we have endured many things, and hope to be able to endure all things. If there is anything virtuous, lovely, or of good report or praiseworthy, we seek after these things."

Will you brethren? The first. (The brethren repeated the First Article of Faith.)

Thirteenth. (The brethren then repeated the Thirteenth Article of Faith.)

May inspiration from on high and the constant guidance of the Holy Spirit enable each of us to accentuate that belief by radiating in our daily lives the ideals and principles of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, I earnestly pray in the name of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

The Millennial Chorus will now sing "Onward Christian Soldiers," directed by A. Burt Keddington, after which Elder Evan P. Wright, formerly president of the South African Mission, will offer the closing prayer.

The session at 10 o'clock Sunday morning will be broadcast over Station KSL, and by arrangement through KSL over 14 radio stations in Utah, Idaho, Arizona, Nevada, Colorado, California, Oregon, and Wyoming, and by 10 television stations in Utah, Washington, Oregon, California, Arizona, and Colorado, to an estimated number of television receivers of 3,861,400 people.

The Church of the Air Broadcast will be from 8 to 8:30 o'clock tomorrow morning. President J. Reuben Clark, Jr. of the First Presidency will be the speaker.

The Tabernacle Choir Broadcast will be from 9 o'clock to 9:30 tomorrow morning. Those desiring to attend these broadcasts must be in their seats by 7:50 a.m. It is requested that the audience during the broadcast refrain from making any disturbing noise. Large crowds will undoubtedly be waiting outside the closed doors.

Please note this. We suggest and earnestly plead with those thus standing that they be courteous when the doors are opened and considerate of others in the crowd. Avoid pushing or crowding, please. Let us remember to be courteous and considerate to others who are also standing.

The regular session of the conference will begin at 10 o'clock.

The Book of Mormon Oratorio will be presented by the Utah Symphony Orchestra and the University of Utah Combined Chorus in the Salt Lake Tabernacle Tuesday evening at 8:15 o'clock.

I am glad we have the following estimates or count:

Tabernacle attendance, over 9,000.

Assembly Hall, over 2,500.

Barratt Hall, over 1,300.

Estimated on the grounds, over 1,700.

Brigham Young University Fieldhouse, 1,800.

Ogden Tabernacle, 860.

Logan, 470.

Idaho Falls, 500.

Lovell, Wyoming, 153.

Bonneville Stake House, 611.

Southeast Stake House, 717.

Mt. Jordan Stake House, 345.

This makes a total of over 20,000 members of the Priesthood assembled.

"Onward Christian Soldiers" will now be sung by the Chorus, and the benediction will be offered by Elder Evan P. Wright, formerly president of the South African Mission.

The Millennial Chorus sang the hymn, "Onward Christian Soldiers."

Elder Evan P. Wright offered the closing prayer.

SECOND DAY MORNING MEETINGS

CHURCH OF THE AIR

Columbia Broadcasting Company's Church of the Air was presented at 8:00 a.m., Sunday, April 4, 1954. The program as presented was as follows:

The Tabernacle Choir, under the direction of J. Spencer Cornwall, furnished the music for this service, with Frank W. Asper at the organ. Richard L. Evans was the announcer.

Music: Organ and humming choir: "Sweet Is the Work."

Announcer: The Church of the Air is presented by CBS Radio so that men of many faiths may speak to a nationwide audience. Today's service comes to you from the "Mormon" Tabernacle on Temple Square in Salt Lake City, through the facilities of Station KSL. The speaker will be President J. Reuben Clark, Jr., Second Counselor in the First Presidency of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Music will be by the Tabernacle Choir, directed by J. Spencer Cornwall. Frank Asper is at the organ.

The Choir first sings a paraphrase of Psalm 13, with the worshipful music of George Frederick Handel: "Father, O hear me! . . . In mercy hear me and turn not, O Father, from me."

(The Choir sang, "Father, O Hear Me."—Handel-Christiansen.)

Announcer: We continue this service with a sacred song by Evan Stephens: "Holiness Becometh the House of the Lord."

(The Choir sang: "Holiness Becometh the House of the Lord."—Stephens.)

Announcer: We shall now hear on this Church of the Air Service President J.

Reuben Clark, Jr., of the First Presidency of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, frequently referred to as the "Mormon" Church. President Clark has had a distinguished career as a lawyer and public servant, and was formerly United States Ambassador to Mexico, and former Under-secretary of State. He has titled today's talk: "Jesus, Our Risen Lord."

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

Second Counselor in the First Presidency

THROUGH the resurrection of Christ, resurrection shall come to every mortal born to the earth, each in his own due time, thus redemption from the Fall will be universal. Through obedience to the commandments of Christ's Gospel, an exaltation in the Kingdom of God may be also attained by every mortal.

These are the glorious and eternal truths which this Easter Time brings vividly and with consolation to our troubled minds and fearsome hearts.

While the Disciples did not understand Christ's resurrection till after the event, yet the record, read in the light of the full plan, is perfectly clear.

Centuries before, the Psalmist gave us in outline, the horrors of body and mind of a crucifixion and foretold the actual outcry of Christ on the cross, as in the very extreme of mortal agony and of hopeless despair, he exclaimed: "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" (Psalm 22:1; Matthew 27:46; Mark 15:34.)

Jesus, himself, predicted his death and resurrection time and again as he went about his mission.

At the time of the Second Passover, Jesus, preaching to the multitude, said: "Marvel not at this: for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation." (John 5:28-29.)

Mark tells us that at Caesarea Philippi, "he began to teach them, that the Son of man must suffer many things, and be rejected of the elders, and of the chief priests, and scribes, and be killed, and after three days rise again. And he spake that saying openly." Matthew makes essentially the same record of that occasion. Speaking to the Disciples shortly thereafter, Jesus gave them the same message. (Mark 8:31-32; Matthew 16:21; Luke 9:22.)

Matthew tells us that following the Third Passover, while they still abode in Galilee, Jesus again declared his resurrection, and Mark adds, "But they understood not that saying, and were afraid to ask him," while Luke tells us that they understood not, "and it was hid from them, that they perceived it not." (Matthew 17:22-23; Mark 9:31-32; Luke 9:43-45.)

While the Disciples, so told time and time again, "perceived it not," the people and the scribes and chief priests and all the rest knew about it, for he spoke "openly."

In the temple precincts on the third day of the final week, as the last hours were pressing upon him with their infinite responsibility, Jesus prayed: "Father, save me from this hour: but for this cause came I unto this hour. Father, glorify thy name." An answering voice from heaven declared: "I have both glorified it, and will glorify it again"—some hearing thought it thundered, others that an angel spoke. Only Jesus understood. So, as he awaited the coming of Judas and the soldiers, in that agony of infinite, anxious, fearful responsibility which all but overpowered him, he cried out: "O my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me: nevertheless not as I will, but as thou wilt." (John 12:27-29; Matthew 26:39.)

But he made many less direct declarations regarding his resurrection, as the one at the Last Supper where he told his Disciples that after he left, the Father would send the Comforter, the Holy Ghost. (John 14:18, 26.)

Jesus left no room for doubt that he was to be slain and then resurrected, yet it was hid from the Disciples.

The resurrection of Christ has been challenged from the very hour he stepped forth from the tomb in the early morning of that day of days, nineteen and a half centuries ago.

Recalling those predictions of his resurrection which he made openly, the chief priests and Pharisees, after Christ's burial, besought Pilate to place guards at the tomb, "lest his disciples come by night, and steal him away, and say unto the people, He is risen from the dead: so the last error shall be worse than the first. Pilate said unto them, Ye have a watch: go your way, make it as sure as ye can. So they went, and made the sepulchre sure, sealing the stone, and setting a watch." (Matthew 27:62-66.)

But the eternal plan of God was not to be frustrated. In the early morning hours, before it was light, an angel with a countenance like lightning, descended from heaven, rolled back and sat upon the stone with which the chief priests and Pharisees had sealed the sepulchre. "And for fear of him the keepers did shake, and became as dead men." Recovering from their stupor, they hastened to the city, "and shewed unto the chief priests all the things that were done," who gave the keepers "large money" to hold their tongues as to the real events, and to spread the lie that 'the disciples came by night, and stole him away while they slept.' (Matthew 28:1-4, 11-13.)

From that hour of that morning till now, Satan has persuaded heretics to deny the Christ and his resurrection.

As the watch went to report to their masters, Mary Magdalene (who had already been to the empty tomb "when it was yet dark"), and Mary, the mother of James, and Salome, with some women from Galilee, had, at sunrise, fearfully entered the empty sepulchre, where two angels stood beside them, clothed in white, shining garments. One spoke to them, saying: "Why seek ye the living among the dead? Ye seek Jesus of Nazareth, which was crucified. He is not here, but is risen . . . go quickly, and tell his disciples that he is risen from the dead; and, behold, he goeth before you into Galilee; there shall ye see him: lo, I have told you." (John 20:1; Matthew 28:1, 5-7; Mark 16:1-7; Luke 24:1-6.)

The reports of the women seemed to the disciples as idle tales, and believed not.

Thus was announced to the Disciples and his followers the resurrection of the risen Christ. Complete was the vicarious atonement of the Son of God for the Fall of Adam.

On that same day of the resurrection, the risen Christ appeared to Mary, to the women at the tomb, to Peter, to the two Disciples journeying to Emmaus, and in that evening to all the Disciples except Thomas; a week later to all the Disciples including Thomas; later still on the shores of the Sea of Tiberias, to Peter and those who had also gone fishing; and afterward to some five hundred of the brethren at once, and to James; then to the living Disciples at a mountain in Galilee by appointment by the Christ; and lastly to the Disciples at the ascension.

Thus was the resurrection currently witnessed by the Apostles and other followers of Jesus, the Carpenter of Nazareth, the Son of God, the Christ.

This Church of ours accepts all the

Sunday, April 4

Second Day

foregoing as the literal facts pertaining to the resurrection; none is symbolism, none is allegory. These things are the warp and the woof of the Restored Gospel of Jesus Christ. They admit of no questioning, amongst us they are not questioned. That they are true is our testimony to the world.

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints accepts Jesus, the Christ, at his own estimate when he proclaimed his Godhood to the Jews on the temple grounds at Jerusalem: "Before Abraham was, I am"; when he petitioned in the great intercessory prayer: "O Father, glorify thou me with thine own self with the glory which I had with thee before the world was." (John 8:58; 17:5.)

In modern revelation, Jesus, the Christ, has over and over again declared himself in the same language.

This is the Jesus, the Christ, to which we of this Church yield full and complete allegiance, unmarred by rationalizing, by any derogation as to his divine personality, his work among men, his vicarious sacrifice for their sins, his membership in the Holy Trinity.

Final peace will come into this bloody world only when Jesus and his teachings shall rule the world.

The great mission of this Church is to proclaim Christ and him crucified and his Gospel. This should be the message that all Christendom declares.

That Jesus of Nazareth was the Christ, the Son of God, the First Fruits of the Resurrection, the Redeemer of the World, a member of the Trinity, is the testimony which I humbly give, in his name. Amen.

---

(The Choir sang: "The Voice of God is Heard Again."—Stephens.)

(Organ Selection: "God Moves in a Mysterious Way."—Bradbury.)

Announcer: From the Choir we have heard one of the hymns of Evan Stephens: "The voice of God again is heard, The silence has been broken, The curse of darkness is withdrawn, The Lord from heaven hath spoken."

And now in closing the Choir sings a worshipful hymn by Haydn: "O worship the King all glorious above, and gratefully sing His wonderful love."

(The Choir then sang: "O Worship the King."—Hayden-Cornwall.)

(Organ Selection: "Softly Now The Light of Day."—von Weber.)

Music: Organ and Humming choir: "Sweet Is the Work."

Announcer: You have been attending CBS Radio's Church of the Air. Today's service came to you from the "Mormon" Tabernacle on Temple Square, through the facilities of Station KSL in Salt Lake City, Utah. The speaker was President J. Reuben Clark, Jr., of the First Presidency of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Music was by the Tabernacle Choir, J. Spencer Cornwall conducting, with Frank Asper at the organ.

CHOIR AND ORGAN BROADCAST

The following broadcast, written and announced by Richard L. Evans, and originating with Station KSL, Salt Lake City, was presented from 9:00 to 9:30 a.m. Sunday, April 4, through the courtesy and facilities of the Columbia Broadcasting System's network, throughout the United States. The broadcast was as follows:

(The organ played "As the Dew," and on signal the Choir and Organ broke into the hymn, "Gently Raise," singing the words to the end of the second line, and humming to end of verse for announcer's background.)

Announcer: Once more we welcome you within these walls with music and the spoken word from the Crossroads of the West.

The CBS Radio Network and its affiliated stations bring you at this hour another presentation from Temple Square in Salt Lake City, with J. Spencer Cornwall conducting the Tabernacle Choir, Frank Asper, Tabernacle Organist and the spoken word by Richard Evans.

The Choir first sings a worshipful song from the writings of Randall Thompson: "Alleluia."

(The Choir sang: "Alleluia."—Thompson.)

Announcer: Frank Asper moves now into a majestic theme from the Psalm settings of Benedette Marcello: "The Heavens Declare the Glory of God, and the firmament showeth His handiwork."

(Organ selection: "Psalm XVIII."—Marcello.)

Announcer: The Choir next sings a sacred song with words and music by Will James: "Jesus, our Lord, we adore Thee, Jesus, our crucified Savior."

(The Choir sang: "Jesus, Our Lord."—James.)

